

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. THE present work is a consolidation of Fisher's Harrison's Digest published in 1870, the Digest of the cases from 1870 to 1880 published in 1880, and the annual Digests published since that date including that for the year 1883. In arranging the work the editors have endeavoured to collect the cases under comprehensive general titles. By this means all the cases bearing on any given subject will be found close to one another. The general titles are subdivided into sub-titles arranged in what appeared to be the most natural order, and the cases themselves are distinguished by numerous catch-words, so that the practitioner may find as quickly as possible the point for which he happens to be in search. At the same time numerous cross references are added referring to the general titles, in order that the work may fulfil the purposes of an index to the cases as well as a Digest.

Cases relating to matters exclusively assigned to the Chancery Division, including the whole subject of Administration Actions, have been omitted, and great changes have been made in the treatment of Settlements, Trusts and Wills. It has been found necessary to retain many cases which are to some extent obsolete, because they are still valuable to persons practising in the Colonies and other places where English Law has been adopted or retained, and are also of importance for collateral purposes, upon the ground that new principles are often best explained by reference to old cases.

Statutes have generally been omitted, as it was found impossible to incorporate them in a complete manner without largely increasing the bulk of the work; readers are therefore referred to the Chronological Index of Statutes published by her Majesty's Stationery Office.

The proofs of the whole work have been read by Mr. R. A. Roberts, of the Inner Temple.

I. GENERALLY.

Act of God—Definition.]—In order that an extraordinary natural event, such as a very high tide, should be, in the legal sense of the words, an act of God, it is not necessary that such an event should never have happened before; it is sufficient that its happening could not have been reasonably expected. If such an event has happened once, but there is nothing to lead to the inference that it is likely to recur, it does not, if it happens a second time, cease to be an act of God. Nitro-Phosphate and Odam's Chemical Manure Company v. London and St.

Katharine Docks Company, 9 Ch. D. 503; 39 L. T. 433; 27 W. R. 267—C. A. Affirming with variation, 37 L. T. 330.

Exemption from Liability for Injuries caused by.—Sect. 74 of the Harbours, Docks and Piers Act, 1847, enacts that "the owner of every vessel or float of timber shall be answerable to the undertakers for any damage done by such vessel or float of timber, or by any person employed about the same, to the harbour, dock, or pier, or the quays or works connected therewith; and the master or person having the charge of such vessel or float of timber, through whose wilful act or negligence any such damage is done shall also be liable to make good the same . . . . . Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to impose any liability" upon the owner when the vessel is at the time when the damage is caused in charge of a compulsory pilot. A vessel was driven aground by a violent storm, and after the master and crew had been obliged to abandon her, was forced by the wind and waves against a pier, whereby serious damage was occasioned:—Held, that the owners of the ship were not liable under the above section. River Wear Commissioners v. Adamson, 2 App. Cas. 743; 47 L. J., Q. B. 193; 37 L. T. 543—H. L.

The exemption from obligation to make good losses or injuries caused by the act of God applies to liabilities created by sect. 74 no less than to those existing before the passing of the act. Ib.

When a Defence.—A loss occasioned by the act of God is a loss arising from and occasioned by the agency of nature which cannot be guarded against by the ordinary exertions of human skill and prudence so as to prevent its effect. Nugent v. Smith, 1 C. P. D. 423; 45 L. J., C. P. 697; 34 L. T. 827; 25 W. R. 117—C. A.

The plaintiff delivered to the defendant in London a mare to be carried by him by steamer from London to Aberdeen, between which places he ran steamers as a carrier. A storm arising during the voyage, the mare was so injured that she died. The jury found that the injury was caused partly by excessive bad weather and partly by the fright and struggling of the mare, and negatived all negligence on the part of the defendant:—Held, that upon these findings he was not liable. Ib.

To an action upon a recognizance or an obligation, impossibility, by act of God, of performance of the condition, is a good defence. Leitrim (Earl) v. Steward, 5 Ir. R., C. L. 27

A carrier is not bound to incur unreasonable expense to surmount obstructions caused by an act of God, as a fall of snow. Briddon v. Great Northern Railway Company, 28 L. J., Ex. 51. But see cases, sub tit. SHIPPING (Charterparty, Frost preventing Loading).

A carrier contracted to carry goods between Gosport and Ryde. The goods were put in a boat and towed by his steam vessel, which proceeded to Portsmouth pier to take in passengers. There was another vessel alongside the pier; and it was the usual and most safe course for the steamboat so approaching to stop until the other vessel had left. On this occasion the steamboat with the boat in tow was twice stopped, in consequence of the stopping of the other vessel, and on the second time of stopping the tide lifted up the tow-boat and pitched it on the rudder of the steamboat, whereby the tow-boat sprang a leak and the goods were damaged. There was no negligence on the part of the captains of either vessel:—Held, that the damage was not caused by the act of God, and therefore the carrier was liable. Oakley v. Portsmouth and Ryde Steam Packet Company, 11 Ex. 618; 25 L. J., Ex. 99.

Where damage was done to the cargo of a steam vessel by water escaping through the pipe of a steam boiler, in consequence of the pipe having been cracked by frost:—Held, that this was not an act of God, but negligence of the captain in filling his boiler before the time for heating it. Siordet v. Hall, 4 Bing. 607.

Alternatives.—An agreement to do either of two things is not discharged when one becomes impossible by the act of God. Barkworth v. Young, 4 Drew. 1; 26 L. J., Ch. 153; 3 Jur., N.S. 34.

Escape of Water.—The defendants under the powers conferred upon them by the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), ss. 135, 136, constructed, and properly constructed, a sewer having its outfall at Deptford Creek, a little above the plaintiff's coal wharf, with water-gates, which it was the duty of the person in charge of them to open when the water within them became eight feet deep,—a depth which was reached only in heavy rainfalls. On the 29th of August, 1879, there was an exceptionally heavy rainfall, and it became necessary to open the water-gates to prevent a large district from being flooded. This having been done, and the rain increasing in violence, the rush of water from the sewer carried away a portion of the plaintiff's wharf, with a barge moored thereto and a quantity of coals deposited therein and thereon:—Held, that the injury complained of was occasioned by the opening of the water-gates, and not by the act of God, and therefore the defendants were primâ facie liable for the damage done, within the principle of Rylands v. Fletcher, 3 L. R., H. L. 330; but that, as they were a public body acting in the discharge of a public duty, and as that which happened was only the inevitable result of what parliament had authorized them to do, they were not liable. Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 7 Q. B. D. 418; 50 L. J., Q. B. 772; 45 L. T. 312; 30 W. R. 83; 46 J. P. 4.

The defendant was the owner of a series of artificial lakes, which had existed for a long time without causing damage. Upon a most unusual rainfall occurring, the bank at the end of the higher lake gave way, and the water rushing with great violence into the lakes below caused their banks also to give way, and the aggregate volume of water from the lakes rushing down the valley, caused damage to certain county bridges lower down the stream. On the trial of an action by the surveyor of the county against the defendant to recover for the damage done to the bridges, the jury found that there had been no negligence in the construction or the maintenance of the lakes, but that if the flood had been anticipated, the effect might have been prevented:—Held, that the rainfall being so unusual as to amount to vis major or the act of God, the defendant was not liable. Nicholls v. Mansland, 2 Ex. D. 1; 46 L. J., Ex. 174; 35 L. T. 725; 25 W. R. 173—C. A.

The principle that if a man brings and accumulates upon his land anything which, if it escapes, may cause damage to his neighbour, he does so at his peril, is not applicable to the case of water stored in tanks in India, which have existed from time immemorial, and are preserved and repaired by the landowners by reason of their tenure, as essential to the welfare and existence of the people. Madras Railway Company v. Carcettinagarum (Zemindar), 30 L. T. 770; 22 W. R. 865—P. C.

Where water escaped from the pipes of a company owing to an extraordinary frost and caused damage, the company were held not liable. Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Company, 11 Ex. 781; but see Great Western Railway Company v. Braid, 1 Moo. N. S. 101.

— Underground.—A's mine was flooded by water which had, after an unusual rainfall, accumulated in an excavation made by B. on his land, and had escaped thence through his mine into A's, which was situated at a lower level:—Held, that although B. in making the excavation had no intention of collecting water therein, and although he had provided an outlet for such an amount of water as might be looked for in ordinary seasons, he was liable for the damage sustained by A. Fletcher or Mungrate v. Smith, 2 App. Cas. 781; 47 L. J., Ex. 4; 37 L. T. 367; 26 W. R. 83—H. L. Affirming S. C., 7 L. R., Ex. 305; 41 L. J., Ex. 193; 27 L. T. 164; 20 W. R. 987. And see WATER and GAS.

— Personal Incapacity.—In a contract of apprenticeship, by which it is agreed that the apprentice shall honestly remain with and serve his master during the term fixed, there is in law an implied condition that the apprentice shall not be prevented from serving by the act of God. Boast v. Firth, 4 L. R., C. P. 1; 38 L. J., C. P. 1; 19 L. T. 264; 17 W. R. 29.

The plaintiff contracted with a wife as her husband's agent that she should play the piano at a concert. She was unable to attend owing to illness. In an action against the husband for breach of contract:—Held, that his wife's illness and consequent incapacity excused him. Robinson v. Davison, 6 L. R., Eq. 269; 40 L. J., Ex. 172; 24 L. T. 755; 19 W. R. 1036.

An order in bastardy was made on the 8th of February. On the 12th the appellant entered into the proper recognizance, and on the same day sent a written notice of his having done so by the post, addressed to the mother of the child. The mother died on the 9th February:—Held, that the sessions were bound to hear the appeal, the appellant being excused from performing the duty of giving notice, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 10, s. 3, by its becoming impossible by the act of God. Reg. v. Leicestershire (Justices), 15 Q. B. 88; 4 New Seas. Cas. 124; 19 L. J., M. C. 209; 14 Jur. 550. See also CONTRACT (Impossibility).

— Inevitable Accident—Charterparty.—By the terms of a charterparty a ship was to be loaded in regular and customary turn, except in cases of riot, strikes, or any other accident beyond the freighter's control, which might prevent or delay the loading:—Held, that a fall of snow, which rendered it impossible to bring the cargo to the place of shipment, was not an accident within the meaning of the exception. Fenwick v. Schmalz, 3 L. R., C. P. 313; 37 L. J., C. P. 78; 18 L. T., 27; 16 W. R. 481.

— Collision.—In order to constitute an inevitable accident it is necessary that the accident should not have been capable of being prevented by ordinary skill and diligence—not extraordinary skill or extraordinary diligence—by that degree of diligence and skill which is generally to be found in persons who properly discharge their duty. The Thomas Powell v. The Cuba, 14 L. T. 603.

Inevitable accident, in a cause of damage to a ship, is that which a party could not possibly prevent by the exercise of ordinary care, caution and maritime skill. The Uhla, 19 L. T. 89.

When damage might have been avoided by shipping cable and setting sail:—Held, that it was not an inevitable accident, but the result either of negligence or the absence of proper nautical skill. Ib.

— Costs.—A sailing ship in a gale drove from her anchors across a sand and her rudder was so damaged as to render the ship unmanageable: in this condition she came into collision after sunset with a brig at anchor. At the time of the collision the ship had her anchor light exhibited and no other light. In an action of damage by the owners of the brig against the ship it was held that the collision was occasioned by inevitable accident, and that the ship, in the circumstances of the case, was not to be deemed in fault for not carrying side lights or the three red lights prescribed by Article 5 of the Regulations for preventing Collisions at Sea, and that the suit ought to be dismissed without costs. The Buckhurst, 6 P. D. 152; 30 W. R. 232.

Inevitable accident is where the collision could not possibly have been prevented by proper care and seamanship under the particular circumstances of the case. So that where the defence of inevitable accident is set up on behalf of a vessel prima facie to blame for a collision, the defence, to succeed, must be supported by proof that everything was done which could and ought to have been done to avoid the collision; and this, though the vessel is in some degree disabled, and so less manageable than she would otherwise have been. The Calcutta, 21 L. T. 768—P. C.

Inevitable accident is that which the party charged with the damage could not possibly prevent by the exercise of ordinary care, caution, and maritime skill. The Marpesia, 4 L. R., C. P. 212; 26 L. T. 333; 8 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 468.

— Evidence of Negligence.—The mere happening of an accident is not sufficient evidence of negligence to be left to the jury; but the plaintiff must give some affirmative evidence of negligence on the part of the defendant. Hammack v. White, 11 C. B., N. S. 588; 31 L. J., C. P. 129; 8 Jur., N. S. 796; 5 L. T. 676; 10 W. R. 230.

But accidents may be of such a nature that negligence may be presumed from the very fact of the happening of the accident. Byrne v. Boadle, 2 H. & C. 722; 33 L. J. Ex. 13; 9 L. T. 450; 12 W. R. 279. And see NEGLIGENCE, CARRIERS and SHIPPING.

Accord without Satisfaction.—Accord without satisfaction cannot be pleaded alone to a deed. Parker v. Ramsbottom, 3 B. & C. 257; 5 D. & R. 138.

To an action for a debt, a plea that the plaintiff in consideration that the defendant would secure the debt by executing a mortgage of premises when called on to do so, the amount to carry interest and be payable by instalments, undertook that no proceedings should be instituted against him in respect of the debt unless default were made in paying the instalments. The plea averred the defendant's constant readiness to execute the mortgage, but that he had never been called on to do so:—Held bad, for pleading matter of accord without alleging it by way of satisfaction. Allies v. Probyn, 2 C. M. & R. 408; 5 Tyr. 1079; 4 D. P. C. 153.

Satisfaction.—To an action for work done, the defendant pleaded that, before action the plaintiff sued the defendant in a county court for 50*l.*, and, being an infant, gave notice that he should set up his infancy; whereupon, before the trial, it was agreed that he should pay the plaintiff 30*l.* and his costs in the county court, and that the plaintiff should accept the 30*l.* and the performance by the defendant of the agreement in satisfaction as well of the causes of action for which the plaintiff in the county court was levied as of all causes of action which the plaintiff had against the defendant, and that the defendant paid the 30*l.* and the costs, which the plaintiff accepted in pursuance of the agreement, in satisfaction:—Held, that the plea disclosed a sufficient satisfaction. Cooper v. Parker, 15 C. B. 822; 24 L. J., C. P. 68; 1 Jur., N. S. 281—Ex. Ch.

Bond given for Bond.—To an action on a bond, the defendant pleaded that before breach, M. and others, as his sureties, executed and delivered another bond in satisfaction and discharge of the bond in the declaration, and of all covenants therein contained, and that the plaintiff accepted the bond in satisfaction and discharge of the bond in the declaration, and of all covenants:—Held, that the plea was not good, either by way of accord and satisfaction or release.

Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mayor, &c.) v. Oswald, 1 El. & Bl. 295; 22 L. J., Q. B. 129; 17 Jur. 1148.

Acceptance.—An acceptance in satisfaction must be an act of the will in the party receiving. Hardman v. Bellhouse, 9 M. & W. 596; 11 L. J., Ex. 135.

of Indemnity.—The plaintiff, acceptor of a bill of exchange, on the day it fell due sent a person to the defendant, who held it, to pay the amount, and bring it back. The defendant received the money and gave a receipt for it, but said he could not give up the bill. The plaintiff being informed of this, sent again to the defendant to demand the bill or the money, but he did not give up either. Afterwards, on the same day, the defendant sent to the plaintiff a paper signed by G., acknowledging the receipt from the defendant of the amount of the bill, and undertaking to bear the plaintiff harmless for the amount, if the bill, which he stated to have been lost, should be presented. The plaintiff kept this guarantee, but nevertheless sued the defendant for money received:—Held, that his right of action vested on the defendant's refusal to repay the money or give up the bill; and that the receipt by the plaintiff of G.'s guarantee operated in the nature of an accord and satisfaction. Alexander v. Strong, 9 M. & W. 733; 2 D. N. S. 256; 11 L. J., Ex. 316.

of Security.—Shares in a company were deposited by B. with A., to be sold by A. in case B. neglected to provide for two bills accepted by A. for B.'s accommodation. B. having failed to provide for the bill, A. sold the shares, and gave notice of that fact to B., who refused to execute a transfer to the purchaser. In an action by A. to recover the amount paid by him to take up one of the bills, B. pleaded in bar the deposit and sale of the shares. Upon an issue taken on this plea:—Held, that B. was entitled to the verdict, notwithstanding his refusal to give effect to the sale by executing a transfer. Ross v. Moser, 1 C. B. 227.

of less sum than amount of Debt.—Acceptance of a less sum cannot be a satisfaction in law of a greater. Fitch v. Sutton, 5 East, 230; 1 Smith, 415.

An agreement by a debtor to pay to the creditor or his nominees a less sum than the debt payable to the creditor is not a sufficient consideration for an agreement by the creditor not to take further proceedings. Beer v. Foakes, 11 Q. B. D. 221; 52 L. J., Q. B. 712—C. A. Reversing 52 L. J., Q. B. 426.

A plea, therefore, alleging the acceptance of a less sum in satisfaction of a larger sum, will be bad after verdict. Down v. Hatcher, 10 A. & E. 121; 2 P. & D. 292; 3 Jur. 651.

So, where a defendant pleaded a payment in discharge and satisfaction, and the plaintiff replied a writ sued out before such payment; the plea held bad, because it did not allege the payment to have been made in discharge of the costs and damages as well as of the promises, and it appeared upon the record that the plaintiff had still a cause of action unsatisfied. Francis v. Crywell, 1 D. & R. 546; 5 B. & A. 886. But see Corbett v. Scinburne, 3 N. & P. 551; 8 A. & E. 673.

Where to an action by assignees of a bankrupt to recover 1,000*l.* received by the defendant before the bankruptcy, he pleaded, that, on an account stated between him and the bankrupt before the bankruptcy, the former was found to be indebted to the bankrupt in 400*l.*, for which the bankrupt drew a bill of exchange upon the defendant, payable to him or his order, which he accepted for and on account of the debt, and returned it to the bankrupt:—Held, that the plea was no answer, as it was pleaded to the whole of the demand, and giving a bill for 400*l.* was not a legal satisfaction of 1,000*l.*, being the amount of the debt claimed. Thomas v. Heathorne, 3 D. & R. 647; 2 B. & C. 477.

Payment of Debt by Cheque of Smaller Amount.—A., being indebted to B, in 125*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.* for goods sold and delivered, gave B. a cheque for 100*l.* payable on demand, which B. accepted in satisfaction:—Held, a good accord and satisfaction. Cumber v. Wane (Stra. 426), and Sibree v. Tripp (15 M. & W. 23), observed upon. Guddard v. O'Brien, 9 Q. B. D. 37; 46 L. T. 306; 30 W. R. 549.

Joint Debt—Discharge of one Debtor.—B. & C. being jointly indebted to A, the latter sued B. alone. He remonstrated upon the hardship of the case, alluded to circumstances which would probably reduce A.'s demand if he gained a verdict, and proposed to put an end to the action by paying part of the debt, and costs. This was acceded to, and a receipt given for the sum paid, which was stated to be for debt and costs in that action. A. afterwards sued C.:—Held, that the composition did not operate as a discharge of the whole debt, but only to relieve B. and, therefore, it was no defence for C. Walters v. Smith. 2 B. & Ad. 889.

Allowance of Cross Demands.—To an action for money due on an account stated, it is not sufficient to plead that the defendant and plaintiff accounted together of and concerning the action, and all other claims and demands between them, amounting to 1,000*l.*; and that on such accounting, a small sum, to wit, 150*l.*, was found to be due and owing to the plaintiff, which the defendant promised to pay, and afterwards paid to the plaintiff, who accepted it, in full satisfaction of the sum due to him from the defendant: for such a plea does not shew that, at the time of the second accounting relied on, any cross demand by the defendant against the plaintiff existed, or that, if it existed, it had not been agreed to be given up by the defendant in consideration of the plaintiff's giving up some other demand of his on the defendant, so as to make payment of the balance a satisfaction of the larger sum. Smith v. Page, 15 M. & W. 683.

To an action on several bills of exchange and for goods, the defendant pleaded that he and the plaintiff accounted together of and concerning these causes of action, and of and concerning other claims and demands of the plaintiff against the defendant, and certain other claims and demands of the defendant against the plaintiff; and on that accounting the sum of 50*l.* and no more was found to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff, which sum the defendant promised the plaintiff to pay to him on request; and that the plaintiff received from the defendant 50*l.* in satisfaction of such sum:—Held, that the plea amounted to an allegation of the allowance of cross demands upon an account stated, and payment of the balance, and afforded substantially a good defence. Callander v. Howard, 10 C. B. 250; 1 L. M. & P. 562; 19 L. J., C. P. 312; 14 Jur. 672.

For Personal Injuries.—In an action for an injury sustained through a railway accident, the plaintiff, at the time, not supposing that he had sustained any serious injury, accepted of the company 2*l.* as compensation for damage to his clothes:—Held, that the receipt of this sum could not be set up as an accord and satisfaction for a patent and severe injury to the brain or spine. Roberts v. Eastern Counties Railway Company, 1 F. & F. 460.

In an action for injuries arising from a concussion, caused by a collision of railway trains, the plaintiff having the day after the occurrence agreed in terms to accept a sum in satisfaction of the injuries, and all consequences arising therefrom:—Held, that if his mind went with those terms, and he understood their effect when he assented to them, he was bound by the agreement, and could recover no further compensation, even although it appeared that he had sustained serious and permanent injuries, latent and undiscovered until some time afterwards, and of which he had no idea at the time he entered into the arrangement. Rideal v. Great Western Railway Company, 1 F. & F. 706.

To an action for compensation for personal injuries from a railway accident the company pleaded a receipt in full; the plaintiff then filed a bill in equity alleging the receipt to have been obtained by fraud, and praying that the company might be restrained from setting it up, but for no further relief:—Held, that, although the plaintiff might have met the plea by an equitable replication, he was entitled to come to equity for the relief needed for the purposes of his action, and that he had rightly limited the prayer of his bill to such relief. Stewart v. Great Western Railway Company, 2 De G., J. & S. 319; 11 Jur., N. S. 627; 13 L. T. 79; 13 W. R. 907.

Under Lord Campbell's Act.—In an action under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 93 (Lord Campbell's Act), accord and satisfaction with the person injured in his lifetime is a defence to proceedings by his representatives after his death. Read v. Great Eastern Railway Company, 9 B & S. 714; 3 L. R., Q. B. 555; 37 L. J., Q. B. 278; 18 L. T. 82; 16 W. R. 1040.

In Action for Libel.—Accord and satisfaction is a good plea to an action for a libel. Boosey v. Wood, 3 H. & C. 484; 34 L. J., Ex. 65; 11 Jur., N. S. 181; 13 W. R. 317.

An agreement that apologies on each side shall appear in the several newspapers of the plaintiff and the defendant, executed by the latter, will form a valid plea of that kind. Id.

In Equity.—An agreement between a bond debtor and his creditor that the latter shall take all the debtor's property, and pay his other creditors 5*s.* in the pound, though not a discharge of the bond at law by way of accord and satisfaction, because not under seal, still operates in equity as a satisfaction of the debt; and it is not possible in equity, upon such a transaction, to reserve any rights against the surety, and any attempt to do so would be void, as being inconsistent with the agreement. Webb v. Hewitt, 8 Kay & J. 438.

Sufficiency of Plea.—In an action upon a covenant to pay money upon a contingency, an accord executed before the contingency happened is a bad plea. Healey v. Spence, 8 Ex. 668; 22 L. J. Ex. 249.

To an action for money lent, a plea that the defendant gave the plaintiff an authority to receive, as the defendant's agent, money due to the defendant, to an amount exceeding the amount lent, and to pay himself, and agreed not to receive the same otherwise than by the plaintiff's agency; and that the money was not received in consequence of the plaintiff's negligence and default, and thereby became wholly lost to the defendant:—Held, bad, as amounting neither to an accord nor satisfaction. Gifford v. Whitaker, 6 Q. B. 249; 13 L. J., Q. B. 325; 8 Jur. 1134. S. P. Griffiths v. Owen, 13 M. & W. 58; 2 D. & L. 190; 13 L. J. Ex. 345.

Replication to Avoid.—To a plea of accord and satisfaction by the delivery by the defendant to the plaintiff and acceptance by him of monies, deeds and securities for money, and allotting him shares in a company, an equitable replication as to the deeds and securities, that such deeds and securities were accepted by the plaintiff on the faith of a representation by the defendant that they were valid and binding securities, whereas they were not valid and binding on the company, and were before action repudiated by the company, is good. Stears v. South Essex Gas Light and Coke Company, 9 C. B., N. S. 180; 7 Jur., N. S. 447; 9 W. R. 533.

To an action on a covenant in a demise of mines, alleging non-payment of tonnage rents and not keeping books of accounts, the defendant pleaded that during eight years he did keep such books containing an account of all ore gotten, and that such account was submitted for examination to the plaintiff, and that he and the defendant in each of those years stated an account concerning all the ore got by the defendant during the preceding year, and the tonnage rent payable in respect of the same, and that in each of such accounts a certain sum was agreed upon between the plaintiff and the defendant to be the balance due, which sum was paid and accepted by the plaintiff in satisfaction of the tonnage rent payable by the defendant during the said period. Replication, that the accountings were not true and correct accountings according to the deed, but were erroneous in this: that divers tons of ore which ought to have been included in the account, and divers quantities of tonnage rent payable in respect thereof, were, by mistake and ignorance of the facts on the part of the plaintiff, omitted from the accounts, and that the balances were erroneously agreed to be the balances due under the deed:—Held, that the plea afforded no answer to the action, and that if it afforded a prima facie defence, it was answered by the replication. Perry v. Attwood, 6 El. & Bl. 691; 25 L. J., Q. B. 408; 2 Jur., N. S. 1071.

To an action for use and occupation, the defendant pleaded, first, that the plaintiff seized goods of the defendant sufficient to pay the rent and costs, and detained them for two years; and it was then agreed between them, that the plaintiff should retain the goods in satisfaction of the debt, and that he did so accordingly. Secondly, that after a wrongful seizure of the goods of sufficient value to pay the rent, the plaintiff and the defendant agreed that the plaintiff should retain the goods, and that they should relinquish their claims on each other. Thirdly, that they agreed that the plaintiff should retain the goods so seized, and that they should relinquish their claims, and the defendant should give up possession. Replication traversed the seizure of goods of sufficient value to pay the rent:—Held, that the pleas were good, and that the replication was bad, for putting in issue matter which was only inducement to the acceptance in satisfaction, such acceptance being the material part of the pleas. Jones v. Sawkins, 5 C. B. 142; 5 D. & L. 353; 17 L. J., C. P. 92.

To an action for a debt the defendant pleaded, that he delivered to the plaintiff, in satisfaction of the action, a deed, by which an annuity was granted to him. The plaintiff replied, that no memorial of the deed was enrolled according to 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, and that, to an action by him on the deed to recover money due from that defendant in respect of the annuity, he had pleaded that no memorial was enrolled; and that the plaintiff in consequence elected that the deed should be null, and discontinued such action:—Held, that the replication was good, and answered the apparent satisfaction shown in the plea. Turner v. Broune, 4 D. & L. 201; 3 C. B. 157; 15 L. J., C. P. 223; 10 Jur. 811.

2. BY NEW OR SUBSTITUTED AGREEMENT.

How far Accepted in Satisfaction.—To an action for infringing a patent, the defendant pleaded, that it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant that the latter should admit his liability to the action; that he should take and the plaintiff grant a licence for the use of the invention; that he should hand a cheque to a third person, to be held till the grant of the licence; that the plaintiff and the defendant should bear their own costs of the action, and that "the action and the causes of action included in the same, should be settled, satisfied and terminated by the arrangement and agreement before mentioned." That the defendant admitted his liability, drew and delivered the cheque, and had always been ready and willing to perform the agreement, take the licence, and pay his own costs, of which the plaintiff had notice:—Held, that the plea was bad; for if the agreement were construed as an accord in respect of the things to be done, there was no averment of satisfaction, the stipulation of the defendant not having been all performed; and if making the agreement itself was relied upon, there was no allegation, expressed or implied, that the agreement was accepted in satisfaction. Hall v. Flockton, 16 Q. B. 1039; 20 L. J., Q. B. 201; 15 Jur. 600—Ex. Ch.

To an action by payee against acceptors of two bills, they pleaded that before the bills became due, and before the delivery to the plaintiff, it was agreed between him through the drawers, as his agents, and the acceptors and A., that in consideration of them and A. paying the drawers 500*l.* in settlement of accounts, the plaintiff would accept a dividend of 2*s.* 9*d.* in the pound on these and other bills accepted by the defendants and A., and within one month would deliver up the bills, receiving the dividend on each acceptance; that a place of tender of the composition was agreed upon, and a penalty of 500*l.* agreed to be paid on default on either side; that the defendants and A. paid to the drawers, and they accepted, the 500*l.* in settlement, and the defendants and A. tendered the dividend, of all which the plaintiff had notice; that the plaintiff refused to accept the dividend, and failed to deliver up the acceptances:—Held, that the plea was bad in substance, as it contained no allegation that the agreement to accept the dividend was taken in satisfaction or substitution of the agreement on the bill, and it was consistent with the plea that the plaintiff may have elected to pay the penalty for default in performance of the agreement. Huttligeig v. Booker, 9 C. B. 689; 19 L. J., C. P. 330.

To an action upon a contract for the delivery of 600 loads of timber at Dantzic, the defendant pleaded that before action, it was agreed that he should deliver to the plaintiff, in London, other timber, and that such other timber should be received by him in full satisfaction of all causes of action upon the contract; that the defendant, in part performance of such agreement, delivered to the plaintiff, who received of him, 143 loads in full satisfaction of the causes of action so far as they related to 143 loads of timber in the contract mentioned; and that the defendant, within a reasonable time, tendered the residue of the timber to complete the contract:—Held, that the plea was neither good as a plea of accord and satisfaction, for want of an averment of satisfaction, nor as a plea of performance, there being no averment, expressed or implied, that the substituted agreement was accepted in satisfaction. Gabriel v. Dresser, 15 C. B. 622; 3 C. L. R. 415; 24 L. J., C. P. 81.

A passenger who was injured by a railway accident sent in a claim for 69*l.* compensation. The traffic manager of the company called upon him, and after some discussion the passenger accepted 400*l.*, and gave a receipt acknowledging it to be in full discharge of his claims. About a year afterwards he commenced an action against the company for further compensation, to which the company pleaded that he had accepted 400*l.* in full satisfaction and discharge of the causes of action. The plaintiff then filed a bill to restrain them from relying on the plea, and from setting up the acceptance of the 400*l.* or the receipt, as a satisfaction or discharge of the damages, except to the extent of 400*l.* The bill did not allege fraud, but that the plaintiff had signed the receipt on the express condition that he should not thereby exclude himself from further compensation if his injuries turned out more serious than was supposed at the time:—Held, that, as the statement in the receipt could be rebutted by evidence that the plaintiff did not receive the money in full satisfaction of all demands, the whole case could be tried at law better than in equity; and that the bill ought to be dismissed. Lee v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 6 L. R., Ch. 527; 25 L. T. 77; 19 W. R. 729.

To a defence in an action for personal injuries, of a release by deed, it was replied that the execution of the deed by the plaintiff was procured by the company fraudulently representing for that purpose that his injuries were of a trivial and temporary nature, and that if they should afterwards turn out to be more serious than he then anticipated, he would still, even though he had executed the deed, be in a position to obtain and would obtain further compensation from the company:—Held, that there was a fraudulent misrepresentation of fact alleged sufficient to avoid the deed as against the plaintiff, who had been thereby induced to execute it. Miracchfield v. London, Brighton and South Coast Railway Company, 2 Q. B. D. 1; 46 L. J., Q. B. 94; 35 L. T. 473.

Semble, that the deed would equally have been avoided by the second allegation that the fraudulent misrepresentation had been as to the legal effect of the deed which the plaintiff was thereby induced to sign. Ib.

Sufficiency of Consideration for.]—Covenant for not repairing. The defendant pleaded, that, after breach, an agreement was entered into between the plaintiff and himself, that in consideration that the defendant had become tenant of the premises, and promised to repair the same before the 12th of April, the plaintiff would not in the mean time commence any action on account of the breach of covenant; but that the plaintiff commenced his action before the 12th of April:—Held, that this plea was bad in being a plea of accord executory only, and not executed, in shewing no good consideration between the parties to the agreement, as the defendant was already liable to damages under the covenant for not repairing; and therefore his promise to repair by the 12th of April was no consideration for the plaintiff's promise to forbear; and that the defendant's promise to repair not having been made until after the new tenancy was contracted, the plaintiff derived no consideration from such tenancy. Bailey v. Homan, 3 Bing. N. C. 915; 3 Hodges, 184; 5 Scott, 94.

Action on an agreement, that two actions pending at the suit of the plaintiff against the defendant should be settled, and all proceedings therein stayed, and that the defendant should pay the plaintiff's money. Breach, nonpayment:—Held, that the count disclosed not a mere executory accord, but an agreement, with sufficient consideration to support the promise; and that the action lay. Crouther v. Furrer, 15 Q. B. 677; 15 Jur. 535.

To a note given by the defendant to his father, he pleaded that he had just grounds to complain of the distribution of his father's property, as his father had admitted, and that it was therefore agreed between them that the defendant should cease for ever to make any such complaint, and that in consideration thereof his father would discharge him from liability on the note, and that the defendant's agreement should be accepted in full satisfaction and discharge, and that it was so accepted:—Held, that the plea was bad, as not shewing any consideration for the promise by the father. White v. Bluet, 2 C. L. R. 301; 23 L. J., Ex. 36.

Action upon two deeds, whereby the defendant's testator covenanted to pay money with interest. Plea, that the plaintiff was a mortgagee of an estate which was insufficient, upon an estimate of its value, to pay the mortgage money due from the testator; that three other mortgagees were in the same situation, the estate realised to each being less in estimated value than the charge upon it; that the defendant was devisee of the real estate, and executor of the deceased mortgagor; that he had received assets, which, after deducting the costs and expenses payable by him in the first instance, and in preference to the debts due from the testator, and also excepting some furniture, amounted to the deficiency on each mortgage; and thereupon it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant, and each of the mortgagees, as the common consent of all, and at the request of each, that no suit should be instituted for the administration of assets, and that the balance of the assets, after deducting the furniture which should be given to the widow, should be divided rateably between the different mortgagees, and paid to them in satisfaction of the sums due to them over and above the estimated value of the estates; that all the rights and equities of redemption, or other rights of the defendant as executor and trustee to the mortgaged property, should thenceforth be wholly barred, extinguished, and discharged, and the mortgagees should become absolute owners, both at law and in equity, of the mortgaged estates; and that the covenants sued on should be satisfied and discharged in consideration of the premises. The plea averred payment to each of his share of the assets, and that the several rights and equities of redemption were barred and extinguished. The judge having ruled that the plea could not be proved, except by an agreement in writing:—Held, that although an agreement to convey an equity of redemption must be in writing, this plea would have been good, even though it had expressly stated the contract to have been by parol, inasmuch as the agreement by the plaintiff to forego the balance of his mortgage beyond the value of the estate, upon receiving his share of the assets, was binding on him, and the receipt of his share of the assets was a satisfaction for the estate, because the agreement of the other mortgagees to take their shares of the assets also was a good consideration for giving up the claim for the residue of the debt against the defendant. Massey v. Johnson, 1 Ex. 241; 17 L. J., Ex. 182.

Subsequent Cause of Action.—A declaration stated that the plaintiff was seised in fee of land and houses, which were contiguous to other land, and he was entitled to the support of the land and houses by the land to which the same were so contiguous, and by the strata under the same, and also by the strata of minerals under the plaintiff's land; and that the defendant wrongfully and without leaving any proper or sufficient pillars or supports, worked the coal mines under the land and houses of the plaintiff, and under the land so contiguous to the same, by reason whereof the soil and surface of the plaintiff's land sunk in, and the houses became ruinous. Plea, that by an agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, after reciting that an action had been commenced against the defendant to recover compensation for the injury to the land and houses by the defendant working the mines under the same, it was agreed that all further proceedings in the action should be stayed, on the terms that he should make good all damages done to the premises, and repair the same to the satisfaction of a surveyor, and should pay the loss of rent till the premises should be restored, and also the costs of the action and of the surveyor. New assignment, that the plaintiff sued not for the damages and injury in satisfaction and discharge of which the agreement was entered into, but for that, after the repairing, by reason of the same acts that caused the damage, the land on which the houses were erected further sunk, by reason whereof the houses so repaired and other houses of the plaintiff being on the same land became ruinous:—Held, that the cause of action was not the damage done to the plaintiff's land and houses by improperly working the mines, but the injury to his right to have his land and houses supported by the contiguous land and strata of coal; and therefore when any part of the necessary support was removed, although no actual damage, there was a complete cause of action, for which the plaintiff might have recovered prospective damage, and no new cause of action arose from the subsequent damage, and consequently the agreement stated in the plea and its performance were a bar to the action. Nichlin v. Williams, 10 Ex. 269; 23 L. J., Ex. 335.

To refer to Arbitration.—Matters in difference existing between the plaintiff and the defendant, some of which were the subject of an action, it was agreed between them, that in consideration that the defendant would consent to refer to arbitration the matters of the action, the plaintiff would accept such agreement in satisfaction of all damages sustained by him in respect of the other matters:—Held, that the agreement and its performance were a bar to an action in respect of the last-mentioned matters. Williams v. London Commercial Exchange Company, 10 Ex. 569.

Under Lands Clauses Act, 1845.—A company obtained parliamentary powers to make a railway cutting through a private owner's land, and for that purpose they entered into an agreement under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 6, to purchase part of his land; and it was also agreed that the purchase-money should be taken in full compensation for all damage by severance and injury to the adjoining lands (if any) of the owner, and also for injuriously affecting such lands. Deeds of conveyance of the lands taken were afterwards executed. His houses on the adjoining land suffered structural injury from subsidence of the land consequent upon the excavations in accordance with the deposited plans, and he obtained against the company an assessment by inquisition under the Lands Clauses Act, s. 68, and afterwards brought an action to recover the amount of the assessment and the costs of the inquisition; to which the company pleaded satisfaction and discharge under the agreement:—Held, that the agreement covered the injury complained of, although possibly caused by the construction of the works on land other than that purchased from him; and that the Lands Clauses Act, s. 51, giving the costs of inquisition to the owner of land when the assessment is greater than the sum offered, does not apply where the promoters have made no offer, and are not liable at all for the claim made. Todd v. Metropolitan District Railway Company, 24 L. T. 435; 19 W. R. 720.

Performance of.—To an action by indorsee against maker of a note, he pleaded that the note was made by himself and E., his partner; and that, whilst the plaintiff was the holder of the note, the defendant and E. delivered to him nineteen signed bills of costs, which were referred to taxation; that it was agreed that the balance found due from the plaintiff to the defendant and E. on such taxation, should be applied in part payment of the note, and that the balance of the note, with interest, should be secured by a judgment payable at certain periods, which had elapsed before action; that the taxation was still pending, and the balance not ascertained, and that the defendant and E. had always been ready and willing to apply the balance due to the defendant towards the payment of the note, and on the completion of the taxation to receive the balance due on the note by a judgment in accordance with the agreement:—Held bad, as even supposing it to be a good agreement to suspend the remedy, the lapse of time shewed the performance of it to be impossible. Carter v. Wormald, 5 D. & L. 731; 1 Ex. 81; 16 L. J., Ex. 231.

Effect of.]—Action on a note for 140*l.*, payable twelve months after date, and on a note for 200*l.*, payable two years after date. Plea, that after the notes became due, it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant and A., that A. should and would, at the request of the plaintiff, pay to the plaintiff in trust for B. 200*l.* for her own sole use and benefit, or 25*l.* per annum so long as the 200*l.* should remain unpaid, which 25*l.* should be paid quarterly; and that the rights and causes of action of the plaintiff upon and in respect of the notes should be suspended so long as A. should continue to pay 6*l.* 6*s.* every quarter; and that A. paid the 25*l.* quarterly, according to the agreement:—Held, that in order best to effectuate the intention of the parties, the agreement must be construed to mean that the plaintiff agreed to forbear his suit until the quarterly payments should cease to be made; and that the legal effect of such agreement was, not to suspend the plaintiff's right of action upon the notes in the meantime, but to subject him to an action for damages in the event of his suing contrary to the agreement; and, therefore the plea was no bar. Ford v. Beech, 5 D. & L. 610; 11 Q. B. 852; 17 L. J., Q. B. 114; 12 Jur. 310—Ex. Ch. S. C. 7 Hare, 208.

A declaration stated that an action had been commenced by a banking company against A. for the recovery of a bill of exchange drawn by him upon and accepted by the defendant for 1,250*l.*; that while the action was pending, it was agreed between the company, A. and the defendant that the action should be settled as follows:—250*l.* and 500*l.* by the notes of A., and 500*l.* by the defendant's note at twelve months, the defendant consenting to the company appropriating the securities held by them to the payment of such balance, and the defendant agreeing to give them a power to sell the properties mentioned in the securities, the company to forego all interest on receiving the three notes, and to guarantee to give up the bill sued on, and the 1000*l.* bill received on account of the bill. Breach: that the defendant did not nor would give the company the note for 500*l.*, nor the power of sale:—Held, that the agreement was a binding engagement, and not a mere accord, inasmuch as it would have been broken if the company had proceeded with the original action, a new person having been made a party to the contract. Henderson v. Stobart, 5 Ex. 99; 19 L. J., Ex. 135.

A declaration stated an agreement under seal, between the plaintiff and the defendant, by which, after reciting a contract for the execution by them, as partners, of certain works, and that disputes had arisen relating to their partnership, and that the plaintiff had consented to retire from the partnership upon terms to be ascertained by arbitration, it was agreed that the parties should abide by and fulfil the award of the arbitrators or umpire; and that the umpire afterwards awarded that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 5,003*l.* by instalments, viz. 2,000*l.* on the 1st January, 2,000*l.* on the 1st April, and 1,003*l.* on the 1st July. Breach: nonpayment of a part of the sum so awarded. Plea, that after breach in nonpayment of the first instalment, but before any further instalment became due, it was agreed that the defendant should not assist B. in establishing a partnership with the plaintiff in the recited contract, and that the defendant should pay and the plaintiff accept 4,500*l.* by instalments, all of which were to become due before the day on which the last instalment was to become due, in full satisfaction and discharge of the sum awarded and of the breach of the award, and that the plaintiff accepted the agreement and its performance by the defendant in full satisfaction and discharge. The plea stated payment of these instalments on the day specified, and that the plaintiff accepted the 4,500*l.* and the payment thereof by the instalments. The agreement in the plea was not under seal, and one of the instalments was paid on the 19th instead of the 14th of April, the day specified:—Held, that the action being not upon the submission but upon the award, the plea could be sustained without showing an agreement under seal; that the nonpayment of the first instalment due under the award was a breach of the whole contract to perform the award, and that the plea was therefore an answer to the action by way of accord and satisfaction, the agreement being the payment of a smaller sum at an earlier day; and that the payment of the instalment on the 19th of April having been accepted as payment by the plaintiff on the 14th was a performance of the agreement. Smith v. Trowdale, 3 El. & Bl. 83; 2 C. L. R. 874; 23 L. J., Q. B. 107; 18 Jur. 552.

Held, secondly, that the day of payment was immaterial, and therefore, the performance of the agreement stated in the plea was proved. Ib.

A. and B., brothers, were principal and surety in an annuity bond. By an agreement afterwards executed by them and a third brother, for the settlement of their affairs and the determination of their mutual claims, an apportionment of property was made among the three, and the bond was declared to be B.'s (the surety's) debt:—Held, that this agreement (whether subsequently acted upon or not) was a binding accord between A. and B., and that B., having been obliged to pay arrears of the annuity, could not recover them from A. Cartwright v. Cooke, 3 B. & Ad. 701.

Sufficiency of Pleading.]—In an action for a debt, a defendant pleaded that, in consideration that he would at once pay to the plaintiff the whole of his claim, except a portion claimed by the defendant as a deduction from it, the plaintiff agreed that that sum should be deposited in the hands of a third party, to be held by him in trust for the plaintiff and defendant until the difference between them should be adjusted; alleging performance, and that the difference was still pending:—Held, good as a special plea of payment. Page v. Meek, 3 B. & S. 259.

To an action by assignees of a bankrupt assurance association, the defendant pleaded, that, before the bankruptcy, it was agreed between the association and the defendant that policies which had been effected by the defendant with the association, and which were existing, should be forthwith cancelled and delivered up to the association, which should thereupon be exonerated and discharged from the insurances, and that the premiums thereupon paid or payable by the defendant, or a rateable proportion thereof, after deducting so much as would be fairly payable in respect of risks already incurred, should be allowed in account to the defendant, and set off against the monies due from the defendant to the association, and that the defendant thereupon should be acquitted, exonerated, and discharged from the payment of so much of the monies as the premiums so to be allowed should amount to. The plea stated that the amount of premium so to be allowed was a certain sum, and averred that, in pursuance of the agreement, the defendant delivered up the policies, and that they were cancelled, and that the defendant was in consequence thereof exonerated and discharged from the payment of that sum:—Held, that the plea was bad in substance; for, that the agreement being to deliver up the policies to be cancelled, and to allow the premiums, the plea ought to have alleged that such allowance was made. Graham v. Gibson, 4 Ex. 768; 19 L. J., Ex. 204.

To a declaration alleging a breach of an agreement therein set forth, and consequent damage to the plaintiffs, it was pleaded that a certain agreement had been come to between the plaintiffs and defendants after disputes had arisen. The plea did not in terms admit or deny the alleged breach; nor did it in terms state that the agreement pleaded had been accepted by the parties in accord and satisfaction of the causes of action alleged in the declaration:—Held, on demurrer, reversing the judgment of the court below, that such plea was bad. It could not be assumed that an agreement, the defendant's version of which was set out in the plea, had been accepted in accord and satisfaction. Barclay v. Bank of New South Wales, 5 App. Cas. 374; 42 L. T. 196—H. L.

3. BY RECEIPT OF NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT.

For Less Amount than Debt.—To an action on a note for 50*l.* with a count for 1000*l.* money received, the defendant pleaded as to 500*l.*, parcel, &c., that the plaintiff commenced an action for the recovery of 500*l.* and 500*l.* in the Tolzey Court at Bristol; that the defendant disputed the debt, and denied that he owed, or was liable to pay, or that the plaintiff could recover the same; that thereupon, to terminate the dispute and claim and demand, and finally to determine the action, the plaintiff and the defendant agreed that the action should be settled by the defendant delivering to the plaintiff three notes for 125*l.*, 125*l.*, and 50*l.*, and that the plaintiff should receive the same in satisfaction for and in discharge of the 500*l.* and 500*l.*, and all damages and costs, and that the plaintiff should discontinue the action. Replication, that no such agreement was ever made. It was proved that the action in the Tolzey Court was for 500*l.*, and that it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant that the defendant should give the plaintiff, in discharge of the 500*l.*, three notes, two for 125*l.* and the third for 50*l.* The notes were given, and the following agreement was indorsed by the plaintiff's attorney on the process served on the defendant: "This action is settled, by the defendant giving three notes—viz. one at three months, 125*l.*; one at four months, 125*l.*; and one at twelve months, 50*l.*: upon payment of which notes I undertake to deliver to the defendant's attorney the papers and letters in my possession in reference to this action:—Held, first, that the real meaning of the parties was to put an end to the action, and for the larger sum claimed therein to substitute a smaller, secured by three notes; and that the plea was proved. Sibree v. Tripp, 15 M. & W. 23; 15 L. J., Ex. 318.

Held, secondly, that, although payment of part of a liquidated and an ascertained sum cannot be a satisfaction of the whole, yet that, upon a mere simple contract, a negotiable security may be a satisfaction of a claim for a larger amount. Id.

A., being indebted to B. in 125*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.* for goods sold and delivered, gave B. a cheque for 100*l.* payable on demand, which B. accepted in satisfaction:—Held, a good accord and satisfaction. Cumber v. Wane (Stra. 426) and Sibree v. Tripp (15 M. & W. 23) observed upon. Goddard v. O'Brien, 9 Q. B. D. 37; 46 L. T. 306; 30 W. R. 549.

In Exchange for other Negotiable Instrument.—A plea to an action on a bill of exchange for 43*l.* by indorsee against acceptor that, after the bill became due, the drawer gave the plaintiff his note for 44*l.* in satisfaction, and that he accepted it in satisfaction, is a good answer to the action; and a replication that the note was not paid when due is bad. Sard v. Rhodes, 4 D. P. C. 743; 1 M. & W. 153; 1 Gale, 376.

As Payment for Amount due on Bond.—To an action on a bond conditioned for payment of money, the defendant pleaded, that after the day of payment the obligee received certain bills of exchange not yet due, on account of part of the sum due on the bond, and certain monies in satisfaction of the residue:—Held, that the plea was no answer. Worthington v. Wigley, 3 Bing. N. C. 454; 3 Scott, 558; 5 D. P. C. 504; 1 Jur. 183.

When Creditor's rights only Suspended—Bill not negotiated.—Action for goods sold. Plea, as to 9*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.*, that the defendant drew upon a piece of paper an instrument purporting to be a bill of exchange, without a drawer's name, whereby he was required to pay to such person, or his order, who should place his name thereto as drawer, 20*l.*, two months after date; which instrument the plaintiff requested the defendant to accept towards payment of 9*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.*, and for the plaintiff's accommodation as to the rest; and which the defendant accepted accordingly, and delivered to the plaintiff, and thereby became liable to the plaintiff, or to such person who should place his name thereto as drawer, or his order, 20*l.*, viz. towards payment of 9*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.* and for his accommodation as to the rest; and that he received the bill in satisfaction of 9*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.*, and which bill was not due at the commencement of the action. Replication, that the bill remained unnegotiated in the hands of the plaintiff, without any drawer's name to it, and unpaid:—Held, that under the circumstances alleged, the plaintiff's right to sue for the original debt was suspended until the expiration of the two months, and of the period of the instrument becoming due and being dishonoured. Simon v. Lloyd, 2 C. M. & R. 187; 3 D. P. C. 813; 5 Tyr. 701.

Accepted by third party.—It is an answer to an action for a debt, that the creditor has taken from a third person, for and on account of such debt, a bill of exchange drawn by the creditor on and accepted by such third person for an amount equal to the amount of such debt, and that the creditor indorsed the bill over, and that the same was in the hands of such indorsee at the time of action, although the bill was then overdue and unpaid. Belshaw v. Bush, 11 C. B. 191; 22 L. J., C. P. 24; 17 Jur. 67.

By Agent.—A plea that A. was indebted to the defendant in a larger sum, and that A. being in prison in Scotland as a debtor the defendant authorized the plaintiff to receive from A. the sum so due to him from the defendant; and that the plaintiff, instead of receiving the sum from A., received from A. a bill of exchange for and on account of the sum, and that he appropriated and retained the bill for and in liquidation and discharge of the debt, and that he discharged A. from the debt, according to the law of Scotland:—Held, that the plea did not import either satisfaction or payment. Baillie v. Moore, 8 Q. B. 489; 15 L. J., Q. B. 169; 10 Jur. 592.

How far a Suspension or Extinguishment of Debt.—An averment that a bill of exchange was given for and on account, and in payment and discharge of a debt, is not equivalent and does not amount to a satisfaction or an extinguishment of the debt. McDorall v. Boyd, 6 D. & L. 149; 2 B. C. Rep. 298; 17 L. J., Q. B. 295; 12 Jur. 990.

To an action for 40*l.* for goods, the defendant pleaded, except as to 10*l.* and 9*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*, parcel, &c., that the debts, except as to 9*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*, accrued to the plaintiff for clothes delivered to the defendant; and in consideration that the defendant would deliver to the plaintiff a blank acceptance of his for 25*l.* he would discharge the defendant from all claims for clothes, if the acceptance should be paid in six months, and if it should not be paid within that time the defendant should be liable to pay the plaintiff 10*l.* only, that the defendant delivered the acceptance, and that the same was not paid within six months, whereby the defendant became liable to pay 10*l.* only (which sum he paid into court):—Held, a good plea of accord and satisfaction. Curlewis v. Clark, 3 Ex. 375; 6 D. & L. 455; 18 L. J., Ex. 144.

II. BY WHOM.

By Joint Covenantors.—One of three joint covenantors gave a bill of exchange for part of a debt secured by a covenant, on which bill judgment was recovered:—Held, that such judgment was no bar to an action of covenant against the three, such bill not being averred to have been accepted in satisfaction, nor to have produced it in fact. Drake v. Mitchell, 3 East, 251.

If a plaintiff, in an action against several, accepts satisfaction from one, and drops the action, it seems he cannot afterwards sue the others. Dufresne v. Hutchinson, 3 Taunt. 117.

A judgment by cognovit against one of the makers of a joint and several promissory note, and a levy of part under a fi. fa., is no discharge of the other. Ayrey v. Duxenport, 2 N. R. 474.

To an action by three for a joint demand, the defendant pleaded satisfaction with one of them, by part payment in cash, and a set-off of a debt due from that one to the defendant:—Held, a good plea, without alleging any authority from the other two to make the settlement. Wallace v. Kelsall, 7 M. & W. 264; 8 D. P. C. 841; 4 Jur. 1064.

To an action by surviving partners against a defendant, for a debt alleged to be due to the firm, he pleaded that he had been tenant to the deceased partner of a house in which he had an interest, and that, pursuant to an agreement between himself and such partner, he had surrendered the house, in satisfaction of the debt. There was no allegation that the plaintiffs were parties to the agreement:—Held a good defence, because the effect of the agreement having been to suspend the right of action during the life of the deceased partner, that could not revive upon his death, but was altogether extinguished. Croove v. Lysaght, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 481.

A count that A. and B. were tenants of chambers to C., at a rent payable quarterly, and that, in consideration that A. and B. would underlet the chambers to D. at a certain rent, D. promised A. and B. to pay the rent to C., and, if not, to indemnify A. and B. in respect thereof, and to pay the same to them. Breach, non-payment by D. of the rent due from A. and B. to C. Plea, that before the rent became due from A. and B. to C., it had been agreed between A., for and on behalf of B. and with his authority, and D., that D. should deliver up possession to A., and that in consideration D. should be discharged from further liability for rent, and that D. delivered up possession to A., which he on behalf of himself and B. accepted:—Held, that the plea set up a good defence by way of executed contract. Smith v. Lovell, 10 C. B. 6; 20 L. J., C. P. 37; 15 Jur. 250.

By Co-trespasgers.—In an action for a trespass committed by the servant and by command of A., acceptance of satisfaction by the plaintiff from A. is a defence. Thurman v. Wild, 11 A. & E. 453; 3 P. & D. 489.

By Stranger.—In an action for work done, the defendant pleaded that the claim accrued under an agreement for building a church; that the plaintiff having suspended the work, another agreement was entered into between him and A., under which the plaintiff, in consideration of stipulated payments, undertook to complete the work, and to rely for the residue of the contract price upon subscriptions which were to be raised; and that A. made, and the plaintiff received, the payments stipulated for by the second agreement, in satisfaction of the original agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, and of the performance thereof by the latter :—Held, that the plea was bad in substance, inasmuch as it did not show that the agreement made by A., and the payments under it, were intended to be made for the benefit of the defendant, and that he had adopted A.'s acts. James v. Isaacs, 12 C. B. 791 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 73 ; 17 Jur. 69.

To an action by indorsee against acceptor of a bill for 55*l.*, he pleaded that he accepted it for the drawer's accommodation, and without consideration ; that the drawer indorsed it with other bills to the plaintiff as a security for repayment of 30*l.* advanced by him to the drawer ; and that after action the plaintiff's claim on the bill was satisfied and discharged by payment to him by the acceptor of one of the other bills of the sum of money so advanced, and all interest thereon ; and that from that time the plaintiff held the bill declared on, without value or consideration :—Held, that the plea was bad, both on the ground that it did not answer the damages in the action, and also that the payment relied on as made by a stranger was not alleged to have been made for and on account of the debt, and to have been ratified by the defendant. Kemp v. Balls, 10 Ex. 607 ; 3 C. L. R. 195 ; 24 L. J., Ex. 47.

Action on Bill of Exchange—Indorsee against Acceptor—Payment by other Party to Bill.]—

To an action on a bill of exchange for 49*l.* by indorsee against acceptor, he pleaded that the drawer delivered to the plaintiff, who accepted, goods of the value of 50*l.* in satisfaction of the bill and of all damages and causes of action in respect thereof, and that he from the time of the satisfaction of the bill had always held the same against the will and consent of the drawer, and had commenced the action and prosecuted the same against and in opposition to the will and consent of the drawer :—Held, that the plea was no bar to the plaintiff's right to recover against the defendant on the bill. Jones v. Broadhurst, 9 C. B. 173.

Action against acceptor of a bill indorsed by T. to the plaintiff. Plea, pais darrein continuance, that after the bill become due T. paid to the plaintiff, being the holder of the bill, and he accepted, the amount of the bill and all interest due thereon in satisfaction of the bill and of all monies payable on account and in respect thereof :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to proceed for the recovery of costs, and therefore the plea was no bar to the continuance of the action. Goodwin v. Cremer, 18 Q. B. 757 ; 22 L. J., Q. B. 30 ; 17 Jur. 2.

III. EVIDENCE AS TO.

Generally.—In an action on a bill drawn by W. upon and accepted by the defendant, and by W. indorsed to the plaintiff, the defendant pleaded, that he delivered it to W. as a security for a loan, and that certain scrip of the defendant was deposited with, and received by W. as a collateral security, with the bill, for repayment of the loan, and upon the terms, that any sums which should be received by W., or any person to whom he might indorse the bill and deliver the scrip, for or in respect of the scrip, should be taken to be in satisfaction pro tanto of the bill ; that the plaintiff took the bill with notice of the agreement, and that while he held the bill upon these terms W. delivered to the plaintiff the scrip upon and subject to these terms ; that W. indorsed the bill to the plaintiff after it became due, and the plaintiff received it upon and subject to the same terms ; that the plaintiff had received in respect of the scrip a sum equal to the amount of the bill and all damages ; and that the sum was thereupon accepted in satisfaction. The plaintiff replied, that the scrip was not delivered to or received by W. upon the terms alleged. The defendant gave in evidence a memorandum, signed by W., and dated the same day as the bill, stating that the defendant "has this day deposited with me 220 shares in the H. Railway, as a collateral security for the due payment of his acceptance :"—Held, that the evidence supported the plea. Malpas v. Clements, 19 L. J., Q. B. 435.

To an action on a note for 150*l.*, the defendant pleaded that A., being indebted to the plaintiff in 3,612*l.* 10*s.*, it was agreed that the plaintiff should accept 1,500*l.* in satisfaction, and that the defendant should deliver the note to the plaintiff in part payment ; and that he should not enforce payment of the original debt ; that A. afterwards became bankrupt, and that the plaintiff, in violation of the agreement, proved for the original debt :—Held, that the plea was not proved by an agreement, that, upon giving 350*l.* down, and a bond of other parties for 1,000*l.*, and the note, A. should be released from the original debt. Gillet v. Whitmarsh, 8 Q. B. 966 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 291 ; 10 Jur. 904.

A plea to an action for a debt, that the plaintiff drew, and the defendant accepted, a bill of exchange for 60*l.*, in satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand, is not supported by evidence that the defendant transmitted to the plaintiff a blank acceptance, with 60*l.*, in figures, written in the margin, which the plaintiff altered, and filled up as a bill for 46*l.*, before he signed his name to it as drawer. Baker v. Jubber, 1 M. & G. 212 ; 1 Scott, N. R. 26 ; 8 D. P. C. 539.

To an action for goods the defendant pleaded, that he was possessed of a public house, and it was agreed that, in consideration that the defendant would give up possession, the plaintiff would pay to the defendant 100*l.*, and discharge him from the debt, that the plaintiff paid the 100*l.*, and the defendant quitted the house. The agreement was not in writing :—Held, that, having been executed, it was receivable as evidence to prove the plea. Lavery v. Turley, 6 H. & N. 239 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 49.

In an action to recover the amount of a bill of sale, after breach of a warranty to defend the goods against all persons whatsoever, evidence that the amount secured by the bill has in fact been received since the breach cannot be admitted in the absence of a plea of payment, or of accord and satisfaction. Horsley v. Cox, 15 L. T. 391.

Contract to be performed in futuro—Alleged New Contract—Lapse of Time.]—The lapse of twenty years from the time of making a contract, to be performed in futuro, is not of itself evidence of a new contract averred to have been performed, and pleaded as an accord and satisfaction of the original contract. Siboni v. Kirkman, 1 M. & W. 418.

III. IN OTHER CASES.

I. ACTION OF.

1. BY AND AGAINST TENANTS IN COMMON.

Of Real Property—Action against Co-Tenant.]

—One tenant in common of real property cannot maintain an action for money received against his co-tenant, his remedy being by an action of account under 4 Ann. c. 16, s. 27. Thomas v. Thomas, 5 Ex. 28; 1 L. M. & P. 229; 19 L. J., Ex. 175; 14 Jur. 180.

In an action of account by a joint tenant, or tenant in common, against his companion, it is necessary to allege that he has received more than his share of the rent; he is not chargeable as a bailiff at common law. Sturton v. Richardson, 2 D. & L. 182; 13 M. & W. 17; 13 L. J. Ex. 281; 8 Jur. 476.

Semble, that where several parties are tenants in common, an action of account may be brought by one against another without joining the rest. Id.

When Co-Tenant Answerable as Bailiff.]—If there are tenants in common, and one tenant alone occupies the property, he is answerable as bailiff to his co-tenant in an action of account if he receives more than comes to his share, but not otherwise. And he is answerable only for what he receives more than comes to his just share. Henderson v. Eason, 17 Q. B. 701; 21 L. J., Q. B. 82; 16 Jur. 518—Ex. Ch.

He receives more than his just share if he receives money or something else, given or paid by another, which the co-tenants are entitled to simply by their being tenants in common, and if the amount which he so receives and keeps is more than in proportion to his interest as such tenant. Id.

He does not receive more than comes to his just share if he merely has the sole enjoyment of the property, even though by the employment of his own industry and capital he makes a profit by the enjoyment, and takes the whole of such profit. Id.

A. and B., tenants in common in fee, made a joint demise of land to C., with a general reddendum, not saying to whom the rent was payable. A. died on the 15th of March, 1848, and B. received the half-year's rent due at Lady-day, less 12s. 6d., which he deducted as the share of A.'s heir for the period between A.'s death and the time the half year's rent became due:—Held, that although the words of the demise were joint, the reversions were several, and the rent followed the reversion, and consequently that the heir of A. was entitled to the moiety of the half year's rent accruing at Lady-day, 1848, and might maintain an action against B. as bailiff for receiving more than his just share. Beer v. Beer, 12 C. B. 60; 21 L. J., C. P. 124; 16 Jur. 223.

Held also, on motion in arrest of judgment, that the declaration was good without an averment that a reasonable time had elapsed between the request to account and the commencement of the action. Id.

— Claim for Arrears.]—Two, being tenants in common, one entered into possession in 1827, with the consent of the other, upon an understanding that he should pay an occupation rent when called upon to do so. The tenant in possession died in 1839. The survivor claimed six years' rent:—Held, that the claim must be allowed, and that 4 Ann. c. 16, was not repealed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Henderson v. Eason, 15 L. J., Ch. 457; 10 Jur. 821.

2. PLEADINGS.

A declaration by a plaintiff that the defendant was his tenant in common, and received in respect of rent, 48l. 15s. more than came to his just share and proportion, is bad for want of an averment of a request and refusal to render an account, and for being framed for a liquidated sum instead of laying as a breach the not accounting. Purcell v. Harding, 15 W. R. 128.

Held also, that an averment of receipt, as bailiff, is also necessary. Id.

Action by one tenant in common against another for not accounting for rents received by him. Plea, that before the receipt of the rents, they, by deed, demised the premises to A. for a term of years, which by divers mesne assignments vested in the defendant. Equitable replication, that the deed was a mortgage to secure a sum of money and interest; that the defendant received more than sufficient to pay the mortgage debt, interest and costs, and he accordingly paid the same:—Held, that the court could not deal with the replication, since they had no power to compel a reconveyance, and, therefore, ordered it to be struck out. Gorely v. Gorely, 1 H. & N. 144.

In an action of account, nothing can be pleaded before auditors contrary to what has been pleaded to the action and found by verdict. Godfrey v. Saunders, 3 Wils. 73, 94.

A plea by a merchant against his partner, as tenant in common and bailiff, that after selling goods and merchandises the defendant rendered to the plaintiff a reasonable account of his goods and merchandises, and of the proceeds and profits, is in substance a plea of plene computavit. Baxter v. Hoxier, 7 Scott, 233; 5 Bing. N. C. 288; 1 Arn. 519.

To satisfy such a plea, the defendant must prove an account rendered, showing an agreed balance between the plaintiff and the defendant; an account in which the defendant charges himself as factor for the whole, instead of charging himself as factor for one moiety and as owner of the other, thereby making himself liable for a moiety of the losses arising from the sale of the whole, is insufficient. Id.

A declaration stated that L., being seised in fee by deeds of lease and release and settlement, conveyed tenements to the use of himself for life, with remainder to the use of the plaintiff and defendant, his children by his late wife, in such shares as he should by deed or will appoint, and in default of such appointment to the plaintiff and the defendant, as tenants in common. Averment, that L. died without having made any appointment, and that thereby the plaintiff became seised in fee tail of one moiety of the tenements in common with the defendant. First plea, that, in pursuance of the power in the deed of settlement, L., by deed, appointed to A. and B. the tenements, upon certain trusts; and thereby made a valid appointment, under and by virtue of the power in the deed of settlement. Second plea, that, in pursuance of the power in the deed of settlement, L., by will, appointed the tenements, subject to the term created by the deed of appointment, to certain uses:—Held, that the allegation in the declaration, that L. died without having made an appointment, was premature, and therefore the defendant was not bound to traverse it; and that if it was not necessary in the declaration to allege that the power had not been exercised, the defendant was obliged to shew how and to whom the appointment was made, in order to shew that the plaintiff and defendant were not tenants in common; and therefore, that the pleas were good. Rickets v. Loftus, 14 Q. B. 482; 14 Jur. 389.

A defendant can now pay money into Court. Anon., Bull. N. P. 128. See Tomkins v. Wiltshire, 1 Marsh. 115; 5 Taunt. 431; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 70; and Cresswell v. Hedger, 31 L. J., Ex. 497; 8 Jur., N. S. 767.

3. PRACTICE.

Two principal officers of the court were appointed auditors after judgment of quod computet. Smith v. Smith, 2 Chit. 10.

A rule to appoint auditors is absolute in the first instance. Archer v. Pritchard, 3 D. & R. 596.

In an action of account, the defendant having suffered judgment by default, the court granted a rule, calling on him to shew cause why he should not appear and consent to the appointment of auditors, or why a capias ad computandum should not issue against him. No cause was shewn, and the court made the rule absolute in the alternative. Pryor v. Pettingell, 2 D. N. S. 755; 12 L. J., Ex. 219; 7 Jur. 132.

II. MERCHANTS' ACCOUNTS.

The exception as to merchants' accounts in 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, was confined to cases where an action of account would lie, or an action upon the case for not accounting. Cuttam v. Partridge, 4 Scott, N. R. 819; 4 M. & G. 271.

An open account between two tradesmen for goods sold by each to the other, without any agreement that the goods delivered on the one side shall be considered as payment for those delivered on the other, did not constitute such an account as concerns the trade of merchandise between merchant and merchant within the exception of 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3. Ib.

Since 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, the existence of items within six years in an open account will not operate to take the previous portion of the account out of the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

III. IN OTHER CASES.

Trespass to Mine—Accounts when working inadvertently or fraudulently—Statute of Limitations.—The owner of a mine commenced to work from his own mine into an adjoining mine vested in trustees, in the bonâ fide belief that he was about to obtain from them a contract authorizing him so to work, and gave to one of the trustees notice that he was about to commence working:—Held, that the working, though no contract was afterwards entered into, and the trustees had no power to make one, ought to be treated on the same footing as if it had been commenced inadvertently, and in taking an account of the minerals gotten without authority the defendant was allowed the cost of severing them, as well as the cost of bringing them to bank. But, from the time that notice was given to the defendant that no contract would be made with him authorizing him to work, his working was treated as fraudulent, and he was allowed only the cost of bringing the minerals to bank. Trotter v. Maclean, 13 Ch. D. 574; 49 L. J., Ch. 256; 42 L. T. 118; 28 W. R. 244.

So long as a wrongful working is to be treated as inadvertent the Statute of Limitations applies, and the account will only be directed for six years from the issue of the writ. But the onus is on the defendant to show that minerals gotten by him were gotten before the six years. Ib.

Trustee—Grant of Booty by Royal Warrant.]

—The crown, by royal warrant "granted to the Secretary of State for India in Council for the time being" certain booty taken in war "in trust for the use of" certain persons, who had been adjudged entitled to it upon a reference to the Court of Admiralty, to be distributed among them, with a further provision that in case any doubts should arise in the course of the distribution the decision of the Secretary of State should be final, unless the crown should otherwise order: Held—(1.) That the Secretary of State for India in Council could only sue or be sued as a corporation under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 106, s. 65, in proceedings which might have been taken by or against the late East India Company; (2.) That the royal warrant constituted the Secretary of State for India in Council an agent of the crown for the purpose of the distribution of the fund under the control of the crown, but did not constitute him a trustee for the persons interested subject to the control of a court of equity. Alexander v. Wellington (Duke) (2 Russ. & My. 35) discussed. Brown v. Harris (13 Ves. 552) distinguished. Kinloch v. Secretary of State for India in Council, 7 App. Cas. 619; 51 L. J., Ch. 885; 47 L. T. 133; 30 W. R. 845—H. L. (E.) Affirming, 15 Ch. D. 1; 49 L. J., Ch. 571; 42 L. T. 667; 28 W. R. 619—C. A. And see further TRUST and TRUSTEE.

ACCOUNTANT.

Remuneration.]—On strong evidence of general usage a jury may find that an accountant was entitled to charge at the same rate for his clerks as for himself, even during such portion of the time as he was not himself personally engaged in the work. Price v. Hong Kong Tea Company, 2 F. & F. 466.

Remuneration for giving Evidence.]—An accountant had been employed to examine books for the purpose of preparing an affidavit in a suit in chancery, and had also been employed in extracting items of profit and loss and recording them in supplemental books, and in setting up new journals and ledgers:—Held, that the taxing master was right both in making an allowance of five guineas a day to the accountant for such time as he had been employed in preparing to give evidence, and in refusing to make any allowance in respect of work done by him as an accountant. Lafitte & Company, In re, Lafitte's Claim, 20 L. R., Eq. 650; 44 L. J., Ch. 633; 33 L. T. 91; 24 W. R. 7.

Costs of Preliminary Examination of Books by.]—An action involving long accounts was referred; and it was ordered that the plaintiff, by an accountant to be named by the arbitrator, should have inspection of, and take extracts from, the defendant's books. An accountant was named, and he was engaged many days over the books, and afterwards gave evidence before the arbitrator. The award was made in the plaintiff's favour, with the costs of the action, reference, and award:—Held, that the case came within the ordinary rule, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of the preliminary examination of the books by the accountant. Nolan v. Copeman, 8 L. R., Q. B. 84; 42 L. J., Q. B. 44; 27 L. T. 789; 21 W. R. 263.

I. DEFINITION.

"Action" is a general term which would properly include informations and other proceedings by the crown. Bradlaugh v. Clarke, 8 App. Cas. 354; 52 L. J., Q. B. 505; 48 L. T. 681; 31 W. R. 677; 47 J. P. 405—H. L. (E.)

An interpleader issue is not an action within the meaning of s. 100 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and the rules of court made under that Act. Hamlyn v. Betteley, 6 Q. B. D. 63; 50 L. J., Q. B. 1; 43 L. T. 790; 29 W. R. 275—C. A.

II. BY AND AGAINST WHAT PERSONS.

1. FOREIGN SOVEREIGNS AND GOVERNMENTS.

A foreign sovereign state adopting the republican form of government, and recognised by the government of her Majesty, can sue in the courts of her Majesty in its own name so recognised. United States of America v. Wagner, 2 L. R., Ch. 582; 35 L. J., Ch. 624.

2. JUDICIAL PERSONS.

In what cases.—No action will lie against a judge of a court of record for any act done by him in the exercise of his judicial functions. Ward v. Freeman, 2 Ir. C. L. R. 460—Ex. Ch. S. P., Fray v. Blackburn, 3 B. & S. 576.

A judicial officer is not liable to be sued for an adjudication according to the best of his judgment upon a matter within his jurisdiction; and a matter of fact so adjudicated by him cannot be put in issue in an action against him. Kemp v. Neville, 10 C. B., N. S. 523.

An action will not lie against a judge for acts judicially done by him. A warrant granted by the chief justice of the Queen's Bench in chambers, returnable into that court, to arrest a party for a breach of the peace, is such a judicial act as will protect him against an action for false imprisonment. Taaffe v. Downes, 3 Moore, P. C. C. 36, n.

Trespass will not lie against a judge for acting judicially, but without jurisdiction, unless he knew, or had the means of knowing, of the defect of jurisdiction; and it lies upon the plaintiff, in every such case, to prove that fact. Calder v. Halket, 3 Moore, P. C. C. 28.

A judge of a court of record is answerable in an action for an act done by his command when he has no jurisdiction and is not misinformed as to the facts on which jurisdiction depends. Houlden v. Smith, 14 Q. B. 841; 19 L. J., Q. B. 170; 14 Jur. 598.

An action lies against a judge of an ecclesiastical court, who has acted beyond the jurisdiction of the court: as, where a party was excommunicated for refusing to obey an order of the ecclesiastical court, which it had no authority to make, or where the party had not been previously served with a citation or monition, nor had due notice of the order. Beaurain v. Scott, 3 Camp. 388.

An action was held not to lie against a vicar-general of a bishop for excommunicating a party for contumacy, in not taking upon him administration of an intestate's effects, to whom he was next of kin, and had intermeddled with the goods, although the citation by which he was cited was void, by reason that it required him to appear and take administration, without leaving him an option to renounce it, and the proceedings thereupon had been set aside upon appeal; for the vicar-general had jurisdiction over the subject-matter, viz. the granting administration, and there was no malice. Ackerley v. Parkinson, 3 M. & S. 411.

No action will lie against the judge of a court of record (a coroner), for an act done by him in his judicial capacity. Garrett v. Ferrand, 6 B. & C. 611; 9 D. & R. 657; S. P., Thomas v. Churton, 2 B. & S. 475.

If the judgment of commissioners of appeal in certain cases be declared final by statute, their judgment cannot be questioned in an action of trespass. Radnor (Earl) v. Recte, 2 B. & P. 391.

An action will not lie against a county court judge for words spoken by him while hearing a cause, although they are alleged to be spoken falsely and maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, and not bona fide in the discharge of his judicial duties. Scott v. Stansfield, 3 L. R., Ex. 220; 37 L. J., Ex. 155; 18 L. T. 572; 16 W. R. 911.

The steward of a hundred court, or of a court baron, is not responsible for the misfeasance in the execution of process of the bailiffs of the lord of the hundred or manor, to whom process of execution awarded by such court is usually directed. Bradley v. Carr, 3 M. & G. 221; 3 Scott, N. R. 523; S. P., Hulroyd v. Breare, 2 B. & A. 473; Tinsley v. Massam, M. & M. 52; 2 C. & P. 582.

Where, however, the steward directs process to persons named by the party suing out such process, taking an indemnity for such party, he is liable. Id.

An action will lie against a sheriff or his deputy if he refuses to sign a bill of exceptions. White v. Hislop, 4 M. & W. 73; 2 Jur. 470; 6 D. P. C. 693.

3. AGAINST BARRISTER.—See BARRISTER.

4. GOVERNMENT OFFICERS.

a. Contracts.

An officer appointed by government, treating as an agent for the public, is not liable to be sued upon contracts made by him in that capacity. Macbeath v. Haldimand, 1 T. R. 172.

The principal secretary of state for war is not personally liable in an action for breach of a contract entered into by him on behalf of the war department. O'Grady v. Cardwell, 21 W. R. 340.

Nor even when contracting by deed, on account of government, is he personally answerable. Unwin v. Wolery, 1 T. R. 674. See Thompson v. Pearce, 1 B. & B. 25.

In one case, however, a person entering into a charter-party in his own name, on the behalf of government, was held to be personally liable. Cunningham v. Collier, 4 Doug. 233.

b. Other acts in Official Capacity.

It is clear that a suit may be maintained against a public officer, having in his hands money issued by government for the use of an individual, for the recovery of such money. Friday v. Rose, 3 Mer. 102.

But an action cannot be maintained against the secretary at war, by a retired clerk of the war office, for his retired allowance, on the grounds that the secretary is only chargeable in his public and official character, and that an action cannot be maintained against him as such, for anything done by him in that character, although it may amount to a breach of employment, as it would tend to expose him to an infinite number of actions, to be brought by any persons who might suppose themselves aggrieved; although he may have received the money applicable to such specific purposes. Gidley v. Palmerston (Lord), 7 Moore, 91; 3 B. & B. 275.

An action is not maintainable in an Irish court against the Lord Lieutenant during his term of office for any act done by him in his political capacity. Sullivan v. Spencer (Earl), 6 Ir. R. C. L. 173.

The suppression by the Lord Lieutenant of a political meeting in the Phoenix Park is an act done by him in his political capacity. Ib.

If such an action is brought against the Lord Lieutenant, the court will stay the proceedings without requiring him to plead his privilege. Ib.

No action is maintainable against a lord lieutenant of Ireland in an Irish court during his continuance in office, for any act done by him quâ Lord Lieutenant, and when such an action has been brought, the court will, on motion, direct that the writ of summons and plaint be taken off the file, without putting the Lord Lieutenant to his plea. Luby v. Wodchouse, 17 C. L. R. 618.

c. Torts.

If a public officer is guilty of a misfeasance in the exercise of the powers intrusted to him by law, and in the discharge of his duty, he is liable to an action for any damage resulting from that act, without proof of malice or want of probable cause. Brassey v. Maclean, 6 L. R., P. C. 398; 33 L. T. 1.

An action of trespass and false imprisonment lies in England by a native Minorquin, against a governor of Minorca, for an injury committed by him in Minorca. Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 161.

No action lies against a commander of a British ship of war for seizing and detaining a vessel on suspicion of her being hostile prize; though he afterwards dismiss her without libelling her in the court of Admiralty; and though he detain her partly on suspicion of matters which are merely causes of forfeiture if she is British. Faith v. Pearson, 6 Taunt. 439; 2 Marsh. 133; 4 Camp. 357; Holt, 113.

If a ship was seized as forfeited under the 12 Car. 2, c. 18, by a governor of a foreign country belonging to Great Britain, the owner could not maintain trespass against the party seizing, although the latter did not proceed to condemnation; for, by the forfeiture, the property was divested out of the owner. Wilkins v. Despard 5 T. R. 112.

In a suit against her Majesty's deputy commissary general for Natal, and as such representing her Majesty's commissariat department, to recover certain moneys as the price or hire of certain waggons and oxen, for the carriage of certain goods, for damages for illegal acts of defendant or his employes, and for general damage:—Held, on exceptions by the defendant to the jurisdiction of the court and to the declaration, that the defendant could not be sued, either personally or in his official capacity, upon a contract entered into by him on behalf of the commissariat department; and that there was no cause of action against him. The government revenue cannot be reached by a suit against a public officer in his official capacity. Quære, whether the court would have had jurisdiction if a petition of right had been presented and the crown had ordered that right should be done. Palmer v. Hutchinson, 6 App. Cas. 619; 50 L. J., P. C. 62; 45 L. T. 180—H. L.

See also PUBLIC OFFICER.

5. PUBLIC BODIES, COMMISSIONERS, AND TRUSTEES.

a. In respect of Torts.

Exercise of Public function without Emolument—Freedom from Liability.—One who, in the exercise of a public function, without emolument, which he is compellable to execute, acting without malice, and according to his best skill and diligence, and obtaining the best information he can, does an act which occasions consequential damage to a subject, is not liable to an action for such damage. Sutton v. Clarke, 6 Taunt. 29; 1 Marsh. 429.

By a turnpike act, trustees were appointed with authority to cut drains in lands adjoining the road, making reasonable satisfaction to the owners. It was provided that all actions for anything done in pursuance of the act, should be brought within six months after doing the thing complained of. A drain was cut by an order signed by a competent number of trustees and according to the plan of a surveyor, in land adjoining the plaintiff's, by which the latter was overflowed. An action was brought against one of the trustees only, more than six months after the act done and the first injury sustained, but within six months after a subsequent injury accrued:—Held, first, that the action, if it could have been supported at all, was well brought against the defendant only; but, secondly, that the trustees, having acted to the best of their skill and with the best advice, were not answerable for the damage which had accrued. Ib.

In order to render commissioners, acting in the bonâ fide performance of a public duty, liable to an action for an injury to an individual resulting from an act so done by them, it must appear that they have been guilty of negligence, or want of skill in the conduct of it. Graciers' Company v. Donne, 3 Scott, 356; 3 Bing. N. C. 31; 2 Hodges, 120.

—Authority not exceeded.—Where trustees under 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, by improving the course of a public road, had effected a consequential injury to a private individual whose estate abutted on the road:—Held, that they were not liable to an action, it appearing that they had not exceeded the authority given them by the statute. Bolton v. Crowther, 4 D. & R. 195; 2 B. & C. 703.

Where the acts of commissioners, appointed by a paving act, occasion a damage to an individual without any excess of jurisdiction on their part, the commissioners, or paviors acting under them, are not liable to an action. British Cast Plate-Glass Manufacturers v. Mercedith, 4 T. R. 794.

The principle which imposes liabilities upon a private company, as arising in consideration of the statutable powers granted to them, has no application in the case of commissioners appointed under a public act of parliament, to do, on behalf of the executive government, certain things for the benefit of the public. Reg. v. Woods and Forrests (Commissioners), 19 L. J., Q. B. 497; 15 Jur. 35.

Trustees of a public road, who were empowered and required by act of parliament to place lamps along the road, if they should think necessary, and to make contracts for the cleansing of the road, and to take a night toll for the purpose of enabling them to light and watch the same, held not liable in an action for an injury suffered by an individual in crossing the road at night, by falling over a heap of scrapings left on the road side after cleaning the road, without any lights. Harris v. Baker, 4 M. & S. 27.

—Negligence of Contractors.—Trustees of a turnpike road are not liable for any injury occasioned by the negligence of contractors, or others employed under them in the performance of public works on the road, unless they personally interfere in the management of the works. Humphreys v. Mears, 1 M. & R. 187.

Trustees appointed under a public road act are not responsible for any injury occasioned by the negligence of the men employed in making or repairing the road. Duncan v. Findlater, 6 Cl. & Fin. 894.

The funds raised by such an act cannot be charged with compensation for such an injury; the persons employed on the road not being in the situation of servants to the trustees. Ib.

Persons intrusted with the performance of a public duty, discharging it gratuitously, and being personally guilty of no negligence or default, are not responsible for an injury sustained by an individual through the negligence of workmen employed under them. Hilliday v.

St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, 11 C. B., N. S. 192; 8 Jur., N. S. 79; 4 L. T. 406.

A vestry, in whom were vested the powers and duties of surveyors of highways, under the powers conferred upon them appointed a surveyor. Workmen employed by the surveyor, and paid out of the parish funds, being directed to carry the paving stones from a public street under repair, and place them in another public street, so negligently performed that duty that a person, in driving through the last-mentioned street, was upset and injured:—Held, that the vestry was not responsible. Ib.

A public body appointed under a local act to discharge a public duty without reward and without funds, is responsible for the negligence of those whom they employ. Cue v. Wiae, 7 B. & S. 831; 1 L. R. Q. B. 711; 37 L. J. Q. B. 262; 14 L. T. 891; 14 W. R. 865—Ex. Ch.

By an act, commissioners were appointed for improving a navigation: their powers were to be executed by the majority present at a meeting of not fewer than three. They were not to be personally liable on contracts made, or for damages incurred, in relation to anything done in pursuance of the act, but might be sued in the name of their clerk. The commissioners, at a meeting held, resolved to accept a tender for executing works in pursuance of the act. Their clerk thereupon drew up a contract according to the tender, and it was afterwards signed by the contractor:—Held, that the contract made in consequence of the resolution was a contract entered into by the commissioners in execution of their office, and that they were liable and might be sued in the name of their clerk for damage negligently done by the contractor to third persons in execution of such contract. Allen v. Haycard, 7 Q. B. 960; 4 Railw. Cas. 104; 15 L. J., Q. B. 99; 10 Jur. 92.

Waterworks Company acting under instruction of Commissioners.—By a local act, a waterworks company was bound, at the request of town improvement commissioners, to fix fireplugs into their mains, and to repair and keep them in proper order, at the cost of the commissioners, in whom the property in the plugs was vested by virtue of their act. In consequence of the cap of one of the fireplugs being broken, a horse placed his foot in the plug-hole, and was lamed:—Held, that the company was, and the commissioners were not liable for the injury. Bayley v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Company, 30 L. J., Ex. 57.

When special mode of compensation provided.—If, in the execution of works authorized by an act of parliament, damage is sustained, and the act provides a special mode in which compensation for such damage may be recovered, no action will lie for it. But this only relates to works carefully and skilfully executed, and if there is a want of proper care and skill on the part of those executing the works, an action for the negligence, to recover damages for the injury thereby sustained, will lie. Clothier v. Webster, 12 C. B., N. S. 790; 31 L. J., C. P. 216; 10 W. R. 624.

Personal Negligence.—Trustees of a turnpike road converted an open ditch, which used to carry off the water from the road, into a covered drain, placing catchpits, with gratings thereon, to enable the water to enter the drain. Owing to the insufficiency of such gratings and catch-pits, the water, in very wet seasons, instead of running down the ditch, as formerly before the alterations by the trustees, overflowed the road, and made its way into the adjoining land, and injured a colliery.—Held, that the trustees were liable for such injury, if they were guilty of negligence in respect of such gratings and catch-pits. Whitehouse v. Fellows, 10 C. B., N. S. 765; 30 L. J., C. P. 306; 4 L. T. 177; 9 W. R. 557.

— Act of Harbour-Master—Neglect of Harbour by Trustees who acted gratuitously.—By a local act for better preserving a harbour, trustees were appointed for carrying out the act. They acted gratuitously; the property in the harbour was vested in them, and they were empowered to elect a harbour-master and other officers and servants connected with the harbour, with power also to discharge them. The harbour-master was empowered to direct the situation in which a vessel entering the harbour was to be moored. The trustees were empowered to make bye-laws as to the management of the harbour, and to impose tonnage rates upon vessels using it, and to borrow money on the security of such rates, and to apply the proceeds in payment of the interest of the money borrowed, and of the expenses attending the carrying into execution the purposes of the act connected with the harbour, and also in the reduction of the capital borrowed.—Held, that the trustees were not liable, either, first, for the acts of the harbour-master, in directing a vessel to be moored in an improper place whereby it received damage, or, secondly, for an injury occasioned to a vessel by an accumulation of rubbish in the harbour. McLarfe v. Hetherington, 11 Ex. 257; 25 L. J., Ex. 314.

Held, also, that although the trustees had almost an absolute discretion (with certain exceptions) in the appropriation of the funds for the management of the harbour, they would not have been liable for the accident arising from the accumulation of rubbish in the harbour if they had been in possession of funds. Ib.

— Corporation—Possession of Money to cleanse Docks—Liability for neglect.—A corporation, constituted by statute for the purpose of making, maintaining, repairing and cleansing docks, which are open to the vessels of all persons upon paying tolls, duties and rates to the corporation, is liable to an action, if, having in hand funds from these sources sufficient, after defraying all other charges, they neglect to apply a part of them to cleansing the docks, and, knowing that in consequence the docks are in a state dangerous to vessels navigating them, they keep them open to the public; and a person whose vessel is injured on entering by striking on an accumulation of mud at the bottom of the docks, may recover against them damages for the injury sustained. Gibbs v. Liverpool Docks (Trustees), 3 H. & N. 164; 27 L. J., Ex. 321; 4 Jur. N. S. 636—Ex. Ch.

It makes no difference that the corporation has vested in them a discretion as to the order in which they shall apply their funds to the several purposes of their constitution, nor that the tolls, duties and rates are received for a fiduciary, and not for a beneficial purpose. Ib.

Trustees incorporated for the purpose of constructing a dock, and who receive rates and have funds which they are bound to apply in maintaining and cleansing the dock, so that it may be in a fit state for vessels to enter, are liable for injury to a vessel caused by an accumulation of mud in the dock, of which by their servants they had the means of knowing, and were negligently ignorant. Mercy Docks and Harbour Board v. Penhallow, 7 H. & N. 329; 30 L. J. Ex. 329; 8 Jur. N. S. 486; 5 L. T. 112.

Damage due to Negligence—Payment out of Rates.—The plaintiff was owner of premises in Cheltenham, which were drained by a sewer which emptied itself into the river Chelt. At the mouth of this sewer there was a flap or penstock, which prevented any water of the river from flowing up the sewer. In 1852, an act of parliament passed for improving Cheltenham, and which directed the commissioners appointed under it to make new sewers. Accordingly the commissioners constructed a new sewer, which passed under the Chelt, near the plaintiff's premises, and removed the flap from the mouth of the old sewer and connected it with the new sewer. The plaintiff's premises were twelve feet below the summit level of the new sewer. In 1855 there was a heavy storm of rain, by which the Chelt was flooded, and in consequence the new sewer burst and the water of the river flowed into it. The commissioners erected a tank round the hole, but before the repair of the sewer was completed another extraordinary flood took place, by which the tank was washed away and the water of the river rushed into the sewer and forced the sewage matter and water into the plaintiff's premises, thereby causing great damage. The local act incorporated the 14th section of the Public Health Act, which provides that full compensation shall be made out of the general or special district rates to be levied under this act to all persons sustaining any damage by reason of the exercise of any of the powers of this act.—Held, first, that the commissioners were liable to an action for negligence, and were entitled to reimburse themselves out of the rates. Ruck v. Williams, 3 H. & N. 308; 27 L. J., Ex. 357.

Held, secondly, that they were guilty of negligence in not putting up a flap or penstock at the mouth of the old sewer. Ib.

Neglect of Commissioners to give Notice—Consequential Damage.—An act enabling commissioners to grant a lease of a canal contained a clause as follows:—In case the lessees during the term should permit the navigation to be out of repair, the commissioners are authorized and required to give notice thereof to such lessees, and in such notice to specify the particular repairs which ought to be done, and the commissioners may require that such repairs should be commenced, proceeded with, and finished within reasonable periods, to be named by them, and in case the lessees shall neglect to commence such repairs, it shall be lawful for the commissioners, and they are hereby authorized, to take possession of the tolls and to cause such repairs to be done under their own direction, and to pay the necessary expenses of making such repairs out of the tolls. A lease having been granted in pursuance of the act, during its continuance one of the locks of the canal became out of repair, but the commissioners, though they knew of the want of repair, gave no notice of it to the lessee, though a sufficient time had elapsed for giving such notice. A barge entered the canal while the lock was so out of repair, but was prevented from getting out again by the falling in of the lock:—Held, that assuming a duty in the commissioners to give notice to the lessee to repair, they were not liable in an action by the owner of the barge for neglecting to give such notice, inasmuch as the detention of the barge was not a damage naturally flowing from their neglect. Walker v. Goe, 4 H. & N. 350; 28 L. J. Ex. 184; 5 Jur., N. S. 737—Ex. Ch.

Surveyor of Highways.]—No action lies against a surveyor of highways, appointed under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, for damage resulting from an accident caused by his neglect to repair the highway. Young v. Davis, 2 H. & C. 197—Ex. Ch.

b. In respect of Contracts.

Where commissioners under a local act have power to appoint officers at a salary to be paid out of the rates to be raised thereunder, the appointment does not create a contract on the part of the commissioners to pay the salary. Therefore an action will not lie against them for salary, but a mandamus or an action on the case is the proper remedy. Bogg v. Pearse, 10 C. B. 534; 20 L. J., C. P. 99.

Commissioners were appointed to be annually elected for executing a local act. They had power to levy rates. They had power to appoint clerks and other officers, and to pay them salaries out of the money to be raised by the rates. They had power to execute many works. They might sue and be sued by their clerk, and they were exempted from personal liability for any contracts entered into by them as commissioners:—Held, that a clerk, appointed by the commissioners for one year, might maintain an action for his salary against the clerk of the commissioners in a subsequent year. Hall v. Taylor, 1 El. Bl. & El. 107; 27 L. J., Q. B. 311; 4 Jur., N. S. 877.

Held, also, that it was within the scope of their authority to employ an attorney; and that he might recover in an action against the clerk of the commissioners in a succeeding year. Ib.

6. CHARITABLE BODIES.—See CHARITY.

7. CLERKS OF COMMISSIONERS.

The clerk to commissioners of paving drew up a contract for paving, of which contract the contractor was, by agreement, to pay the expense; he offered to execute the contract, but refused to pay the clerk's charges, as unreasonable; the clerk refused to allow the contract to be executed until his charges were paid. Under an act authorizing the commissioners to sue by their clerk:—Held, that he could not sue as such clerk for these charges. Curling v. Johnson, 10 Bing. 89; 3 M. & Scott, 496.

Clerks to commissioners, under a lighting and paving act, intrusted with the conduct of public works, are not liable for an injury occasioned by the negligence of artificers and labourers employed under their authority. Hall v. Smith, 9 Moore, 226; 2 Bing. 156.

III. FOR WHAT MAINTAINABLE.

1. BREACHES OF CONTRACT.

General Principle.]—The rule of law in respect of breach of contract confines the remedies by action to the contracting parties, and to damages directly and proximately consequential on the act of him who is sued. The exception in the case of master and servant dates from the Statute of Labourers, 25 Edw. 3, and is limited by it. Lumley v. Gye, 2 El. & Bl. 216; 22 L. J., Q. B. 463; 17 Jur. 827.

Maliciously procuring Breach of Contract.]—The rule of law which gives a remedy in case of enticing away servants applies to all cases where there is an unlawful and a malicious enticing away of any person employed to give his personal labour or service for a given time, under the direction of a master or an employer, who is injured by the wrongful act; and the service needs not be exclusive. Ib.

An action is maintainable in all cases for maliciously procuring a person to refuse to perform a contract into which he has entered, and by which refusal the plaintiff has sustained an injury. Ib.

The procurement of the violation of a right is a cause of action in all instances where the violation is an actionable wrong. Ib.

Where a right to the performance of a contract has been violated by a breach, the remedy is upon the contract against the contracting party, and if he is made to indemnify for such breach, no further recourse is allowed; but if that remedy is inadequate, he who procured the damage maliciously is responsible beyond the liability of the contract. Ib.

It is no objection to the action that the contracting party had not begun the performance of the contract, or that the service had not been actually entered into, or was not actually continuing. Ib.

—An action lies against a third person who maliciously induces another to break his contract of exclusive personal service with an employer which thereby would naturally cause, and did in fact cause, an injury to such employer, although the relation of master and servant may not strictly exist between the employer and employed. So held by Lord Selborne, L. C., and Brett, L. J., affirming the decision of the majority of the judges in Lumley v. Gye (2 E. & B. 216), Lord Coleridge, C. J., dissentiente. Bowen v. Hall, 6 Q. B. D. 333; 50 L. J., Q. B. 305; 44 L. T. 75; 29 W. R. 367; 45 J. P. 373—C. A.

Written Contract connected with Land—Easement.]—An action will lie for the breach of a written contract, by which A., for a valuable consideration, agrees with B. that B. may dig and carry away cinders from a cinderpit, forming part of A.'s land, though the contract, not being under seal, is incapable of granting or passing an easement. Smart v. Jones, 15 C. B., N. S. 717; 33 L. J., C. P. 154; 10 Jur., N. S. 678.

the breach of duty arising out of the contract. Alton v. Midland Railway Company, 19 C. B., N. S. 213; 34 L. J., C. P. 292; 11 Jur., N. S. 672; 13 W. R. 918.

Action against Two Persons for Identical Matter.]—A separate action cannot be maintained against the master and the owner of a ship for the same identical cause of action. The creditor has an election to sue either one or the other; but he cannot, after he has sued the one to judgment, maintain another action against the other. Priestley v. Fernie, 3 H. & C. 977; 34 L. J., Ex. 173.

2. TORTS.

a. Generally.

An act which does not amount to a legal injury cannot be actionable because it is done with a bad intent. Stevenson v. Newnham, 13 C. B. 285—Ex. Ch.

The plaintiffs alleged in their statement of claim that their house had been called "Ashford Lodge" for sixty years, and the adjoining house belonging to the defendant had been called "Ashford Villa" for forty years, and that the defendant had recently altered the name of his house to that of the plaintiffs' house. The plaintiffs alleged that this act of the defendant had caused them great inconvenience and annoyance, and had materially diminished the value of their property, and they claimed an injunction to restrain the defendant from continuing to use the name of their house:—Held, that the alleged act of the defendant in calling his house by the name of the plaintiffs' house was not a violation of any legal right of the plaintiffs: and there being no allegation of malicious intention, a demurrer to the statement of claim was allowed. Day v. Brownrigg, 10 Ch. D. 294; 48 L. J., Ch. 173; 39 L. T. 553; 27 W. R. 217—C. A. Reversing 39 L. T. 226.

In the case of damage occasioned by a wrongful act, though such as the law esteems an injury, malice is not a necessary ingredient to the maintenance of an action. Rogers v. Rajendra Dutt, 13 Moore, P. C. 209; 9 W. R. 149.

It is essential to an action of tort that the act complained of should be legally wrongful as regards the party complaining, i.e., it must prejudicially affect him in some legal right. The fact that it will, however directly, do him harm in his interests is not enough. Id.

A summons and plaint complaining that the plaintiff, a corn merchant, was possessed of stores adjacent to a public thoroughfare and market-place, and the defendant, contriving and unjustly intending to injure the plaintiff in his business of a corn merchant, and to prevent his customers from coming to the premises and stores to sell and dispose of their corn to the plaintiff, wrongfully and injuriously prevented certain parties named, under colour of requiring from them the payment of some alleged or pretended tolls or other duties not legally demandable or payable from sellers, from disposing of their corn to the plaintiff, and stopped and detained the carts and animals laden with corn while proceeding to the premises and stores of the plaintiff, and thereby obstructed and hindered the plaintiff from carrying on his business, is bad. Higgins v. O'Donnell, 4 Ir. R., C. L. 91; 18 W. R. 378.

A defendant in an administration suit made an inaccurate statement in his answer as to the number of a class of beneficiaries, and an order was made on further consideration that the fund in court should be divided among the class in the proportion in which it would have been divisible if the statement had been correct:—Held, that the person aggrieved by the error could not maintain an action against the defendant who had made the mistake. Laing v. Harle, 34 L. T. 728; 24 W. R. 728.

b. Torts committed Abroad.

Where, by the law of a foreign country, compensation or damages may be recovered in such country for an assault there committed, an action is maintainable in England by a British subject for such assault, although proceedings taken at his instance are pending in the foreign court in respect of the same assault. Seymour (Lord) v. Scott, 1 H. & C. 219; 32 L. J. Ex. 61; 9 Jur. N. S. 522; 8 L. T. 511; 11 W. R. 169.

The rule as to property and civil contracts, that an act, unless intended to take effect elsewhere, shall, as regards its effects and incidents, if a conflict of law arises between the lex loci and the lex fori, be governed by the former, applies also to the case of an act causing a personal injury. If such an act is either enjoined or rendered lawful by the law of the country where it is done, an action cannot be maintained here in respect of it. Phillips v. Eyre, 4 L. R., Q. B. 225; 38 L. J., Q. B. 113; 19 L. T. 770; 17 W. R. 375; 9 B. & S. 343. Affirmed, 6 L. R., Q. B. 1; 40 L. J., Q. B. 28; 10 B. & S. 1004—Ex. Ch.

Where a wrongful act inflicting personal injury is committed in a colony, an act of the Colonial legislature rendering legal the wrongful act done, subsequently passed before an action has been brought in this country, takes away the right of action, not only in the courts of the colony, but also in those of this country. Id.

Where the tort has been committed by the governor of the colony, it is no objection to the validity of the act of the Colonial Legislature, legalising the wrongs committed, that the assent of the governor was necessary to the passing of the act. Id.

c. Infringement of Legal Rights.

Where a person would have, at common law, a right of action grounded upon an interference with a given public right, when such interference had operated to his individual injury, if the public right is taken away by statute, and vested in a body of conservators to be exercised or controlled for a specified object, e.g., the benefit of trade and commerce, then, the right being thus resigned by the public, the individual right of action is lost also, and there can be no redress by action on account of any interference, duly authorized by such body, with private rights, of the nature of those to which the powers of the body relate. Kearns v. Cordwainers' Company, 6 C. B., N. S. 388; 28 L. J., C. P. 285; 5 Jur., N. S. 1216.

An inhabitant householder of a district may maintain an action against one who infringes a customary right to the flow of water common to the inhabitant householders of such district, without proving actual damage to himself personally by reason of such infringement, where the acts done by the person infringing such right would, if repeated and continued, be evidence of the existence of a right in such person, in derogation of the right of the inhabitants of the district. Harrop v. Hirst, 4 L. R., Ex. 43; 38 L. J., Ex. 1; 19 L. T. 426; 17 W. R. 164.

d. Torts founded on a Felony.

An action cannot be maintained where a declaration alleges a case of felony; secus where the declaration alleges only a misdemeanour. Friarington v. Hutchinson, 15 L. T. 390.

In an action by a woman for assaulting her and forcibly violating her person, whereby she was delivered of a child, the judge, upon her evidence, directed a nonsuit:—Held, that the direction was right, for if a rape had been committed no action would lie until after the defendant had been prosecuted; and if the plaintiff had consented she could not maintain an action for the assault. Wollock v. Constantine, 2 H. & C. 146; 32 L. J., Ex. 285; 9 Jur. N. S., 232; 7 L. T. 751. S. P. Quinlan v. Barber, Batty's Ir. Rep. 47.

In an action for the recovery of a brooch, the pleas being not guilty and not possessed, the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff. A rule for a new trial having been obtained, on the ground that it appeared that the brooch was taken by the defendant under such circumstances as to prove a charge of felony, and that the judge ought, therefore, to have non-suited:—Held, that the judge was bound to try the issues on the record, and that he was right in not having non-suited the plaintiff. Wells v. Abrahams, 7 L. R., Q. B. 554; 41 L. J., Q. B. 306; 26 L. T. 433; 20 W. R. 659.

An insurance company granted a fire policy to S., and during the currency of the policy S.'s wife feloniously burnt the property insured. The company, not admitting any claim on the policy, brought an action against S. and his wife for the damage done by the act of the wife:—Held, first, that the action could not be maintained, as the insurer has no rights other than those of his assured, and can enforce those only in his name and after admitting the claim on the policy. Secondly, that the action for the felony if it were maintainable was maintainable without shewing that the felon had been prosecuted. Midland Insurance Company v. Smith, 6 Q. B. D. 561; 50 L. J., Q. B. 329; 45 L. T. 411; 29 W. R. 850; 45 J. P. 699.

Seemingly, that a felonious burning by the wife of the assured, without his privity, is covered by the ordinary fire policy. Ib. See also CRIMINAL LAW (Felony).

c. Tortious Legal Proceedings.

Where an attorney has brought an action or issued execution against a wrong party purely through mistake, and without being actuated by any improper motive, though substantial injury may have resulted, it is damnum absque injuria and no action will lie. Darvis v. Jenkins, 11 M. & W. 745; 1 D. & L. 321; 12 L. J., Ex. 386.

But where the attorney of a plaintiff, in an action in which judgment had been recovered, issued a fi. fa. thereupon, which he indorsed with a direction, by means of which the house of a wrong person was entered:—Held, that such person could maintain trespass against the plaintiff in the original action. Jarmain v. Hooper, 1 D. & L. 769; 7 Scott, N. R. 663; 6 M. & G. 827; 8 Jur. 127.

Seemingly, that no action will lie against a party for inciting a third person to bring a civil action against a plaintiff without reasonable or probable cause. Piraz v. Nicholls, 2 C. B. 501.

No action lies for commencing and prosecuting an action maliciously and without reasonable cause in the name of a third party, without an allegation, shewing that legal damage has been sustained. Cotterell v. Jones, 11 C. B. 713; 21 L. J., C. P. 2; 16 Jur. 88.

An action is not maintainable against a third person on the ground that he was a mover of and had an interest in a suit, in the absence of malice and want of probable cause. Ram Coomar Coondoo v. Chunder Canto Mookerjee, 2 App. Cas. 186.

A declaration in an action against A. and B. alleged that the plaintiff was employed by the contractors of some proposed buildings to cart and convey away the earth dug out of the excavations and sites of the buildings with the horses and cart of the plaintiff; that an action was depending in the Queen's Bench, wherein B. was the plaintiff, and C. the defendant, in which action C. allowed judgment to go by default, and a fi. fa. issued against the goods of C., directed to A., as sheriff, to be put in execution by him as such sheriff; yet he, as sheriff, by and with the aid, counsel, and assistance of B., by him wrongfully and maliciously given, seized, took, and carried away, in execution of the writ, the goods of the plaintiff, under the pretence that the same belonged to C., and afterwards sold the goods as an execution under the writ against the goods of C. By means of the premises, and for want of the use of the goods, the plaintiff was unable to carry on his employment and business, and thereby lost great gains:—Held, that the declaration shewed no cause of action against B. Sedman v. Walker, 1 Ex. 589.

3. BREACH OF STATUTORY DUTY.

Whether Remedy Exclusive or Cumulative.]

—Where a statute confers a right, and annexes certain penalties for its infringement, an action for damages will not lie against a party infringing the right, by the party aggrieved. Stevens v. Jeacocke, 11 Q. B. 731; 17 L. J., Q. B. 163; 12 Jur. 477.

By a fishery act it was enacted that stems or stations shall be bounded as there defined, and that in cases of interference by one boat with another, under certain circumstances, the fish taken by the party interfering shall be forfeited to the party interfered with, and the interfering party shall forfeit 50*l.* A plaintiff declared, setting forth that, after the statute passed, he was proceeding to take fish in his proper turn and station, and would have taken them, but that the defendant prevented him from so doing by unlawfully and wrongfully throwing a net; and the declaration described the proceeding so as to bring it within the statutory prohibition:—Held, that the declaration shewed no cause of action, the plaintiff stating no interference with any common law right, and the statute having only imposed a particular penalty for the act done, and having therefore given no general right of action. Id.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, s. 1, articles of a convention between her Majesty and the King of the French, for the guidance of the fishermen of the two countries in the seas between the British Islands and France, are to have the force of law. By the articles all transgressions of the regulations, and all disputes between the fishermen, are to be submitted to the exclusive jurisdiction of and settled by the tribunal or magistrates designated by law, which tribunal may summarily impose penalties for such transgressions, and award compensation to parties injured; sect. 11 declares such tribunal in England to be any magistrate or justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the place in which, or in waters adjacent to which, the offence shall have been committed, or to which the offender shall be brought. Such magistrate may impose penalties, and award and enforce compensation to parties injured:—Held, that no action can be maintained for the breach of any article of the convention, or for damage caused by such breach, the remedy provided by the act being exclusive. Marshall v. Nicholls, 18 Q. B. 882; 21 L. J., Q. B. 343; 16 Jur. 1155.

The 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, and the rules made under it, regulate the use of adjoining mines in the Forest of Dean. By s. 29, compliance with the rules may be enforced by injunction of the Court of Exchequer, or otherwise, in such manner as that court shall on application think fit. The plaintiff and the defendant were holders of adjoining mines, and the former brought an action for injury sustained by him through the stopping of the engines in the defendant's mine contrary to one of the rules:—Held, that the specific remedy provided by s. 29 for enforcing the rules did not exclude the right of action for injuries caused by a breach of them. Ross v. Rugge-Price, 1 Ex. D. 269; 45 L. J., Ex. 777; 34 L. T. 535; 24 W. R. 786.

A railway act enacted, that any penalty imposed thereby, the recovery of which was not otherwise provided for, might be recovered by summary proceeding, upon complaint before two or more justices:—Held, that this did not bar the party entitled from his remedy by action. Collinson v. Newcastle and Darlington Railway Company, 1 C. & K. 546.

Action for obstruction by a railway company of a private right of way. No special damage was alleged. Plea, justifying under the private act of the company, and other acts therewith incorporated. Replication, that the way was a road within the Railways Clauses Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), and that the company had interfered with the same within the meaning of that act:—Held, that 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20 takes away the common law right of action for an interference under the powers of a railway company with a private right of way, except when special damage has been sustained. Watkins v. Great Northern Railway Company, 16 Q. B. 961; 20 L. J., Q. B. 391.

Where a pecuniary obligation is created by a statute, and a remedy expressly given for enforcing it, that remedy must be adopted. St. Pancras (Vestry) v. Batterbury, 2 C. B., N. S. 477; 26 L. J., C. P. 243; 3 Jur., N. S. 1106.

By an act, incorporating the Railways Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, and the Towns Clauses Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, certain expenses incurred by the Commissioners in paving streets might be recovered as damages. An action having been brought to recover expenses so incurred:—Held, that such action was not maintainable, for that the proper construction of the several acts was that the expenses were to be recovered as damages, upon a proceeding before justices. Blackburn (Mayor, &c.) v. Parkinson, 28 L. J., M. C. 7; 5 Jur., N. S. 572.

The 2 Geo. 1, c. 17 (Ir.), s. 4, requires a master to give a discharge (if required) to a servant on leaving his employment; in case of refusal, s. 5 enables the servant to obtain a discharge from a magistrate:—Held, that the statutory remedy was exclusive. Handley v. Moffat, 7 Ir. R. C. L. 104.

A private enclosure act gave the commissioners power by their award to direct by whom and in what manner certain necessary drainage works were to be made and maintained. The commissioners having directed by their award that the expenses of the works should be paid by a rate to be levied and recovered by certain surveyors in the same manner as parish rates were by law recoverable in the parish:—Held, that the rate must be recovered by distress and not by action. Danby v. Watson, 46 L. J., M. C. 179; 36 L. T. 412; 25 W. R. 464.

The 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 60, which gives a summary remedy against a corporate officer, who refuses to comply with the provisions of the act as to giving up to the town council of the borough all documents in the custody of such officer and paying over moneys, does not take away the right of action which the corporation has against such officer for the breach of duty so imposed by that section. Lichfield (Mayor, &c.) v. Simpson, 8 Q. B. 65; 15 L. J., Q. B. 78.

By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 18, every ship navigating between the United Kingdom and any place out of the same shall keep constantly on board a sufficient supply of medicines suitable to accidents and diseases arising on sea voyages, and the owner of the ship shall incur a penalty of 20*l.* for every default. By sect. 62 all penalties shall be recovered either in the superior courts at the suit of the attorney-general, or at the suit of any person by summary proceeding, and not exceeding one moiety shall be paid to the informer, and the residue to the Seamen's Hospital Society:—Held, that the penalty was recoverable for a breach of the public duty created by the statute, and that the common law right to maintain an action in respect of a special damage resulting from the breach of that duty was not taken away. Cowth v. Steel, 3 El. & Bl. 402; 2 C. L. R. 940; 23 L. J., Q. B. 121; 18 Jur. 515.

When an act of parliament imposes a statutory duty, an action does not necessarily lie for the breach of such duty at the suit of any person injured by such breach. Atkinson v. Newcastle and Gateshead Water Company, 2 Ex. D. 441; 46 L. J., Ex. 775; 36 L. T. 761; 25 W. R. 794—C. A. Reversing 6 L. R., Ex. 404; 20 W. R. 35.

Whether such a right of action exists, depends upon the general scope and object of the particular statute. Id.

By the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 17), s. 42, the undertakers are at all times to keep charged with water at a certain pressure all their pipes to which fire plugs shall be affixed, and to allow all persons at all times to take and use such water for extinguishing fire without making compensation for the same. By s. 43, if the undertakers neglect to keep their pipes charged at the statutory pressure, they are to be liable to a penalty of 10*l.* for each offence, to be recovered by a common informer. In an action to recover damages against a water company, for not keeping its pipes supplied with water at the statutory pressure, whereby a house was burnt down:—Held, that the action would not lie. Ib.

An act of parliament empowered a company to make and maintain a canal, and provided that the owners of lands within the distance of twenty yards from the canal should make a communication by pipes, between the water therein and any steam-engine, and draw from the canal such quantities of water as should be sufficient to supply the engine with cold water, for the sole purpose of condensing the steam, and for working any such engine as aforesaid; and for no other use or purpose; and there was a proviso, that if any dispute should arise between the company and any person who should be desirous of taking water out of the canal for the purposes of any such engine, or who should be in the use of taking the same, such dispute should be finally settled by the commissioners appointed under the act. In an action the declaration alleged that the defendant, the owner of a steam-engine, who had laid down a pipe communicating with the canal, used the water which had been drawn off by means of the pipes, for other purposes than for condensing the steam, and more than was necessary for condensing:—Held, that the special power of adjudication conferred upon the commissioners did not take away the right of action. Rockdale Canal Company v. King, 14 Q. B. 122; 18 L. J., Q. B. 293; 14 Jur. 16.

To an action by an incorporated company for calls, the defendant pleaded that the shares had been declared by the company to be forfeited:—Held, that the plea was bad, as the right of action and the power to forfeit shares on non-payment of calls conferred by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, were not alternative but cumulative remedies. Great Northern Railway Company v. Kennedy, 7 D. & L. 197; 4 Ex. 417; S. P., Inglis v. Great Northern Railway Company, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 112; 16 Jur. 895.

IV. ELECTION OF ACTION OR REMEDY.

In what Cases.—The court will not compel a party, who has proceeded both by indictment and action for the same assault, to make his election upon which he will rely. Jones v. Clay, 1 B. & P. 191; S. P., Murphey v. Cadell, 2 B. & P. 137.

A person who has preferred an indictment for an assault, from which he did not suffer any personal injury, and has succeeded in it, and has received from the Treasury a portion of the fine imposed upon the defendant, is not entitled, in an action against the same defendant, to recover more than nominal damages. Jacks v. Bell, 3 C. & P. 316.

After an acquittal of a defendant upon an indictment for a felonious assault upon the plaintiff by stabbing him, the plaintiff may maintain trespass to recover damages for the civil injury, if not shewn to have colluded in procuring such acquittal. Crosby v. Leng, 12 East, 409.

In an action by a woman for assaulting her and forcibly violating her person, whereby she was delivered of a child, the judge, upon her evidence, directed a nonsuit:—Held, that the direction was right, for if a rape had been committed no action would lie until after the defendant had been prosecuted, and if the plaintiff had consented she could not maintain an action for the assault. Wellock v. Constantine, 2 H. & C. 146; 32 L. J., Ex. 285; 9 Jur., N. S. 232; 7 L. T. 751.

A plaintiff, having sued at law and in equity for the same cause of action, was, after issue joined, ordered by a court of equity to elect in which suit he would proceed, and he elected to proceed in equity, and withdrew the record. An order was afterwards made by the same court for the defendant to pay the plaintiff his costs at law, which order was, on appeal, rescinded by the Lord Chancellor, who directed that the defendant should be at liberty to proceed at law. A judge's order having been made for the plaintiff to pay the defendant's costs in the action:—Held, that this order was wrong, for that the plaintiff's election to proceed in equity did not amount to a discontinuance, and the defendant, if entitled to his costs at all, must apply to the court of equity. Simpson v. Sadd, 16 C. B. 26; 3 C. L. R. 917; 24 L. J., C. P. 156; 1 Jur., N. S. 736.

Where a plaintiff has proceeded at law and in equity for the same subject-matter, and after issue joined has, under an order of a court of equity, elected to proceed in equity, the court will not, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 226, prevent the defendant from proceeding to obtain judgment in the action for his costs. Mortimore v. Soares, 1 El. & El. 399; 5 Jur., N. S. 574.

A. filed a bill in equity against B. for the cancellation of bills of exchange drawn by B. and accepted by A. in part performance of a contract, of which B. failed to perform his part, and for an injunction to restrain B. from parting with or suing on the bills; and, pending the suit, A. commenced an action against B. for damages for breach of the contract:—Held, that the suit and action were not for the same matter, and an order to elect obtained by B. was discharged. Anglo-Danubian Steam Navigation and Colliery Company v. Hogerson, 4 L. R. Eq. 3; 36 L. J., Ch. 667; 16 L. T. 262; 15 W. R. 729.

When a rule nisi, obtained for a criminal information for a libel in the Queen's Bench, is discharged on shewing cause, the applicant may bring an action in another court for publication of the libel. Wakley v. Cooke, 16 M. & W. 822; 4 D. & L. 702.

V. DIFFERENT FORMS OF ACTION.

1. TORT OR CONTRACT.

A party entitled to sue in contract has his election to sue in tort only where a duty ultra the contract is imposed by law on the defendant. Legge v. Tucker, 1 H. & N. 500; 26 L. J., Ex. 71; 2 Jur., N. S. 1235.

The forms of action have been taken away, but their substance remains. Ib.

An action against a carrier for the breach of his duty to carry safely goods delivered to him, as such, to be carried for hire, whereby the goods are lost, is an action not of contract but of tort, as well in substance as in form; the duty being imposed upon him by the custom of the realm, and being distinct from and independent of his obligation under the contract of carriage, in respect of which latter he may also be sued in an action of contract. Tuttan v. Great Western Railway Company, 2 El. & El. 844; 29 L. J., Q. B. 184; 6 Jur., N. S. 800; 8 W. R. 606.

Whenever there is a contract, and something is to be done in the course of the employment which is the subject of that contract, if there is a breach of duty in the course of that employment, the party injured may recover either in tort or in contract. Brown v. Boorman, 11 C. & F. 1; 3 Q. B. 511.

Where the liability to do an act arises merely from an agreement to do it upon a good consideration, and there is no such relation between the contracting parties as would involve a common law duty in the performance, the non-performance of the act is not such a breach of duty as can be made the subject of an action of tort. Courtenay v. Earle, 10 C. B. 73; 20 L. J., C. P. 7; 15 Jur. 15.

An action on the case will not lie for every neglect to perform a contract. Wood v. Finnis, 7 Ex. 363; 21 L. J., Ex. 138; 16 Jur. 936.

In an action against three, wherein the plaintiff declared that they had the loading of a hogshead of his, for a certain reward to be paid to one of them, and a certain other reward to the other two, and that they so negligently conducted themselves in the loading, that the hogshead was damaged:—Held, that the gist of the action was the tort, and not the contract out of which it arose; and, therefore, that on a plea of not guilty, the two being acquitted, judgment might be against the third, who was found guilty. Goett v. Radnidge, 3 East, 62.

In an action for a deceit in a warranty made by two upon a joint sale by both of sheep their joint property, the plaintiff cannot recover upon proof of a contract of sale and warranty by one only, as of his separate property; the action, though laid in tort, being founded on the joint contract alleged. Weall v. King, 12 East, 452.

In an action against proprietors of a stage coach, to recover damages for an injury sustained by a passenger, in consequence of their coachman having upset the coach on which he was riding, the declaration may be framed, for a breach of duty by the negligence of the proprietors' servants; and proof of a contract is not necessary to support such action, as against common carriers, as they may be sued for the injury, as arising ex delicto; and such actions are not necessarily to be considered quasi ex contractu, or founded on contract. Brotherton v. Wood (in error), 6 Moore, 141; 3 B. & B. 54; 9 Price, 408.

2. SIMPLE CONTRACT OR COVENANT.

Contracts by Deed.—A servant who has contracted with a married woman by deed, and performed the stipulated services, may maintain an action of assumpsit against the husband. White v. Cuyler, 6 T. R. 176; 1 Esp. 200.

Where parties contract by deed, but the defendant does not execute it, the plaintiff might sue in assumpsit, notwithstanding the deed. Sutherland v. Lishnan, 3 Esp. 42.

A tenant under a lease cannot maintain an action on an implied promise for money paid under a distress by a superior landlord: the remedy is covenant on the express contract. Schlenker v. Moxey, 5 D. & R. 747; 3 B. & C. 789.

A lessee of premises granted and assigned them by indenture to the plaintiff, who, having been distrained upon for rent in arrear to the superior landlord before the assignment, brought an action to recover the money paid under the distress, and relied upon an express promise by the lessee to repay it:—Held, that as covenant would lie on the covenant implied in the word "grant," assumpsit would not lie on any implied contract to indemnify the plaintiff, nor on the express promise which was not founded on a new consideration. Baber v. Harris, 1 P. & D. 360; 9 A. & E. 532; 2 W. W. & H. 1.

Three persons were owners of some property, and they employed the plaintiff to let it for them, and two of them executed a mortgage deed securing to him the amount of his bill; in an action against the three for the amount of his bill:—Held, that the action would lie, as the specialty liability not being co-extensive with the simple contract liability, the latter was not merged in the former. Sharp v. Gibbs, 16 C. B., N. S. 527; 12 W. R. 711.

3. CASE OR TRESPASS.

Trespass, and not case, was the proper form of action for detaining a person after the detainer has ceased to be lawful. Magnay v. Burt, 5 Q. B. 381; D. & M. 652; 7 Jur. 1116—Ex. Ch.

Trespass will not lie against a plaintiff who, without notice, takes a defendant in execution for a debt in respect of which the latter has been discharged under the Irish Insolvent Act. Ewart v. Jones, 3 D. & L. 252; 14 M. & W. 774.

But if the plaintiff maliciously sued out the writ, he was liable to an action on the case. Id.

Trespass was a proper form of action for continuing on the plaintiff's premises to keep possession of goods distrained after the distress had ceased to be lawful. Ladd v. Thomas, 12 A. & E. 117; 4 P. & D. 9.

Under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 86, s. 8, the registrar is authorized to grant licences to drivers of hackney carriages, which licences the proprietors of the carriages are required to procure to be delivered to them, and to retain whilst the drivers remain in their service, to return on demand. A declaration stated, that the plaintiff, a driver of a hackney carriage, having procured such licence, delivered it to the defendant, as his employer, and that whilst he retained it in his custody he wrongfully and unjustly wrote in ink in and upon the licence words purporting to give, and being intended to give, a character of the plaintiff as an unfit and improper person to act as driver of hackney carriages, whereby it was defaced and became useless:—Held, that the possession being in the defendant, the form of action was properly in case, and that it was unnecessary to state the act to have been done maliciously; and that the declaration was good. Murrell v. Ellis, 2 C. B. 295; 15 L. J., C. P. 18; 9 Jur. 1013.

Case was the proper form of action for pledging property delivered by the plaintiff under an agreement to the defendant for a specific purpose. Smith v. White, 8 Scott, 483; 6 Bing. N. C. 218; 8 D. P. C. 255.

Action for false imprisonment. A., having obtained a warrant to search the plaintiff's house, to take and use such water for extinguishing fire without making compensation for the same. By s. 43, if the undertakers neglect to keep their pipes charged at the statutory pressure, they are to be liable to a penalty of 10*l.* for each offence, to be recovered by a common informer. In an action to recover damages against a water company, for not keeping its pipes supplied with water at the statutory pressure, whereby a house was burnt down :—Held, that the action would not lie. Id.

An act of parliament empowered a company to make and maintain a canal, and provided that the owners of lands within the distance of twenty yards from the canal should make a communication by pipes, between the water therein and any steam-engine, and draw from the canal such quantities of water as should be sufficient to supply the engine with cold water, for the sole purpose of condensing the steam, and for working any such engine as aforesaid; and for no other use or purpose; and there was a proviso, that if any dispute should arise between the company and any person who should be desirous of taking water out of the canal for the purposes of any such engine, or who should be in the use of taking the same, such dispute should be finally settled by the commissioners appointed under the act. In an action the declaration alleged that the defendant, the owner of a steam-engine, who had laid down a pipe communicating with the canal, used the water which had been drawn off by means of the pipes, for other purposes than for condensing the steam, and more than was necessary for condensing :—Held, that the special power of adjudication conferred upon the commissioners did not take away the right of action. Rochdale Canal Company v. King, 14 Q. B. 122; 18 L. J., Q. B. 293; 14 Jur. 16.

To an action by an incorporated company for calls, the defendant pleaded that the shares had been declared by the company to be forfeited :—Held, that the plea was bad, as the right of action and the power to forfeit shares on non-payment of calls conferred by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, were not alternative but cumulative remedies. Great Northern Railway Company v. Kennedy, 7 D. & L. 197; 4 Ex. 417; S. P., Inglis v. Great Northern Railway Company, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 112; 16 Jur. 895.

IV. ELECTION OF ACTION OR REMEDY.

In what Cases.—The court will not compel a party, who has proceeded both by indictment and action for the same assault, to make his election upon which he will rely. Jones v. Clay, 1 B. & P. 191; S. P., Murphy v. Cadell, 2 B. & P. 137.

A person who has preferred an indictment for an assault, from which he did not suffer any personal injury, and has succeeded in it, and has received from the Treasury a portion of the fine imposed upon the defendant, is not entitled, in an action against the same defendant, to recover more than nominal damages. Jacks v. Bell, 3 C. & P. 316.

After an acquittal of a defendant upon an indictment for a felonious assault upon the plaintiff by stabbing him, the plaintiff may maintain trespass to recover damages for the civil injury, if not shewn to have colluded in procuring such acquittal. Crosby v. Leng, 12 East, 409.

In an action by a woman for assaulting her

and forcibly violating her person, whereby she was delivered of a child, the judge, upon her evidence, directed a nonsuit :—Held, that the direction was right, for if a rape had been committed no action would lie until after the defendant had been prosecuted, and if the plaintiff had consented she could not maintain an action for the assault. Wellock v. Constantine, 2 H. & C. 146; 32 L. J., Ex. 285; 9 Jur., N. S. 232; 7 L. T. 751.

A plaintiff, having sued at law and in equity for the same cause of action, was, after issue joined, ordered by a court of equity to elect in which suit he would proceed, and he elected to proceed in equity, and withdrew the record. An order was afterwards made by the same court for the defendant to pay the plaintiff his costs at law, which order was, on appeal, rescinded by the Lord Chancellor, who directed that the defendant should be at liberty to proceed at law. A judge's order having been made for the plaintiff to pay the defendant's costs in the action :—Held, that this order was wrong, for that the plaintiff's election to proceed in equity did not amount to a discontinuance, and the defendant, if entitled to his costs at all, must apply to the court of equity. Simpson v. Sadd, 16 C. B. 26; 3 C. L. R. 917; 24 L. J., C. P. 156; 1 Jur., N. S. 736.

Where a plaintiff has proceeded at law and in equity for the same subject-matter, and after issue joined has, under an order of a court of equity, elected to proceed in equity, the court will not, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 226, prevent the defendant from proceeding to obtain judgment in the action for his costs. Mortimore v. Soares, 1 El. & El. 399; 5 Jur., N. S. 574.

A. filed a bill in equity against B. for the cancellation of bills of exchange drawn by B. and accepted by A. in part performance of a contract, of which B. failed to perform his part, and for an injunction to restrain B. from parting with or suing on the bills; and, pending the suit, A. commenced an action against B. for damages for breach of the contract :—Held, that the suit and action were not for the same matter, and an order to elect obtained by B. was discharged. Anglo-Danubian Steam Navigation and Colliery Company v. Rogerson, 4 L. R. Eq. 3; 36 L. J., Ch. 667; 16 L. T. 262; 15 W. R. 729.

When a rule nisi, obtained for a criminal information for a libel in the Queen's Bench, is discharged on shewing cause, the applicant may bring an action in another court for publication of the libel. Wakley v. Cooke, 16 M. & W. 822; 4 D. & L. 702.

V. DIFFERENT FORMS OF ACTION.

1. TORT OR CONTRACT.

A party entitled to sue in contract has his election to sue in tort only where a duty ultra the contract is imposed by law on the defendant. Legge v. Tucker, 1 H. & N. 500; 26 L. J., Ex. 71; 2 Jur., N. S. 1235.

The forms of action have been taken away, but their substance remains. Id.

An action against a carrier for the breach of his duty to carry safely goods delivered to him, as such, to be carried for hire, whereby the goods are lost, is an action not of contract but of tort, as well in substance as in form; the duty being imposed upon him by the custom of the realm, and being distinct from and independent of his obligation under the contract of carriage, in respect of which latter he may also be sued in an action of contract. Tuttan v. Great Western Railway Company, 2 El. & El. 844; 29 L. J., Q. B. 184; 6 Jur., N. S. 800; 8 W. R. 606.

Whenever there is a contract, and something is to be done in the course of the employment which is the subject of that contract, if there is a breach of duty in the course of that employment, the party injured may recover either in tort or in contract. Brown v. Boorman, 11 C. & F. 1; 3 Q. B. 511.

Where the liability to do an act arises merely from an agreement to do it upon a good consideration, and there is no such relation between the contracting parties as would involve a common law duty in the performance, the non-performance of the act is not such a breach of duty as can be made the subject of an action of tort. Courtenay v. Earle, 10 C. B. 73; 20 L. J., C. P. 7; 15 Jur. 15.

An action on the case will not lie for every neglect to perform a contract. Wood v. Finnis, 7 Ex. 363; 21 L. J., Ex. 138; 16 Jur. 936.

In an action against three, wherein the plaintiff declared that they had the loading of a hog-head of his, for a certain reward to be paid to one of them, and a certain other reward to the other two, and that they so negligently conducted themselves in the loading, that the hog-head was damaged:—Held, that the gist of the action was the tort, and not the contract out of which it arose; and, therefore, that on a plea of not guilty, the two being acquitted, judgment might be against the third, who was found guilty. Gorett v. Radnidge, 3 East, 62.

In an action for a deceit in a warranty made by two upon a joint sale by both of sheep their joint property, the plaintiff cannot recover upon proof of a contract of sale and warranty by one only, as of his separate property; the action, though laid in tort, being founded on the joint contract alleged. Wells v. King, 12 East, 452.

In an action against proprietors of a stage coach, to recover damages for an injury sustained by a passenger, in consequence of their coachman having upset the coach on which he was riding, the declaration may be framed, for a breach of duty by the negligence of the proprietors' servants; and proof of a contract is not necessary to support such action, as against common carriers, as they may be sued for the injury, as arising ex delicto; and such actions are not necessarily to be considered quasi ex contractu, or founded on contract. Brotherton v. Wood (in error), 6 Moore, 141; 3 B. & B. 54; 9 Price, 408.

2. SIMPLE CONTRACT OR COVENANT.

Contracts by Deed.—A servant who has contracted with a married woman by deed, and performed the stipulated services, may maintain an action of assumpsit against the husband. White v. Cuyler, 6 T. R. 176; 1 Esp. 200.

Where parties contract by deed, but the defendant does not execute it, the plaintiff might sue in assumpsit, notwithstanding the deed. Sutherland v. Lishnan, 3 Esp. 42.

remedy is covenant on the express contract. Schlenker v. Mosey, 5 D. & R. 747; 3 B. & C. 789.

A lessee of premises granted and assigned them by indenture to the plaintiff, who, having been distrained upon for rent in arrear to the superior landlord before the assignment, brought an action to recover the money paid under the distress, and relied upon an express promise by the lessee to repay it:—Held, that as covenant would lie on the covenant implied in the word "grant," assumpsit would not lie on any implied contract to indemnify the plaintiff, nor on the express promise which was not founded on a new consideration. Baber v. Harris, 1 P. & D. 360; 9 A. & E. 532; 2 W. W. & H. 1.

Three persons were owners of some property, and they employed the plaintiff to let it for them, and two of them executed a mortgage deed securing to him the amount of his bill; in an action against the three for the amount of his bill:—Held, that the action would lie, as the specialty liability not being co-extensive with the simple contract liability, the latter was not merged in the former. Sharp v. Gibbs, 16 C. B., N. S. 527; 12 W. R. 711.

3. CASE OR TRESPASS.

Trespass, and not case, was the proper form of action for detaining a person after the detainer has ceased to be lawful. Magnay v. Burt, 5 Q. B. 381; D. & M. 652; 7 Jur. 1116—Ex. Ch.

Trespass will not lie against a plaintiff who, without notice, takes a defendant in execution for a debt in respect of which the latter has been discharged under the Irish Insolvent Act. Ewart v. Jones, 3 D. & L. 252; 14 M. & W. 774.

But if the plaintiff maliciously sued out the writ, he was liable to an action on the case. Id.

Trespass was a proper form of action for continuing on the plaintiff's premises to keep possession of goods distrained after the distress had ceased to be lawful. Ladd v. Thomas, 12 A. & E. 117; 4 P. & D. 9.

Under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 86, s. 8, the registrar is authorized to grant licences to drivers of hackney carriages, which licences the proprietors of the carriages are required to procure to be delivered to them, and to retain whilst the drivers remain in their service, to return on demand. A declaration stated, that the plaintiff, a driver of a hackney carriage, having procured such licence, delivered it to the defendant, as his employer, and that whilst he retained it in his custody he wrongfully and unjustly wrote in ink in and upon the licence words purporting to give, and being intended to give, a character of the plaintiff as an unfit and improper person to act as driver of hackney carriages, whereby it was defaced and became useless:—Held, that the possession being in the defendant, the form of action was properly in case, and that it was unnecessary to state the act to have been done maliciously; and that the declaration was good. Hurrell v. Ellis, 2 C. B. 295; 15 L. J., C. P. 18; 9 Jur. 1013.

Case was the proper form of action for pledging property delivered by the plaintiff under an agreement to the defendant for a specific purpose. Smith v. White, 8 Scott, 483; 6 Bing. N. C. 218; 8 D. P. C. 255.

Action for false imprisonment. A., having obtained a warrant to search the plaintiff's house, and to apprehend him on a charge of felony, the warrant being headed, "To the constable of D. in the county of W.," delivered it to B., a county constable, appointed under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 93, who executed it within the parish of D., by apprehending the plaintiff. The action was not brought until the expiration of six months from the time of the act committed:—Held, that trespass was the proper form of action. Freegard v. Barnes, 7 Ex. 827; 21 L. J., Ex. 320.

Where servants, in the performance of their ordinary work for their master, use the implements of another person, without the leave of the owner or any direction from their master, and injure them, and the owner seeks a compensation from the master for the wrongful act of his servants, the proper form of action is case, not trespass. Gordon v. Rolt, 4 Ex. 365; 18 L. J., Ex. 432.

An action on the case was held to be maintainable against the grantors of a licence to mine, for unlawfully expelling the assignees and their workmen, and forcibly preventing them from having access to or working the mine. Muskett v. Hill, 7 Scott, 855; 5 Bing. N. C. 694.

A railway train, driven at the rate of forty miles an hour, according to the general directions of the railway company to the driver, ran over and killed some sheep, which had strayed on the line in consequence of the defective fences of the company:—Held, that, the train being under the direction and control of a rational agent, the company was not liable in trespass for the injury, but that the proper form of action was by action on the case, either for permitting the fences to be out of repair, or for directing the servant to drive at such a rate as to interfere with the right of the sheep to be on the line of railway. Sharrod v. London and North-Western Railway Company, 4 Ex. 580; 20 L. J., Ex. 185.

Case per quod servitium amisit might be maintained by the master, although the injury done to the servant was not direct, but consequential, and the servant could not have maintained an action of trespass for such injury, but must have sued in case. Martinez v. Gerber, 2 M. & G. 88; 3 Scott, N. R. 86.

VI. ON JUDGMENTS, ORDERS AND DECREES OF COURTS.

Of Superior Courts.—See JUDGMENT.

Irish and Scotch Courts.—See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

Colonial Courts.—See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

On Foreign Judgments.—See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

County Courts.—An action lay upon a judgment of the ancient common law county courts. Williams v. Jones, 13 M. & W. 628; 2 D & L. 680; 14 L. J., Ex. 145.

But an action does not lie on a judgment recovered in a county court established under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. Berkeley v. Elderkin, 1 El. & Bl. 805; 22 L. J., Q. B. 281; 17 Jur. 1153.

Although an action will not lie in a superior court on a judgment of such county court, yet such judgment may be pleaded in bar to an action for the consideration on which it was founded. Austin v. Mills, 9 Ex. 288; 23 L. J., Ex. 40; 18 Jur. 16.

VII. TIME AND PLACE OF ACCRUAL.

Where trustees of a turnpike road negligently made and continued improper catchpits for water, so that on some occasions the water flowed over and injured land:—Held, that the continuing the catchpits was a new cause of action, every time such damage was caused, and that a three months' limitation for commencing an action against them for such damage ran from the time the damage was effected. Whitthouse v. Fellows, 10 C. B., N. S. 765; 30 L. J., C. P. 306; 4 L. T. 177; 9 W. R. 557.

In working a mine under a house a party left insufficient support to the house, but no actual damage resulted until some years after the workings had ceased. Held, that the cause of action accrued when the damage actually occurred, and not at the time when the act was done. Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. Cas. 503; 34 L. J., Q. B. 181; 7 Jur., N. S. 809; 9 W. R. 769.

A. resided and carried on business at M., and B., who had various places of business elsewhere, agreed with A. to carry on a partnership business in certain transactions at M., where the books were kept, and where the advances were made by A. At the close of the partnership affairs, which were attended with loss, a balance was struck, showing a debt due by B. to A.:—Held, that the cause of action accrued at M. Luchmeechund v. Mull, 3 L. T. 603.

VIII. DEFENCES.

1. ARISING AFTER ACTION.

In trespass in taking the plaintiff's goods, the defendant having pleaded only the general issue, cannot, even in mitigation of damages, give in evidence a repayment by him, after action brought, of money produced by the sale of the goods. Rundle v. Little, 6 Q. B. 174.

Matter of defence arising after action cannot be pleaded in bar of the action, and therefore cannot be given in evidence under the general issue. Lee v. Lery, 6 D. & R. 475; 4 B. & C. 399; 1 C. & P. 553, 675.

A breach by a plaintiff of the contract sued upon since action brought cannot be pleaded or given in evidence in reduction of damages to avoid circuity of action. Bartlett v. Holmes, 13 C. B. 630; 1 C. L. R. 159; 22 L. J., C. P. 182; 17 Jur. 858.

2. IN AVOIDANCE OF CIRCUITY.

To constitute a good plea in avoidance of circuity of action, it must shew that the sum which the defendant is entitled to recover from the plaintiff is necessarily the same as that in respect of which the plaintiff is suing. Charles v. Altin or Alton, 15 C. B. 46; 23 L. J., C. P. 197; 18 Jur. 1105; S. P., Alston v. Herring, 11 Ex. 822; 25 L. J., Ex. 177.

To make a defence available on the ground of the avoidance of circuity of action, the damages must necessarily be the same in character and amount. Speeding v. Young, 16 C. B., N. S. 824.

Action by payees of a note, against the makers. Plea, that the note was made by the plaintiff, R. S., the defendant, and T. S. (the plea set out the note, which appeared to be a joint and several note), and that R. S. a payee and a maker, was and is the plaintiff, R. S.; and the note, at the time it was made, was one upon and by virtue whereof the defendant, in case he paid it, or more than one-third part, would be entitled to call upon the plaintiff, R. S., to pay a contribution to the defendant; and that in case the plaintiff, R. S., recovered against the defendant the amount of the note, the defendant would be entitled to sue for and to recover from the plaintiff, R. S., one-third part of the amount so recovered against the defendant:—Held, that the plea was bad. Beecham v. Smith, 1 El. Bl. & El. 442; 27 L. J., Q. B. 257; 4 Jur., N. S. 1018.

A declaration contained counts for work done, money paid by, and on an account stated with A., and a similar set of counts by and with the plaintiffs as executors of A. A plea stated, that A., being the projector of a railway company, agreed, in consideration of the defendant consenting to act as a member of the provisional committee, to indemnify him from any professional or other charges on account of the railway; that the defendant accordingly consented and became a member of the committee; that the work, moneys and accounts were done, paid and stated by A., and by the plaintiffs, as his executors, in the surveying the line of the railway, and after the agreement to indemnify; that the defendant became liable to the professional and other charges, and made the promises in the declaration only in his character of member of the provisional committee; that, afterwards, the railway was abandoned, and the work done and money paid became wholly useless, and of no value to the defendant; and that any money paid by or damage recovered from the defendant, in respect of the work or payments, will be wholly lost to the defendant:—Held, that the plea was a bar to avoid circuity of action. Connosop v. Levy, 11 Q. B. 769; 5 Railw. Cas. 124; 17 L. J., Q. B. 125; 12 Jur. 306.

Declaration on a charterparty, whereby a ship, being tight, and every way fitted for the voyage, should load a cargo of coals, and proceed to C., being paid freight on the quantity delivered, one-fourth of the freight to be advanced to the owner's agent on the ship having sailed, less 5l. per cent. thereon for assurance, interest and commission. That the defendant caused the ship to be loaded with a cargo of coals, and that the ship, being so loaded, sailed pursuant to the charterparty, and breach, that the charterer had not paid the one-fourth of the freight. Plea, that the ship was not at the commencement of the voyage tight, and every way fitted for the voyage, and that by reason thereof the ship and cargo were lost:—Held, not a good plea in avoidance of circuity of action, as the damages sustained by the defendant were not necessarily identical in amount with the sum claimed; and that it was a bar to the action, on the ground that the advance of the freight had never become payable. Thompson v. Gillespy, 5 El. & Bl. 209; 24 L. J., Q. B. 340; 1 Jur., N. S. 779.

IX. WHAT DESTROYS OR SUSPENDS A RIGHT OF ACTION.

Release and Satisfaction.—A right of action, once vested, can only be destroyed by a release under seal, or by the receipt of something in satisfaction of the wrong done. Willoughby v. Backhouse, 4 D. & R. 539; 2 B. & C. 821; S. P.,

Sells v. Hoare, 8 Moore, 451; 1 Bing. 401; 1 C. & P. 28.

When a wrongful act has been completed without the knowledge or assent of the party injured, his right of action is not ordinarily barred by mere submission to the injury, or even by a voluntary promise not to seek redress; some conduct amounting to release or accord and satisfaction must be shown; although, on account of laches, relief may be refused under special circumstances. De Bussche v. Alt, 8 Ch. D. 286; 47 L. J., Ch. 381; 38 L. T. 370—C. A.

Suspension of Right.—To an action by payee against maker of a note, a plea that, after it had become due, it was agreed between the plaintiff, the defendant and A., that A. should pay to the plaintiff in trust for C. 200l. for her sole use, or 25l. per annum so long as the 200l. should remain unpaid, and that the rights and causes of action of the plaintiff upon and in respect of the note should be suspended so long as A. should continue to pay the 25l.: and that A. had paid that sum:—Held, that the plea was bad, the legal effect of the agreement being not to suspend the plaintiff's right of action upon the note, but only to subject him to an action if he sued contrary to the terms of the agreement. Ford v. Beech, 11 Q. B. 852; 17 L. J., Q. B. 114; 12 Jur. 310—Ex. Ch.

The doctrine of a right of action being gone by suspension, applies only to the case where there has once been a subsisting right of action, and not to a case where the objection is that if it had accrued earlier, it could not have been enforced from the fact of the same person then being the party both to sue and to be sued. Badeley v. Vigners, 4 El. & Bl. 71; 2 C. L. R. 1627; 23 L. J., Q. B. 377; 1 Jur., N. S. 159.

A rule of court giving specific relief in a case where, by law, the party is not entitled to two different remedies, is a bar to an action for the same cause. Cameron v. Reynolds, Cowp. 406.

A written agreement to secure a debt, by a mortgage on lands, which was to be paid with interest by instalments, is no extinguishment or suspension of the right of action for the debt. Allies v. Probyn, 2 C. M. & R. 408; 4 D. P. C. 153; 1 Gale, 255; 5 Tyr. 1097.

Deposit of Negotiable Instrument—Action upon it.—If a plaintiff deposits a negotiable instrument on which he is suing, at the same time giving notice of the action, he does not thereby part with his right of action; and, if the depository sues on the same instrument, the court will not, at the instance of the defendant, stay the proceedings in the first action. Marsh v. Newell, 1 Taunt. 109. See Deuters v. Townsend, 33 L. J., Q. B. 301; 10 Jur. N. S. 1072.

Waiver of Tort no Bar to Action.—In an action by assignees of a bankrupt to recover the value of goods, it appeared at the trial that, after the bankruptcy, eighty-five bundles of yarn had been delivered by the bankrupt to the defendant to meet an accommodation bill which he was about to give the bankrupt. The goods were accompanied by an invoice, which stated them to be bought by the defendant of the bankrupt:—Held, that the assignees might waive the tort, and bring an action for goods sold and delivered. Russell v. Bell, 10 M. & W. 340.

The plaintiff's mother had for some time received parochial relief; but there being ground to suspect that her poverty was feigned, an overseer and a constable went to her house for the purpose of searching for money. The overseer alone entered, and found in a cupboard a sum of money, which he took away, and it was subsequently paid into a bank by the overseer and constable to their joint account. The money was proved to belong to the plaintiff:—Held, that he might waive the trespass, and recover it in an action against both as money had and received to his use. Neate v. Harding, 6 Ex. 349; 20 L. J., Ex. 250.

If an owner of goods, after a tortious sale of them, waives the conversion and claims the proceeds after sale, part of which is paid to him, he cannot afterwards treat the seller as a wrongdoer and maintain trover against him. Lythgoe v. Vernon, 5 H. & N. 180; 29 L. J., Ex. 164.

A master of an apprentice who has been seduced from his service to work for another person, may waive the tort, and bring an action for work and labour done by his apprentice against the person who tortiously employed him. Lightly v. Clouston, 1 Taunt. 112; S. P., Foster v. Stewart, 3 M. & S. 191.

X. NOTICE OF ACTION.

1. WHEN NECESSARY.

a. When Acts done in pursuance of Statute.

General Rule—Reasonable Ground of Belief.]

—A statute enacted that no plaintiff should recover in any action commenced against any person, for anything done or performed in execution or under the authority of the act, unless notice thereof, in writing, should be previously given twenty-eight days before the commencement of the action:—Held, that a notice was necessary in those cases only in which the party against whom the action was brought had reasonable grounds for supposing that the thing done by him was done in execution of or under the authority of the act. Cook v. Leonard, 6 B. & C. 351; 9 D. & R. 339.

Where a statutory protection is given to persons having acted in pursuance of the statute, a party is not entitled to the protection merely because he believed, bonâ fide, that he was so acting. There must be reasonable ground for the belief. Cann v. Clipperton, 10 A. & E. 582; 2 P. & D. 560.

If the party acted under a reasonable, though mistaken persuasion, from appearances, that the facts were such as made his proceeding justifiable by the statute, he is entitled to protection, though the real facts were such that the statute clearly affords no justification. Ib.

Trustees of a paving act were entitled to notice of action for anything done in pursuance of the act. They were authorised to abate any hog-stye, necessary house, or nuisance in the parish, on complaint of any inhabitant:—Held, that whether a brothel was a nuisance within the meaning of this provision or not, if the trustees took steps to put down such a house, bonâ fide, they were entitled to notice of action. Norris v. Smith, 2 P. & D. 353; 10 A. & E. 188.

By a local act persons were compelled, under a penalty, to perform the duties of overseers; and no action was to be commenced against any person for anything done in pursuance of the act, until notice, in writing, had been given. Overseers appointed under the act had assented to the imprisonment of a party in a workhouse, who was incorrectly supposed to have been a pauper and a lunatic. They had intended to act under 9 Geo. 4, c. 40, s. 38, but had not complied with its provisions:—Held, that this was not a thing done in pursuance of the local act, and that the overseers were not, therefore, entitled to notice. Elliot v. Allen, 1 C. B. 18; 14 L. J., C. P. 136.

To give a defendant the benefit of a provision in a statute, requiring notice of action, it is sufficient that the jury find that he intended to act in pursuance of such statute. Cox v. Reid, 13 Q. B. 558; 18 L. J., Q. B. 216; 13 Jur. 563.

A party entitled to notice of action, where the acts complained of are done by him in a particular character or under a particular authority, is entitled to such notice, if he has acted under a bonâ fide belief that he filled that character or had that authority, and the absence of reasonable grounds for such belief is only evidence of the non-existence of such bonâ fide belief. Booth v. Clive, 10 C. B. 827; 2 L. M. & P. 283; 20 L. J., C. P. 151; 15 Jur. 563.

The question on which the right to notice of action turns is, whether a defendant acted in honest ignorance, or belief that he was acting by reason of his office, and this question is entirely for the judge; and to enable him to decide it, he must receive so much of the evidence as will raise that question. Arnold v. Hamel, 9 Ex. 405; 2 C. L. R. 499; 23 L. J., Ex. 137.

In order to entitle a party to notice of action for a thing done in pursuance or in the execution of an act of parliament, it is not necessary that he should, at the time of doing the act, be cognizant of the existence of the act giving him such protection, or that he should be acting strictly in the execution of it. Read v. Coker, 13 C. B. 850; 1 C. L. R. 746; 22 L. J., C. P. 201; 17 Jur. 990; S. P., Danvers v. Morgan, 1 Jur., N. S. 1051.

In order to entitle a party to a notice of action for a thing done in pursuance of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 33, consolidating the law against offences relating to the coin, it is enough that he honestly and bonâ fide believes he is acting in pursuance of the act, whether there is reasonable ground for such belief or not. Herman v. Seneschal, 13 C. B., N. S. 392; 32 L. J., C. P. 43; 6 L. T. 646; 11 W. R. 184.

The proper question for the jury is, whether the defendant bonâ fide believed in the existence of a state of facts which, if they had existed, would have afforded a defence to the action. Roberts v. Orchard, 2 H. & C. 769; 33 L. J., Ex. 65; 9 L. T. 727; 12 W. R. 253—Ex. Ch.

Therefore, where 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 103, provided that any person found committing any offence punishable either upon indictment or upon summary conviction, by virtue of that act, might be immediately apprehended without a warrant, and s. 113 also required notice of action for anything done in pursuance of the act; in an action by the plaintiff, a shop-woman of the defendant, for giving her into custody on the charge of stealing a florin:—Held, that it would not have been sufficient to leave to the jury the question whether the defendant honestly believed that the plaintiff had wrongfully taken the florin, and that in giving the plaintiff into custody, he was executing a legal power, but the question ought also to be left to the jury whether the defendant believed that the plaintiff had been found committing the offence. Ib.

To entitle a defendant to notice of action under a statute, he must honestly intend to put the law in motion, and really believe in the existence of a state of facts which, if they existed, would have justified him in doing as he did. Heath v. Brewer, 15 C. B., N. S. 803; 9 L. T. 653.

Where a statute provides that before an action is commenced against any person for anything done in pursuance of the statute, notice of action shall be given, in order to entitle a defendant to such notice, on the ground that "he honestly believed in the existence of those facts which, if they had existed, would have afforded a justification under the statute," the facts of the case must at least be such that he could so honestly believe, and such as to afford evidence to go to the jury that he did so. Leete v. Hart, 3 L. R., C. P. 322; 37 L. J., C. P. 157; 18 L. T. 292; 16 W. R. 676.

The defendant hearing at night a noise, and seeing a man at the back door of his house, believed that an attempt was being made to break into it, and acting on that belief, and on his wife telling him that the plaintiff was the man, he gave the plaintiff, a respectable neighbour, who happened to be passing the front of the house at the time, into custody. In an action for this false imprisonment, the defendant pleaded not guilty by statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, which by s. 113 requires, in actions for anything done in pursuance of the act, notice of action to be given:—Held, that an attempt to break into a house not being an offence within the act, the defendant did not believe in a state of facts, which, if it had existed, would have afforded a justification under the act, and was therefore not entitled to notice. Ib.

The omission to do something which ought to be done in order to the complete performance of a duty imposed on a public body by act of parliament, amounts to "an act done or intended to be done in pursuance of the act" within the meaning of the clause requiring notice of action to be given to the public body. Wilson v. Halifax (Mayor, &c.), 3 L. R., Ex. 114; 37 L. J., Ex. 44; 17 L. T. 660; 16 W. R. 707.

The defendant was a contractor engaged in making a sewer for a vestry; one of his men who was employed to take care of a horse and cart, and who had no right to go home to dinner or leave the horse and cart, took them to his house and left them outside whilst he was having his dinner; the horse ran away and damaged the plaintiff's railings:—Held, first, that there was evidence to warrant the jury in finding that the man was in the defendant's employ at the time of the negligence and accident. Whitman v. Pearson, 3 L. R., C. P. 422; 37 L. J., C. P. 156; 18 L. T. 290; 16 W. R. 649.

Held, secondly, that the defendant was not entitled to notice of action under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106. Ib.

The 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (The Larceny Consolidation Act), s. 113, requiring a month's notice in writing to be given before the commencement of any action or prosecution against any person "for anything done in pursuance of the act," has no application to the ordinary case of a private individual prosecuting another for a felony, and such a person is liable for malicious prosecution without the safeguard of notice provided by that section. Mercer v. Gooch, 15 L. T. 219.

b. On Apprehension of Persons injuring or stealing Property.

In what Cases.—Where a plaintiff, under a claim of right, had taken forcible possession of premises, and committed several outrageous acts, the attorney of the owner of the premises having been sent for on the following day, gave the plaintiff, whom he found still on the premises, in charge, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30:—Held, that although not justified in so doing, he was entitled to notice of action. Cann v. Clipperton, 2 P. & D. 560; 10 A. & E. 582; S. P., Berechey v. Sidra, 9 B. & C. 806; 4 M. & R. 634.

A fenreeve, having the care of lands over which the plaintiff was making a road, asked him by what authority he acted; the plaintiff said, by authority of the magistrates, but did not exhibit any warrant; whereupon the defendant apprehended and took him before a magistrate:—Held, that he was entitled to notice of action under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 41, although the plaintiff was not committing a malicious injury. Wright v. Wales, 5 Bing. 336; 2 M. & P. 613; 3 C. & P. 96.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 103 and 113, the two questions to be answered in the affirmative, in order to entitle a defendant to notice of action, are, first, did he honestly believe that the person whom he has given in charge had committed a felony; and, secondly, that the same person had been found committing it. Wynyard v. Marks, 15 L. T. 591.

The defendant purchased some fruit of the plaintiffs, itinerant vendors, and directed them to take it to his residence, where it would be paid for. The fruit was accordingly taken to his house, and there paid for by his butler on the plaintiffs' presenting the defendant's order to that effect. The defendant returned home about three hours afterwards, when, being under the impression that he had himself paid the plaintiffs, and that they had been paid twice, as soon as he learnt that the butler had paid them, he sent a constable after them, who found them seven hours later in the same day at a town five miles from the defendant's residence, and there arrested them on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences. Any person found committing such offence may, by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 103, be immediately apprehended without warrant, and s. 113 gives the protection of notice before action for anything done in pursuance of that act:—Held, that the defendant, though he acted bonâ fide, could not believe that he was arresting the plaintiffs immediately they had been found committing the offence with which they were charged, and that, therefore, he was not entitled to the protection of s. 113. Downing v. Capel, 2 L. R., C. P. 461; 36 L. J., M. C. 97; 16 L. T. 323; 15 W. R. 745.

A robbery having been committed at the government stores, K., an inspecting officer of the coast-guard having charge of the stores, suspecting that S. was guilty of the felony in question, gave him into custody and prosecuted him before the magistrates on the charge of feloniously taking the said government stores. The magistrates dismissed the charge, and S., without giving K. a month's notice of action, brought an action against him for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution:—Held, that he was entitled to notice of action under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 313, and that, in acting as he did, he acted in the execution of or by reason of his office. Spitty v. Kitchin, 15 W. R. 903.

A., by the direction of his tenant, arrested on a Sunday two men, one of whom had just before wilfully broken one of his windows, and locked them up for two hours in a room of the house. The man who had committed the damage afterwards brought an action against A. for false imprisonment:—Held, that A. was entitled to notice of action under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 41. Jones v. Howell, 29 L. J., Ex. 19; 8 W. R. 151.

A party having apprehended another, and proceeded against him before a justice, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 24, for a malicious injury to property, the justice dismissed the complaint, being of opinion that the party charged had acted under a reasonable supposition of right. An action being brought for the arrest:—Held, that the defendant, if he acted under a bona fide belief that the case fell within the statute, was entitled to notice of action; and that, in default of notice, the jury might properly be directed to find for the defendant, if they thought that he had acted bona fide. Reed v. Cowmeadow, 6 A. & E. 661; 7 C. & P. 821.

A plaintiff, who was lessee for an unexpired term of years, of a house, of which the defendant was the reversioner, being in prison, and a quarter's rent being in arrear, the defendant took possession of the house, whereupon the plaintiff's wife broke some of the windows, for the purpose of obtaining admission. The defendant gave her into custody, and charged her, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 24, with breaking four panes of glass. No notice of action had been given, and the question of bona fides was not submitted to the jury:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to notice of action, if he bona fide believed himself entitled to give the wife into custody; and that as the question of bona fides had not been left to the jury, there ought to be a new trial. Horn v. Thornborough, 3 Ex. 846; 18 L. J., Ex. 349.

In an action by a tenant against his landlord for a malicious charge of felony, under sect. 45, for stealing fixtures let to him, it is not necessary to give a notice of action. Dowell v. Benningfield, Car. & M. 9.

In an action for imprisoning a party upon a charge of felony under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 44, in pulling down part of a house, and selling the materials:—Held, that the defendant was within the protection of sect. 75, if he bona fide thought he was acting in pursuance of the act; and that the jury was properly directed to find whether or not he did so think. Rudd v. Scott, 2 Scott, N. R. 631.

Where A., who was fishing very near a private fishery, had his nets seized, and was taken into custody by the owner of the fishery, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, ss. 35 and 63, who, in so doing, acted under a bona fide and reasonable belief that the spot where the arrest and seizure took place was within the limits of his fishery:—Held, that he was entitled to notice of action. Hughes v. Buckland, 15 M. & W. 346; 3 D. & L. 702; 15 L. J., Ex. 233; 10 Jur. 884.

Nuisance.—The Metropolitan Police Act, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, having created several acts misdemeanours, inflicts a penalty, on summary conviction, in various other offences, and among them the laying shells on a thoroughfare. It likewise enacts, that any person found committing any offence punishable either upon indictment or as a misdemeanour upon summary conviction by virtue of the act, may be apprehended by the owner of the property on or with respect to which the offence shall be committed, or by his servant, or any person authorized by him, and detained until he can be delivered to a constable; and notice in writing must be given of all actions against any person for anything done in pursuance of the act. A person employed by the owner to keep clean a thoroughfare, finding that another person was in the habit of laying oyster-shells upon it, consulted an inspector of police, and by his advice gave that party into custody. An action having been brought:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to notice of action, this being an act done in pursuance of the statute. Dancers v. Morgan, 1 Jur. N. S. 105.

An owner of property is not justified in giving a person into custody found (popularly speaking) committing a nuisance against his premises, nor is he entitled to notice of action for having done so, unless he is fairly justified in believing that the person had the intention to soil or deface them, within the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 54, or the intention to commit damage or injury or spoil to them within the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 52. Bayley v. Aldred, 10 L. T. 523.

A. had communicated to B. & C. who were distillers, a method of rectifying spirits, and they were to pay him an annuity, and sixpence a gallon on all spirits rectified by his method, and to keep an account. A. having a sum due to him, B. & Co. offered to pay it at their solicitor's office, and to produce the account there. A. sent B. & Co. a letter, stating that he should come to the distillery for a sight of the account and for payment; to which G., one of the firm of B. & Co., replied by letter, stating that if A. came to the distillery, and either rang or knocked, he would be punished. A. went to the distillery (which was within the metropolitan police district), and gently rang the gate bell, when H., who was the cashier of the firm, gave A. into the custody of a policeman, on a charge of having rung the bell, contrary to the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 54:—Held, in an action for false imprisonment by A. against G. and H., that this was not a case within that act, and that G. and H. were not justified under that act, and that they were not entitled to notice of action. Horne v. Grimble, Car. & M. 17.

Servant claiming to have Authority of Owner.]

—Where a defendant claims the protection of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, as having acted within sect. 28, as the owner's servant, or by the owner's authority, in arresting the plaintiff, the jury should be asked not only whether the defendant acted bona fide, but also whether he had a reasonable belief that he was servant of, or had the authority of, the owner. Kine v. Eccrashed, 10 Q. B. 148; 16 L. J., Q. B. 271 11 Jur. 673.

Bona fide Belief without Knowledge of Law.]

—By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 41, in all actions for anything done in pursuance of the act, notice in writing of such action shall be given to the defendant one month before action brought. The 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 75, is to the same effect. The defendant was sued for having given the plaintiff into custody on a charge of doing wilful damage to his property, and for having given him into custody on a charge of larceny. The jury found that the plaintiff had not on either occasion committed the offence with which he was charged, but that the defendant, on both occasions, bonâ fide believed that he did:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to notice of action, but that it was not necessary for him to shew that he knew of these acts of parliament. Read v. Coker, 13 C. B. 850; 22 L. J., C. P. 201; 17 Jur. 990.

Private Person distinguished from Constables, etc.]—A private person who gives another into custody on a charge of having committed an offence against 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, is not entitled to notice of action under section 75, as that section only applies to constables and other officers, and persons of that kind. Brooker v. Field, 9 C. & P. 651.

Immediate Apprehension—Necessity of.]—In an action for false imprisonment for giving the plaintiff into custody on a charge of larceny, the defendant set up as a defence that he had had no notice of action, to which he was entitled under s. 113 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96; for that he had caused the plaintiff to be arrested under s. 103, believing he had found her committing a felony. The jury found that she had not committed the felony, but that the defendant bonâ fide believed, and on reasonable grounds, in the existence of facts which would have justified him in acting as he had done. On this finding, the verdict was entered for the defendant. The plaintiff had not been apprehended on the spot where the defendant believed he had found her committing the felony, and the question, whether or not she had been “immediately apprehended,” had not been left to the jury:—Held, that this was a question of fact for the jury which ought to have been left to them, and that there must therefore be a new trial. Griffith v. Taylor, Thatcher v. Taylor, 2 C. P. D. 194; 46 L. J., C. P. 15; 36 L. T. 5; 25 W. R. 196—C. A.

Reasonable Ground not for the Jury.]—By the Larceny Act, 1861, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 103, any person found committing a theft may be immediately apprehended without a warrant, and by s. 113, notice of action must be given before anyone can be sued for anything done in pursuance of the act:—Held, that to entitle a person to such notice of action, it is sufficient if he honestly believed that the person whom he apprehended was found by him committing a theft, and that if he might have so believed, it is no reason for disentitling him to such notice that a jury might think there was no reasonable ground for his so believing. King v. Chamberlain, 6 L. R., C. P. 474; 40 L. J., C. P. 273; 24 L. T. 736; 19 W. R. 931.

Doctor acting upon an Improper Order of a Magistrate.]—A woman having been taken into custody on a charge of concealing the birth of her illegitimate child, a justice of the peace made an order for the examination of her person, under which order she was examined by a medical man. In an action against him for an assault, there being no authority at common law or by statute to make the order:—Held, that he was not entitled to notice of action under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 9 (which provides for the giving of notice before any action against a justice of the peace for anything done by him in the execution of his office), inasmuch as though he might have acted bonâ fide, in the belief that he had authority to make the order for her examination, there was nothing in fact on which he could ground such belief. Agnew v. Jobson, 47 L. J., M. C. 67; 13 Cox, 625.

2. PERSONS ENTITLED TO.

a. Justices.

General Rule.]—In an action against a magistrate, for having, in the execution of his office, acted maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause, he is entitled to notice of action, as required by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 9. Kirby v. Simpson, 10 Ex. 358; 2 C. L. R. 1286; 23 L. J., M. C. 165; 18 Jur. 983.

In such case, the question whether he acted bonâ fide, or used his office colourably, does not arise. Ib.

In an action against a magistrate for acts done in the execution of his office, the judge is to decide whether notice of action is necessary, and the jury is not to decide the question of bona fides. Ib.

Whether a magistrate acts bonâ fide is a question for the jury: and if the plaintiff seeks to maintain his action, on the ground that the magistrate acted so illegally as to have disentitled himself to any notice of action, it lies on the plaintiff to cause this question to be put to the jury. Hazeldine v. Grove, 3 Q. B. 997; 3 G. & D. 210; 12 L. J., M. C. 54; 7 Jur. 262.

A magistrate is entitled to notice of action when he acts as a magistrate, though what he does is not strictly within the scope of his office. Bird v. Gunston, 2 Chit. 459; 4 Dougl. 275.

So, where he acts upon a subject-matter of complaint, over which he has authority, but which arises out of his jurisdiction. Prestdige v. Woodman, 2 D. & R. 43; 1 B. & C. 12. S. P., Graves v. Arnold, 3 Camp. 242.

A magistrate, sued for detaining goods on a suspicion of felony, is entitled to notice of action, if he proceeded under a bonâ fide belief that he was executing his duty, although it is proved that he had no reasonable ground of suspicion. Wedge v. Berkley, 6 A. & E. 663; W. W. & D. 271; 1 N. & P. 665.

So, if he does an unjustifiable act (as in person unjustifiably arresting an individual), but really believes that he has a right to do the act, in his capacity of justice, he is entitled to notice of action. Ib.

If a justice acts, believing that his jurisdiction extends to the subject-matter in question, he is entitled to notice of action, though it may turn out, on investigation, to be a case over which no justice of the peace has jurisdiction. Jones v. Williams, 5 D. & R. 654; 3 B. & C. 762; 1 C. & P. 459, 669.

If a person claims a right to act as a justice, he is entitled to notice of action, although the ground on which the plaintiff goes is a denial of such right. Ib.

But a magistrate is not entitled to notice of action for a trespass committed by him, where, from the circumstances, the jury think he was not acting bonâ fide under an impression that what he did was within the scope of his duty as a magistrate. James v. Saunders, 4 M. & Scott, 316; 10 Bing. 429.

A disturbance took place in C. upon the liberation of a prisoner. A magistrate seized the plaintiff because he was going towards the prison. The plaintiff was not concerned in the disturbance, which was going on out of sight of the place where he was seized by the magistrate:—Held, that he was not entitled to notice of an action of trespass brought against him by the plaintiff for the assault. Id.

So, in an action against a person for the penalty given for acting as a magistrate without a proper qualification, the defendant is not entitled to notice of action. Wright v. Horton, Holt, 458; 1 Stark. 400; 2 Chit. 25; 6 M. & S. 50.

A lord of the manor, being also a justice of the peace, is entitled to notice of an action brought against him for taking away a gun in the house of an unqualified person; for it will be presumed that he acted as a justice. Briggs v. Ecelyn, 2 H. Bl. 114.

Where the mayor of an ancient borough, in which he was also a justice of the peace, took a fee of 4s. from a publican resident within the borough for renewing his annual licence; although it appeared that for fifty-seven years a similar fee had been uniformly received by the mayor for the time being, from every publican within the borough applying to have a licence:—Held, that such fee was illegal, and that the mayor was not entitled to notice of an action to recover it back, as the fee could not be taken by him by virtue or in execution of his office as a justice of the peace. Morgan v. Palmer, 4 D. & R. 283; 2 B. & C. 729.

One magistrate committing the mother of a bastard to custody for not affiliating the child, was entitled to notice of action, though, by 18 Eliz. c. 3, s. 2, jurisdiction over the subject-matter was committed to two magistrates. Weller v. Toke, 9 East, 364. See further JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

b. County Court Judges.

(9 § 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 138.)

In an action against a judge of a county court for making an order for committing a party to gaol for disobedience of an order for payment of instalments, after due service upon him of a writ of prohibition, the jury was told, that if the judge acted under a bonâ fide belief that his duty as judge of the county court rendered it incumbent on him to do so, notwithstanding the prohibition, the act must be considered as done in pursuance of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, and he was entitled to notice of action. Held, no misdirection. Booth v. Clive, 10 C. B. 827; 2 L. M. & P. 283; 20 L. J., C. P. 151.

c. Bailiffs of County or other Inferior Courts.

(7 & 8 Vict. c. 19; 9 § 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 138; 13 § 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 19; 15 § 16 Vict. c. 34, s. 6.)

The receiving an indemnity from the execution creditor does not deprive the bailiff of a county court of his right, under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 138, to notice of action. White v. Morris, 11 C. B. 1015; 21 L. J., C. P. 185; 16 Jur. 500.

Where a bailiff of a county court, under a warrant against the goods of A., by mistake takes those of B., this is an act done in pursuance of the act which entitles the bailiff to notice of action under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 138, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 19, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 34, s. 6. Burling v. Harley, 3 H. & N. 271; 27 L. J., Ex. 258; 4 Jur., N. S. 789.

By a local act, a borough court was empowered to try "actions of assumpsit, covenant and debt, and actions of trespass and trover, provided the sum or damages sought to be recovered shall not exceed 50*l.*" And in actions commenced "for anything done in pursuance of that act," notice of action must be given. In an action against an officer of the court for neglecting to levy, and making a false return to a fiaci facias, issued on a judgment for 50*l.*, and 6*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.* for damages:—Held, that notice of action was necessary, part of the cause of action being for a misfeasance in making a false return. Joule v. Taylor, 7 Ex. 58; 2 L. M. & P. 615; 21 L. J., Ex. 31.

The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 19, after reciting that "courts are holden in and for sundry counties, hundreds and wapentakes, honours, manors, and other lordships, liberties and franchises, having by custom or charter jurisdiction for the recovery of debts and damages in personal actions," provides that the judge of every such court shall have power to appoint persons to act as bailiffs of the court, and in the execution of the process thereof; and that one month's notice of action is to be given before any action is commenced against any bailiff of any such court for anything done in pursuance of his duty as such bailiff. The defendant acted as bailiff of a borough court in executing the process of such court, in aid of the sergeant-at-mace of the borough. Neither the defendant nor the sergeant-at-mace was appointed as bailiff of such court by the judge of the court:—Held, that the defendant was, therefore, not a bailiff entitled to notice of action within 7 & 8 Vict. c. 19. Tarrant v. Baker, 14 C. B. 199; 2 C. L. R. 78; 23 L. J., C. P. 21; 18 Jur. 15.

d. Constables.

A local act for watching a town empowered the commissioners therein named to appoint a constable and assistant constables, "for executing all such warrants, as the justices of the peace acting for the counties palatine of Lancaster and Chester, or either of them, shall from time to time direct to them to be executed within the town." Another section enacted that no plaintiff should recover for anything done in pursuance of the act:—Held, that a constable appointed under the act, and directed by a warrant of a justice acting for the counties palatine to enter a house and seize goods under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 7, was not entitled to notice of action. Shatwell v. Hall, 10 M. & W. 523; 2 D., N. S. 567; 12 L. J., Ex. 74.

A declaration that the defendant on the plaintiff's land took his goods and detained them against sureties and pledges. Plea, that the goods were taken under a warrant issued by a justice of the peace to enforce an order of quarter sessions for payment of costs of an appeal against a poor rate:—Held, that this was an action of replevin, and that no notice of action or demand of the perusal of the warrant was necessary. Gay v. Matthews, 32 L. J., Q. B. 58; 9 Jur., N. S. 716; 7 L. T. 504; affirmed on appeal, 4 B. & S. 425—Ex. Ch.

A constable who takes a party into custody, bonâ fide believing that he has committed an offence against 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30 (Malicious Trespass Act), is entitled, under sect. 41, to notice of action, although he did not see the trespass committed, and there is no proof of any complaint made to him by the owner of the property injured. Ballinger v. Ferris, 2 Gale, 111; 1 M. & W. 628.

See further, MALICIOUS PROSECUTION — POLICE.

e. Officers of the Revenue.

An excise officer was entitled to notice under 23 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 30, before an action was brought against him for an act not warranted by his official capacity, if done bonâ fide in the supposed execution of his duty. Daniel v. Wilson, 5 T. R. 1.

It is necessary in an action for money had and received against an excise officer, to recover duties received by him after the act imposing them was repealed, and he had paid them over to his superior. Greenway v. Hurd, 4 T. R. 553.

To an action against a defendant, who was a land-tax commissioner, for authorising a seizure of the plaintiff's goods, for land-tax, which had been previously redeemed, but without his knowledge, he pleaded not guilty by statute, and stated in his particulars that he relied upon 38 Geo. 3, c. 5, and 21 Jac. 1, c. 12. The plaintiff, being unable to prove that he had given notice of action under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 20, s. 19, and being also unable to prove the particulars, to show that the defendant had waived the benefit of that statute, was nonsuited.—Held, that the defendant was entitled to notice of action, and that the nonsuit was right. Thomas v. Williams, 1 D. & L. 624; 13 L. J., Ex. 87.

Upon the trial of an action against an officer of the customs, it is the duty of the judge, unless the facts are admitted, to hear the evidence, and decide whether the officer did the act complained of honestly believing that his duty called upon him to do it, in which case the provisions as to notice of action would be applicable. Arnold v. Hamel, 9 Ex. 405; 23 L. J., Ex. 137.

f. Boards of Health.

In what Cases.]—A. contracted by deed with a local board of health to execute works according to a specification, and that the works should be begun, proceeded with, and completed to the satisfaction of their surveyor. Payment was to be made by instalments, upon the certificate of the surveyor. It was provided that if A., from bankruptcy, insolvency, or any cause whatsoever, should not proceed with the works according to the satisfaction of the surveyor, it should be lawful for the board of health, after three days' notice, to employ other persons to complete the works, and that the deed should, at the expiration of the notice, be void at the option of the board of health, and the amount already paid to A. should be considered the full value of the works which should up to that time have been executed, and the materials on the premises should become their property without any further payment:—Held, that in an action by A. against the board of health for not allowing him to complete his contract, no notice of the action was requisite under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 139, which enacts that no writ shall be sued out against the local board of health, or the clerk or other person acting under the direction of the board, for anything done or intended to be done under the provisions of the act, until one month after notice. Davies v. Swansea (Mayor, &c.), 8 Ex. 808; 22 L. J., Ex. 297.

The defendant contracted with a local board of health to dig wells for them according to a specification prepared by the surveyor, the works to be done to the satisfaction of such surveyor, and the digging to be done entirely under his direction; the surveyor to have power, if he considered the materials or works improper, of making the contractor remove them, or of removing them at the contractor's expense, and of ordering the dismissal of workmen with whom he should be dissatisfied, or of dismissing them himself; the board to have the power of making alterations and additions. The defendant was sued for having left a hole, excavated in working one of the wells in a highway, without light by night, whereby a party, who was driving a carriage along the highway, fell into the hole, and was bruised, and his carriage injured:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to notice of action, under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 139. Newton v. Ellis, 5 El. & Bl. 115; 24 L. J., Q. B. 337; 1 Jur. N. S. 850.

By the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, no writ or process shall be sued out against or served upon . . . the Metropolitan Board of Works, or any vestry or district board, or their clerk, or any clerk, surveyor, contractor, officer, or person whomsoever, acting under their or any of their directions, for anything done or intended to be done under the powers of such board or vestry under the metropolitan acts, until one month after notice:—Held, that the section intended only some act done by virtue of the powers vested in the board or vestry and under their authority, and that, therefore, a person who had received notice from a district board to drain into a sewer, and in doing so committed a trespass, was not entitled to notice of action. Doust v. Slater, 10 B. & S. 400; 38 L. J., Q. B. 159; 20 L. T. 525.

The defendant contracted with the Metropolitan Board of Works to make a new sewer to the satisfaction of the engineer of such board, and in the course of carrying out such contract, he made a dam across the old sewer to keep back the sewage, and unintentionally neglected sufficiently to pump out the sewage, so that on three separate occasions it entered the plaintiff's house and injured it:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to notice of action, under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, as the injury complained of was the result of "an act done or intended to be done under the powers of such board," by a contractor acting under their direction, within the meaning of such section. Poulsum v. Thirst, 2 L. R., C. P. 449; 36 L. J., C. P. 225; 16 L. T. 324; 15 W. R. 766.

See further, HEALTH.

Injunction granted without Notice.]—The court of Chancery will grant an injunction to restrain a nuisance being committed or continued by a metropolitan local board, notwithstanding a month's notice of the proceeding has not been given in accordance with the Metropolitan Local Management Acts Amendment, 1862, s. 106. Att.-Gen. v. Hackney Board of Works, 20 L. R., Eq. 626; 44 L. J., Ch. 545; 33 L. T. 244.

A plaintiff filed a bill to restrain a nuisance without giving the defendants notice of his intention to take proceedings. They by their answer justified the nuisance, and insisted on their legal rights. The court on the evidence considered the nuisance proved, and held that the nature of the answer precluded the defendants from objecting to want of notice, and entitled the plaintiff to the costs of the suit. Ib.

Where the principal object of an action against a local board of health is an injunction to restrain an immediate injury, it is not necessary to give a month's notice of the cause of action under s. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875. And it makes no difference that damages are claimed by way of subsidiary relief. Flower v. Local Board of Low Leyton, 5 Ch. D. 347; 46 L. J., Ch. 621; 36 L. T. 760; 25 W. R. 545—C. A. Reversing the decision of Malins, V.-C., 36 L. T. 236; 25 W. R. 423.

g. Surveyors of Highways.

(5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 109.)

In what Cases.]—A surveyor of highways having been appointed by the inhabitants in vestry, but informally, cut down, in the supposed exercise of his duty as surveyor, a tree which was overhanging the highway so as to be a nuisance to it:—Held, that he was entitled to the protection of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 109. Huggins v. Wayday, 15 M. & W. 357; 16 L. J., Ex. 136.

An action was brought against a surveyor of highways for allowing and causing a heap of gravel, which had been placed for the purposes of the repair of the highway, to remain upon it, without taking any care or precaution to guard against damage to persons passing along it, contrary to his duty in that behalf:—Held, that the action was brought for a thing done in pursuance of, or under the authority of, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, and, therefore, that he was entitled to notice of action. Davis v. Curling, 8 Q. B. 287; 15 L. J., Q. B. 56; 10 Jur. 69. See Young v. Davis, 2 H. & C. 197.

A board for repair of the highways of a parish, by a resolution, referring to a previous resolution of the inhabitants that a footway should be open to the public, ordered the surveyor to open the same, and remove all obstructions there might be to the enjoyment of the road by the public. Sect. 69 of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, gives a summary power to remove encroachments on carriage-ways. Sect. 72 imposes a penalty on persons who obstruct footways; and sect. 73 gives a power, by order of a justice, to remove any matter or thing laid upon any highway, so as to be a nuisance. In an action against the members of the board and the surveyor for breaking a gate of the plaintiff across the footway, the bona fides of the defendants was admitted:—Held, that they might reasonably believe that they were acting in execution of the power to remove obstructions in public roads, and, therefore, were entitled to notice of action.

In pursuance of a resolution at a vestry, that it would be advantageous if a weighing-machine were erected to check the weight of materials purchased by the highways, the surveyors caused a machine to be placed in the highway:—Held, that although the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, gave no express power to erect weighing machines, the surveyors were acting in pursuance of the act, so as to entitle them to notice of an action for injuries sustained by a party in driving over a heap of earth excavated for the weighing machine. Hardwick v. Moss, 7 H. & N. 136; 31 L. J., Ex. 205; 7 Jur., N. S. 804; 4 L. T. 802.

The surveyors of highways of a parish received payment from an inhabitant of an assessment upon a highway rate which was neither signed, allowed, nor published according to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 27, but which appeared to have been made under an earlier repealed act. In making the rate and receiving payment, the surveyors intended to act in the performance of the duties of their office. In an action brought to recover back the money paid:—Held, that they were entitled to notice of action, pursuant to s. 109. Selmes v. Judge, 6 L. R., Q. B. 724; 40 L. J., Q. B. 287; 24 L. T. 905; 19 W. R. 1110.

h. Other persons in like position.

Definition of.]—By the Metropolitan Building Act, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 108, no writ or process shall be sued out against any district surveyor or other person for anything done or intended to be done under the provisions of the act till one month after notice of action:—Held, that the words "or other person" were restricted to a class, and intended to protect persons of the same class as a district surveyor or persons who had official duties cast upon them by the act, and did not include a builder, who while building a house adjoining the plaintiff's had negligently underpinned the party-wall and thereby caused damage to his house. Williams v. Golding, L. R., C. P. 69; 35 L. J., C. P. 1; 11 Jur., N. S. 51; 13 L. T. 291; 14 W. R. 60.

— Vestry Officer, Directions by.]—By the directions of an officer of the vestry board, the defendant, in the honest belief that such officer was authorized by the board to give such directions, erected a urinal on the wall of the plaintiff, such a work being a thing within the powers of the vestry board to erect, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 88. The officer had no express orders from the board to erect this particular work, but the parish afterwards paid the expenses of it:—Held, that the defendant, as he acted bona fide under the direction of an officer of the board, in the erection of works which the board was empowered to order by virtue of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 88, was a person within the meaning of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, entitled to notice of action. Chambers v. Reid, 13 L. T. 703; 14 W. R. 370.

Held also, that the words in 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, "their or any of their directions," are not to be limited to the "board or vestry," but to be extended to the words following, "clerk, surveyor, contractor, officer," &c. Ib.

Improvement Commissioners—Negligence of Paviers.]—An act for paving a town enacted, that no plaintiff shall recover in any action against the commissioners for anything done or to be done in pursuance or under the authority of the act, unless notice in writing shall have been given to them. The commissioners were sued for an injury occasioned by the negligence of some paviors, their servants:—Held, that they were entitled to notice of action. Mason v. Birkenhead Improvement Commissioners, 6 H. & N. 72; 29 L. J., Ex. 406.

Applicable to Constables and Watchmen.—By an act for improving a town, commissioners were appointed, and were authorized to appoint, by writing, a clerk, and also such surveyors, constables, watchmen, and other officers, deputies, or assistants, for the execution of the purposes of the act, as they should from time to time think proper. The commissioners were also empowered to appoint such a number of able-bodied men as they should think proper, to be employed as watchmen during the night-time; and it should be lawful for such watchmen, and they were required in their stations, to apprehend and secure all malefactors, and all suspected persons who should be found wandering and misbehaving themselves during the hours of keeping watch. The watchmen were to be sworn in as constables, and were to be invested with the like powers and authorities, as any constables were invested with or enjoyed by law. No action should be commenced against any person or persons for anything done or to be done under or by virtue of the act, until a month's notice should have been first given in writing to the clerk of the commissioners of the cause of action:—Held, first, that the section requiring notice to be given was not confined to acts done, or directed to be done, by the commissioners, but applied to acts done by constables and watchmen; secondly, that evidence of the defendants acting as constables and watchmen under the commissioners in the town, was prima facie sufficient to entitle them to the protection, without proof of their appointment; and, thirdly, that where the watchmen had reasonable ground of suspicion that a felony had been committed by the plaintiff, and went to the plaintiff's house to apprehend him for such felony, but beat him, and used much more violence than was necessary for effecting his apprehension, they were protected by the section requiring notice. Butler v. Ford, 1 C. & M. 662; 3 Tyr. 677.

1. Guardians.

A local act directed that the guardians of a parish should be sued in the name of their vestry clerk, and required notice to be given of any action for anything done in pursuance of the act. Notice was not necessary in an action for work and labour. The direction only applied to actions of tort. Fletcher v. Greenwood, 4 D., P. C. 166; 1 Gale, 34.

When poor law guardians are acting in discharge of their public duty they are entitled to notice of action in respect of anything done by them in the discharge of such duty, unless it is shown that they have acted malâ fide; and it is to be assumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that they have acted bonâ fide. Walker v. Nottingham Board of Guardians, 28 L. T. 308.

A husband, at the instance of his wife, was, on the 14th April, taken as a dangerous lunatic to the workhouse of the Nottingham Union, upon the certificates of two medical men, and was placed in the lunatic ward of that establishment, and there kept from the 14th to the 25th April. Upon his admission into the ward on the 14th, he was inspected by the resident medical officer, who found him "not to be suffering from any form of insanity," and made an entry to that effect in the ordinary course of his official duty, in a book provided by the guardians, and kept at the workhouse for that purpose. On the 16th April there was the usual weekly meeting of the board of guardians, when this book was before them, but the entry in question was not, as it ought to have been, seen by them or brought to their notice; nor was the fact of the husband's detention in the lunatic ward known to any of the guardians until the 25th April, when the report of the case for the first time came before them, whereupon the husband was immediately discharged from the house by order of the visiting committee. An action having been brought by him against the board of guardians for false imprisonment:—Held, that the board was entitled to notice of action under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 104. Id.

An omission to do something which ought to be done in order to the complete performance of a duty imposed upon a public body under an act of parliament, or the continuing to leave any such duty unperformed, amounts to "an act done or intended to be done," within the meaning of a clause requiring a notice of action. Jolliffe v. Wallasey Local Board, 9 L. R., C. P. 62; 43 L. J., C. P. 41; 29 L. T. 582.

j. Companies Generally.

The 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 8, which requires notice to be given one calendar month before bringing any action in any of his Majesty's courts against the City of Dublin Steam Packet Company, has reference merely to actions in personam against the company, and not to actions in rem against the company's vessels. The Mullingar, 26 L. T. 326.

To an action for slander, the defendant pleaded that the words were spoken while he was acting as clerk of the markets of Dublin, and in pursuance of statutes entitling him to a month's notice of action for any act done in pursuance of them, and that no notice was given:—Held good, and that words spoken whilst acting in pursuance of the statutes were as much within their protection as acts done. Murray v. McSwiney, 9 Ir. R., C. L. 545.

The 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 184, directed that the West India Dock Company should be sued in the name of their treasurer, and extended the protection of the 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, for privileging justices of the peace in actions brought against them as such, to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, acting under the act beyond the limits of the city; and directed that no action should be commenced against any person or persons for anything done in pursuance or under colour of the act, until after notice in writing:—Held, that the treasurer of the company was a person within the protection of the clause, and, being sued for an act done by the company which induced an injury to the plaintiff, was entitled to such notice before action. The notice is necessary in actions for trespasses or torts. Wallace v. Smith, 5 East, 114; 1 Smith, 346.

k. Railway Companies.

By a railway act, a company was empowered to make and maintain a railway; all persons were to have liberty to use the same, with carriages properly constructed, upon payment of tolls; and the company was empowered to provide locomotive engines and carriages for the conveyance of goods and passengers. It enacted, that no action should be brought against any person for anything done or omitted to be done in pursuance of the act, without notice:—Held, that the company was not entitled to notice where an action was brought against them for negligence in carrying a passenger, as they were sued merely as carriers, and not for anything done or omitted under the act. Carpue v. London and Brighton Railway Company, 5 Q. B. 747; D. & M. 608; 3 Railw. Cas. 692; 13 L. J., Q. B. 133; 8 Jur. 464.

A railway company was empowered to divert a canal; and it was enacted that, if by any accident or in the execution of any works authorized by the act (otherwise than from the neglect or mismanagement of the canal company), or by reason of the bad state of repair of the railway company's works, the canal should be so obstructed that boats could not pass, the railway company should pay the canal company, by way of ascertained damages, 10l. at least for every hour during which the obstruction should continue; and if it should continue beyond seventy-two consecutive hours, or should have been occasioned by any wilful act of the railway company, then at 20l. per hour at least by way of ascertained damages; and that, in default of payment, on demand on the railway company's treasurer, the canal company might recover the sum by action. It was also enacted that no action should be brought for anything done or omitted to be done in pursuance of the act, or in the execution of the powers or authorities given by it, without twenty days' notice:—Held, that an action for liquidated damages incurred by obstructing the canal was an action for something done in pursuance of the act, and that the limitation clause applied. Kennet and Avon Canal Navigation v. Great Western Railway Company, 7 Q. B. 824; 4 Railw. Cas. 90; 14 L. J., Q. B. 325; 9 Jur. 788.

Excessive Charges.—By a railway act it was enacted, that no action should be brought for anything done, or omitted to be done, in pursuance of the act, or in the execution of the powers or authorities given by the act, unless twenty days' previous notice in writing should be given. The company having, contrary to the provisions of the act, made excessive charges for the carriage of goods, and claimed and received the amount of such charges from the plaintiff:—Held, that, in an action for money had and received, to recover the sums so extorted, the company was entitled to notice of action. Kent v. Great Western Railway Company, 3 C. B. 714; 4 Railw. Cas. 699; 4 D. & L. 481; 16 L. J., C. P. 72.

Action against a railway company for money received by the company for the use of the plaintiff. Plea, no notice of action. The action was for overcharges. By a section of the company's act, no action shall be brought for anything done in pursuance of the act, unless notice in writing is given to the company. After verdict for the company,—Held, that the plea was bad for not averring that the action was for a thing done in pursuance of the act; and that the section did not apply to such an action. Garton v. Great Western Railway Company, El. Bl. & El. 837; 28 L. J., Q. B. 321; 5 Jur., N. S. 1244—Ex. Ch.

1. Persons acting in a Double Capacity.

A party making a distress for two causes, as to one of which he is justified and entitled to notice of action, is, nevertheless, liable in trespass as to the other. Lamont v. Southall, 5 M. & W. 416.

3. WHEN AND HOW TO BE GIVEN.

a. Form and Requisites.

Action against Justice—Notice before Quashing of Order.—A notice of an action against a justice for an act done by him in execution of his office, under an order, in a matter in which he has no jurisdiction, may be given before the quashing of the order, the act itself being the cause of action, and such cause of action being complete before the quashing, although the action itself cannot be brought until after the quashing. Haylook v. Sparkes, 1 El. & Bl. 471; 22 L. J., M. C. 67; 17 Jur. 731.

Notice of one Writ—actual Service of Another.]

—Where the notice stated the nature of the writ intended to be sued out, and also the cause of action; and a writ was sued out and served, but afterwards discontinued; and within the time allowed by the statute, another writ ejusdem generis was sued out and served, in which another person was joined as defendant: the court, after verdict, held that the notice was sufficient. Jones v. Simpson, 1 C. & J. 174; 1 Tyr. 32.

Length of Notice.—In an action against a justice of the peace for anything done by him in the execution of his office, the day both of delivering the notice and that of bringing the action must be excluded. Young v. Higgon, 4 Jur. 125; 6 M. & W. 49; 8 D. P. C. 212.

The 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 109 (Highway Act), requiring 21 days' notice of action against justices or others for anything done under the act, does not impliedly repeal the privilege of justices to have a month's notice under the 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 1. Rex v. Barton, 12 A. & E. 470; 4 P. & D. 182; 4 Jur. 987.

Indorsements.—The name and place of abode of the plaintiff's attorney should appear on the back of the notice of action (when the notice of action has been served by the attorney): and it is not sufficient that they should appear in the body or at the foot of it. Collins v. Hungerford, 7 Ir. C. L. R. 581.

Where a notice of action was signed by the plaintiff himself, but indorsed by his attorney:—Held, that the notice was sufficient, the indorsement by the attorney being all that the statute requires. Morgan v. Leach, 10 M. & W. 558; 2 D. N. S. 522; 12 L. J., M. C. 4.

It is sufficient, in indorsing the attorney's name, to put the initial only of his christian name. Mayhew, v. Look, 2 Marsh, 377; 7 Taunt. 63.

It is sufficient, if signed by a firm of two attorneys who are partners, and are employed by the plaintiff; and if signed T. & W. A. W. this is good, though the christian name of one is T. A., and of the other W. A., if there was no other firm of the same surname in the same place at which the notice bore date. James v. Swift, 6 D. & R. 625; 4 B. & C. 681; 2 C. & P. 237.

A notice was indorsed by Messrs. England and Shackles, as attorneys for the plaintiff; but before the action brought the partnership was dissolved, and the action was brought by Mr. England alone:—Held to be no ground of objection. Hollingworth v. Palmer, 4 Ex. 267; 18 L. J., Ex. 409.

A description of the attorney, as of a place in London, when in fact the place is in Westminster, is bad. Shears v. Smith, 6 Esp. 138.

When signed thus—"Given under my hand at Durham, the 11th day of, &c. Richard Ratcliffe, attorney for, &c.:" held insufficient. Taylor v. Fenwick, 3 B. & P. 553, n.; 7 T. R. 635, n.; 3 Dougl. 178.

An indorsement by an attorney of the place of his office is an indorsement of his place of abode. Roberts v. Williams, 4 D. P. C. 483; 5 Tyr. 583; 1 Gale, 315.

An indorsement with the name of the plaintiff's attorney, and the words, "of Birmingham," as describing the place of his abode, is sufficient. Osborn v. Gough, 3 B. & P. 551.

In wrong Court.]—A notice of an action in the Common Pleas is insufficient to support an action in the Queen's Bench. Elstob v. Wright, 3 C. & K. 31.

Description of Occupation.]—A party may describe himself by the addition of what he really is, e.g. "dealer," although, in the commitment, he is described as a labourer. Mason v. Barker, 1 C. & K. 100.

Form of Action.]—The notice need not state the form of action; it is sufficient to state the cause of action. Prickett v. Gratrea, 2 New Sess. Cas. 429; 8 Q. B. 1020; 1 C. & K. 651; 15 L. J., M. C. 145; 10 Jur. 566.

Cause of Action.]—In an action against a justice of the peace for an act done within his jurisdiction, the notice of action must state that the act was done maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause, or it will not be sufficient within sect. 9 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44. Taylor v. Nesfield, 3 El. & Bl. 725; 2 C. L. R. 1312; 23 L. J., M. C. 169; 18 Jur. 747.

A notice of action must state the substantial cause of action intended to be relied on, clearly and explicitly, and in such a manner as will not be likely to mislead the justice of the peace, and so probably prevent his tendering amends. Id.

Place and Time.]—A notice of action does not clearly and explicitly contain the cause of action, if it omits to mention the place where the act complained of was done. Martins v. Uppeher or Upcher, 1 D., N. S. 555; 2 G. & D. 716; 3 Q. B. 662; 11 L. J., Q. B. 291; 6 Jur. 582

A tender of amends does not cure such a defect. Id.

A notice to a special constable stated the grievances to be, that he, on the 30th January, at S., arrested and imprisoned the plaintiff on a charge of felony, and took him then in custody to D., detained him twelve hours in custody, and caused him to be taken before certain justices of the peace at D. on the 31st of the said month:—Held, that the time and place of committing the grievances were sufficiently specified. Jones v. Nicholls, 1 New Sess. Cas. 524; 13 M. & W. 361; 2 D. & L. 425; 14 L. J., Ex. 42; 8 Jur. 989.

A notice of action against an officer of the Metropolitan Police, under 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 41, must specify the time and place of the act complained of. Breece v. Jerdein, 4 Q. B. 585; 2 G. & D. 720; 12 L. J., Q. B. 234; 7 Jur. 490.

Where a statute requires a month's notice of action to be given before the commencement of an action, a letter written to the defendant six weeks before action, threatening proceedings unless an apology was made and certain costs were paid, is not such a notice as the statute requires. Wynyard v. Marks, 15 L. T., 591.

Under the Metropolitan Works Act, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, a notice of action left with the foreman of a contractor, at a yard of his where there was an office, on the day from which a calendar month expired the day before action, is sufficient, although it did not come to the hands of the defendant until the day afterwards. Moody v. Delick, 4 F. & F. 938.

Where notice of action was given on the 28th of a month, and an action commenced on the 29th of the following month.—Held, sufficient. Freeman v. Read, 4 B. & S. 174; 32 L. J., M. C. 226; 10 Jur., N. S. 149; 8 L. T. 468; 11 W. R. 802.

A notice stated the cause of action thus:—"For that you on the 10th day of May, 1844, with force and arms, caused an assault to be made upon me, and then caused me to be beaten, and to be forced and compelled to go along divers public streets and roads, to a prison, to wit, at Louth, in &c., and to be unlawfully imprisoned and kept in prison there for forty days then next following." At the trial, the proof was confined to the imprisonment in the gaol at Louth, under an invalid warrant:—Held, that the notice sufficiently stated the place of the injury, so as to enable the plaintiff to recover in respect of such imprisonment. Jacklin v. Fyche, 14 M. & W. 381; 15 L. J., Ex. 102.

Justices convicted A. under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 68, in his absence, of keeping an unlicensed theatre. Immediately after the conviction, he, being in the presence of the justices, asked leave to go to his home. One of the justices said if he went he must go in custody. He was detained for a day and a night. A warrant not returnable on a day certain was issued by the justices. It recited a conviction, adjudging A. to pay a penalty of 5*l.* and 12*s.* costs, and directed the sums to be levied by distress. Under this warrant his goods were seized and sold. A conviction was drawn up, adjudging him to pay a penalty, but silent as to costs: and there was no evidence that in fact the justices had adjudicated on the costs. The conviction was quashed. Notice of action was given to the justices for that they, "at H., on the 1st day August," &c., imprisoned A., and also for that they "on the said 1st day," &c., seized his goods:—Held, that the notice was sufficiently certain as to averment of place. Leary v. Patrick, 15 Q. B. 266; 4 New Sess. Cas. 258; 19 L. J., M. C. 21; 14 Jur. 932.

Amount Recoverable.—In an action against a justice for taking goods, the plaintiff cannot recover more than the value stated in his notice. Stringer v. Martyr, 6 Esp. 134.

Variance in.—A notice to a constable, in pursuance of 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 41, mentioned apprehension, detention in custody, and imprisonment, as the cause of action. The declaration contained two counts—one for the cause of action stated in the notice, and the other for taking the goods of the plaintiff. A verdict was given for him upon the first count only.—Held, that the variance was not material. Breese v. Bradley or Jordan, 4 Q. B. 585; 2 G. & D. 720; 12 L. J., Q. B. 234; 7 Jur. 490.

Construction of Notices.—In construing notices of action under the various statutes requiring them, the court will not subject them to too nice and narrow an examination; the object being that they should be plain and intelligible to plain men. Jones v. Nicholls, 1 New Sess. Cas. 524; 13 M. & W. 361; 2 D. & L. 425; 14 L. J., Ex. 42; 8 Jur. 989.

A notice is not vitiated by being in the form of a declaration, and unnecessarily ample, if it expresses the cause of action with sufficient clearness. Gimbert v. Coyney, M. C. L. & Y. 469. And see Robson v. Spearman, 3 B. & A. 493.

A notice of action, against bricklayers, for negligence in repairing a public sewer, is not to be construed with the same strictness as is generally required in pleading, provided there is a sufficient cause of action shewn upon the face of it; therefore, a notice under a local act, "that the defendant made, altered, repaired, cut, dug, worked, and enlarged the sewer in so negligent, incautious, unskilful, improvident, and improper a manner, that the plaintiff's premises fell, and were greatly damaged, weakened, and destroyed," is a sufficient notice, though the proof was, first, that the defendant had not propped and shored up the house in the progress of the work: and, secondly, that the immediate cause of the injury was the falling of other houses, which drew the plaintiff's after them. Jones v. Bird, 1 D. & R. 497; 5 B. & A. 837.

But a notice, against a toll-gate keeper, "for demanding and taking of the plaintiff toll for and in respect of certain matters and things particularly mentioned and exempted from the payment of toll in and by an act of parliament intituled, &c.," is too uncertain, and bad. Freeman v. Line, 2 Chit. 673.

A notice of an action for breaking and entering the plaintiff's house, and seizing goods, which goods were "lying and being in and upon my dwelling-house," will not support a charge in the declaration of taking the plaintiff's goods. Elstob v. Wright, 3 C. & K. 31.

But a notice of action given to the high bailiffs of a county court under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 138, which stated that the action would be brought "to recover compensation in damages for a trespass and excessive levy committed by you and your officers on the 3rd day of December, 1863, by selling and disposing of certain goods and chattels in and upon the premises," is not bad for, not stating whose goods were seized, nor the amount of damages sought to be recovered. Burton v. Le Gros, 34 L. J., Q. B. 91; 11 L. T. 270; 13 W. R. 46.

A notice of action against a magistrate for acts done in the exercise of his office, not stating the place in which the acts complained of had been committed, is insufficient. Furber v. Lloyd, 10 Ir. R., C. L. 552—Ex. Ch.

In an action against a local board acting under the Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), for not having properly filled up a trench which the board had caused to be made in a road for laying down a sewer, by reason of which that part of the road gave way, and the plaintiff's horse was injured, the notice of action given in compliance with sect. 139 stated that the board did by their "labourers, servants, and others on or about the 13th of May last negligently, carelessly and improperly leave a certain portion of the road or highway in an insufficient and improper state of repair, whereby a horse" of the plaintiff "sank into the road or highway, and was thrown therein," and injured.—Held, that the notice was not limited to a complaint of an injury from non-repair of the road, but was applicable to a cause of action arising from an act of misfeasance, and was therefore a sufficient notice of the cause of action. Smith v. West Derby Local Board, 3 C. P. D. 423; 47 L. J., C. P. 607; 38 L. T. 716; 27 W. R. 137.

A notice stated that a writ would be issued against the defendant, for that he had caused a distress to be levied at the plaintiff's office of business. The declaration was for breaking and entering, and seizing the plaintiff's goods.—Held, that the notice was sufficient. Hollingworth v. Palmer, 4 Ex. 267; 18 L. J., Ex. 409.

When in the Name of a Party who was Dead.]

—A notice in these words:—"I do hereby, as attorney for A. P. and E. P. (the plaintiff), and in pursuance of the statute, give you notice that an action will be commenced against you for recovery of compensation in damages for an illegal seizure and distraint, and for the value of the property seized." A. P. was dead at the time of the service of the notice.—Held, that the notice, being in the name of a party who was dead, was insufficient. Pilkington v. Riley, 6 D. & L. 628; 3 Ex. 739; 18 L. J., Ex. 323.

Statement of Names.—If a notice of action against a magistrate for wrongful distress under a conviction, states the person to whom the warrant is directed, it must state it correctly. Aked v. Stocks, 4 Bing. 509; 1 M. & P. 346.

One Notice to Several Persons.—A separate notice to each of several persons intended to be sued, is sufficient to found a joint action against all for acts committed in pursuance of an act of parliament, which provided that no plaintiff shall recover in an action for anything done in pursuance thereof, without notice to the defendant or defendants of such intended action, although none of the other persons who are afterwards joined in the action are named in the notice to either of them. Agar v. Morgan, 2 Price, 126.

A notice of action against a magistrate is sufficient to warrant a writ and proceeding against the magistrate and a constable jointly. Jones v. Simpson, 1 C. & J. 174; 1 Tyr. 32.

Sufficiency of Notice.]—A letter from the plaintiff's attorney, declaring that he is instructed to take legal proceedings unless goods are delivered up, is not a sufficient notice of action. Lewis v. Smith, Holt, 27. S. P., Mason v. Birkenhead Improvement Commissioners, 6 H. & N. 72; 29 L. J., Ex. 406.

Where trustees of a paving act were entitled to a certain number of days' notice of action, for anything done in pursuance of the act, a notice that, unless the name of the party on whose information they had taken certain steps were given up, proceedings would be taken against them, is bad, because conditional; and, because it should have specified that the action would be commenced at the expiration of the number of days mentioned in the act. Norris v. Smith, 2 P. & D. 353; 10 A. & E. 188.

One person acted as clerk to two bodies of public officers. A notice of action was given him, addressed to him as clerk to the one body, the cause of action arising under the authority of the other body:—Held, insufficient. Hider v. Dorrell, 1 Taunt. 383.

A notice signed by "A. E. P., solicitor, acting on the behalf and as the procchein amy of the plaintiff," who was an infant:—Held, sufficient, where notice was required to be given "by the attorney or agent." De Gondouin v. Lewis, 2 P. & D. 283; 10 A. & E. 117; 3 Jur. 1168.

A notice of action to a bailiff of a county court is not bad because it describes him as having acted under a statute which does not relate at all to county courts, or to the matter in question; if it gives him notice of the action and of the cause thereof it is sufficient, and such a reference to a wrong statute may be rejected. Macgregor v. Galaworthy, 3 C. & K. 8.

A plaintiff having, after notice of action for extortion by a railway company in carrying his goods, served the company with a demand of interest under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28:—Held, that an arbitrator, under a submission of all matters in difference, might award the plaintiff interest, notwithstanding the notice of action did not contain a demand of interest. Edwards v. Great Western Railway Company, 11 C. B. 588; 21 L. J., C. P. 72.

Particulars of demand in a plaint in a county court were, first, for unlawfully entering premises and seizing cattle under colour of a distress; secondly, for unlawfully selling three other cattle not distrained; thirdly, for not having the cattle so sold appraised before selling them; and fourthly, for continuing on the premises, and proceeding to sell the cattle after an abandonment of the distress. A notice of action given as under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, s. 19 (Tith Commutation Act), stated that the plaintiff would bring his plaint against the defendant for having on the 11th of March entered his premises and seized three heifers there, and for having continued there several days, and also for that the defendant against the plaintiffs will on the 17th March did seize, sell, and remove from the plaintiffs' premises three heifers belonging to him:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to go into evidence in support of the fourth item, as it was one for which no notice of action was necessary; or, if necessary, the notice given was large enough to apply to it. Hocard v. Remer, 2 El. & Bl. 915; 23 L. J., Q. B. 60.

A notice of action signed by B., under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 138, against the bailiff of a county court, as follows: "It is my intention at the end of one calendar month from the date hereof to commence an action against you in the court of Queen's Bench, to recover compensation in damages for a trespass and excessive levy committed by you and your officers on the 3rd of December, 1863, by selling and disposing of certain goods upon the premises, No. 80, Derbyshire-street, &c., to satisfy debt and expenses under an order recovered against me in the S. county court," is sufficient. Barton v. Le Gros, 34 L. J., Q. B. 91; 11 L. T. 270; 13 W. R. 46.

By 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, no action or proceeding shall be commenced against the Metropolitan Board of Works for anything done or intended to be done under the powers of that board, under certain statutes, until after one month's notice, and "every such action and proceeding shall be brought or commenced within six months next after the accrual of the cause of action or ground of claim or demand, and not afterwards."—Held, that a notice of claim and demand of arbitration for damage done to buildings by the Metropolitan Board of Works, acting under their statutory powers, is not such a proceeding against the Metropolitan Board of Works as to render it necessary that it should be made within six months after the damage is caused. Delany v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 2 L. R., C. P. 532; 36 L. J., C. P. 227; 16 L. T. 386; 15 W. R. 841. Affirmed on appeal, 3 L. R., C. P. 111; 37 L. J., C. P. 59; 17 L. T. 262; 16 W. R. 137—Ex. Ch.

b. Service.

Service of a notice of action to a magistrate by a clerk of the attorney is sufficient, and the notice need not be served by the attorney himself. Morgan v. Leach, 10 M. & W. 558; 2 D., N. S. 522; 12 L. J., M. C. 4.

c. Proof.

Necessity for.]—A witness, who served a notice of action, did not know the handwriting of the plaintiff whose signature the notice purported to bear, and no evidence was given of his handwriting:—Held, sufficient without such proof, as it was enough that the notice should have been served on his behalf. Forman v. Daves, Car. & M. 127.

Waiving.]—The mere act of a magistrate cannot waive the necessity of proving a notice of action. Martins v. Upcher or Upcher, 1 D., N. S. 555; 2 G. & D. 716; 3 Q. B. 662; 6 Jur. 582.

Therefore, where a magistrate had sent to the plaintiff a paper writing, reciting the notice that had been served on him, and tendering amends in respect of the matter contained in such notice, proof of such notice was still required. Id.

In an action against a justice of the peace for acts done in the execution of his office, the proof of notice of action is a necessary part of the plaintiff's case, and must be given by him, though the want of it is not relied upon in pleading by the defendant. Lawrenson v. Hill, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 498.

4. PLEADING WANT OF NOTICE.

Necessity of.]—Where an act provided that a plaintiff should not recover in any action for anything done in pursuance of the act, unless twenty-one days' notice of action should be given :—Held, that the defendant must plead the want of such notice, or he could not avail himself of it. Dacey v. Warner, 14 M. & W. 199; 15 L. J., Ex. 253; S. P., Law v. Dodd, 1 Ex. 845; 17 L. J., M. C. 65.

Under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95 (County Courts Act), to take advantage of want of notice of action, it must be specially pleaded. Smith v. Pritchard, 2 C. & K. 699.

Sufficiency of.]—To an action against a clerk of the pasture-masters of a borough, under a local act, for money received by the pasture-masters to the plaintiff's use, he pleaded, that the debt arose out of the sale of a heifer of the plaintiff by the pasture-masters after the passing of the local act and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97; that the sale of the heifer was a thing done in pursuance of the first-mentioned act; and that no notice of action had been given to the defendant, or to the pasture-masters :—Held, that the plea contained no sufficient averment that the thing complained of was a thing done in pursuance of the powers and authorities given by the local act. Peck v. Boyes, 7 Scott, N. R. 436; 6 M. & G. 726.

In trover, a defendant pleaded that the grievance was committed after the passing of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 19, for regulating bailiffs of inferior courts, that he had been duly appointed to act as bailiff in execution of the process of the Tolzey Court of Bristol, which court has, by charter, jurisdiction for the recovery of debts, and that he at the time of committing the grievance was a bailiff of the court, and that the grievance was a thing done in pursuance of his duty as such bailiff, and that no notice of action was given :—Held, sufficient, and that he was justified, on the ground that he was bailiff de facto. Braham v. Watkins, 4 D. & L. 42; 16 M. & W. 77; 16 L. J. Ex. 9.

5. EFFECT OF OMISSION TO GIVE.

Bars Right of Action as well as Costs.]—The proviso in sect. 143 of the Turnpike Act, 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, is not confined to that part of the section which immediately precedes it, but extends to the whole matter in the section; and, therefore, if a party seeking to recover the penalties imposed by that act omits to give the requisite notice or to commence his action within the prescribed time, he is not merely barred of his right to costs, but of his right of action altogether. Cobbett v. Warner, 1 H. & N. 388; 26 L. J., Ex. 11—Ex. Ch.

Contracts with Lords of.]—C. contracted with the commissioners of the Admiralty to convey the mails from Calais to Dover during the continuance of the contract, and the commissioners for and on behalf of her Majesty agreed to pay to him from and out of the moneys to be provided by parliament, 18,000*l.* per year; the contract to continue from the date until A.D. 1870 :—Held, that there was no obligation on the part of the commissioners to employ C. under the contract, parliament not having provided moneys for the payment. Churchward v. Reg., 1 L. R., Q. B. 173; 14 L. T. 57.

Consent of, to Obstruction to Navigation.]—Where the Metropolitan Board of Works carried a pipe connected with a sewer some distance into the Thames, and protected the mouth of it by driving piles into the bed of the river; which piles damaged a vessel :—Held, that as the Board had not obtained the approval of the Board of Admiralty of the works as required by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 104, s. 27, they were liable in an action for obstructing the free navigation of the river, and that although the act gave them power to erect works on the soil or bed of the river Thames, yet nevertheless it was a condition precedent to the erection of such works that they should obtain the approval of the Board of Admiralty, and that the approval of the conservators of the Thames was not sufficient. Brounlow v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 13 C. B., N. S. 768; 31 L. J., C. P. 140; 8 Jur. N. S. 891; 6 L. T. 187; 10 W. R. 384.

Actions against.]—The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty are empowered to sue and be sued in respect of certain matters under a collective name; an action lies against them in respect of some of such matters. A writ of summons directed to them in that name having been served upon one of the commissioners, the court refused to set aside the writ, although it appeared upon the plaintiff's affidavit, on shew-ing cause, that the cause of action was one for which the defendants were not suable in their collective name. Williams v. Admiralty (Lords Commissioners), 2 L. M. & P. 456; 12 C. B. 420; 20 L. J., C. P. 245; 16 Jur. 42.

Droits.—During the Russian war, one of the Queen's ships of war, on her passage to Odessa, fell in with and took possession of a raft of timber, having the Russian Imperial mark painted on the several spars composing the same:—Held, that such timber must be condemned as a droit of the Crown and not a droit of Admiralty. Anon. 5 Jur., N. ## ADVERTISEMENT.

Evidence—Notice.—An advertisement published in several daily newspapers is not evidence of notice to any individual who is not proved to have taken in or to have been in the habit of reading one of the newspapers in which it appeared. Boydell v. Drummond, 2 Camp. 157.

Evidence that an advertisement was inserted in a country newspaper, circulated at the residence of a party, is not admissible as proof of notice to the party of the facts contained in the advertisement, unless it is shown that he took the newspaper in. Norwich and Lowestoft Navigation v. Theobald, M. & M. 153. And see EVIDENCE.

Contract by.—A circular sent out, as follows:—"We are instructed to offer to the wholesale trade for sale by tender the stock in trade of A., amounting as per stock book to 2,503l. 13s. 1d., and which will be sold at a discount in one lot: payment to be made in cash: the tenders will be received and opened at our offices," does not amount to a contract or a promise to sell to the person who makes the highest tender. Spencer v. Harding, 5 L. R., C. P. 561; 39 L. J., C. P. 332; 23 L. T. 237; 19 W. R. 48.

The liability of a party who advertises generally a reward for information to any one not named in the advertisement who shall give the information asked for, is a liability at common law, and not a contract within the Statute of Frauds. Williams v. Byrne, 1 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 154; 8 L. T. 69.

After a reward offered, a constable provided the information required:—Held, a good consideration for a promise to pay. England v. Davidson, 11 A. & E. 856.

Reward for Apprehending a Felon.—G. having been guilty of forgery, absconded. The defendants published a handbill offering a reward of 200l. "to any person or persons giving such information to A., superintendent of police, Dewsbury, or to H., superintendent of police, Wakefield, as will lead to the apprehension of the said G." Afterwards G. presented himself at the police office, Exeter, and said there was a warrant against him. The plaintiff, who was chief constable, on searching the police-gazette and finding the notice therein, telegraphed to Dewsbury, and being informed that there was a warrant against G., apprehended and charged him, and he was ultimately convicted. In answer to questions left to them, the jury found that G. was not in custody before the telegram was sent; but they were unable to agree as to whether or not he had given his name before it was sent:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to claim the reward,—the apprehension of G. not being the consequence of the plaintiff's information, but of the criminal surrendering himself to justice. Bent v. Wakefield Bank, 4 C. P. D. 1; 39 L. T. 576; 27 W. R. 168.

Tenders.—A company advertised for tenders for the supply of stores for a period of twelve months. The defendant sent in a tender to supply the stores required for the period named, at certain fixed prices, "in such quantities as the company's storekeeper might order from time to time:" and the company accepted his tender:—Held, that there was a sufficient consideration for the defendant's promise to supply the goods, although there was no binding contract on the part of the company to order any. Great Northern Railway Company v. Witham, 9 L. R., C. P. 16; 43 L. J., C. P. 1; 29 L. T. 471; 22 W. R. 48. And see CONTRACT.

Auction.—An auctioneer advertised in newspapers that a sale by auction would take place on a particular day in a country town. He also circulated catalogues specifying the articles to be sold. A person attended the sale intending to buy certain articles specified in the catalogue, but on the day of sale they were withdrawn by the auctioneer:—Held, that there was no implied contract by him to indemnify the intended purchaser against the expense and inconvenience which he had incurred. Harris v. Nickerson, 8 L. R., Q. B. 286; 42 L. J., Q. B. 171; 28 L. T. 410; 21 W. R. 635.

An advertisement of sale of real estate, stating that to treat for and view the property applications are to be made to certain named persons, does not hold them out as authorised to enter into a contract of sale. Godwin v. Brind, 5 L. R., C. P. 299; 39 L. J., C. P. 122; 17 W. R. 29.

Expenses Incurred.—When a representation is made to the public by means of an advertisement, the advertiser knowing the representation to be untrue, one of the public who has reasonably incurred expense by reason of such representation will have his action against the advertiser. Richardson v. Silvester, 9 L. R., Q. B. 34; 43 L. J., Q. B. 1; 29 L. T. 395; 22 W. R. 74.

A plaintiff's particulars in a county court action alleged that the defendant caused to be inserted in a newspaper an advertisement for the letting by tender, with immediate possession, of a farm and sheepwalk. And the plaintiff believing in the bona fides of such advertisement, was induced to inspect the farm, and employ persons to value it with a view to his becoming tenant, whereas the defendant knew at the time he caused such advertisement to be published that he had not power to let the farm, and that the farm was not to be let:—Held, that these particulars disclosed a prima facie cause of action, and that the judge was not justified in nonsuiting the plaintiff without hearing his evidence. Id.

Contract to Insert.—A proprietor of a railway guide book gave to the defendant a written order to insert an advertisement "to last two years from date, to be renewed on the same terms at the end of that period, provided a second edition shall be printed." The defendant, after the advertisement had continued two years, brought out a second edition:—Held, that the meaning of the contract was to give the defendant the option of renewing in the second edition; but not to bind him to renew. Mcason v. Finnigan, 11 W. R. 439—Ex. Ch.; and see Metzler v. Gounod, 32 L. T. 656.

II. AMBASSADORS' SERVANTS.*III. OTHER MATTERS.*I. RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES.*1. EXEMPTIONS.

From Arrest.—Where a foreign minister had been dismissed, and a successor had been appointed several months before his arrest, held, that the privilege did not apply, notwithstanding he had not received any official notification of his dismissal. Marshall v. Critico, 9 East, 447.

The 7 Ann, c. 12, s. 2, does not extend to consuls, who are therefore liable to arrest. Vircash v. Becher, 3 M. & S. 284. And see Clarke v. Critico, 1 Taunt. 106.

From Actions.—A councillor of legation of a foreign sovereign, who has the charge of the executive of the legation, subject to the directions of the minister plenipotentiary, and who acts as chargé d'affaires in the absence of such minister, is entitled as such to the privileges of an ambassador. Taylor v. Best, 14 C. B. 487; 2 C. L. R. 1717; 23 L. J., C. P. 89; 18 Jur. 402.

An ambassador, who voluntarily appears to an action against him and others in this country as joint contractors, and who thus submits to the jurisdiction of the court, is not entitled to have the proceedings set aside or the action stayed, on the ground of his being privileged as an ambassador, if no step has been taken to interfere with his person or property. Ib.

A public minister of a foreign state, accredited to and received by the sovereign of this country, having no real property in England, and having done nothing to disentitle him to the general privileges of such public minister, cannot while he remains such public minister, be sued against his will, in this country, in an action; although such action may arise out of commercial transactions by him here, and although neither his person is nor his goods are touched by the suit. Magdalena Steam Navigation Company v. Martin, 2 El. & El. 94; 28 L. J., Q. B. 310; 5 Jur., N. S. 1260; 7 W. R. 598.

Securities were deposited by the plaintiffs in the Bank of England in the name of the ambassador of a foreign state, in order to secure the performance of a contract between the plaintiffs and the foreign government. The ambassador threatened to withdraw the deposit on the ground of an alleged breach of contract by the plaintiffs, which they denied under the circumstances to be such breach:—Held, that it was not competent for the plaintiffs to move against the ambassador; but that an interim injunction might be granted against the bank, to restrain them from parting with the fund, and that, under this order, the bank would be protected against any proceedings by the ambassador. Gladstone v. Mururus Bey, 1 H. & M. 495; 33 L. J. Ch. 155; 9 Jur. N. S. 71.

2. ACTIONS BY.

Bringing Action on Behalf of Foreign Government.—To a bill filed by the chargé d'affaires of the Brazilian government in this country, in his own name, to restrain judgment creditors from issuing execution against certain furniture, upon which a sum of money had been advanced by the Brazilian government, secured by an unregistered bill of sale of the furniture, a demurrer on the ground that the minister could not sue in his own name was allowed. Penedo (Baron) v. Johnson, 29 L. T. 452; 22 W. R. 103.

II. AMBASSADORS' SERVANTS.

Privileges.—The privilege from arrest of an ambassador's servant is the privilege of the ambassador and not of the servant. Fisher v. Begrez, 2 C. & M. 240; 3 Tyr. 184; 2 D. P. C. 279; 4 Tyr. 35.

A person claiming privilege as servant to an ambassador must be really and bonâ fide his menial and domestic servant at the time of the arrest. Ib.

Although an ambassador's servant may be privileged as to his person, it does not follow that all his goods are privileged also, so as to enable the sheriff to apply to set aside a fi. fa. issued against them: and a clear case of privilege must be made out to the satisfaction of the court, or else they will not interfere, either on behalf of the sheriff or the person privileged. Fisher v. Begrez, 1 D. P. C. 588; 1 C. & M. 117.

It is not sufficient to show that the servant's name is in the list transmitted by the secretary of state to the sheriff's office, of persons privileged as attached to an embassy, but it must be clearly shewn that the person is in the actual and bonâ fide service of the ambassador. Ib.

In an action against a sheriff for a false return, the plaintiff may shew that the appointment was merely colourable. Delcalle v. Plomer, 3 Camp. 47.

Who Entitled.—A land-waiter at the custom-house cannot claim protection as such domestic servant. Masters v. Manby, 1 Burr. 401.

Privilege denied to a domestic physician to a public foreign minister, where it appears to be a mere scheme to screen him from his debts. Lockwood v. Coyegarne, 3 Burr. 1676.

A chaplain to an ambassador is not protected from arrest if he does no duty in the house. Seacombe v. Bownley, 1 Wils. 20.

Nor is an ambassador's interpreter, who does not live in the house. Malachi Carolino's case, 1 Wils. 78.

Protection to the English secretary of an ambassador was disallowed, because it appeared he was purser of a ship of war. Darling v. Atkins, 3 Wils. 33.

But in another case it was allowed, although formerly he had been a trader, and the case arose under very suspicious circumstances. Triquet v. Bath, 3 Burr, 1478; 1 W. Bl. 471.

The secretary of a foreign minister is privileged, though his name is not registered at the office of either of the secretaries of state. Hopkins v. De Roebeck, 3 T. R. 79.

Where the wife of a foreign ambassador's secretary was arrested upon a writ issued against husband and wife, the court refused to quash the writ, though the husband swore that before and at the time of the arrest, he was in the actual employment of the ambassador, and in daily attendance upon him, in writing despatches and other official documents. English v. Cubalero, 3 D. & R. 25.

A British-born subject employed as first chorister at the Portuguese ambassador's chapel is not protected. Nucello v. Toogood, 2 D. & R. 833; 1 B. & C. 554.

But semble, that a chorister, bonâ fide employed by an ambassador in the performance of religious worship in his chapel, is privileged. Fisher v. Begrez, 1 C. & M. 117; 1 D. P. C. 588; S. C., 2 C. & M. 240; 3 Tyr. 184; 2 D. P. C. 279.

III. OTHER MATTERS.

Evidence.—The certificate of a foreign ambassador under the seal of the legation is sufficient evidence of the law of the country by which he is accredited. Klingemann, In goods of, 3 S. & T. 18; 32 L. J., P. 16; 8 L. T. 172; 11 W. R. 218.

Domicil.—A foreigner having gained a British domicil does not lose it by becoming chargé d'affaires in this country for his own sovereign. Att.-Gen. v. Kent, 1 H. & C. 12; 31 L. J., Ex. 391; 10 W. R. 722.

AMENDMENT.

See PRACTICE—PLEADING.

AMICUS CURIÆ.

Who may be.—As amicus curiæ any person may make suggestions to the court. Tollemache v. Tollemache, 30 L. J., Mat. 115.

ANCIENT DEMESNE.

Exemption from Parliamentary Taxes.—The exemption of tenants in ancient demesne from parliamentary taxes and tallages is limited to taxes granted by parliament to the crown, and does not extend to local taxation levied, under the authority of an act of parliament, upon and for the benefit of particular portions of the community. Tenants in ancient demesne are not, therefore, as such, exempt from payment of county rates. Reg. v. Aylesford, 2 El. & El. 538.

IV. BEQUEST FOR THE BENEFIT OF ANIMALS.

V. CARRIAGE OF ANIMALS.—See CARRIER.

I. PROPERTY IN.

1. RECLAIMED AND DOMESTICATED.

Reclaimed animals, feræ naturæ, are the subject of civil remedies for property: therefore where a cat of A. strayed from his premises, and was shot at and killed by B.:—Held, that A. having a property in the cat, an action would lie to recover damages for killing it, the measure of such damages being something beyond the market value of the thing destroyed, if the destruction were attended by circumstances of aggravation. Whittingham v. Ideson, 8 U. C. L. J. 14.

Trover will lie for a dog that is lost, and which the defendant refuses to deliver, unless paid for his keeping. Binstead v. Buck, 2 W. Bl. 1117.

2. ANIMALS FERÆ NATURÆ.

The property in animals feræ naturæ is in the owner of the land on which they are started and captured, and not in the captor. Blades v. Higgs, 12 C. B., N. S. 501; 8 Jur., N. S. 1012; 5 L. T. 752; 10 W. R. 318; affirmed on appeal in the Ex. Ch. 32 L. J., C. P. 182; 7 L. T. 834; and in the House of Lords, 34 L. J., C. P. 286; 13 W. R. 927.

A grant of land in fee by the crown, and also a licence to depasture cattle on crown lands (which is in substance a lease), carries with it the right to capture and appropriate all wild animals found on such land. Falkland Islands Company v. Reg., 2 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 266; 10 Jur., N. S. 807; 11 L. T. 9; 13 W. R. 57.

Where cattle had been introduced into an island, and in course of time many escaped and lived in a wild state:—Held, in construing a grant by the crown of the lands that these wild cattle were to be treated as animals feræ naturæ. Ib.

II. LIABILITY FOR INJURIES BY.

A. ANIMALS DAMAGE FEASANT.

1. WHO MAY DISTRAIN.

a. Under Agreements.

A. being possessed of a quantity of land in a common field, and having a right of common over the whole field, and B. having also a right of common over the whole field, they enter into an agreement, for their mutual advantage and convenience, not to exercise their respective rights for a certain term of years, and each party covenants to that effect. If, during the term, the cattle of B. come upon the land of A., he may distrain them damage feasant. Whiteman v. King, 2 H. Bl. 4.

A tenant holding over after the expiration of his term, cannot distrain the landlord's cattle which were put upon the premises by way of taking possession. Taunton v. Costar, 7 T. R. 431.

A. demised to B. the milk of twenty-two cows to be provided by A., and to be fed at A.'s expense on certain closes belonging to A.; A. covenanting that B. might turn out a mare, and that no other cattle should be fed there:—Held, that the separate herbage and feeding of those closes passed to B., and that B. might distrain other cattle of A. doing damage there. Burt v. Moore, 5 T. R. 329.

If two persons have the concurrent possession of land for the purpose that each may take profits of a special nature, and distinct from, but not inconsistent with, the rights of the other—Quære, whether either is bound to guard against casual damage, which during and by the fair enjoyment of his right may happen to the other. Churchill v. Evans, 1 Taunt. 529.

But clearly the one cannot distrain the cattle of the other damage feasant. Ib.

b. When Mischief due to Distrainer.

A person into whose field cattle have strayed through defect of fences which he was bound to repair, cannot distrain them damage feasant in another field, into which they have got by breaking through a hedge which he kept in good repair, since his neglect was the original cause of the mischief. Singleton v. Williamson, 7 H. & N. 410; 31 L. J. Ex. 17; 8 Jur., N. S. 60; 5 L. T. 664; 10 W. R. 174.

Where cattle have escaped from an adjoining close into that of the defendant, through defect of fences which he is bound to repair, he is not justified in driving them out into the highway, and leaving them there, although it may be their best way back; and trespass will lie. Curruthers v. Hollis, 8 A. & E. 113; 3 N. & P. 246; 1 W., W. & H. 264; 2 Jur. 871.

2. EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT DISTRESS.

a. Position of Person Distraining.

To support a distress for damage feasant, it must appear that the party distraining had actually got into the locus in quo before the cattle had got out of it. Clement v. Milner, 3 Esp. 95.

b. Actual Damage being Done.

Semble, that an animal doing damage to the freehold is doing such a damage as will justify the distraining of the animal damage feasant, provided that the animal is then actually doing the damage, or having done some damage, it is necessary to detain the animal in order to prevent its doing further damage. Wormer v. Biggs, 2 C. & K. 31.

But if the owner of the freehold seizes an

d. Liability of Pound-keeper.

A declaration on 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 12, s. 2, stated, that C. distrained a horse of the plaintiff damage feasant, and impounded it in a public pound, in the county of Surrey, of which the defendant was keeper, and took from the plaintiff for keeping in the pound the distress, to wit, 3s., being more than 4d. for one whole distress, "whereby, and by force of the statute in such case made and provided, an action accrued to the plaintiff, being the party grieved, to demand and have from the defendant 5l." :—Held, on motion in arrest of judgment, that the declaration was bad for want of an allegation, that the act done by the defendant was "against the form of the statute." Fife v. Bousfield, 8 Q. B. 100; 2 D. & L. 481; 13 L. J., Q. B. 306; 8 Jur. 734.

An action by the party grieved, on 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 12, s. 2, is not within 31 Eliz. c. 5, or 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 2, and, therefore, the venue may be laid in any county. Id.

e. Escape and Rescue.

Rescue.—The plaintiff distrained the defendant's cattle damage feasant, and went to apprise the defendant; during his absence the cattle escaped for half an hour into the defendant's ground, whence the plaintiff, on his return, drove them to his own yard. The defendant having taken them thence :—Held, no rescue, as the leaving the cattle in the defendant's ground was an abandonment of the distress. Knowles v. Blake, 5 Bing. 499; 3 M. & P. 214.

If a hayward takes cattle which are straying in a common or a lane, and they are rescued as he is taking them to the pound, this rescue is indictable; but if the hayward takes cattle which are damage feasant in the inclosed land of any private occupier, the rescue of them before they get to the pound is not indictable; as in the latter case, till the cattle get to the pound, the hayward is to be considered the mere servant of the occupier. Rex v. Bradshaw, 7 C. & P. 233.

A plea of recaption upon a rescue must aver that the recaption was on fresh pursuit. Rich v. Woolley, 7 Bing. 965; 5 M. & P. 663.

Escape without fault of Distrainer.—Where cattle are distrained damage feasant, and put into a sufficient pound, and escape without default or neglect of the distrainer, he may bring pound-breach. Smith v. Wright, 6 H. & N. 821; 30 L. J., Ex. 313; 7 Jur., N. S. 1169.

f. Actions.

Pleadings in.—An action on 2 Will. & M., sess. 1, c. 5, s. 4, to recover trouble damages for pound-breach, is not a penal action within 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 4, and since the new rules of pleading the defendant cannot dispute the matters alleged in the declaration by way of inducement without a special plea. Castleman v. Hicks, 2 M. & Rob. 422; Car. & M. 266.

In an action for pound-breach, founded upon 2 Will. & M., sess. 1, c. 5, and 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 8, the allegations in the declaration, that the premises on which the goods were seized and impounded were held of the plaintiff as landlord, and that rent was in arrear, are material allegations, because they shew how the plaintiff was the person grieved by the pound-breach. Berry v. Huchstable, 14 Jur. 718.

Venue.—In an action on the 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 12, for driving a distress out of the hundred into another county, the venue may be in either county. Pope v. Davis, 2 Taunt. 252; 2 Camp. 266.

B. MISCHIEVOUS ANIMALS.

1. LIABILITY FOR INJURIES TO HUMAN BEINGS.

a. General Principles.

Generally.—A person who keeps an animal accustomed to attack and bite mankind, with knowledge that it is so accustomed, is prima facie liable in an action at the suit of any person attacked and injured by such animal, without any averment in the declaration of negligence or default in the securing or taking care of it. May v. Burdett, 9 Q. B. 101; 16 L. J., Q. B. 64; 10 Jur. 692.

The gist of the action is the keeping of the animal after knowledge of its mischievous propensities. Id.

Ownership, Necessity of.—In an action against a party for keeping a dog accustomed to bite mankind, it is not essential that the dog should be his; if he harbours the dog, or allows it to resort to his premises, that is sufficient. McKone v. Wood, 5 C. & P. 1.

Dog Properly Secured.—If an owner of a dog keeps him properly secured, but another person improperly lets him loose, and urges him to mischief, the owner is not liable. Fleming v. Orr, 2 Macq. H. L. Cas. 14; 1 W. R. 339.

Proof, therefore, that the dog of A. has killed the sheep of B., will not entitle B. to recover compensation from A., for, consistently with such proof, the dog may have been kept properly secured by A., and may have been improperly let loose and urged to mischief by a third person, without the knowledge and even against the express prohibition of A. Id.

Dog for Protection at Night.—No action lies for an injury arising from the defendant letting loose a dog in his own premises for their protection at night. Brock v. Copeland, 1 Esp. 203.

Animals Naturally Fierce.—A person keeping an animal of a fierce nature is bound so to keep it that it shall not commit injury; when, therefore, such an animal does an injury, the owner is liable, though shewn that it had never evinced any fierceness; but evidence of its tameness was received, under particular circumstances, in reduction of damages. Besozzi v. Harris, 1 F. & F. 92.

Accidental Injury—Scienter.—Where a horse strays on a highway, and, without apparent reason, kicks a child, no action will lie against the owner of the horse, unless he knew that the horse was likely to commit such an act. Cox v. Burbidge, 17 C. B., N. S. 245; 32 L. J., C. P. 89; 9 Jur., N. S. 970; 11 W. R. 435.

b. Proof of Knowledge of Mischievous Propensities.

i. As to Nature of Animal.

In an action for keeping a mischievous dog, by which the plaintiff's child was bitten, a report that it had been before bitten by a mad dog is evidence that the defendant knew him to be mischievous. Jones v. Perry, 2 Esp. 482.

It is not sufficient to shew that the dog was of a savage disposition, and usually tied up, and that the defendant promised to make a pecuniary satisfaction to the plaintiff after he had been bitten by the dog. Beck v. Dyson, 4 Camp. 198.

In an action for negligently keeping a dog, proof that the defendant had warned a person to beware of the dog, lest he should be bitten, is evidence to go to a jury, of the allegation that the dog was accustomed to bite mankind. Judge v. Cox, 1 Stark. 285.

Proof that the dog is of a furious disposition, and had bitten cattle, is no evidence of the defendant's scienter; but a promise by the owner of the dog, on being informed of the injury it had done, to make compensation, is some evidence of it, to go to the jury, but of the slightest degree. Thomas v. Morgan, 2 C. M. & R. 496; 4 D. P. C. 223; 1 Gale, 172; 5 Tyr. 1085.

An averment in a declaration that the defendant's dogs were accustomed to worry and bite sheep and lambs, is not supported by proof that the dogs were of a ferocious and mischievous disposition, and that they had frequently attacked men. Hartley v. Harriman, 1 B. & A. 620; N. C. nom. Hartley v. Halliwell, 2 Stark. 212; Holt. 617.

Action for an injury done to the plaintiff by the defendant's bull. The plaintiff whilst walking along the public street, wearing a red handkerchief, was attacked and injured by the bull, which was being driven along the street. The defendant stated, after the accident, that the red handkerchief was the cause of the injury, for that he knew the bull would run at anything red. He also stated on another occasion that he knew that a bull would run at anything red:—Held, that this was evidence for the jury in support of the averment of the scienter. Hudson v. Roberts, 6 Ex. 679; 20 L. J. Ex. 299.

In an action to recover damages for an injury sustained from the bite of a dog, it is not necessary to shew that the dog was accustomed to run about, and shew a disposition to snap at and bite everybody; but it will be sufficient if the dog was accustomed from time to time to bite people under circumstances which would not provoke a dog of good temper. Charlwood v. Greig, 3 C. & K. 46.

In an action for knowingly keeping a fierce and mischievous dog, which had bitten or wounded the plaintiff, it is necessary to prove that he has injured the plaintiff, and is used to injure people, and a mere habit of bounding upon and seizing persons, not so as to hurt or injure them, though causing some annoyance and trivial accidental damage to clothes, would not sustain the action; and the dog may be brought into court, and shewn to the jury to assist them in judging of his temper and disposition. Line v. Talyor, 3 F. & F. 731.

ii. As to Knowledge of Owner.

Knowledge of Servant, is Knowledge of Master.—If the owner of a dog appoints a servant to keep it, the servant's knowledge of the dog's ferocity is the knowledge of the master. Baldwin v. Casella, 7 L. R., Ex. 325; 41 L. J., Ex. 167; 26 L. T. 707; 21 W. R. 16.

Sufficiency of.—In order to fix a defendant with knowledge of the ferocious nature of a dog of which he was the owner, and which had bitten the plaintiff, two persons who had upon previous occasions (one of them twice) been attacked by it were called to prove that they had gone to the defendant's public-house and made complaint to two persons who were behind the bar serving customers, and that one of them had also complained to the barmaid. There was, however, no evidence that these complaints were communicated to the defendant; nor was it shewn that either of the two men spoken to had the general management of the defendant's business or had the care of the dog:—Held, by Lord Coleridge, C. J., and Keating, J. (Brett, J., dissentiente), that there was evidence of scienter to go to the jury. Applebee v. Percy, 9 L. R., C. P. 647; 43 L. J., C. P. 365; 30 L. T. 785; 22 W. R. 704.

In an action for an injury inflicted by the bite of a dog, in order to establish the scienter, it was proved that the wife of the defendant (who was a milkman) occasionally attended to his business, which was carried on upon premises where he kept the dog, and that a person had gone there and made a formal complaint to the wife, for the purpose of its being communicated to her husband, of the dog having bitten such person's nephew:—Held, that there was evidence of the husband's knowledge of the dog's propensity to bite. Gladman v. Johnson, 36 L. J., C. P. 153; 15 L. T. 476; 15 W. R. 313.

Although, in an action for injuries resulting from the bite of a dog, notice to the wife of the savage nature of the dog will be sufficient evidence of the scienter to fix the husband; yet the converse does not hold, and a notice to the husband will not, taken alone, be sufficient proof of the scienter to render the wife liable after her husband's death. Miller v. Kimbray, 16 L. T. 360.

A person using a railway station, through which there was a public right of way, was bitten by a dog which was not the property of the company, and there was no evidence that it was seen by the servants of the company till immediately before the accident, when it went into the signal-box, and was kicked out by the signal-man. There was evidence that a dog was on the platform, and attempted to bite a lady about an hour previously; but though this was mentioned to a porter, it did not appear that the dog was pointed out to him, or that he saw it:—Held, that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the company or their servants. Smith v. Great Eastern Railway Company, 2 L. R., C. P. 4; 36 L. J., C. P. 22; 15 L. T. 246; 15 W. R. 131.

A passenger by a steam-boat company having gone to their premises for the purpose of inquiring for his luggage, found them closed, but was directed to inquire at other premises of the company close at hand; whither he went, and while there was bitten by a dog of the company, chained up round an angle of the building, so as to be previously out of sight of the passenger. The dog had, to the knowledge of persons in the employ of the company (but who had no control over their business, or authority with respect to the dog), previously bitten another person:—Held, that assuming the company to be aware of the dangerous nature of the dog, they were liable in damages, but that there was no evidence of a scienter to enable the passenger to maintain his action. Stiles v. Cardiff Steam Navigation Company, 33 L. J., Q. B. 310; 10 Jur., N. S. 1199; 10 L. T. 844; 12 W. R. 1080.

Corporations.—With respect to questions of scienter, there is no difference between a corporation and an individual; and whatever is notice to a person competent to receive it, is notice to the corporation. Id.

c. Negligence without Proof of Scienter.

Sufficiency of.—Upon a reference of all matters in difference without pleadings, the arbitrator found that the defendant had been guilty of negligence in that his two greyhounds, coupled together, rushed against the plaintiff on a high road, knocked him down, and broke his leg:—Held, that this finding was good in law, although there was no evidence of a scienter. Jones v. Owen, 24 L. T. 587.

In an action by the plaintiff for injuries sustained by the kick of a horse while the plaintiff was, by the defendant's invitation, attending a sale in the defendant's yard, which was used for the sale of horses by auction, the only evidence to charge the defendant was as follows: the plaintiff was walking up the yard behind a row of spectators who were watching a horse then on sale. The horse was being led with a halter by a servant of the defendant's down a lane formed by the line of spectators on one side, and a blank wall on the other, there being no barrier between the spectators and the horse, and when the horse was about ten yards from the plaintiff (the crowd of spectators then being between them) another servant of the defendant's standing on the wall side of the lane, suddenly whipped the horse to make him trot and shew his paces, the consequence being that the horse swerved into and through the crowd, who made way for him, and, lashing out, kicked the plaintiff. No evidence beyond this was given as to the nature of the blow, of the character of the horse, or of the manner in which he was led, nor was any evidence given to shew that it was usual, in the case of horse sales of this description, to erect a barrier between the horses and the spectators:—Held, that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the defendant's servants which should have been submitted to the jury. Abbott v. Freeman, 35 L. T. 783—C. A. Reversing 34 L. T. 544.

d. Persons not Entitled to Sue.

Trespassers.—A party, who is bitten by a dog in consequence of being himself on the owner's land on which he is not entitled to go, can maintain no action for the injury. Sarch v. Blackburn, M. & M. 505; 4 C. & P. 297.

Contributory Negligence.—Nor, if the injury arises from his own carelessness, with knowledge of the danger. Id.

Evidence of.—But if he has no means of knowing the danger, and is not otherwise in fault, he may recover, although the owner has attempted to give notice; therefore, it is no answer to such action, that a printed notice was put up, if it appears that the plaintiff could not read. Id.

If no suspicion is thrown upon the plaintiff by the defendant in such a case, it may be taken that he had good cause for being on the defendant's premises, provided the dog is put in a place forming one entrance to the house of the defendant, although there may be other entrances to the house of a more public description, by which the plaintiff might have proceeded. Id.

In an action for not sufficiently securing a fierce dog kept by the defendant, and by which the plaintiff was bitten, the plaintiff may recover, notwithstanding he had on a previous day been warned against going near the dog, if the jury thinks that the accident was not occasioned by the plaintiff's own carelessness and want of caution. Curtis v. Mills, 5 C. & P. 489.

In an action for an injury by a vicious bull, the plaintiff recovered, although it appeared that the bull was attracted by a cow in a particular state, which the plaintiff was driving past the field in which the bull was, and that the plaintiff first struck the bull on the head to drive him away from the cow. Blackman v. Simmons, 3 C. & P. 138.

2. FOR INJURIES TO ANIMALS.

a. Principle of.

Extension to Horses.—The 28 & 29 Vict. c. 60, s. 1, which makes the owner of a dog liable in damages for injury done to any cattle or sheep by his dog without proof of a previous mischievous propensity in the dog, includes horses in the term "cattle." Wright v. Pearson, 4 L. R., Q. B. 582; 38 L. J., Q. B. 312; 20 L. T. 849; 17 W. R. 1099; 10 B. & S. 723.

Trespass by Horse—Damages.—The defendant's horse having injured the plaintiff's mare by biting and kicking her through the fence separating the plaintiff's land from the defendant's:—Held, that there was a trespass by the act of the defendant's horse, for which the defendants were liable, apart from any question of negligence on their part:—Held, secondly, that the damage to the plaintiff's mare was not too remote. Ellis v. Loftus Iron Company, 10 L. R., C. P. 10; 44 L. J., C. P. 24; 31 L. T. 483; 23 W. R. 246.

Liability in Agisting Cattle.—A man who receives beasts to agist on a contract to take reasonable care, which beasts are afterwards injured by an animal mansuetæ naturæ, is not exempt from liability merely on the ground that he did not know the animal to be ferocious. All the circumstances taken together may shew a want of reasonable care nevertheless, and if so, he will be liable. Smith v. Cook, 1 Q. B. D. 79; 45 L. J., Q. B. 122; 33 L. T. 722; 24 W. R. 206.

The rule requiring proof of scienter in cases of injuries by animals mansuetæ naturæ, is an artificial rule which ought not to be extended. Ib.

Damages.—But if a horse, through the neglect of the owner in not keeping his fences properly repaired, strays out of the field in which it is feeding into the field of an adjoining occupier, and there gets amongst his horses and kicks one in such a way as to cause its death, such owner is liable for the injury which his horse has done, and it is not a too remote consequence of the owner's negligence; neither is it incumbent on the plaintiff to shew that the defendant knew his horse to be vicious. Lee v. Riley, 34 L. J., C. P. 212; 11 Jur., N. S. 527; 12 L. T. 388; 13 W. R. 751.

Worrying Game Birds, reared as Tame Ones.]

—An action lies against the owner of a dog, who, knowing the animal to have a propensity for chasing and destroying game, permits it to be at large, and the dog, in consequence, goes into the plaintiff's wood, and chases and destroys young pheasants which are being reared there under domestic hens. Read v. Edwards, 17 C. B., N. S. 245; 34 L. J., C. P. 31; 11 L. T. 311.

3. JUSTIFYING SHOOTING OR DESTROYING.

a. Protection of Property.

If a defendant justifies shooting a dog, because the dog was worrying his fowl, and could not otherwise be prevented, he must prove that the dog was in the act of worrying the fowl at the very moment he shot him. Janson v. Brown, 1 Camp. 41.

The owner of sheep in a field which had been worried by a dog, shot the dog when in another field at some distance off:—Held, in an action by the owner of the dog, that the defendant was not justified in the act of shooting, as it was not done in the protection of his property. Wells v. Head, 4 C. & P. 568.

In an action for shooting the plaintiff's dog, the defence was that the defendant had put up a notice that dogs trespassing on his land would be shot:—Held, that such notice did not warrant the defendant in shooting the dog. Corner v. Champneys, 2 Marsh. 584.

The servant of the owner of an ancient park may justify shooting a dog that is chasing the deer, although such shooting may not be absolutely necessary for the preservation of the deer; and the servant may justify the shooting, although the dog may have not been chasing deer at the moment when it was shot, if the chasing of the deer and the shooting the dog were all one and the same transaction. Protheroe v. Mathews, 5 C. & P. 581.

b. Protection of Person.

To justify shooting another's dog, it is not sufficient to shew that the dog was of a ferocious disposition, and was at large. To justify shooting him he must be actually attacking the party at the time; therefore, where the defendant was passing the plaintiff's house, and the plaintiff's dog ran out and bit the defendant's gaiter, and on the defendant turning round and raising his gun, the dog ran away, and he shot the dog as he was running away:—Held, that he was not justified in so doing. Morris v. Nugent, 7 C. & P. 572.

A., a hawker, went to the house of B. to sell goods, and a dog of B.'s coming out of the house, A. knocked out one of its eyes, for which B.'s wife caused A. to be apprehended:—Held, that it was for the jury to say whether A. struck the dog for his own preservation and fairly to protect himself, or whether it was a wilful and malicious trespass on his part. Hanway v. Boulton, 4 C. & P. 350; 1 M. & Rob. 15.

c. Poisoning.

The placing of poisoned flesh in an enclosed garden, for the purpose of destroying a dog which was in the habit of straying there, is not an offence punishable under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 41. But semble, that it is within 27 & 28 Vict. c. 115, s. 2. Daniel v. Jones, 2 C. P. D. 351.

4. PLEADINGS IN ACTIONS BEFORE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

Necessary Allegations.]—A declaration for an injury to plaintiff's wife by a ram, alleged that the defendant wrongfully and injuriously kept it, knowing it to be prone and used to attack and injure mankind:—Held, that the declaration was not bad, for not averring that the defendant negligently kept the ram. Jackson v. Smithson, 15 M. & W. 563; 4 D. & L. 45; 15 L. J., Ex. 311.

Effect of "Not Guilty."]—In an action for injury done to the plaintiff's sheep by a ferocious dog, kept by the defendant, he knowing it to be of ferocious and mischievous disposition, not guilty puts in issue the ferocity of the dog and the scienter, these matters forming the substance of the charge. Curd v. Case, 5 C. B. 622; 5 D. & L. 509; 17 L. J., C. P. 124; 12 Jur. 247; S. P., Hogan v. Sharpe, 7 C. & P. 755.

The allegation of duty in the defendant to use due and reasonable care and precaution in keeping the animal is an immaterial allegation. Ib.

Material Pleas.]—The allegations in a plea to an action for shooting a dog, that he attacked the defendant, and was accustomed to attack and bite mankind, are both material, and must be proved. Clark v. Webster, 1 C. & P. 104.

Where the defendants justified the shooting the plaintiff's dog, by pleading that he attacked them, and that "he was accustomed to attack and bite mankind," the plaintiff may call witnesses to prove the general quietness of the dog. Ib.

C. ANIMALS CAUSING INFECTION.

1. PRINCIPLE OF LIABILITY.

A declaration stating that the defendant knowingly delivered a glandered horse to the plaintiff to be put with his horse without telling him it was glandered; whereby the plaintiff, not knowing it was glandered, was induced to and did put it with his horse, per quod his horse died, is a good declaration, though no concealment or fraud or breach of warranty is averred. Penton v. Murdock, 22 L. T. 371; 18 W. R. 382.

An action will lie to recover damages sustained by the negligence of servants having the care of cattle which they know to be suffering from an infectious disease in allowing such cattle to intermingle with other cattle. Earp v. Faulkner, 34 L. T. 284; 24 W. R. 774.

2. EVIDENCE OF SCIENTER.

Upon the trial of such an action it was proved that the condition of the cattle was known to the servants of the defendants at the time the cattle came into contact with those of the plaintiff, and that shortly before the defendants had been convicted at the petty sessions for allowing their cattle, infected with the foot and mouth disease, to be at large in a field insufficiently fenced. The certificate of such conviction was tendered and received, and the jury found in favour of the plaintiff:—Held, that the knowledge of their servants was sufficient to make the defendants responsible, and that there was evidence of negligence; that the certificate was improperly received in evidence, but this was cured by Ord. XXXIX. r. 3, of the Judicature Act, 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, as no substantial miscarriage of justice had been thereby caused. Earp v. Faulkner, 34 L. T. 284; 24 W. R. 774.

A. bought a cow of B. on the assurance of the latter that he would warrant her, and that she had come off his father's farm. It proved to be a foreign cow; and a few days after the purchase she fell ill, and died, of what proved to be the cattle plague. Five other cows, which had been in the same shed, were attacked the same week, and eventually A. lost them as well. The symptoms in all the cases were alike:—Held, that as A. was induced to buy the cow through B.'s misrepresentation, the latter was answerable for the consequences which ensued by her coming in contact with other cattle. Mullett v. Mason, 1 L. R., C. P. 559; 35 L. J., C. P. 209; 12 Jur., N. S. 547; 14 L. T. 558; 14 W. R. 898; 1 H. & R. 779.

A.'s sheep, being diseased, got into B.'s field, where his sheep were grazing, and infected them with the disease. It did not appear how they got there. A., on being told of it, used expressions indicating knowledge that his sheep were diseased. In an action against him for suffering his sheep to go at large:—Held, that in the absence of negligence, proof of a scienter was necessary, and there was no sufficient evidence of it. Cooke v. Waring, 2 H. & C. 332; 32 L. J. Ex. 262; 9 L. T. 257.

3. WARRANTY OF.

The defendant sent pigs, infected with a contagious disease, for sale to a public market, which is an offence under s. 57 of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 70, repealed). The plaintiff bought the pigs, which infected other pigs in his possession, causing him great loss and expense. In an action for breach of warranty and false representation:—Held, that the mere act of exposing the pigs for sale in a public market was no evidence of an implied representation by the defendant that they were free from infection, or that he did not know them to be infected. Ward v. Hobbs, 3 Q. B. D. 150; 47 L. J., Q. B. 90; 37 L. T. 654; 26 W. R. 151—C. A. Affirmed by the House of Lords, 4 App. Cas. 13; 48 L. J., Q. B. 281; 40 L. T. 73; 27 W. R.

114. Reversing the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division, 2 Q. B. D. 331; 46 L. J., Q. B. 473; 36 L. T. 511; 25 W. R. 585.

4. JURISDICTION.

Justices.—On the hearing of an information, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 107, s. 4, for removing cattle without a licence, the magistrates, on the production of a licence, had no jurisdiction to inquire into the sufficiency of the evidence upon which it was granted. Stanhope v. Thoraby, 1 L. R., C. P. 423; 35 L. J., M. C. 182; 14 L. T. 332; 1 H. & R. 459.

The removal of an infected animal from one county to another county does not give the justices of the latter county jurisdiction to deal with the case. The offence is complete as soon as the animal has been removed from its place of location, and therefore the justices of the former county alone have power to hear the cause, or to punish the offender. Reg. v. Williams, 15 L. T. 290.

A. removed a load of horse litter from Middlesex into Hertford, and the justices of Hertford convicted him of the offence of removing dung likely to propagate infection:—Held, that the justices had exceeded their jurisdiction, inasmuch as the horse litter was not dung likely to propagate infection. Youngman v. Morris, 15 L. T. 276.

Construction of Order of Justices.—By an order of quarter sessions it was declared, that after a certain date no sheep, &c., should be "removed from any one farm or place in the county of Buckingham, to any other farm or place therein," except upon certain conditions:—Held, that the word "place" must be construed ejusdem generis with the word "farm," and that no violation of the order was committed by the removal of sheep from one part of a farm to another part of the same farm, even though in such removal a public highway had to be crossed. Eustace v. Sargent, 14 L. T. 552.

Orders in Council.—By an order in council made under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 107, s. 4, every inspector had power to cause to be cleansed and disinfected premises in which animals labouring under the cattle plague had been or might be, and every owner or occupier of such premises was to obey any order given by the inspector for that purpose, under a penalty of 20l. An inspector gave an order to the foreman of S., who resided at a distance, to disinfect certain premises, which order was disobeyed:—Semble, that he was not liable for the disobedience of the order by his foreman. Searle v. Reynolds, 7 B. & S. 704; 14 L. T. 518.

—Injury caused by Compliance with.—The statement of claim alleged that the plaintiff delivered certain pigs to the defendants, a railway company, to be carried from M. to L. for reward to the defendants, and first, that at the M. station the defendants placed the pigs in a certain pen, and that the defendants had so negligently kept the said pen, and so negligently permitted it to be covered with lime or some preparation thereof, that the pigs were injured; secondly, that it was the duty of the defendants to provide fit and proper pens, or other accommodation at the said station for keeping the said pigs until they should be carried by the defendants, and that the defendants neglected to provide fit and proper pens or other fit and proper accommodation during the period aforesaid, whereby the said pigs were injured; and thirdly, that at the request, and by the invitation of the defendants, the plaintiff, pending the delivery to and the receipt of the said pigs by the defendants for the purpose of being carried by them, placed the said pigs in a pen of the defendants at the said station at M., pending such delivery and receipt, and that the defendants so negligently kept the said pen for the reception and penning of the said pigs, and so negligently permitted the same to be covered with lime, or some preparation thereof, that by reason of the said pigs coming and being in contact with the said pen while so confined therein, they were injured. The statement of defence stated an order of the Lord Lieutenant in council, made on the 20th of September, 1878, under the provisions of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878, duly published in the Dublin Gazette, whereby it was inter alia ordered that every loading pen of a railway company should be disinfected before the using thereof, by the application to all parts of the loading pen, with which animals or their droppings had come in contact, of a coating of limewash, as in said order prescribed; and alleged that it was necessary for the defendants in the due and ordinary course of traffic, to pen the plaintiff's pigs, and that the defendants, in accordance with the provisions of the said order, carefully, and within a reasonable and proper time for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the said order, before using the pen in the statement of claim mentioned for the plaintiff's pigs, disinfected the said pen, and duly and carefully applied to the said parts thereof the said preparation of chloride of lime, and that the said pigs were injured by coming in contact with the said preparation, and not otherwise, and that, save by reason of the application of the said lime-wash, the said pen was in a fit and proper condition for the reception of and penning the said pigs; similar defences, mutatis mutandis, were pleaded to the second and third causes of action:—Held, on demurrer, that the statement of defence was bad. Shaw v. Great Southern & Western Railway Company, 8 L. R., Ir. 10—C. A.

III. CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

1. OFFENCES UNDER THE ACTS.

Using Animals sent to Slaughter-house.—The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 9, which imposes a penalty on any person who, having the management of any place for the purpose of slaughtering horses or other cattle, not intended for butcher's meat, shall use or permit to be used any horse or other cattle brought to such place for the purpose of being slaughtered, applies to private as well as to licensed slaughter-houses. Colam v. Hall, 6 L. R., Q. B. 206; 40 L. J., M. C. 100; 23 L. T. 802; 19 W. R. 563.

A man had the management of the kennels of a hunt, where there was a place used solely for the purpose of slaughtering horses sent as food for the hounds. He received a horse for that purpose and permitted him to be worked:—

Held, that he was guilty of an offence under this section. Id.

Working—Mens Rea.—In a colliery certain horses were worked while suffering from raw wounds. T. was an owner, and S. was the certificated manager, but neither was proved to be present or to have any notice or knowledge of the state of the horses:—Held, that the justices were wrong in convicting S. of illtreating the horses under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 92, s. 2, merely because he was certificated manager, and that some knowledge of the matter was an essential ingredient of that offence. Small v. Warr, 47 J. P. 20.

Baiting Animals—Coursing Rabbits.—A match took place between the owners of two dogs as to which could kill the greatest number of rabbits by coursing them. The match took place in a field containing an area of three acres, walled in so that the rabbits could not escape:—Held, that this was not baiting animals within the meaning of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 3. Pitts v. Millar, 9 L. R., Q. B. 380; 43 L. J., M. C. 96; 30 L. T. 328.

Neglecting to Provide Food and Water—Railway Company—Jurisdiction.—By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 70, s. 64 (repealed), a railway company is to provide food and water for cattle carried by them on the request in writing of the consignor or any person in charge thereof, and "if in the case of any animal such request is not made, so that the animal remains without a supply of water for thirty consecutive hours . . . the consignor and the person in charge of the animal shall each be deemed guilty of an offence against this act." By s. 103 a penalty is imposed on any person guilty of an offence, but it is not said how the penalty is to be recovered. By s. 109, for the purposes of proceedings under this act . . . every cause of complaint . . . shall be deemed to have arisen either in the place in which the same was actually committed or arose, or in any place in which the person charged or complained against happens to be. The appellant was the consignor of cattle from Kirby Stephen in Westmoreland to Colchester, to be carried over a railway upon a journey which lasted more than thirty hours. He did not make any request that the cattle should be supplied with water. The justices of Colchester issued a summons against him, he then being in Westmoreland, and, on his appearing to the summons, convicted him of an offence against s. 64:—Held, first, that the offence was within the summary jurisdiction of the justices. Johnson v. Colam, 10 L. R., Q. B. 544; 44 L. J., M. C. 185; 32 L. T. 725; 23 W. R. 697.

Held, secondly, that the conviction could not be sustained, for that the offence was completed before the cattle reached Colchester, the thirty hours having then expired; and the appellant, by appearing before the justices in obedience to their summons did not "happen to be" at Colchester, and within their jurisdiction. Id.

The appellant, a foreman to a dealer in foreign birds, sent some parrots from L. to D. by railway in a box without water. They were found at H., a station on the route, after ten hours' journey, suffering, as the respondent alleged, from want of water, which they drank eagerly when offered to them. Upon these facts the magistrate convicted the appellant, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 2, of torturing or causing to be tortured "domestic animals:"—Held, that the conviction was bad, on the grounds that there was no evidence of cruelty or that the parrots in question were "domestic animals" within the meaning of the statute. Swan v. Sanders (or Saunders), 50 L. J., M. C. 67; 44 L. T. 424; 29 W. R. 538; 45 J. P. 522; 14 Cox, C. C. 566.

— Impounding Animals.—The keeper of a common pound is not as such within the words of s. 5 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, "a person who impounds or confines, or causes to be impounded or confined," animals brought to his pound; he is, therefore, not under an obligation to provide such animals with food and water, nor subject to the penalty for neglecting to do so. Dargan v. Davies, 2 Q. B. D. 118; 46 L. J., M. C. 122; 35 L. T. 810; 25 W. R. 230.

Cruelty to Cocks.—A cock is a domestic animal within the 2nd and 29th sections of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92; and to ill-treat a cock is an offence within the 2nd section. Bridge v. Parsons, 3 B. & S. 382; 32 L. J., M. C. 95; 9 Jur., N. S. 796; 7 L. T. 784; 11 W. R. 424.

Cockfighting, what is.—To assist at a cock-fight elsewhere than in a place "kept or used for the purpose of fighting or baiting any bull, bear, badger, dog, cock, or other kind of animal, whether of domestic or wild nature," is no offence under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 3. Morley v. Greenhalgh, 3 B. & S. 374; 32 L. J., Q. B. 93; 9 Jur., N. S. 745; 7 L. T. 624; 11 W. R. 263; S. P., Clarke v. Haguer, 8 Cox, C. C. 324; 29 L. J., M. C. 105; 6 Jur., N. S. 273; 8 W. R. 363; 2 El. & El. 281; S. P., Coyne v. Brady, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 577.

Assisting at—Offence of.—The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 2, deals with offenders who, if the offence were a felony, would be principals in the first degree; s. 3, with those who would be accessories before the fact or principals in the second degree. Bates v. McCormick, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 577; 9 L. T. 174.

Cutting Cocks' Combs.—To perform an operation upon an animal which causes pain, is to cruelly ill-treat, abuse, or torture the animal within the meaning of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 2, unless that act is justified by showing that it was done for some lawful purpose, for some purpose legalised by custom, for the benefit of the animal itself, or for making it more servicable for the lawful use of man. Murphy v. Manning, 2 Ex. D. 307; 46 L. J., M. C. 211; 36 L. T. 592; 25 W. R. 540.

Cutting off the combs of cocks, which does in fact cause great pain, cannot be justified either on the ground that it is done for the purpose of cockfighting, or of winning prizes at an exhibition. Id.

Omitting to Kill.—The omission to kill an animal which has been lawfully wounded, is in great pain and incurable, is not an offence within s. 2 of the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1847 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 92). Powell v. Knights, 38 L. T. 607; 26 W. R. 721.

And the owner of a horse who, knowing it to be incurably diseased and in pain, merely omits to have it slaughtered, commits no offence within s. 2, and cannot be convicted of "cruelly ill-treating, abusing, or torturing" such animal by reason of such omission only. But if he keeps the animal in such a manner as that it is inevitably put to intense pain in moving about a field, in its efforts to graze in order to support its life, he thereby commits an act of cruelty and an offence under the act, and is guilty of "torturing or causing the animal to be tortured," as much as if he had actually tortured it with his own hand. Everitt v. Davies, 38 L. T. 360; 26 W. R. 332.

2. APPREHENSION OF OFFENDERS.

a. At request of Private Person.

If a constable is required by another person to take a third party into custody, for cruelty to a horse, not committed in the constable's own view, the constable, before taking the party into custody, should either enquire into all the particulars, or see the animal, so as to form a judgment as to what has really occurred. Hopkins v. Crowe, 7 C. & P. 373.

b. Notice of Action for.

If a person who had ill-treated a horse was apprehended by the direction of one who was neither the owner of the horse nor a peace officer, the person so causing the apprehension was not entitled to notice of action under the section of the repealed act. Hopkins v. Crowe, 7 C. & P. 373; 4 A. & E. 774; 2 H. & W. 21.

3. PROCEDURE.

a. Appeals.

By 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 25, an appeal is given in all cases where the sum adjudged to be paid on any conviction shall exceed 2*l.* By sect. 14, the party convicted shall pay such penalty, damage or compensation as the justice shall adjudge, order or award, together with the costs of conviction, to be settled by such justice. A party was convicted, and adjudged to pay a penalty of 2*s.* 6*d.*, and 2*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* costs:—Held, that the sum adjudged to be paid on conviction referred to the penalty, and did not include the costs; and that, therefore, the party had no right of appeal. Reg. v. Warwickshire (Justices), Ward, In re, 25 L. J., M. C. 119; 2 Jur., N. S. 930; 6 El. & Bl. 837.

b. Jurisdiction of Superior Court.

By the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 26, no conviction under the authority of the act, nor any order, judgment or proceeding relative thereto, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any of her Majesty's superior courts of record:—Held, that this enactment precluded the court from entertaining a case stated by justices for the opinion of the court.

IV. BEQUEST FOR THE BENEFIT OF ANIMALS.

Validity.]—A bequest for founding and upholding an institution for investigating, studying, and curing maladies of quadrupeds or birds useful to man, and for providing a superintendent or professor to give free lectures to the public, is good as a charitable legacy. University of London v. Farrow, 23 Beav. 159; 25 L. J. Ch. 70; 2 Jur., N. S. 1125. Affirmed on appeal, 1 De G. & J. 72; 26 L. J., Ch. 430; 3 Jur. N. S. 421.

1. NATURE AND VALIDITY OF.

Satisfaction by Periodical Payments.]—An annuity can only be where the principal is irrevocably gone, and is to be satisfied by periodical payments. Winter v. Mousley, 2 B. & A. 802.

When Determinable upon the Death of a Grantee—Rights of Administrator.]—Devises in tail male granted an annuity for twenty-one years, if they should so long live, to the remainderman, and in case of his death to his children, or if he had none to his wife. The remainderman, his wife and child, died during the term:—Held, that the deed was not an absolute grant of an annuity for twenty-one years, but was determinable by the death of the remainderman, his child and wife; and, therefore, that the administrator of the remainderman and his child could not recover the arrears of the annuity in respect of either of his intestates. Barford v. Snuckey, 5 D. & R. 118; 8 Moore, 88; 2 R. & B. 333; 1 Bing. 225.

A grant of an annuity for life, charged upon land in which the grantor has only a chattel interest, will enure as a grant during the term if the cestui que vie shall so long live. Saffery v. Elgood, 3 N. & M. 346; 1 A. & E. 191.

A grantee, by deed of settlement on marriage, of an annuity charged upon lands, in which deed the grantor (there being no fraud) declares himself entitled in fee simple to the lands charged, may treat such declaration as a covenant, and on it afterwards appearing that the grantor had really only a life estate, may proceed against his estate to obtain payment of the arrears of this annuity. Monypenny v. Monypenny, 9 H. L. Cas. 114; 31 L. J., Ch. 269.

By Commissioners out of Rates—Personal Liability.]—A grant of an annuity by five commissioners named in a local act, in these words: "We, five, &c., do grant unto A. an annuity of £—, out of the rates granted and to arise by virtue of this act," according to the form prescribed in the act, does not raise any personal liability in the grantors, as on a contract, the act empowering any five to be a quorum. Cano v. Chapman, 1 N. & P. 104; 5 A. & E. 647; 2 H. & W. 355.

Duration of—Fund set apart—Liability of Grantor.]—By a marriage settlement, property of the wife was settled upon the usual trusts for the wife for life, with remainder to the husband for life, with remainder to the children of the marriage. By articles of agreement of even date, which recited the settlement, the father of the husband agreed to pay 350*l.* every year during the life of his son, and in case the wife should survive the husband, "then to continue the yearly payment to the trustees of the settlement for the purposes thereof:"—Held, that this created a liability on the part of the father to pay a perpetual annuity of 350*l.*; and 11,666*l.* consols which had been set apart out of the father's estate to answer the annuity, were ordered (on the death of the son leaving his wife surviving) to be transferred to the trustees of the settlement to be held upon the trusts thereof. Dawson v. Robinson, 25 L. T. 486.

By a marriage settlement three denominations of land—one a freehold and the other two chattels real—were charged, without any words of limitation, with the yearly sum of 70*l.* for E. W. (the intended wife) and her assigns, in case she should survive her husband, with power of distress; and if the settlor and E. W. should die leaving one or more sons of the marriage, charged, without any words of limitation, with 70*l.* for the elder son, "payable in like manner, &c., as it ought to be paid to E. W.," with like power of distress; the freehold estate having expired and the chattel interest in one denomination having been evicted:—Held, that the annuity created for the elder son was for the life of the annuitant only. Gillman, In re, 10 Ir. R., Eq. 92.

Death of Cestui que Trust—Liability of Devisee in Trust.]—An obligor of a bond without penalty, conditioned for payment to A. during her life of 20*l.* a year, bequeathed to his wife 30*l.* a year for her life, and devised to the defendant all his freehold messuages in trust, to educate his son until twenty-one, and to account for profits at that time; provided that if his wife should be living when his son attained full age, the devisee should retain and hold in trust such of his estates as would secure to his wife the 30*l.* a year. The wife died during his lifetime, and he afterwards died, leaving his son surviving, who afterwards died under age:—Held, that the estate of the devisee ceased on the death of the son, and that the devisee was not liable to A. for any arrears of her annuity which had accrued due since his death, although the rents and profits exceeded the annuity. Morrant v. Gough, 1 M. & R. 41; 7 B. & C. 206.

Determination of Value.—A. granted a life annuity of 139*l.* for five years secured on fee simple lands, and after that period the annuity was to be increased in value to 199*l.* :—Held, that in determining the annual value, under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 10, the land must be considered as charged with the larger annuity. Thompson v. Cartwright, 33 Beav. 178; 33 L. J. Ch. 234; 9 Jur., N. S. 940; 9 L. T. 138; 11 W. R. 1091. Affirmed on appeal, 2 De G., J. & S. 10; 9 Jur., N. S. 1215; 9 L. T. 431; 12 W. R. 116.

An owner of the land, for the purpose of raising money for another, charged it with payment of the annuity, but did not make himself personally liable :—Held, that he was a grantor of the annuity. Id.

Reduction of—When Trustees entitled to.—By the Lee River Navigation Improvement Act, 1850 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 109), s. 76, it is enacted, that "it shall be lawful for the trustees from time to time to pay and allow to any officer or servant of the trustees whose services may, from any other cause than that of misconduct, be no longer required by the trustees, such annuity or other allowance as, having regard to length of service and all the other circumstances of the case, may, in the judgment of the trustees, be reasonable and proper," and to pay the same out of moneys in their hands by virtue of their special acts : under this section the trustees, by resolution not under seal granted to their clerk, upon his resignation of his office, an annuity of 300*l.* a year :—Held, that the trustees were entitled afterwards to reduce the amount of the annuity. Marchant v. Lee Conservancy Board, 9 L. R., Ex. 60; 43 L. J., Ex. 44; 30 L. T. 367—Ex. Ch.

Valuation of—Provable in Liquidation—Annuity payable to Wife under Separation Deed.—By a separation deed between a husband and wife the husband covenanted with trustees to pay to them an annuity of 350*l.*, during the joint lives of himself and his wife, for her benefit. The annuity was made determinable in case the wife should not lead a chaste life; in case the husband and wife should resume cohabitation; and in case the marriage should be dissolved in respect of anything done, committed, or suffered by the other party after the date of the deed. The annuity was to be proportionally diminished in the event of the wife becoming entitled to any income independent of the husband exceeding 350*l.* a year. After the execution of the deed the husband filed a liquidation petition :—Held, that the value of the annuity was capable of being fairly estimated, and was provable in the liquidation. Neal, Ex parte, Batey, In re, 14 Ch. D. 579; 43 L. T. 264; 28 W. R. 875—C. A.

Principal Grantor—and Surety—distinguished.—By a deed, in consideration of a sum of money therein stated to be paid to L., E., M., and M., L. granted to D. and H. an annuity for three lives, charged upon his estate; and L., E., M. and M. covenanted to pay the annuity, with a proviso for repurchase by them or any or either of them. And they executed a joint and several bond and warrant of attorney to confess judgment on the bond, the judgment to be as a further security for the annuity, and to be entered forthwith against L. and E. but not against M. and M. until default in payment, and execution not to be entered on the judgment against L. and E. until the annuity should be forty days in arrear; and E., for further securing the annuity, agreed, in the event of not becoming the purchaser of L.'s estate in twelve months, to assign, at L.'s expense, a mortgage which E. held on it, and also to procure the guarantee of a competent person for payment of the annuity :—Held, that E. was a principal grantor of the annuity, and not a surety. Hollier v. Eyre, 9 C. & Fin. 1.

The question, whether the person is principal or surety in the grant of an annuity, is to be determined on the terms of the instruments; no extraneous evidence is admissible for that purpose. Nichols v. Jones, 36 L. J., Ch. 554.

Infancy of Grantor—Effect of.—The several covenant of a grantor of an annuity is not avoided by the infancy of another who grants in the same deed. Haw v. Ogle, 4 Taunt. 10; S. P., Gillow v. Lillie, 1 Scott, 597; 1 Bing. N. C. 695; 1 Hodges, 160.

Cesser on Married Man living apart from Wife.—A proviso annexed to the grant of an annuity for its cesser on the annuitant, a married man, living apart from his wife, is void. Nicholl v. Jones, 36 L. J., Ch. 554.

Nature of, under a Will—Legacy Duty.—A lady, who was entitled to one-third share of an annuity charged on land in England for the lives of herself and her two sisters, and the longest liver of the three, died domiciled in Hungary, having by her will given all her personal estate to trustees upon trust :—Held, that the annuity was an estate "pur autre vie, applicable by law in the same manner as personal estate," within the Legacy Duty Act, 36 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 20, but that though applicable by law in the same manner as personal estate, it continued to be, by the common law of England, real estate, and therefore was not exempted from the payment of legacy duty by the fact of the testatrix having had a foreign domicile. Chatfield v. Berchtoldt, 7 L. R., Ch. 192; 41 L. J., Ch. 255; 26 L. T. 267; 20 W. R. 401.

Liability to Attachment.—A plaintiff had recovered judgment against the defendant in an action of detinue, which judgment still remained unsatisfied. The defendant, under the will of her deceased husband, was entitled to an annuity for the maintenance of herself and her infant son :—Held, that the annuity was attachable in the hands of the trustees in whom it was vested, subject to an inquiry as to the proportion to be allowed for the maintenance of the son. Nash v. Pease, 47 L. J., Q. B. 766.

2. CONSIDERATION FOR.

Money lent and paid at different times for the education and advancement of the defendant, is a good consideration for the grant of an annuity. Kelf v. Ambrose, 7 T. R. 551.

A covenant by a husband to secure his wife an annuity during her life, in case she should survive him, is a sufficient consideration for a grant of an annuity from her father. Draycott, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 283.

But past seduction and cohabitation are not a good consideration to support an annuity. Braumont v. Reece, 8 Q. B. 483; 15 L. J., Q. B. 141; 10 Jur. 284.

A contract to grant an annuity, in consideration of the discontinuance of cohabitation and of the release of an alleged promise of marriage, is enforceable in equity. Keenan v. Handley, 2 De G., J. & S. 283; 10 Jur., N. S. 906; 10 L. T. 800; 12 W. R. 1021.

A., having seduced B., and she being enceinte by him, and living with him, he executed to her a deed whereby, in consideration of the release of a debt due by him to her uncle, he granted to her an annuity payable out of lands. The cohabitation continued for fourteen years, when they separated, and A. by testamentary papers alleged (as the fact was) that the consideration stated in the deed was fictitious, and endeavoured to deprive her of her annuity. B. swore that no agreement or stipulation for any future cohabitation was entered into or promised at the date of the deed, which was prepared solely by the solicitor of A., and without her knowledge or solicitation, and without her being aware of the intention of A.—Held, that the onus was on those impeaching the instrument, which was prima facie valid, to shew that it was given ex turpi causa; and the case being one in which B. would clearly be entitled to a premium pudicitiae, the deed was allowed to prevail over volunteers claiming under the will. Mowell v. Priece, 1 Jur., N. S. 494.

To an action for arrears of an annuity, it is no answer that it was granted in consideration of cohabitation with the plaintiff, unless she knew of the arrangement. Daniel v. Landen, 1 F. & F. 289.

Where a lunatic purchased of an insurance society and paid for two annuities for his life, the society at the time having no knowledge of his lunacy, and the purchase being a transaction in the ordinary course of human life, fair and of good faith on the part of the society, and in the usual course of their business:—Held, that the purchase money could not be recovered from the society by the personal relatives of the deceased lunatic. Molton v. Camroux, 4 Ex. 17; 18 L. J., Ex. 356.

3. FORFEITURE OF.

For Return of Consideration—under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141.—To make the grant of an annuity void under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 6, there must be such a return of consideration as to shew that the transaction was merely colourable; and therefore where a grantor, having received the consideration money, went with the grantee's son to his (the grantee's) bankers, and took up certain bills, that did not render the transaction void; nor would it have been void if a further sum had been paid for expenses. Foster v. Bonner, 8 L. T. 530; 11 W. R. 742.

Where a solicitor purchased an annuity from a person not previously his client, but was himself the only solicitor employed in the transaction, and charged the vendor with the costs of the deed, which were paid out of the purchase-money immediately after the completion of the purchase:—Held, that there was no such retainer or return of any portion of the purchase-money as avoided the annuity. Edwards v. Williams, 32 L. J., Ch. 763; 8 L. T. 477; 11 W. R. 561—L. J.

A covenant for payment of an annuity to a feme sole until she should do any act whereby the same, or any part thereof, should be vested, or become liable to be vested, in any other person:—Held, that marriage did not work a forfeiture of the annuity. Bonfield v. Hassall, 32 Beav. 217; 32 L. J., Ch. 475; 9 Jur., N. S. 453; 7 L. T. 776; 11 W. R. 297.

Misstatement as to Age—though not Intentional.—In 1843, a grant of an annuity was made by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, under 10 Geo. 4, c. 24, to a life assurance company on the life of C., who was certified by the company to be of the age of sixty-four years. After his death, in 1869, it was discovered that a misrepresentation of his age had been made by the company:—Held, that the commissioners were entitled to have the contract declared void ab initio, although the misrepresentation was not intentional; and the money paid on both sides was ordered to be repaid with interest at 4 per cent. Att. Gen. v. Ray, 9 L. R., Ch. 397; 43 L. J., Ch. 478; 29 L. T. 373; 22 W. R. 498; affirming the decision of Hall, V.-C., 43 L. J., Ch. 321; 22 W. R. 361.

The 10 Geo. 4, c. 24, contained a clause empowering the commissioners to rectify any contract in case of the discovery of an accidental error:—Held, that this clause was not compulsory, and that the court had no jurisdiction to interfere with the discretion of the commissioners if they declined to exercise their power of rectification, and claimed to have the contract set aside. Id.

By charging Annuity with Debts—What Amounts to.—Under a settlement, O. was entitled to a life interest in an annuity, with a clause of forfeiture if he should enter into a composition with his creditors, or charge, assign, or in any manner by way of anticipation, dispose of the annuity, or until anything should happen whereby it should vest or become liable to be vested in another person. O., being indebted to his bankers to a large amount, in pursuance of an agreement with them, gave the trustees a written authority to pay the annuity, as it should become due, to his bankers, who were to apply it partly in payment of interest and in reduction of the debt. It was alleged there was an agreement with the bankers that the authority should be revocable:—Held, that this occasioned a forfeiture of the life interest. Oldham v. Oldham, 3 L. R., Eq. 404.

By Association with a Person specially prohibited.—Under a proviso that an annuity should cease if a lady should associate, continue to keep company with, or cohabit, or criminally correspond with F.; all intercourse whatever, though the most innocent, is within the terms of the deed. Dormer (Lord) v. Knight, 1 Taunt. 417.

For Defective Memorial—Statute of Limitations.—The Statute of Limitations is no bar to an action to recover the consideration paid for an annuity, notwithstanding more than six years have elapsed since the date of the grant, where the grantor (having for some years paid the annuity without objection) has, within six years from the commencement of the action, elected to avoid the annuity by reason of a defective memorial. Cowper v. Godmond, 3 M. & Scott, 219; 9 Bing. 748.

A grantee of an annuity, which had been avoided for a defective memorial by the administratrix of the grantor, brought an action against the administratrix to recover the balance of the consideration money:—Held that the consideration money did not become money had and received until the avoidance of the annuity by the administratrix, and that it was therefore not money had and received by the intestate at all. Churchill v. Bertrand, 3 Q. B. 568; 2 G. & D. 548; 6 Jur. 855.

Action by Grantee—When Statute of Limitations no bar to.]—An annuity was granted in 1826, and paid regularly down to 1829. In 1842, a warrant of attorney by which it was secured was set aside by rule of court, but it did not appear on what ground it was so set aside:—Held, that the grantee was entitled to recover the consideration in an action for money had and received; and that the Statute of Limitations was no bar to such an action. Huggins v. Coates, 5 Q. B. 432; D. & M. 433; 13 L. J., Q. B. 46; 8 Jur. 334.

Action for money had and received. Plea, that the defendant granted an annuity in satisfaction. Replication, that it was not duly inrolled; that in an action to recover arrears of the annuity, the defendant pleaded the non-involment, and that the plaintiff elected to make it null and void, and thereupon discontinued:—Held, that the replication answered the plea, as it shewed that the deed had become null by the defendant's act, and consequently the plaintiff might recover the consideration for the annuity. Turner v. Brown, 4 D. & L. 201; 3 C. B. 157; 15 L. J., C. P. 223; 10 Jur. 811.

Conditional Grant—What is a Condition subsequent.]—A testator bequeathed an annuity or a yearly rent charge to the wife of his son "during her life, or so long as her conduct and behaviour should be discreet, and meet with the approbation of the testator's widow, or which, in case of her death, should be approved of by the survivor or survivors of his trustees." Semble, that this is a condition subsequent, the performance of which need not be averred by the party claiming to be entitled to the annuity. Wynne v. Wynne, 2 Scott, N. R. 278; 2 M. & G. 8; 9 D. P. C. 901.

On Insolvency.]—See BANKRUPTCY.

4. PROCEEDINGS TO SET ASIDE.

Application—How made.]—An application to set aside an annuity must be made bonâ fide on behalf of the grantor. Fuireloth v. Gurney, 1 D. P. C. 724; 9 Bing. 456, 622; 2 M. & Scott, 822, 827.

To induce the court to set aside a warrant of attorney given to secure an annuity, on the ground of an improper returning or retaining of part of the consideration money, the fact of such returning or retaining must be distinctly and unequivocally sworn to. Barber v. Thomas, 7 C. B. 612.

On a bill filed in equity to set aside a deed securing an annuity as being void by reason of the return of the consideration:—Held, that the burthen of proof was on the party to make out that there was a return of the consideration; and that if the consideration was actually paid to the grantor, the application of it by him in discharge of debts really due from him to the grantee would not be a return. Prenell v. Smith, 5 De G., Mac. & G. 167; 24 L. J., Ch. 750; 1 Jur., N. S. 1213.

5. ASSIGNMENT OF.

A testator bequeathed an annuity to his son A., payable quarterly, charging it upon his personal estate only, which, subject to the annuity, he bequeathed to his son B., whom he appointed his executor. The will proceeded, "I declare that the receipt of my son A., signed with his own hand after each of the payments shall have become due, shall be the only discharge which my executor shall be bound to accept for each of such payments; and that it shall be lawful for my executor to require that my son shall attend at the Town-hall in Nottingham to receive and give receipts for the annuity, and to suspend the payment until such requisition shall be complied with, from time to time, as my executor shall think proper:—Held, that, assuming the condition to be valid, there was nothing to prevent A. from assigning the annuity to a third person. Arden v. Goodacre, 11 C. B. 883; 21 L. J., C. P. 129.

6. CHARGING.

A judge, having made an order, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 14, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, charging an annuity, payable out of the Suitors' Fund by order of the Lord Chancellor, under 46 Geo. 3, c. 128, the court, considering it doubtful whether the order might not be enforced, left the question of its validity open, and discharged a rule nisi to set aside the order. Witham v. Lynch, 1 Ex. 391; 17 L. J., Ex. 13.

A judgment debtor was entitled, as sole executor and legatee under the will of B, to the arrears of a government annuity granted for the life of D. He was also entitled, as such executor and legatee, to a government annuity in the name of D., but granted for his own life:—Held, that neither were the arrears, nor was the annuity, chargeable under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 14. Taylor v. Turnbull, 4 H. & N. 495.

When attachable in the hands of Trustees.

—A plaintiff had recovered judgment against the defendant in an action of detinue, which judgment still remained unsatisfied. The defendant, under the will of her deceased husband, was entitled to an annuity for the maintenance of herself and her infant son:—Held, that the annuity was attachable in the hands of the trustees in whom it was vested, subject to an inquiry as to the proportion to be allowed for the maintenance of the son. Nash v. Pease, 47 L. J., Q. B. 766.

7. REGISTRATION.

Effect on Incumbrancer with Notice.]—A landowner, by deed in February, 1872, charged his land with two life annuities. He subsequently made several mortgages of the property by deeds, some of which recited the annuity deed. The annuity deed had not been registered as required by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, s. 12:—Held, by the Master of the Rolls, that the annuity deed, not being registered, was void as against all the subsequent incumbrancers, whether they had notice of it or not. But held, by the Court of Appeal, that as the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, s. 12, was in similar terms to the clauses in the Registry Acts, which had been decided not to make an unregistered conveyance void as against a subsequent purchaser who had notice of it, the legislature must be taken to have used the words in the later act in the sense given to them by those decisions, and that the annuities therefore were valid as against all the subsequent incumbrancers who took with notice of them, and against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor, Greaves v. Tufield, 14 Ch. D. 563; 43 L. T. 100; 28 W. R. 840—C. A.

8. INROLMENT.

It was the duty of the grantee of an annuity to inrol it, and he could not set up the want of inrolment against the grantor, although the statute declared that in case of non-inrolment the deed shall be void to all intents and purposes. Molton v. Camroux, 4 Ex. 17; 18 L. J., Ex. 356—Ex. Ch.

A deed did not require inrolment, as a grant of an annuity, unless the alleged grantor was a party to the instrument. Humphreys v. Jenkinson, 8 Ex. 684; 22 L. J., Ex. 250.

In an action on a bond for payment of 300*l.*, it appeared that before the marriage of A. with the defendant, the plaintiff, being entitled to the interest of 300*l.* for her life, to which principal A. was entitled on the plaintiff's death, and the plaintiff was entitled in the event of her surviving A., paid the 300*l.* to A. on condition that the defendant and A. would secure to her an annuity equal to the amount of such annual interest, at 4*l.* per cent.; and that, in pursuance of that agreement, they executed the bond as a security for the same:—Held, that this was not an annuity within 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, and therefore the grant of it did not require to be inrolled. Eratt v. Hunt, 2 El. & Bl. 374; 22 L. J., Q. B. 348; 17 Jur. 1028.

9. STAMPING.

A deed recited that B., who was beneficial lessee of salt works, in order to raise money for carrying them on, had contracted with C. to grant him an annuity of 1,050*l.* in consideration of 14,500*l.*; and that C. being unable to provide the sum himself, had entered into sub-contracts with seven other persons to take portions of the annuity, each advancing a part of the consideration-money; and reciting all these contracts and the payment by the different parties of their proportions of the 14,500*l.*, the deed contained a grant by B. to D. & E. of eight several annuities, making an annuity of 1,050*l.*, in trust for the persons advancing the money, with powers of distress:—Held, that the deed only required a stamp in respect of the aggregate sum paid to B. for the annuity of 1,050*l.*; and that it need not be the aggregate of the stamps required on each of the annuities into which it was divided. Hogarth v. Penny, 14 M. & W. 495; 14 L. J., Ex. 346.

10. PROCEEDINGS TO ENFORCE PAYMENT.

a. By Action.

For Service.—An action will lie for an annuity granted by the defendant to the plaintiff in consideration of faithful services for life. Hope v. Coleman, 2 Wils. 221.

When Annuity charged on Lands—Claim for Arrears no Action for Debt.—An action of debt does not lie for the arrears of an annuity issuing out of lands, and payable to the annuitant for life, although it is not stated in the declaration that the grantor had a freehold in the premises out of which it was payable; as it must be inferred that he had such an interest where nothing appears to the contrary. Kelly v. Clubbe, 6 Moore, 336; 3 B. & B. 130.

An action does not lie at common law, nor by 8 Ann. c. 14, for the arrears of an annuity or yearly rent devised payable out of lands to A. during the life of B., to whom the lands are devised for life, B. paying the same thereout, so long as the estate of freehold continues. Webb v. Jiggs, 4 M. & S. 113.

By deed certain lands were granted to H. and the defendant to the use and intent that the plaintiff should receive out of the land a clear yearly rent of 63*l.*, and H. and the defendant covenanted that they would well and truly pay the rent to the plaintiff:—Held, that an action of debt could not be maintained for arrears of the annuity, but that covenant was the proper remedy. Randall v. Rigby, 6 D. P. C. 630; 4 M. & W. 130.

— Action for Ejectment—when allowed.

Lands were devised in fee, charged with an annuity; and power was given to the annuitant to distrain, if the annuity was in arrear for twenty days after the day of payment, being lawfully demanded; power was also given, if it should be in arrear for forty days, to enter and enjoy the lands, and to take the profits, until the annuitant should be thereby paid and satisfied all the arrears, with all costs, or until the person entitled to immediate possession should pay all the arrears and costs:—Held, that upon the annuity being forty days in arrear, the annuitant might bring ejectment without any demand. Doe d. Blass v. Horsley, 1 A. & E. 766.

In ejectment, an annuity deed was relied on; it was not inrolled, but it contained a declaration or covenant by the grantor, that premises on which the annuity was secured were of more than sufficient annual value to answer and pay the annuity over and above all charges:—Held, that it was open to the grantor, notwithstanding, to give evidence that the premises were not of sufficient value to answer and pay the annuity, in order to avoid the deed. Doe d. Chandler v. Ford, 5 N. & M. 209; 1 H. & W. 378; 3 A. & E. 649.

When collusive—Defence of Executors.—In an action upon an annuity deed:—Held, that executors were estopped from pleading that the deed was made fraudulently and collusively between their testator and the plaintiff for the purpose of multiplying votes; and, subject to a secret trust and condition, that no estate or interest should pass beneficially to the plaintiff by the deed. Phillpotts v. Phillpotts, 10 C. B. 85; 20 L. J., C. P. 11.

— Effect of Right to Distrain.—The owner of an annuity charged upon land which is sufficient to answer the annuity has a right to distrain for it, and no other remedy. Sollory v. Leaver, 40 L. J., Ch. 398.

— Claim for a Receiver.—A bequest of an annuity to A. for life, followed by a general devise and bequest of real and personal estate, subject to the testator's debts and legacies, and "the annuity thereinbefore mentioned:"—Held, that the annuity was a legal rent-charge on the real estate, and that A. having his distress at law was not entitled to a receiver for the recovery of arrears. Sollory v. Leaver, 39 L. J., Ch. 72.

In Equity.—A settlor purported to grant an annuity out of land, and to grant a term of 100 years to a trustee to secure the annuity. At that time the settlor had not the legal estate, which was outstanding in mortgagees. The settlor died, devising to his three sons, who paid off the mortgage, and the mortgagees conveyed the estate to the uses of the will. The devisees then sold to a purchaser without notice of the annuity. The annuitant filed a bill against the trustee of the term and the purchaser to recover the annuity:—Held, that the annuitant had no remedy in equity against the purchaser, but might compel the trustee to proceed at law and establish his title, if any, against the purchaser. Clemow v. Geach, 6 L. R., Ch. 147; 40 L. J., Ch. 44.

A father bequeathed his business to trustees, to permit and suffer his son to carry on and manage the business upon condition that he should pay an annuity. The annuity was not paid, and the annuitant filed a bill against the son for the purpose of enforcing the performance of the condition. To this bill the son demurred for want of equity, on the grounds that he was not a trustee for the annuitant, but the beneficial owner of the business, and also for want of parties, submitting that the executor ought to be a party to the suit:—Held, that the condition was equivalent to a trust, and that the executor was not a necessary party. Rees v. Engelback, 12 L. R., Eq. 225; 40 L. J., Ch. 382; 24 L. T. 417; 19 W. R. 809.

b. By Administration.

Right of Annuitant to Administer.—An annuity was by will charged upon the general residue of the testator's estate. The annuity was not in arrear, but accounts, though asked for, had not been supplied until after the issue of the writ, and were still insufficient:—Held, that the annuitant was entitled to administration. Wollaston v. Wollaston, 7 Ch. D. 58; 47 L. J., Ch. 117; 37 L. T. 631; 26 W. R. 77.

Penalties.—An arbitrator awarded an annuity of 1,200*l.* to be paid by A. to B., and to be secured by the purchase of a government annuity; and in case it should not be secured within two months, a further sum of 100*l.* to be paid monthly until it was secured, as a penalty. A. paid the annuity and penalty for two years until his death. He died insolvent, and a creditors' suit had been instituted for the administration of his estate:—Held, that the annuitant could prove for the annuity and the penalty until the annuity should be secured.

Parfit v. Chambre, 15 L. R., Eq. 36; 42 L. J., Ch. 6; 27 L. T. 750; 21 W. R. 50.

The testator had procured some evidence as to the annuitant's age, but it was not perfect. The annuitant was formally required to perfect the evidence, but would not incur the expense unless it was shewn that the annuity would thereupon be purchased:—Held, that this was no default such as to prevent the penalty from running. Ib.

c. By Distress.

When right of, joined with other remedies.—Where an annuity is secured not only by a right of entry and distress, and by a right of entry and perception of the profits given to the grantee, but also by a term limited by the same deed to a trustee for him to raise arrears by devise, sale or mortgage, the rights of entry will not destroy the term, nor will the term defeat the right of entry: both kinds of remedies may co-exist. Doe d. Butler v. Kensington (Lord), 8 Q. B. 430; 15 L. J., Q. B. 153; 10 Jur. 153.

What may be seized.—A grantee of an annuity, charged by deed on premises, was empowered, if the annuity should be unpaid for twenty days, to enter upon the premises and distrain, and the distresses there found "to take, lead, seize, drive, carry away and impound, detain and keep, and sell and dispose of the same, in the same manner as the law directs in cases of rent in arrear:"—Held, that the grantee might, under this power, distrain hay and corn in the stack. Johnson v. Faulkner, 2 Q. B. 925; 2 G. & D. 184; 6 Jur. 833.

Where, in an avowry, a seisin by the grantor of the annuity of the premises at the time of the grant is stated, if the plaintiff relies on exemption from the distress by virtue of a demise prior to the grant, he must plead it. Ib.

Where not barred by a Demise.—T., seised for life, granted an annuity to W., and, to secure the annuity, in consideration of money granted, bargained, sold and demised to F. premises for a term of years, upon trust, in case the annuity should be in arrear, to raise the annuity by distress, or by sale or mortgage of the premises: afterwards T. granted another annuity to H., with a power of distress upon the same premises. H. distrained and avowed the taking for arrears of the annuity under his deed: the tenant set up the demise to F., but did not shew under whom he, the tenant, was in possession, or that F. had entered upon the premises, or had elected to treat the demise as operating by the Statute of Uses:—Held, that the demise to F. operated as at common law, and without an entry was no bar to the distress by H. Miller v. Green, 2 C. & J. 142; 8 Bing. 92.

Avowry for Rent—When Condition subsequent—Defence.—A defendant having avowed for rent in arrear, the plaintiff pleaded, that before the defendant had anything in the premises, F. was seised in fee, and by will gave to his wife an annuity (with power of distress) issuing out of the premises for life, if she should so long continue his widow, and should not live with any other man except a father, or brother or brothers. The plea alleged the death of F., without altering his will, whereby his widow became seised of the annuity, and continued so seised until the plaintiff, in order to avoid a distress for arrears of the annuity, paid her the rent:—Held, that the condition annexed by the will to the gift of the annuity was a condition subsequent, and therefore it was not necessary that the plea should aver the continuance of the widowhood. Brooke v. Spong, 15 M. & W. 153; 15 L. J., Ex. 74.

Grantee of a Rent-charge—Division of a Demand.—Replevin. Avowry that the avowant was entitled to a rent-charge payable half-yearly, and avows for one half-yearly payment. Plea, that before the seizure the avowant distrained in another part of the lands from which the rent issued for the same half-yearly payment, and took goods enough to satisfy the whole. Replication, that the first distress was for the half-yearly payment distrained for. Held, that the grantee of the rent-charge could not divide the demand, and distrain for part on one part of the land and part on the other. Owens v. Wynne, 4 El. & Bl. 579.

Statute of Limitations.—An annuity charged upon land by a devise must, since 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2, be sued or distrained for within twenty years. James v. Salter, 3 Bing., N. C. 544; 4 Scott, 168.

d. By other Means.

A rent-charge was secured on a house, with power, when in arrear, to enter and receive the rents until all arrears and all costs, charges and expenses occasioned by non-payment should be satisfied. The rent-charge being in arrear, the grantee entered, and the house being greatly dilapidated and untenanted, he repaired and let it:—Held, that the question whether the grantee of the rent-charge was entitled to be allowed the moneys expended by him in repairing the property, was one to be determined at law, and that if he was not entitled thereto at law, neither was he in equity. Hooper v. Cooke, 20 Beav. 639; 25 L. J., Ch. 62; 1 Jur., N. S. 949. Affirmed on appeal, 25 L. J., Ch. 467.

11. PAYMENT.

By Surety for Grantor.—Where A., as surety for the grantor of an annuity, executed a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, as a collateral security for the payment of the annuity, subject to a defence, that, after any default should be made by the grantor in payment of the annuity, the grantee might sue out execution upon such judgment against A. for such part of the annuity as should be due; and the annuity being in arrear, and the rents of the estates of the grantor, on which it was secured, being unpaid, the agent and trustee of the estates, who negotiated the annuity as between the grantor and grantee, advanced to the latter a sum of money in anticipation of the accruing rents, and deducted and retained a commission charged by him on the receipt and payment of annuities:—Held, that such advance must be considered as a payment on account of the grantor, as the principal; and that, on the insolvency of the latter, and the rents of his estates proving insufficient to satisfy the amount, the grantee could not resort to the surety to recover the whole of the arrears of the annuity due; as, whatever sum he had received from the agent on account of the annuity, operated to that extent to the extinguishment of the liability of the surety. Williamson v. Gould, 7 Moore, 579; 1 Bing. 234.

So where, upon the grant of an annuity, the agent who negotiated it as between the grantor and grantee, was appointed trustee and receiver of the rents of the estates of the grantor on which it was charged, and afterwards advanced money to the grantee out of his own funds, in anticipation of the receipt of the arrears from such estate, and debited the grantee with the usual commission charged by him on annuity payments:—Held, that, upon the eventual failure of the securities and insolvency of the grantor, the agent could not treat such an advance as a mere loan; but that it must be taken as a payment to the grantee in liquidation of the arrears of the annuity. Carroll v. Gould, 7 Moore, 621; 1 Bing. 191; Williamson v. Gould, 1 Bing. 190; 8 Moore, 109.

Assignment of Annuity by Grantor—no Release of Sureties.—Where a grantor of an annuity assigned it to A., together with all the securities, for a valuable consideration, part of which belonged to B., one of the co-sureties for payment of the annuity; and it was agreed by deed, between A. and B., that the former should retain out of the annual payments sufficient to pay him the principal advanced, with interest, and that when he should have been paid principal and interest the annuity should be for the benefit of B.:—Held, that the annuity did not thereby become extinguished, and that the co-sureties remained liable to contribution to A., although B. had assigned stock for further securing the payment of the annuity. Broune v. Lee, 9 D. & R. 701; 6 B. & C. 689.

By Surety—Action for Damages against Grantor—Amount of.—Where a grantor of an annuity had covenanted with his surety to pay the annuity, but had failed to do so, and the surety had in consequence been compelled to make the payments of the annuity as they fell due:—Held, that in action on the covenant by the surety against the grantor, the jury was at liberty to award as damages for the breach of covenant, not only the amount of the principal sums so paid, but also interest on such principal sums, and that, as the grantor had stated an account allowing interest on some previous payments, at the rate of 5l. per cent., the jury was at liberty to calculate the interest at the same rate. Petre v. Duncombe, 20 L. J., Q. B. 242; 15 Jur. 86.

Interest.—Interest on arrears of an annuity is valid since the repeal of the usury laws. Forde v. Tynte, 2 H. & M. 287; 10 Jur., N. S. 93.

To Husband of an Annuitant—Invalidity of.—An annuity was payable under a will to a woman during her life, and a proportionate part computed from the last day of payment to the date of her death was payable to her executors and administrators:—Held, that payment of this proportionate part to the husband of the annuitant, who never took out letters of administration to his wife, was not a good payment in law, and that the amount could therefore be recovered by the son of the annuitant, in administering her estate after the death of the husband, whose executor he also was. Mitchell v. Holmes, 8 L. R., Ex. 119; 42 L. J., Ex. 98; 28 L. T. 72; 21 W. R. 412.

Restraining Payment.—Under 5 Vict. c. 5, s. 4, an injunction may be obtained in a summary way to restrain the payment of a government annuity. Watts, Ex parte, 19 W. R. 400.

12. RECOVERY OF ARREARS.

When not Allowed—Right of Entry Unexercised.—In order to recover the arrears of an annuity, or of an apportioned part of it, upon the death of a tenant for life who has granted it during his life, with a power of entry, the right of entry must have been actually exercised; and a petition claiming against the estate of the tenant for life, payment of the arrears, and an apportioned part from the date of the death was, in the absence of such entry, dismissed. Paget v. Anglesey (Marquis), 17 L. R., Eq. 283; 43 L. J., Ch. 437; 29 L. T. 721; 22 W. R. 507.

Action upon a Bill—When right of Distress.—An uncle bequeathed leasehold property to his nephew, upon condition that he should pay out of the rents and profits an annuity of 70*l*. The annuity was paid for sixteen years, but for the half-yearly sum of 35*l*., due on the 15th of August, 1872, the nephew gave a cheque which was dishonoured, and the annuitant filed a bill on the 25th of November, 1872, for the sale of the property and for a receiver:—Held, that as the estate was amply sufficient to answer the annuity, he might have recovered the arrears by distress, or might have brought an action upon the dishonoured cheque; and the bill was dismissed. Kelsey v. Kelsey, 17 L. R., Eq. 495; 30 L. T. 82; 22 W. R. 433.

Appointment of a Receiver—Discretion of Court.—The court, in the exercise of its concurrent jurisdiction, decreed the appointment of a receiver to raise the arrears of an annuity charged on lands held for a term of years, where there were questions which could at least be raised in a court of law, which might interfere with the right of the plaintiff to recover. Beamish v. Austen, 9 Ir. R., Eq. 361.

Claim by cestui que trust—Lapse of Time no bar—Pension.—The Bombay Civil Fund was founded for the purpose of giving retiring annuities and pensions to the families of civil servants; it consisted of a government grant and a compulsory levy on the salaries of members. The contributions were received by government, and constituted a floating debt from the government; the fund was managed by a committee. In 1826, resolutions were passed, subject to the approval of the East India Company, giving further benefits to the widows and children of annuitants upon payment of one per cent. on the annuities. The approval of the East India Company was given in January, 1830. F., a subscriber to the fund, retired on an annuity in May, 1830, and paid what was necessary under the old rules to entitle him to the annuity. In June, 1830, the resolutions were again suspended. In February, 1834, F.

died, without having made any payment in respect of, or claim to be entitled to the benefit of, the resolutions. The resolutions were afterwards approved. In 1867, a bill was filed by his daughter and representative of his widow against four of the committee, their secretary, and the Secretary of State for India, seeking to have the benefit of the resolutions of 1826, and of an annuity under the old rules:—Held, that they were not entitled to the benefit of the resolutions of 1826, F. never having paid anything in respect of or claimed to be entitled to the benefit of them. Edwards v. Warden, 1 App. Cas. 281; 45 L. J., Ch. 713; 35 L. T. 174. Affirming 9 L. R., Ch. 495; 43 L. J., Ch. 644; 30 L. T. 540; 22 W. R. 669.

But held (reversing the Court below), that they were not mere trustees for the association, but trustees properly so called, and that the members of the fund were the beneficiaries, so that the defence of the Statute of Limitations could not be set up against a claimant on the fund merely on account of lapse of time. Id.

Charge on Land—Payment of Rent, when to be made.—When a testator charges an annuity on land with the ordinary power of distress and entry in the event of the annuity being in arrear, the annuitant must wait for payment of the annuity until the first rent day which occurs after the day fixed by the testator for payment of an instalment of the annuity, and is not entitled to require that any prior rent should be kept in hand in order to answer the instalment. Masluck v. Pedley, 19 L. R., Eq. 271; 44 L. J., Ch. 143; 23 W. R. 155.

A testator charged his estate in Jamaica with the payment of an annuity. The estate fell into a ruinous condition in the annuitant's lifetime, and yielded no income till seventeen years after her death, at which time the sum of 2,150*l*. was due to her in respect of arrears of the annuity:—Held, that the first receipts, when the estate began again to be productive, were payable to the legal personal representative of the annuitant in respect of such arrears. Pitt v. Lord Daer, 3 Ch. D. 295; 45 L. J., Ch. 796; 24 W. R. 943.

By the law as established before the Judicature Acts, 1873, 1875, no action was maintainable in the courts at Westminster to enforce payment of arrears of a freehold rent-charge issuing out of lands situate abroad, although both parties were resident in the jurisdiction. Whitaker v. Forbes, 1 C. P. D. 51; 45 L. J., C. P. 140; 33 L. T. 582—C. A.

Interest on Arrears.—Arrears of an annuity charged on corpus do not carry interest, and there is no difference between annuities charged on corpus and annuities charged on income in this respect. Wheatley v. Davies, 24 W. R. 818.

13. MERGER AND EXTINGUISHMENT.

Devise to Annuitant—Merger not Presumed.]

—A. devised to B., a married woman, a reversionary interest in an estate, and bequeathed to her for life and for her separate use, an annuity charged on the same estate, and to commence immediately. A. also bequeathed other annuities similarly charged. At the death of the testatrix, the prior limitation having failed, B. became tenant for life in possession. She afterwards became discoverte, and the property having become insufficient to pay all the annuities :—Held, that a merger of her annuity in her life interest, by operation of law, would not be presumed. Byam v. Sutton, 19 Beav. 556.

When Annuity a Satisfaction of Debt.]—A husband, on separating from his wife, covenanted by the deed of separation to pay to a trustee for her an annuity of 52*l.* per annum, payable on the 1st May, the 1st August, the 1st November, and the 1st February in every year, such annuity to be for her separate use, &c. He afterwards devised specific real estate to trustees, upon trust, out of the rents, to pay his wife 52*l.* per annum, by equal quarterly payments on the 1st February, the 1st May, the 1st August, and the 1st November in each year. The will contained no direction for payment of debts :—Held, that the annuity given by the will was a satisfaction of the debt created by the deed of separation. Atkinson v. Littlewood, 18 L. R., Eq. 595 ; 31 L. T. 225.

14. REDEMPTION.

Insurance of Grantor's Life—Re-purchase—Right to Policy.]—The grantee of an annuity for the life of the grantor, made in consideration of money, and repurchaseable on repayment, insured the grantor's life in the amount of the purchase-money, the annuity having apparently been calculated so as to cover the amount of premium, as well as interest at 5*l.* per cent. on the purchase-money, and the grantor covenanted to repay to the grantee any additional rate of premium which might be required by reason of his going beyond the limits of the policy. On the repurchase of the annuity :—Held, that the policy belonged to the grantee and not to the grantor. Knor v. Turner, 5 L. R., Ch. 515 ; 39 L. J., Ch. 750 ; 23 L. T. 227.

Held, also, that the transaction did not constitute the relation of debtor and creditor between the parties. Ib.

The grant of an annuity with a right of repurchase on payment of the consideration money, and all arrears of the annuity, does not create the relation of debtor and creditor so as to give the grantor, upon repurchase of the annuity, the right to a policy effected by the grantee on the life of the grantor as a security or indemnity ; or, after the death of the grantor, to entitle his representatives to the surplus proceeds of the policy after satisfaction of the consideration money and all arrears of the annuity. Preston v. Neale, 12 Ch. D. 760 ; 40 L. T. 303 ; 27 W. R. 642.

In 1822, in consideration of 600*l.*, A., and B., his wife, granted to C. an annuity of 64*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* for ninety-nine years if B. should so long live. By the same deed the rents of copyhold property to which B. was entitled, were granted during her life to C., with a covenant to surrender from and after B.'s death to the use of C., and power to C. to sell in case the annuity should be in arrear. The deed contained provisions that any extra premiums to become payable at the office where B.'s life should be insured, should be paid by A., and a power to A. to repurchase the annuity at any time after three years on payment to C. of 600*l.* and all arrears of the annuity. On the day before the date of the deed by which the annuity was granted, C. insured B.'s life for 600*l.*

at an annual premium of 16*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* The copyholds were surrendered, and C., by himself or his representatives since his death, had been in possession since 1828. A. died in 1858, and B. in 1869 :—Held, as between the representatives of C. and B., that the surplus proceeds of the policy effected by C. on B.'s life, after satisfaction of the 600*l.* and all arrears of the annuity, belonged to the representatives of C. and not of B. Ib.

A., in consideration of 200*l.*, granted to B. an annuity of 21*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*, being 8*l.* per cent. upon the loan, and 5*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.* for the premium on an insurance of A.'s life. To secure the annuity, A. and three sureties gave a bond for the payment of the same, and of any additional premiums which might be occasioned by A.'s going abroad ; and in the bond provision was made for the repurchase of the annuity on notice. The insurance was effected in B.'s name. Upon the repurchase of the annuity :—Held, that the policy belonged to B. Gottlieb v. Cranch, 4 De. G., Mac. and G. 440 ; 1 Eq. R. 341.

But where a grantee of an annuity insured the lives for which the annuity was granted, without there being any stipulation on the subject between him and the grantor :—Held, that the grantor, on redeeming, had no right to have the policy delivered to him. Lancaster, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 524.

What Amounts to—Bond given by a Wife.]—Action upon a deed dated in April, 1797, by which a husband covenanted with A. to pay his wife, during her life, into her own proper hands, for her separate use, or to such persons as she should, by note in writing signed by her, appoint, an annuity of three guineas per week, with a proviso for redemption, upon payment to her for separate use of 1,000*l.*, and all arrears. In November, 1797, a bond and warrant of attorney for 1,000*l.* were given to B. by the husband ; and, in his answer to a bill filed by him in 1860, to restrain proceedings upon them, the covenantee admitted, that, as to 1,000*l.*, the consideration was the sum agreed to be paid for redemption of the annuity ; and upon his death a bond and warrant of attorney were found in the husband's possession. The husband having pleaded that the annuity was redeemed and the arrears paid, the judge told the jury that the absence of proof of any payment or demand for thirty-nine years was evidence to support this plea ; and that, if the bond and warrant of attorney were given by the authority of the wife for the 1,000*l.*, for her own use, then the payment of them was a sufficient payment. Upon a bill of exceptions tendered by the plaintiff, on the ground that the wife had not power to give legal effect to the giving of such bond by her concurrence ; and that the giving such concurrence and the subsequent payment would not be a redemption of the annuity :—Held, that the direction was right. Bostock v. Hume, 8 Scott, N. R. 590 ; 7 M. & G. 893 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 225.

I. APPEAL TO HOUSE OF LORDS.

Unaltered by Judicature Act.—The practice with regard to appeals to the House of Lords is unaltered by the Judicature Acts and Rules. Justice v. Mersey Steel and Iron Company, 1 C. P. D. 575; 24 W. R. 955—C. A.

Staying Execution.—Therefore, on an appeal from a decision of the Court of Appeal in an action attached to one of the common law divisions of the High Court, the appellant cannot obtain a stay of execution of the judgment pending the appeal, unless he gives bail in error, as provided by the C. L. P. Act, 1852, s. 151; and on doing that he is entitled to a stay of execution as a matter of right. Ib.

An application to enlarge the time for giving bail in error must be made, not to the Court of Appeal, but to that division of the High Court to which the action is attached. Ib.

Point of Law—Staying Trial of Issues of Fact pending Appeal.—When an appeal upon a point of law is allowed, and the case is remitted to the court below for trial on the issues of fact, the Court of Appeal will not, as a general rule, stay the trial of the issues of fact pending an appeal to the House of Lords on the point of law. Palmer's Application, In Re, 22 Ch. D. 88; 52 L. J., Ch. 224; 48 L. T. 52; 31 W. R. 33—C. A.

General Rule.—Where an unsuccessful party appeals, the court will in ordinary cases stay execution pending the result of the appeal, if the court sees that the application is made bona fide, and that no damage can result, on the appellant's lodging in court the amount due under the judgment, and paying the respondent's costs, with an undertaking from the respondent's solicitor to recoup the appellant if the appeal prove successful. But where an order was made in an English court for alimony, and an action was brought in Ireland for 880*l.* arrears thereof, and the validity of the order was not questioned, but only the right to bring the action on it, and 2,200*l.* further arrears of alimony was due, the court refused an application to stay execution. Nunn v. Nunn, 8 L. R., Ir. 304—C. A.

Proceedings on an order to pay money and costs stayed pending an appeal, on payment of the money by the defendant to the plaintiff, the plaintiff giving security for repayment, or if the plaintiff preferred it, on payment into court, the costs to be paid to the plaintiff's solicitor on his undertaking to repay them if directed. Merry v. Nickalls, 8 L. R., Ch. 205; 42 L. J., Ch. 479; 28 L. T. 296; 21 W. R. 305.

When a decree has been made for the payment of money, it is the general rule to stay proceedings pending an appeal, when the party against whom the decree is made pays the money into court, and the appeal is not frivolous. Truche v. Metropolitan Railway Warehouse Company, 40 L. J., Ch. 496—L. J.

A decree was made for the payment to two plaintiffs of 2,000*l.* One was abroad. The defendants appealed from the decree, and stated that a queen's counsel had advised that the appeal would succeed:—Held, that it was a matter of course to stay proceedings upon the defendants paying the money in court. Ib.

Staying Execution to give Party opportunity of deciding as to Appeal.—An application to stay execution will not be granted by the Court of Appeal in order to give a party who is dissatisfied with the amount of damages assessed by a jury an opportunity to decide whether he will appeal or not to the House of Lords. Webber v. London, Brighton and South Coast Railway Company, 51 L. J., Q. B. 154—C. A.

Conditions—Costs of Sale and Re-investment.—An order was made by the Court of Appeal directing a sum of consols in court to be sold and the proceeds paid to B. Y. appealed to the House of Lords, and after sale but before payment out applied to stay proceedings pending the appeal, asking to have the proceeds of the sale of the fund re-invested and retained in court:—Held, that, as a condition of obtaining the order, Y. must undertake that in case his appeal was unsuccessful, he would make good the difference between the income actually produced by the fund and interest at 4*l.* per cent. per annum, and would also pay the costs of the sale and re-investment. Brewer v. Yorke, Yorke v. Brewer, 20 Ch. D. 669; 31 W. R. 109—C. A.

Preventing Appeal from being Nugatory, if Successful.—Where unsuccessful party is exercising an unrestricted right to appeal, it is the duty of the court, in ordinary cases, to make such order for staying proceedings under the judgment appealed from as will prevent the appeal, if successful, from being nugatory. But the court will not interfere if the appeal appears not to be bonâ fide, or there are other sufficient exceptional circumstances. And when the court makes an order to stay proceedings pending an appeal it will put the appellants on terms to speed the appeal; and it will not interfere with the execution of the order of the court below respecting costs, except to put the solicitor who is to receive the costs upon an undertaking to refund them if required to do so. Wilson v. Church, 12 Ch. D. 454; 28 W. R. 284—C. A.

—Special Circumstances.—In a suit by a bondholder of a railway company, on behalf of himself and other bondholders, against the company, claiming that the money advanced should be returned, instead of its being applied in the undertaking, judgment was given for the plaintiff with costs, and it was ordered that the money should be forthwith distributed among the bondholders. The bonds were payable to bearer, and the bondholders were very numerous and many were residing abroad. On the other hand the defendant company was insolvent, and it was very doubtful whether, if the undertaking was carried on, the shareholders would get any benefit from it. The defendants appealed, and moved to stay proceedings pending the appeal:—Held (dissentiente, James, L. J.), that there were sufficient grounds to induce the court to stay the distribution of the fund pending the appeal; and that the special circumstances of the company were not sufficient to prevent the court from interfering. Id.

The holder of a life policy filed a bill against the company to recover the amount insured. The Master of the Rolls decided in his favour, but ordered the money to be paid into court, pending an appeal by the company. The Court of Appeal in Chancery reversed the decree, and dismissed the bill with costs. The plaintiff then appealed to the House of Lords. The court refused to order the money to be retained in court pending the appeal. Atherton v. British National Assurance Company, 5 L. R., Ch. 720; 39 L. J., Ch. 726; 18 W. R. 1012.

A decree was made that accounts should be taken, and that the defendants should pay what should be found due to the plaintiffs, and also the costs of the suit. The defendants moved to stay the execution of the decree pending an appeal to the House of Lords, on the ground that the plaintiffs were out of the jurisdiction. The court refused to stay the taking of the accounts or the taxation of the costs, and directed that the costs, when taxed, should be paid to the plaintiffs' solicitor on his giving satisfactory security for their repayment in case of a reversal of the decree; but the plaintiffs not being able to give security for the repayment of the money due to them, it was ordered that the amount should be paid into court, the defendants undertaking to abide by such order as might be made as to interest; the costs to abide the result of the appeal. Burdick v. Garrick, 5 L. R., Ch. 453; 39 L. J., Ch. 661; 22 L. T. 502; 18 W. R. 530.

Decree Nisi—Appeal direct to the House of Lords no Stay of Proceedings.—A respondent appealed from a decree nisi direct to the House of Lords, on the ground that it was against the weight of evidence. While the appeal was still undisposed of, the decree nisi was, after the requisite lapse of time, pronounced absolute, notwithstanding the appeal. The latter being an improper course, is not to be allowed to operate as a stay of the proceedings in the court below. Robertson v. Robertson and Favagrossa (No. 1), 44 L. T. 253.

—For Recovery of Costs incurred in Court below.—The court will not, pending an appeal to the House of Lords, stay proceedings for the recovery of costs already awarded to the respondents, although the appellant offer to lodge the amount of such costs in court, on an allegation of the insolvency of the respondents, but will require the respondents' solicitors to give an undertaking to refund any costs paid in the event of the further appeal proving successful. Att.-Gen. (Ireland) v. Bray Township Commissioners, 5 L. R., Ir. 523.

—Undertaking as to Costs.—On motion to restrain the defendants and their solicitors from enforcing payment of costs, unless and until such solicitors should have given their personal undertaking to return to the plaintiff's solicitor the amount of any such costs which might be paid in case an appeal to the House of Lords proved successful; the Court of Appeal ordered the personal undertaking to be given. Polini v. Gray, Sturla v. Freccia, 28 W. R. 360—C. A. See Wilson v. Church, supra.

A plaintiff, whose bill had been dismissed with costs, applied for an order to stay proceedings pending an appeal by him to the House of Lords, and that the sheriff, who had seized his furniture at the instance of the defendant in part payment of the costs, might be ordered to withdraw, the plaintiff offering to pay the value of the furniture into court at once and the balance of the costs within ten days:—Held, that the whole costs must be paid to the defendant's solicitor on his personal undertaking to refund them if the appeal should succeed, and that the plaintiff must also pay the costs of the sheriff and of the application to stay proceedings. Morgan v. Elford, 4 Ch. D. 352; 25 W. R. 136—C. A.

The recovery of costs payable under an order will not be stayed pending an appeal to the House of Lords, if the solicitors to whom they are payable give their personal undertaking to refund in case of the order being reversed. Payment of costs will not be stayed on the ground that another proceeding in the same action is pending under which costs may become payable to the applicant. Grant v. Banque Franco-Egyptienne, 3 C. P. D. 202; 47 L. J., C. P. 455; 38 L. T. 622; 26 W. R. 669—C. A.

Injunction pending Appeal to House of Lords.]

—A decree was made in three suits for the administration of the personal estate of an intestate, directing the usual inquiry as to her next of kin. A certificate was made finding five persons of the name of F., who were resident abroad, to be the next of kin, and an order was made for distribution of the fund in court among them. S., who had not been a party to the proceedings, applied by motion to stay the distribution of the fund, alleging herself to be next of kin. The Vice-Chancellor suspended the giving out of the order, and directed his chief clerk to inquire whether S. had made out a prima facie case, and the chief clerk finding that she had not, the Vice-Chancellor directed the order to be given out without prejudice to any independent proceeding by S. Four of the five shares were at once transferred to four of the persons found entitled; the fifth remained in court. Two of the shares which had been transferred were sold out, and the proceeds received by the vendors. S. then commenced an action, and obtained in it an order granting an injunction to restrain any dealing with the three shares which had not been sold, and directing an inquiry who were the next of kin, and this order was subsequently directed to be taken as made in the three suits as well as in the action. The chief clerk again found the F. family to be the next of kin. The action and a summons to vary the certificate were heard before the Vice-Chancellor, who dismissed the summons and the action, but continued the injunction in the three causes until further order. S. appealed, and the Court of Appeal affirmed the decision of the Vice-Chancellor dismissing her bill, but S. being about to appeal to the House of Lords:—Held, that as, if S. ultimately succeeded in the House of Lords, her success would be useless unless the fund was protected in the meantime, the injunction ought to be continued pending the appeal. Polini v. Gray, Sturla v. Freccia, 12 Ch. D. 438; 49 L. J., Ch. 41; 40 L. T. 861; 28 W. R. 360—C. A.

Staying Proceedings pending Appeal—Application should be made to Court of Appeal.—An application to stay proceedings under an order of the Court of Appeal, pending an appeal to the House of Lords, must be made to the Court of Appeal, and not to the division of the High Court to which the action is attached. The Khedive, 5 P. D. 1; 41 L. T. 392; 28 W. R. 364—C. A.

Costs of Application to Stay.—The costs of an application to stay the execution of a decree pending an appeal are in the discretion of the court. The proper rule is, that they should ordinarily abide the result of the appeal. Burdick v. Garrick, 5 L. R. Ch. 453; 39 L. J., Ch. 661; 22 L. T. 502; 18 W. R. 530.

But in another case the applicant was ordered to pay the costs of the application. Merry v. Nickalls, 8 L. R., Ch. 205; 42 L. J., Ch. 479; 28 L. T. 296; 21 W. R. 305.

Compare cases post, APPEAL TO COURT OF APPEAL.

Interfering with Discretion of Court below.—In a question arising on orders and rules made under the Judicature Acts in matters where courts or judges are to exercise a discretion, the house is unwilling to disturb the orders made, unless for strong substantial reasons; but the principle on which such orders ought to be made, may furnish those reasons. Wallingford v. Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas. 685; 50 L. J., Q. B. 49; 43 L. T. 258; 29 W. R. 81—H. L. (E.)

When a plaintiff, after an order to file the usual affidavit as to documents, persisted in not filing a sufficient affidavit, the house sustained the decree of the Court of Chancery, fixing a time at which the bill should be dismissed, and the money in court repaid to the defendant who had paid it in. The house will not interfere with the discretion of the judges who have had the administration of the suit in such a matter as the time to be fixed for dismissal under circumstances like the above. Republic of Liberia v. Roy, 1 App. Cas. 139; 45 L. J., Ch. 297; 34 L. T. 145; 24 W. R. 967—H. L. (E.)

Alteration in Decree—Applicant not Appellant.—The House of Lords will not, on the application of a person not an appellant against a decree, make an alteration in it. If a change in the details of the decree should be necessary, his application for it should be made in the court below. Yates v. University College, London, 7 L. R., H. L. 438; 32 L. T. 43; 23 W. R. 408.

Evidence.—The House of Lords will not, on appeal, admit evidence not presented in the court below. Banco de Portugal v. Waddell, 5 App. Cas. 161; 49 L. J. Bk. 33; 42 L. T. 698; 28 W. R. 477—H. L. (E.)

Printing Evidence.—Suggestions as to printing the evidence when a point of law has previously to be considered. Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill, 5 App. Cas. 582—H. L. (E.)

Decree of House of Lords made an Order of Chancery Division.—An application to have an order of the House of Lords, reversing a decision of the Court of Appeal, made an order of the Chancery Division, should be made to the court of first instance, where the decree appealed from was originally made. British Dynamite Company v. Krebs, 11 Ch. D. 448; 48 L. J., Ch. 800; 40 L. T. 514; 27 W. R. 575.

Leave to Appeal—When Granted.—The power given to the Court of Appeal to give leave to appeal to the House of Lords should be exercised in proper cases. Where a trustee in bankruptcy wants to appeal at the cost of the estate, and thereby the division of the estate is delayed, an appeal should not be encouraged unless there is a very difficult question of general law which it is desirable that the House of Lords should settle. Allen, Ex parte, Funnell, In re, 20 Ch. D. 350; 51 L. J., Ch. 728; 47 L. T. 68—C. A.

I have often said that the jurisdiction to give leave to appeal is given to be exercised. Leave is to be given if the case is one of such difficulty that the court think it proper that it should be carried to the House of Lords. We ought to protect the House of Lords from appeals on the construction of an Act of Parliament, where the construction of the Act of Parliament is tolerably plain. Medley v. Medley, 51 L. J. P. 77; 47 L. T. 559—per Jessel, M. R., and Lindley, L. J.

If nothing new has been decided, leave will not be given. Dyke, Ex parte, Morrish, In re, 22 Ch. D. 429; 52 L. J., Ch. 576.

Leave to Appeal to House of Lords in Bankruptcy Cases.—See post, BANKRUPTCY.

Jurisdiction of High Court.—The rule of the House of Lords being that in default of papers being lodged by an appellant, "the case stands dismissed," a case can only be reinstated in the list by special application to the House of Lords. The High Court has no jurisdiction in the matter of a particular issue so disposed of by the rules of the House of Lords, although the original cause of action may still be within the jurisdiction of the High Court. Mercier v. Williams, Williams v. Mercier, 32 W. R. 152.

Costs, when Allowed.]—Where an appellant merely contends for the point on which he eventually succeeds, he has a fair case to ask for his costs of the appeal. But where an appellant launches an appeal asking for a much wider measure of relief than that to which he is entitled, the House of Lords will leave each party to bear their own costs. Elliot v. Rokeby (Lord), 7 App. Cas. 46; 51 L. J. Ch. 249; 45 L. T. 769; 30 W. R. 249—H. L. (E.)

Although the rule of the House of Lords, where the decree appealed from is reversed or varied, is that the respondent is not fixed with the costs of the appeal, yet where an appellant had offered to withdraw the appeal and to pay the respondent's costs on condition that the respondent submitted to a variation in the decree to which the house held that he was entitled, and the respondent refused to consent to the proposal, the house marked its disapproval of the respondent's conduct by directing him to pay all the costs incurred after the date of the making of the offer by the appellant. De Vitre v. Betts, 6 L. R., H. L. 319; 42 L. J. Ch. 841; 21 W. R. 705.

When the decision of the court below is confirmed on appeal to the House of Lords the respondent is entitled to costs, although the ground of the decision on appeal is different from that in the court below. Peck v. Gurney, 6 L. R., H. L. 377; 43 L. J., Ch. 19; 22 W. R. 29.

The practice in the House of Lords and in the Exchequer Chamber is never to give a successful appellant his costs. In the Privy Council the rule is the opposite way. In appeals from sessions the costs are given, because in such small matters, unless the successful appellant could get his costs, his right of appeal would practically be taken away. The principle, however, upon which costs are not awarded, is that a suitor ought not to pay for the errors of a judge. Denny v. Hancock, 40 L. J., Ch. 193, 194.

The House of Lords having reversed, without saying anything as to costs, a judgment of the Exchequer Chamber which affirmed a decision of the Court of Common Pleas in favour of the defendant, that court refused an application by the plaintiff to have his costs in the Exchequer Chamber granted to him. Gann v. Johnson, 6 L. R., C. P. 461; 40 L. J., C. P. 227; 24 L. T. 753; 19 W. R. 952.

—Prolix Appendix.]—The costs of the shorthand writer's notes of the argument contained in an appendix, and all allowances for drawing an appendix were disallowed where the introduction of them was considered to be decidedly unnecessary and improper. Singer Manufacturing Co. v. Loog, 8 App. Cas. 27—H. L. (E.)

Practice where Appeal dismissed without Costs.]—If security has been given, the persons who gave the security will have to pay the costs, and they must get them in the best way they can. If a petition presented by an appellant prays that the usual security for costs may be dispensed with, and the agent of the respondent consents thereto and the order is made as prayed, the order of the House will be without costs. Harvey v. Farnie, 8 App. Cas. 64; 52 L. J. P. 42; 48 L. T. 279; 31 W. R. 438—H. L. (E.)

—When Respondents not entitled to.]—Respondents are not entitled to their costs in an appeal, if the alteration made in the interlocutor of the court below was wanted to give complete security to the interests represented by the appellants, and if the attitude of both sets of respondents before action brought was such as to justify the institution of some action for the purpose of obtaining the declaration obtained. Paterson v. St. Andrews (Proctor), 6 App. Cas. 833—H. L. (Sc.)

—When Votes equal.]—In cases of appeal to the House of Lords, there are always two motions before the House, one, that the judgment under appeal be reversed; the other, that the judgment under appeal be affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs. When the votes are equal upon the first motion, the motion is lost. The second motion is not put as it is assumed that it would be lost also. The judgment appealed from is therefore affirmed, but no costs are given. Pryce v. Monmouthshire Railway & Canal Company, 4 App. Cas. 197; 49 L. J., Ex. 130; 40 L. T. 630; 27 W. R. 666—H. L. (E.)

—Interest on.]—When the judgment of a superior court is affirmed with costs, in the Exchequer Chamber and such decision of the Exchequer Chamber is subsequently affirmed on appeal by the House of Lords, who order the costs incurred by the successful party, in respect of the appeal, to be paid to him, "the amount thereof to be certified by the clerk of parliament," the superior court has power to allow interest only on the sum for which judgment was originally signed in such superior court, for such time as execution has been delayed by the proceedings in the appeals to the Exchequer Chamber and the House of Lords, that is, for the period between the date of the original judgment and its final affirmance by the House of Lords; but it has no jurisdiction or power to give interest on the costs incurred in such appeal. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company v. Gidlow, 9 L. R., Ex. 35; 43 L. J., Ex. 1; 29 L. T. 399; 22 W. R. 17.

—Right to Recover.]—To an action for a debt, the defendants pleaded as a set-off that the plaintiffs were the promoters of a private bill within 28 & 29 Vict. c. 27; that the defendants were petitioners against the bill before a committee of the House of Lords; that the committee decided that the preamble of the bill was not proved; that the defendants were vexatiously subjected to expense in defending their rights proposed to be interfered with by the bill, and awarded costs, and that the taxing-officer duly delivered a certificate, and averred generally performance of conditions precedent:—Held, that the moment the costs were taxed, in pursuance of the report, a debt from the defendants to the plaintiffs was created; that it was not necessary to aver a demand, in pleading the debt as a set-off; and that, even if it was necessary, it was sufficiently averred in the allegation of performance of conditions precedent; that the plea implied averred all the matters necessary to sustain it, such as the unanimity of the report of the committee, and that the certificate was conclusive evidence of the defendant's right to recover the amount named in it. Newry and Armagh Railway Company v. Ulster Railway Company, 4 Ir. R., C. L. 62.

— Staying Payment of, pending Appeal.—The rule that the payment of costs ordered to be paid will not be stayed, pending an appeal to the House of Lords, if the solicitors receiving such costs personally undertake to repay the same in case the order be reversed, will also be applied to cases where there is a bona fide intention to appeal to the House of Lords, and an undertaking is given to present an appeal within a short date. Grant v. Banque Franco-Egyptienne, 3 C. P. D. 202; 47 L. J., Ch. 455; 38 L. T. 662; 26 W. R. 669—C. A.

The fact that there are other proceedings pending in the same action under which costs might become payable to the party ordered to pay costs, and might be set off against the costs ordered to be paid, is no ground for staying the order directing payment of costs. Ib.

When a bill has been dismissed with costs the court will not stay taxation and payment of costs pending an appeal to the House of Lords. Beattie v. Ebury (Lord), 28 L. T. 458.

Action on Judgment of House of Lords for Costs.—An action lies on the judgment of the House of Lords ordering the appellant in an unsuccessful appeal to that House to pay the costs of such appeal to the respondent. Marbella Iron Ore Company v. Allen, 47 L. J., C. P. 601; 38 L. T. 815.

1. JURISDICTION OF COURT OF APPEAL.

Original Petition.—The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to hear an original petition. Dunraven and Aberdare Coal and Iron Company, In re, 33 L. T. 371; 24 W. R. 37—C. A.

Transfer of Action.—The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to order the transfer of a suit instituted in the Court of Chancery before the Judicature Acts came into operation from the court of one vice-chancellor to that of another. The Lord Chancellor alone has jurisdiction to make such an order. Hutley, In re, Deards v. Putt, 33 L. T. 337—C. A.

The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to make an order for the transfer of a matter commenced by petition under the statutory jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery before the Judicature Act, 1873, came into operation, from one judge to another. Boyd, In re, 1 Ch. D. 12—C. A.

No Real Question in Dispute—Interlocutory Application.—Where there is no real question at issue between a plaintiff and defendant, the Court of Appeal will, on an interlocutory application, make such an order as will determine the rights of the parties in the action. Ellis v. Munson, 35 L. T. 585—C. A.

Vexatious Appeal.—Where an appeal is vexatious the Court of Appeal can make an order staying the proceedings. Tale v. Oppert, 5 Ch. D. 969—C. A.

Power to re-hear—Insertion of Evidence accidentally Omitted from Order.—Whether the Court of Appeal has jurisdiction to re-hear a bankruptcy appeal, quære. But if there be such a jurisdiction the court will not, while an appeal to the House of Lords from an order made by it on a bankruptcy appeal is pending, re-hear the appeal pro forma, for the purpose of inserting in its order evidence which was not before it when the appeal was heard, leaving the date of the order unaltered, or for the purpose of making a new order bearing a date subsequent to the date of the presentation of the appeal to the House of Lords with the new evidence inserted in it, but in other respects unaltered. But semble, that if by an accidental slip evidence which was really before the court on the hearing of the appeal had been omitted from the order, the court could rectify the error notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal to the House of Lords. Banco de Portugal, Ex parte, Hooper, In re, 14 Ch. D. 1; 49 L. J., Bk. 21; 42 L. T. 210; 28 W. R. 433—C. A.

Addition as to Costs made to Decree.—An addition made to a decree upon motion giving directions as to costs as to which the decree itself was silent, is a portion of the decree, and therefore can be examined in an appeal from the decree, and is not an interlocutory order within the meaning of Ord. LVIII. r. 15. The City of Manchester, 5 P. D. 221; 49 L. J., P. 81; 42 L. T. 521—C. A.

Appeal, the Creature of Statute.—An appeal never lies unless expressly given by statute. Rea v. Cashiobury (Justices), 3 D. & R. 35.

Order according to Laws existing at time of hearing.—The Court of Appeal, on hearing an appeal, may make such an order as is justified by the law as then existing, although the effect will be to vary a decision of the court below which was according to the then existing state of the law. Quilter v. Mapleson, 9 Q. B. D. 672; 52 L. J., Q. B. 44; 47 L. T. 562; 31 W. R. 75—C. A.

The 14th section of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, which enables the court to relieve against forfeiture of a lease on breach of a covenant by the lessee, applies, not only to leases made before the 1st of January 1881 (when the act came into operation), and breaches of covenant occurring before that date, but also to cases in which an action to recover possession for such a breach has been commenced before that date, even where judgment has been recovered prior to the commencement of the act, if the lessor has not obtained possession. A lessee having committed breaches of covenants in his lease in respect of insuring the property, an action to recover possession of the property demised was brought by the lessor, and at the trial the judge held that the defendant was not entitled under the existing statute (22 & 23 Vict. c. 35) to relief against forfeiture. The defendant appealed, and before the appeal was finally determined, the Conveyancing Act came into operation:—Held, that the court had power to relieve the defendant, and that the proper terms to impose were that the defendant should insure to the full amount, pay all insurance moneys and rent in arrear, with interest, and pay rent in advance to the next quarter-day, and also all the costs of the action and the appeal. Id.

To Register Bills of Sale.—The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to rectify the register of bills of sale under s. 14 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878. Webster, Ex parte, Morris, In re, 22 Ch. D. 136; 52 L. J., Ch. 375; 48 L. T. 295; 31 W. R. 111—C. A.

To Decide in first instance.—The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to decide a case in the first instance at the request of the judge below. Brown v. Collins, 49 L. T. 329.

2. IN WHAT CASES APPEAL LIES.

Agreement "not to bring Error."—By an order of reference made by consent, and before the coming into operation of the Judicature Acts, it was ordered that neither the plaintiff nor the defendant should bring any writ of error against each other concerning the matters referred. The arbitrator made an award dependent on the opinion of the court upon a special case stated by him. The court gave judgment for the plaintiff. The defendant appealed:—Held, that no appeal could be brought. Jones v. Victoria Graving Dock Company, 2 Q. B. D. 314; 46 L. J., Q. B. 219; 36 L. T. 347; 25 W. R. 501—C. A.

Undertaking not to Appeal.—A claim under a winding-up having been refused by the Master of the Rolls, the counsel for the liquidator asked the counsel for the claimant whether he intended to carry the case further, and on being informed that he did not, said that he should not ask for costs. An order was drawn up dismissing the claim without costs and not containing any undertaking not to appeal:—Held, that as no undertaking not to appeal was embodied in the order, an appeal would lie. Hull and County Bank, Trotter's Claim, In re, 13 Ch. D. 261; 41 L. T. 537; 23 W. R. 125—C. A.

Undertaking to be bound by Result of another Appeal.—There were two actions brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, one in the Chancery Division and the other in the Queen's Bench Division, and some of the points were common to both cases. The defendant appealed, but before the hearing of the appeal from the Queen's Bench Division the parties agreed, "so far as the points in the appeal were the same," to be bound in the appeal by the decision of the Court of Appeal in the action in the Chancery Division:—Held, that the defendant by his undertaking had precluded himself from raising any point raised in the other appeal. Gathercole v. Smith, 7 Q. B. D. 626; 50 L. J., Q. B. 681; 45 L. T. 106; 29 W. R. 577—C. A.

Agreement that Rights should be determined by Judge.—Questions having arisen between the official liquidator of a company and a mortgagee with whom the trustees had deposited deeds belonging to the company, with respect to the validity of the security, the parties signed an agreement that their rights should be determined in a summary way by the judge acting in the matter of the winding-up:—Held, that this was a submission to the judge personally, and that no appeal could be brought to the Court of Appeal in Chancery. Durham County Permanent Benefit Building Society, In re, Wilson, Ex parte, 7 L. R., Ch. 45; 41 L. J., Ch. 164.

An information by way of bill of complaint was by consent amended by the introduction of the words, "That the rights, if any, of the several defendants may be ascertained and declared by decree of the court, and that they may be ordered to pay each to the others and other of them their and his costs of this suit, and that the court will give such further directions in the premises as shall be necessary." There was no stipulation that the right of appeal should be given up, and it appeared that the parties never contemplated that they were ceasing to keep the cause in curia, or that the judge was to hear it otherwise than as a judge, or that it was not to go on subject to all the incidents of a cause regularly heard in court:—Held, that the right to appeal had not been waived. Pisani v. Att.-Gen. (Gibraltar), 5 L. R., P. C. 516; 30 L. T. 729; 22 W. R. 900.

Taxation on Higher or Lower Scale.—An appeal will lie from a decision by a judge under rules of the Supreme Court (Costs), August, 1875, Ord. VI. r. 3, as to the taxation of costs on the higher or lower scale; but where he has exercised his discretion the Court of Appeal will not interfere unless he has proceeded on a wrong principle or made a manifest slip. Terrell, In re, 22 Ch. D. 473; 47 L. T. 588; 31 W. R. 208—C. A.

In Criminal Cases—Criminal matter, what is.]

—The operation of s. 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873, in prohibiting appeals in criminal matters, extends to all orders of the High Court in criminal cases, even where the original criminal proceedings were not in the High Court. Reg. v. Fletcher, Birnie, Ex parte, 2 Q. B. D. 43; 46 L. J., M. C. 4; 35 L. T. 538; 25 W. R. 149; 13 Cox, C. C. 358—C. A.

Where the Queen's Bench Division was applied to for a certiorari to quash a conviction for trespassing in pursuit of game, on the ground that there was a bonâ fide claim of right, ousting the jurisdiction of the magistrates, and that court refused the order:—Held, that this was a proceeding in a criminal matter, and that no appeal lay to the Court of Appeal. Id.

Under the Judicature Acts, 1873 and 1875, there is no appeal to the Court of Appeal in a criminal case except for error on the record. Reg. v. Steel, 2 Q. B. D. 37; 46 L. J., M. C. 1; 35 L. T. 534; 25 W. R. 34; 13 Cox, C. C. 354—C. A.

When, upon the trial of an information under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, costs have been given under s. 8, the Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the High Court on a question of taxation of such costs. Ib.

A judgment of the Court of Appeal from an inferior court, against the validity of a conviction, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 119, s. 3, for keeping a common gaming-house, on a case stated under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, is a judgment of the High Court in a criminal matter from which, by s. 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873, there is no appeal. Blake v. Beech, 2 Ex. D. 335; 36 L. T. 723—C. A.

The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from a decision of the High Court of Justice upon a case stated by justices as to an information for contravening the bye-laws of a school constituted under the Elementary Education Act, 1874; for the information relates to a criminal matter, within the meaning of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, s. 47. Mellor v. Denham, 5 Q. B. D. 467; 49 L. J., M. C. 89; 42 L. T. 493; 44 J. P. 472—C. A.

An order was made by justices directing the defendant to fill up an ashpit, so as to be no longer a nuisance. The Queen's Bench Division made absolute an order for a certiorari to quash this order, on the ground that it was not warranted by the Public Health Act, 1875, ss. 94, 96:—Held, that the order of the justices was made in a "criminal cause or matter" within the meaning of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, s. 47, and that an appeal from the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division could not be entertained. Mellor v. Denham (5 Q. B. D. 467) followed. Reg. v. Whitechurch or Whitechurch, Ex parte (No. 2), 7 Q. B. D. 534; 50 L. J., M. C. 99; 45 L. T. 379; 29 W. R. 922; 45 J. P. 617; 46 J. P. 134—C. A.

The decision of a divisional court discharging a rule for a mandamus to election commissioners to grant a certificate, which certificate, if given, would be a protection to a witness against criminal proceedings for bribery, does not relate to a criminal cause or matter, within the meaning of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, s. 47, and the Court of Appeal is not therefore deprived of jurisdiction to hear an appeal against such decision. Reg. v. Holl, 7 Q. B. D. 575; 50 L. J., Q. B. 763—C. A.

— Refusal of Divisional Court to issue Habeas Corpus.—Whether the Court of Appeal has any jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the refusal of a divisional court to issue a writ of habeas corpus, on the application of a person who has been arrested for an alleged extradition crime, quere. Reg. v. Weil, 9 Q. B. D. 701; 47 L. T. 630; 31 W. R. 60; 15 Cox, C. C. 189—C. A.

— Bail.—A prisoner applied for bail to a divisional court of the Queen's Bench Division but was refused; he then appealed to the Court of Appeal:—Held, that the decision of the divisional court was a judgment of the High Court in a criminal matter, and therefore that the Court of Appeal had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. Reg. v. Foote, 10 Q. B. D. 378; 52 L. J., Q. B. 528; 48 L. T. 394; 31 W. R. 490; 15 Cox, C. C. 240—C. A.

— Striking Solicitor off Rolls.—An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from a judgment of a divisional court striking a solicitor off the rolls, as it is not a judgment "in a criminal cause or matter" within the meaning of s. 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Hardwick, In re, 49 L. T. 584; 32 W. R. 191—C. A.

In Actions pending when Judicature Acts came in force.—In an action pending when the Judicature Acts came into operation, leave was given to appeal from an order on demurrer, the issues of fact not having been tried, and the time for appealing was extended. Fitzgerald v. Dawson, 45 L. J., C. P. 152—C. A.

When no petition of appeal from a decree has been presented before the Judicature Act came into operation, an appellant must proceed under the new practice. Bartlam v. Yates, 1 Ch. D. 13; 33 L. T. 338; 24 W. R. 19—C. A.

A decree was made upon motion for decree by a vice-chancellor before the Judicature Acts came into operation. No petition of appeal had been presented:—Held, that there was no cause, matter, or proceeding pending within the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 22; that the appeal must be prosecuted in accordance with the new practice, and that no direction of the court as to the form and manner of proceeding was necessary. Ib.

Default of Appearance in Court below.—Whether a plaintiff, in whose absence the defendant has, after argument, obtained judgment in a special case, can appeal from such judgment, quere. Allum v. Dickenson, 9 Q. B. D. 632; 47 L. T. 493; 30 W. R. 930—C. A.

Seemingly, if, however, judgment on the special case had gone simply by default without argument, there could (by analogy to the case of a similar judgment obtained in an ordinary action) be no appeal. Ib.

A person against whom an order is made on his default in appearing may appeal from the order on its merits. Streete, Ex parte, Morris, In re, 19 Ch. D. 216; 45 L. T. 634; 30 W. R. 127—C. A.

If a party appealing from the decision of a judge at chambers does not appear in the High Court to support the motion, and judgment is thereupon pronounced against him in his absence, he cannot afterwards appeal to the Court of Appeal against the judgment of the High Court; the Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to afford him relief. Walker v. Budden, 5 Q. B. D. 267; 49 L. J., Q. B. 159; 28 W. R. 665—C. A.

Trial by Judge without a Jury.—In an action for an injunction to restrain the defendant from building so as to interfere with a right of way claimed by the plaintiff, which came on for trial before the Master of the Rolls, with witnesses, the Master of the Rolls found a verdict for the plaintiff as to the right of way, and directed the action to stand over in order to give the parties an opportunity of coming to an arrangement. Upon the action coming on again, a mandatory injunction was granted. The defendant, after the expiration of twenty-one days from the time when the verdict had been given, appealed from the order:—Held, that the finding that the plaintiff was entitled to the right of way was an interlocutory order, which can only be appealed from within twenty-one days. Kreil v. Burrell, 10 Ch. D. 420; 48 L. J., Ch. 252; 39 L. T. 461; 27 W. R. 234—C. A.

When in an action in the Chancery Division, tried by a judge of that division without a jury, definite issues of fact are settled at the commencement of the trial, then, whether the judge delivers his finding on the facts and his judgment on the whole case on separate days or at one time, his finding of fact is an interlocutory order, and must be appealed from within twenty-one days. But if no definite issues of fact are settled at the commencement of the trial, the finding of fact as well as the judgment on the whole case may be appealed from at any time within a year. Krehl v. Burrell, explained. Lowe v. Lowe, 10 Ch. D. 432; 48 L. J., Ch. 383; 40 L. T. 236; 27 W. R. 309—C. A.

Where an action has been tried by a judge without a jury, if the unsuccessful party is dissatisfied with the judgment either on the ground that the judge has misdirected himself as to the law, or that his findings as to the facts are against the weight of evidence, the proper mode of obtaining relief is by appeal to the Court of Appeal, and not by motion for a new trial.—Krehl v. Burrell (10 Ch. D. 420) commented on. Potter v. Cotton, 5 Ex. D. 137; 49 L. J., Q. B. 153; 41 L. T. 460; 28 W. R. 160.—C. A.

Where an action has been tried by a judge of one of the Common Law Divisions without a jury an appeal lies direct to the Court of Appeal. It is not proper in such a case to move for a new trial. Pannell v. Nunn, 28 W. R. 940—C. A.

—Motion for New Trial for Rejection of Evidence.—Where, on a trial in the Chancery Division, the judge has not found a separate verdict on a question of fact, but has decided the case as a whole according to the old practice of the Court of Chancery, a motion for a new trial on the ground of improper rejection of evidence cannot be made, the remedy of the unsuccessful party being by appeal from the order, and the Court of Appeal having power at the hearing of the appeal to admit any evidence which may have been improperly rejected. Krehl v. Burrell (10 Ch. D. 420) distinguished. Dollman v. Jones, 12 Ch. D. 553; 27 W. R. 877—C. A.

Appeal against Judgment at Trial with Jury.]

—During the trial of an action before a jury the judge was asked by the defendants' counsel to nonsuit the plaintiffs, or to direct a finding for the defendants, upon the ground that no evidence had been given in support of the plaintiffs' case; this the judge refused to do, and the jury found the issue left to them in favour of the plaintiffs. Upon the following day the judge directed judgment to be entered for the plaintiffs, and stated his reasons for holding that there was evidence to support the finding of the jury. The defendants appealed to the Court of Appeal against the judgment directed to be entered:—Held, that the appeal would not lie; for the judgment was upon the face of it correct, so long as the finding stood unreversed, and the Court of Appeal has no power, in the first instance, to review the finding of a jury; and the defendants' grounds of complaint being for misdirection, they ought to have applied to the Exchequer Division for a new trial under Ord. XXXIX. r. 1. Yettis v. Foster, infra, followed. Davies v. Felix, 4 Ex. D. 32; 48 L. J., Ex. 3; 39 L. T. 322; 27 W. R. 108—C. A.

When it is desired to appeal to the Court of Appeal against a judge's direction to a jury, the proper mode is to give ordinary notice of appeal from his ruling. Cheese v. Lovejoy, 37 L. T. 294; 25 W. R. 453—C. A.

When a judge directs the jury to find a verdict for one of the parties, and gives judgment the other party cannot appeal to the Court of Appeal, but must apply to the divisional court for a new trial. Yettis v. Foster, 3 C. P. D. 437; 38 L. T. 742; 26 W. R. 745—C. A.

When a judge directs a nonsuit, and the facts are disputed, the plaintiff cannot appeal to the Court of Appeal, but must apply to the divisional court for a new trial. Ettv v. Wilson, 3 Ex. D. 359; 47 L. J., Ex. 664; 39 L. T. 83—C. A. See also cases, post, PRACTICE (NEW TRIAL).

From Refusal to Nonsuit.]—A motion to set aside a judgment refusing to nonsuit must be made to the divisional court, and not to the Court of Appeal. Clarke v. Midland Railway Company, 44 L. T. 131—C. A.

From Order at Trial depriving of Costs.]—The plaintiffs, after a trial with a jury, recovered 5*l.* beyond the amount paid into court. The judge at the trial gave judgment for 5*l.*, but without costs. The divisional court reversed this decision as to costs:—Held, that the appeal (if any) from the order of the judge was to the Court of Appeal, and not to the divisional court. Marsden v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 7 Q. B. D. 641; 50 L. J., Q. B. 318; 44 L. T. 239; 29 W. R. 580—C. A.

From Decision of Judge after hearing Witnesses.]—Although the Court of Appeal, when called on to review the conclusion of a judge of first instance who had heard the witnesses, will give great weight to the consideration that the demeanour and manner of the witnesses are material elements in judging of the credibility of the witnesses, yet it will, in a proper case, act upon its own view of conflicting evidence. Bigsby v. Dickinson, 4 Ch. D. 24; 46 L. J., Ch. 280; 35 L. T. 679; 25 W. R. 122—C. A.

Power to review Findings as to Facts.]—Where a trial has taken place before a judge without a jury, the Court of Appeal, in all cases except that of surprise, has jurisdiction upon an appeal to review the findings as to the facts, without a rule for a new trial having been obtained. Jones v. Hough, 5 Ex. D. 115; 49 L. J., Ex. 211; 42 L. T. 108—C. A.

From Compulsory Order to refer.]—An appeal from a compulsory order of reference, made under s. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873, by a judge, sitting at nisi Prius or assizes, must be brought direct to the Court of Appeal. Hoch v. Boor, 49 L. J., C. P. 665; 43 L. T. 425—C. A.

Special Case stated by Arbitrator—Opinion of Court on.]—An action having been referred, with power to the arbitrator to state a special case, he stated a case for the opinion of the court on a point of law. The case was to be sent back to the arbitrator if the court was in favour of the plaintiff, and judgment was to be entered for the defendant if the court decided in favour of the latter. The court decided in favour of the plaintiff, and referred the matter back to the arbitrator:—Held, that the order was appealable. Shubrook v. Tynnell, 9 Q. B. D. 621; 46 L. T. 749; 30 W. R. 740—C. A.

Judge settling Form of Conveyance.]—In a sale by the court, one of the conditions was that, in case of dispute, the form of the covenants was to be settled by the judge. On disputes arising, the judge settled the covenants:—Held, that the order of a judge settling the form of a conveyance is subject to appeal. Pollock v. Rabbits, 21 Ch. D. 466; 47 L. T. 637; 31 W. R. 150—C. A.

Refusal to Commit for Contempt.—Where a judge has refused to commit for contempt, an appeal lies from such refusal, although where that refusal has been simply an exercise of judicial discretion, the Court of Appeal, while entertaining an appeal, will be slow to alter the decision of the court below. Ashworth v. Outram (5 Ch. D. 943) must not be treated as laying down a general rule that no appeal lies from a refusal to commit. Jarmain v. Chatterton, 20 Ch. D. 493; 51 L. J., Ch. 471; 30 W. R. 461—C. A.

A refusal by a judge at chambers to make an order to commit a defendant to prison for default of payment of a judgment debt is a matter within s. 50 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and therefore subject to appeal. Debenham v. Wardroper, 48 L. T. 235; 15 Cox, C. C. 207.

Interpleader Order in Bankruptcy.—Any order in interpleader made by the chief Judge in bankruptcy can be appealed from. Streeter, Ex parte, Morris, In re, 19 Ch. D. 216; 45 L. T. 634; 30 W. R. 127—C. A. Dodds v. Shepherd (1 Ex. D. 75) considered. Id.

— Summary Decision—Reference by Judge at Chambers to the Court—Appeal.—A judge at chambers referred an interpleader summons to a divisional court. The court barred the claimant and decided the case without ordering an interpleader issue:—Held, that such decision was given in exercise of the summary jurisdiction of a court or judge under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 126), s. 14, and was therefore final and without appeal. Turner v. Bridgett, 9 Q. B. D. 55; 51 L. J., Q. B. 377; 46 L. T. 517; 30 W. R. 586—C. A.

Election Petition—Interlocutory Matter.—From an order of a divisional court upon an interlocutory matter arising in an election petition, an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal. Harmon v. Park, 6 Q. B. D. 323; 50 L. J., Q. B. 227; 44 L. T. 81; 29 W. R. 750; 45 J. P. 436—C. A.

Order in Excess of Jurisdiction.—If a court acting in assumed exercise of a jurisdiction belonging to it, makes an order which, under the particular circumstances of the case, is beyond that jurisdiction, the order must, until it be discharged, be treated as a subsisting order, and can only be discharged upon an appeal. Padstow Total Loss and Collision Assurance Association, In re, Bryant, Ex parte, 20 Ch. D. 137; 51 L. J. Ch. 344; 45 L. T. 774; 30 W. R. 326—C. A.

Where a limited tribunal takes upon itself to exercise a jurisdiction which does not belong to it, its decision amounts to nothing, and does not create any necessity for an appeal. Att.-Gen. v. Hotham (Lord), 1 Turn. & Russ. 219; 3 Russ. 415.

• Order for Custody of Infant “until further Order”—Subsequent Application to vary.—When an order is made under s. 1 of the Infants Custody Act, 1873, on the petition of a mother, giving the custody of an infant child to her “until further order,” an application to vary the order by reason of something subsequent to its date should be made, not by way of appeal, but by motion before the judge of first instance. Such a motion can be made by the respondent to the original petition. The provision of s. 1 of the act, that the application shall be made by the mother by her next friend, applies only to the original petition. Holt, In re, 16 Ch. D. 115; 29 W. R. 341—C. A.

From Order on Appeal from Judge at Chambers.—When a motion has been made under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 50, to a divisional court or judge in Court, to discharge an order made by a judge in chambers, an appeal lies within twenty-one days to the Court of Appeal from an order refusing such motion. Dickson v. Harrison, 9 Ch. D. 243; 47 L. J., Ch. 761; 38 L. T. 794; 26 W. R. 730—C. A.

From Divisional Court on Appeal from Inferior Court.—An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from the decision of a divisional court on appeal from a county court under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, where the divisional court has given special leave to appeal under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 45, notwithstanding s. 20 of the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876. Crush v. Turner, 3 Ex. D. 303; 47 L. J., Ex. 639; 38 L. T. 595; 26 W. R. 673—C. A.

No appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from a decision of a divisional court on an appeal from the Mayor's Court, unless leave to appeal is given by the divisional court under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 45. Appleford v. Jenkins, 3 C. P. D. 489; 47 L. J., C. P. 615; 38 L. T. 801; 26 W. R. 734—C. A.

From Registrar sitting as Judge.—An order made by a registrar sitting as judge under Ord. LIV. is not, for the purposes of the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 50, an order made by a judge in chambers, and hence, where such an order has been reviewed by a judge in court, an appeal from the judge's decision will lie without special leave. The Virar, 2 P. D. 29; 35 L. T. 782; 25 W. R. 453—C. A.

Rule for a Certiorari.—An appeal from an order of the Queen's Bench Division, discharging a rule for a certiorari to bring up an order of justices in petty sessions, is not an appeal from an inferior court within s. 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and no leave to appeal is required. Reg. v. Pemberton, Reg. v. Smith, 5 Q. B. D. 95; 49 L. J., M. C. 29; 41 L. T. 664; 28 W. R. 362; 44 J. P. 184—C. A.

Rule for a Mandamus.—The decision of a divisional court discharging a rule for a mandamus to election commissioners to grant a certificate, which certificate, if given, would be a protection to a witness against criminal proceedings for bribery, does not relate to a criminal cause or matter, within the meaning of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, s. 47, and the Court of Appeal is not therefore deprived of jurisdiction to hear an appeal against such decision. Reg. v. Holl, 7 Q. B. D. 575; 50 L. J., Q. B. 763—C. A.

An appeal lies from a rule for a mandamus.

Reg. v. Bishopscarmouth Burial Board, 5 Q. B. D. 67—C. A.

Suspension of Certificate by Court of Inquiry into Shipping Casualty.—See post, SHIPPING.

From Mayor's Court.—Where the judge of the Mayor's Court, London, does an act beyond his jurisdiction, an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal. Pryor v. City Offices Company, 10 Q. B. D. 504; 52 L. J., Q. B. 362; 48 L. T. 698; 31 W. R. 777—C. A.

From Mayor's Court—Error.—The Court of Appeal, and not the Court of Appeal from inferior Courts, has succeeded to the jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer Chamber in cases of error on proceedings in the Mayor's Court, London. Le Blanch v. Reuter's Telegram Company, 1 Ex. D. 408; 34 L. T. 691; 25 W. R. 115.

In other Cases.—No appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from a decision of a divisional court on an appeal from the Mayor's court, unless leave to appeal is given by the divisional court under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 45. Appleford v. Jenkins, 3 C. P. D. 489; 47 L. J., C. P. 615; 38 L. T. 801; 26 W. R. 734—C. A.

Upon Cases stated by Quarter Sessions.—By s. 19 of the Judicature Act, 1873, the Court of Appeal has jurisdiction and power to hear and determine appeals from any judgment or order (with certain exceptions) of the High Court of Justice, or of any judges or judge thereof. By the interpretation clause (s. 100) "order" includes "rule." Held, that under this section the Court of Appeal had jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from a decision of the Queen's Bench Division upon a rule for quashing an order of quarter sessions as to the validity of a rate. Walsall (Overseers) v. London and North Western Railway Company, 4 App. Cas. 30; 48 L. J., Q. B. 65; 39 L. T. 453; 27 W. R. 189—H. L. (E.). Reversing 3 Q. B. D. 457; 47 L. J., Q. B. 711; 38 L. T. 665; 26 W. R. 705—C. A.

The Public Health Act, 1875, provides in certain cases for an appeal from petty sessions to quarter sessions, and provides that the quarter sessions may state the facts specially for the determination of a superior court. In a case under this act an appeal was brought to quarter sessions, which quashed the order appealed from, subject to a case reserved. A certiorari issued, a rule calling on the prosecutor to shew cause was granted, was argued in, and discharged by the Queen's Bench Division. Leave to appeal was not given:—Held, that the case so reserved fell within the provisions of s. 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and that no appeal could be brought from the decision of the divisional court upon it unless special leave to appeal were granted. Reg. v. Swindon New Town Local Board, 49 L. J., Q. B. 522; 42 L. T. 614; 28 W. R. 80; 44 J. P. 505—C. A.

Where the Queen's Bench Division, in the exercise of its original common law jurisdiction, affirms or quashes an order of sessions, an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal, although no leave to appeal be given. Reg. v. Savin, 6 Q. B. D. 309; 29 W. R. 638—C. A.

County Court—Order of Divisional Court dis-

charging Rule for Order to Judge.—The right to appeal from an order of a divisional court, discharging a rule for an order on a county court judge to hear an action, is not taken away because s. 44 of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, which substitutes such rule for a mandamus to the county court judge, enacts that, where any superior court shall have refused such rule, no other superior court shall grant it. Morgan v. Rice, 6 Q. B. D. 508—C. A.

Prohibition to Judge.—An appeal lies from the decision of a divisional court making absolute a rule for a prohibition to a county court judge. Barton v. Titchmarsh, 49 L. J., Ex. 573; 42 L. T. 610; 28 W. R. 821—C. A.

From Divisional Court, in Action remitted for Trial under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10.—Where a cause has been remitted for trial before a county court under sect. 10 of the County Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), it becomes a county court cause, and the determination of a divisional court, on appeal from the decision of the county court judge, is within sect. 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and therefore final, unless special leave to appeal be given. Bowles v. Drake, 8 Q. B. D. 325; 51 L. J., Q. B. 66; 45 L. T. 576; 30 W. R. 333—C. A.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26.—Where an action brought in the superior court has, after issue joined, been remitted for trial to a county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, the action still remains in the superior court, and an appeal to the Court of Appeal will lie without special leave from the refusal of a divisional court to grant a new trial. Babbage v. Coulburn, 52 L. J., Q. B. 50; 46 L. T. 515—C. A.

Appeals from Discretion.—Sect. 19 of the Judicature Act, 1873, does not give the Court of Appeal jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the judge of the High Court with reference to a matter which before the passing of the Judicature Acts was in the absolute discretion of the judge. The Amstel, 2 P. D. 186; 47 L. J., P. 11; 37 L. T. 138; 26 W. R. 69—C. A.

Where a judge has exercised his discretion, the Court of Appeal will not interfere unless he has proceeded on a wrong principle or made a manifest slip. Terrell, In re, 22 Ch. D. 473; 47 L. T. 588; 31 W. R. 208—C. A. S. P., Moor-daff, In re, Burgoine v. Moordaff, 8 P. D. 205; 52 L. J., P. 77; 48 L. T. 504; 31 W. R. 735—C. A.

There must be a plain and clear case to justify the Court of Appeal in interfering with the discretion of the judge below. But the Court of Appeal will review the discretion if it be exercised in consequence of an opinion on a point of law which is wrong. Martin, In re, Hunt v. Chambers, 20 Ch. D. 369; 51 L. J. Ch. 683; 46 L. T. 399; 30 W. R. 527. S. P., Ormerod v. Todmorden Mill Company, 8 Q. B. D. 664; 51 L. J., Q. B. 348; 46 L. T. 669; 30 W. R. 805—C. A.; Gilder v. Morrison, 30 W. R. 815, and Mark, Ex parte, Amor, In re, 31 W. R. 101—C. A.

A case of miscarriage must be shewn. It is not sufficient for the appellant to convince the judges of the Court of Appeal that the order is one which they would not in the first instance have made, but he must shew that the judge had gone wrong in his law or made a mistake of fact, or ordered something so utterly unreasonable that the Court of Appeal is obliged to say there has not been a reasonable exercise of his discretion. Wigney v. Wigney, 7 P. D. 182; 51 L. J., P. 62; 46 L. T. 442; 30 W. R. 722.

As a general rule the court will not interfere unless a wrong principle has been applied in exercising the discretion, or there has evidently been some serious miscarriage. Berdan v. Greenwood, 20 Ch. D. 767, n.; 46 L. T. 524, n.

By the Supreme Court of Judicature Acts, 1873, 1875, power to review the exercise of judicial discretion is given; and the Court of Appeal must ascertain whether the discretion has been properly exercised. Reg. v. Maidenhead (Mayor), 9 Q. B. D. 503; 51 L. J., Q. B. 448.

The exercise of the discretion by a judge is subject to appeal, but the Court of Appeal ought not to interfere unless it is clearly shewn that the judge has exercised his discretion wrongly. Merchant Banking Company of London, Ex parte, Durham, In re, 16 Ch. D. 623; 50 L. J., Ch. 606; 44 L. T. 358; 29 W. R. 363—C. A.; S. P., Hayter v. Beall, 44 L. T. 131—C. A.; Sheard, Ex parte, Pooley, In re (No. 1), 16 Ch. D. 107; 44 L. T. 259—C. A.; and Silkstone, &c. Company, In re, 45 L. T. 449; 30 W. R. 33—C. A.

— Before Judicature Acts.—The conduct of a suit is a matter entirely within the discretion of the judge in whose court the suit has been instituted, and the Court of Appeal will not entertain an appeal on such a matter. Dowbiggin v. Trotter, Trotter v. Trotter, 27 L. T. 731.

When a matter is left by the legislature as a pure matter of discretion in a vice-chancellor, the Court of Appeal will not interfere with his exercise of that discretion, unless it is apparent that he has gone very clearly wrong. Land and Sea Telegraph Construction, In re, 25 L. T. 236—L. J.

The making of an order to dismiss a bill for want of prosecution is a matter within the discretion of the judge to whose court the cause is attached, and his refusal to make such an order ought not to be made the subject of an appeal. Sheffield v. Sheffield, 10 L. R., Ch. 206; 44 L. J., Ch. 304; 23 W. R. 378.

An appeal will lie from an order of a judge of the Court of Chancery directing an issue before a jury; but if the Court of Appeal is of opinion that there is really a conflict of evidence, it will not interfere with the discretion of the judge in directing an issue. Williams v. Guest, 10 L. R., Ch. 467; 44 L. J., Ch. 559; 33 L. T. 291; 23 W. R. 822.

— Leave to Appeal when Granted—No Doubt as to Correctness of Decision.—It is against the spirit of the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 45, which gives the divisional court power to allow an appeal in certain cases, to accede to an application for leave to appeal where the court can entertain no doubt as to the correctness of the decision. Cottam v. Guest, 6 Q. B. D. 75; S. P., Barber v. Stone, 50 L. J., Q. B. 297; and Hollingbourn Guardians v. West Ham Guardians, 6 Q. B. D. 593.

The same rule applies if there be very little doubt. Grainger v. Aynsley, 29 W. R. 244.

— Where general Question could not be decided.—The court refused leave to appeal, because the peculiar facts of the case were so mixed up with the broad and general question that the latter could not be decided so as to constitute a general authority for the future. (Guiger v. St. Mary (Ventry), Islington, 29 W. R. 539.

— Important Question raised.—In cases raising important points of law, the court will give leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal where, on a proper construction of the acts governing appeals, such leave is necessary. The Rona, 46 L. T. 601.

— In Criminal Matter—Bastardy.—The divisional court cannot give leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal in bastardy, which is a criminal matter. Daries v. Ecanis, 9 Q. B. D. 244; 51 L. J., M. C. 136.

— Staying Proceedings when vexatious.—A defendant against whom a decree for payment of a sum of money had been made filed a petition for liquidation. A resolution for liquidation by arrangement was passed and registered, and a trustee appointed. After these proceedings the debtor, who had not obtained his discharge, appealed against the decree. The plaintiff moved to stay proceedings under the appeal:—Held, that an order ought to be made staying the proceedings, as being vexatious. Vale v. Oppert, 5 Ch. D. 969—C. A.

— From Order as to Costs.—See COSTS.

3. PARTIES TO APPEAL.

— Appeal by one of several Plaintiffs.—Two of the three trustees of a settlement brought an action to have the trusts administered under the direction of the court. Malins, V.-C., dismissed the action with costs. One of the plaintiffs having declined to concur in an appeal, the other appealed alone. The Court of Appeal held that such an appeal was regular, and must be allowed to proceed; and, being of opinion that a sufficient ground had been shewn for asking the direction of the court, a decree for administration of the trusts was made. Beckett v. Attwood, 18 Ch. D. 54; 50 L. J., Ch. 687; 44 L. T. 660; 29 W. R. 796—C. A.

— Death of Appellant after Appeal set down—Order of Revivor.—A defendant, P., gave notice of appeal from a judgment, and set it down. After this he died, and his executrix obtained an order of course at the Rolls that the appeal might be carried on and prosecuted by her in like manner as it might have been carried on and prosecuted by P. if he had not died:—Held, that the order was sufficient, and that the executrix was entitled to proceed with the appeal. Ransom v. Patton, 17 Ch. D. 767; 44 L. T. 688—C. A.

— Before Judicature Acts.—On a bill by P. against R. and A., who all separately claimed the same property, a decree was made in favour of P. On appeal by A. alone, the court being of opinion that R. was entitled, dismissed the bill against both defendants. Vaughan v. Halliday, 9 L. R., Ch. 561; 30 L. T. 741; 22 W. R. 886.

An appeal by a person not a party to the record, but who appeared without filing a supplemental bill in order to save expense, was allowed to be set down for hearing. Nickisson v. Cuckill, 3 De G., J. & S. 622.

Leave to Appeal to Person not Party, how Obtained.—Leave to appeal from an order to a person interested in, but not a party to an action, may be obtained by an ex parte application to the Court of Appeal. Markham, In re, Markham v. Markham, 16 Ch. D. 1; 29 W. R. 228—C. A.

— When Granted.—In an action commenced by a bondholder on behalf of himself and all other bondholders, the plaintiff obtained an order for a receiver. One of the bondholders represented by the plaintiff, being dissatisfied with the order, applied for leave to appeal:—Held, that the order having been made in favour of the class to which the applicant belonged, and having been obtained by the plaintiff, who represented him in the action, he could not appeal against it. Watson v. Cure (No. 1), 17 Ch. D. 19; 44 L. T. 40; 29 W. R. 433—C. A.

Semble, the proper course for the dissentient shareholder to pursue was to apply to the court below to be made a defendant to the action. Ib.

Leave will not be given to a person to appeal from an order made in an action to which he is not a party, unless his interest is such that he might have been made a party by service. Cruicour v. Salter, 30 W. R. 329—C. A.

Application by Liquidator for Leave to Appeal.—See post, COMPANY.

4. TIME WITHIN WHICH APPEAL MUST BE BROUGHT.

- a. In what Cases.
- b. From what Period Time Runs.
- c. Extension of Time.
- d. Other Points.

a. In what Cases.

Time within which Appeals should be brought.] —Observations on the change of opinion in the legislature and the judges as to the period during which orders should be appealable. Curtis v. Sheffield (No. 2), 21 Ch. D. 1; 51 L. J., Ch. 535; 46 L. T. 177; 30 W. R. 581—C. A.

Time Limit does not apply to Notice by Respondent.—A notice given by the respondent to an appeal under r. 6 of Ord. LVIII. of the rules of Court, 1875, need not be given within the time limited by r. 15. Bishop, Ex parte, For, In re, 15 Ch. D. 400—C. A.

From Refusal of Ex parte Application.—A creditor claimed to prove against the estate of a testator which was being administered by the court, and his proof was in part allowed and in part rejected by the chief clerk, whose decision was on the 2nd of June affirmed by the vice-chancellor. The order of the vice-chancellor was passed and entered on the 2nd of August following, and on the 9th of August the creditor gave notice of appeal:—Held, that the order appealed from was a refusal of an application within the meaning of Ord. LVIII. r. 15, and that the appeal was consequently brought too late. Trail v. Jackson, 4 Ch. D. 7; 46 L. J., Ch. 16; 25 W. R. 36—C. A.

Simple Refusal, what is.—Whenever an order contains a declaration as such, or as an expression of the opinion of the court, so as to bind the rights of the parties, it does not amount to a simple refusal of the application within the rule of Ord. LVIII., so as to compel the bringing of an appeal within twenty-one days from the pronouncing of the order. Clay and Tetley, In re, 16 Ch. D. 3; 50 L. J., Ch. 164; 43 L. T. 402; 29 W. R. 5—C. A.

Disallowance of Claim of Creditor under Administration Judgment.—Where a creditor has brought in a claim in answer to advertisements for creditors issued under a judgment for administration, and that claim is disallowed, such disallowance is a refusal within the meaning of Ord. LVIII. r. 15, and an appeal can be brought from it without any order being drawn up. Clagett, In re, Fordham v. Clagett, 20 Ch. D. 134; 51 L. J., Ch. 461; 46 L. T. 70; 30 W. R. 374—C. A.

Pending Appeal.—Two actions brought by A. and B. respectively, against C., in respect of injuries sustained by them in an accident that occurred through his negligence, resulted in verdicts for C. Final judgment was signed in July, 1874, and in September, 1874, A. paid the costs in his action. A. and B. both gave due notice of appeal, but A. did not proceed with his appeal until after B.'s appeal had been heard in November, 1875. On January 18, 1876, he gave notice of appeal, and his appeal came on for hearing in the form prescribed by the Judicature Act, 1875:—Held, that although a year had elapsed since judgment had been signed, the plaintiff's right to appeal was not barred by the Judicature Act, 1875, Ord. LVIII. r. 15, as under the special circumstances of the case it was a pending appeal within the meaning of the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 22. Taylor v. Greenhalgh, 24 W. R. 311—C. A.

Interlocutory or Final—Demurrer.—An order overruling a demurrer which goes to the whole cause of action is not an interlocutory order within Ord. LVIII. r. 15. Trouell v. Shenton, 8 Ch. D. 318; 47 L. J., Ch. 738; 38 L. T. 369; 26 W. R. 837—C. A.

Judgment under Order XIV.—An order empowering a plaintiff to sign judgment upon a specially indorsed writ is an interlocutory, and not a final proceeding, for it does not become effectual against the defendant until it has been perfected by the further step of signing the judgment; and, therefore, an appeal upon an order of this kind made by one of the divisions of the High Court, must be brought before the expiration of twenty-one days. Standard Discount Company v. La Grange, 3 C. P. D. 67; 47 L. J., C. P. 3; 37 L. T. 372; 26 W. R. 25—C. A.

Interpleader Issue.—Two actions having been brought relating to a cargo, an interpleader issue was directed to try the question to whom it belonged. It was tried by the Master of the Rolls, who made an order finding in favour of the defendants, and declaring them to be entitled to the cargo. Subsequently an order was made in the actions directing the proceeds of the cargo, which were in court, to be paid to the defendants:—Held, that the former order was an interlocutory order from which an appeal could not be brought after twenty-one days. McAndrew v. Barker, 7 Ch. D. 701; 47 L. J., Ch. 340; 37 L. T. 810; 26 W. R. 317—C. A.

— Trial without Jury—Facts separate from Judgment.—In an action in the Chancery Division tried by a judge without a jury, if the judge takes upon himself the trial of specific questions of fact and finds his verdict upon them as a matter separate from the judgment which he gives upon that verdict, the judge's verdict upon the questions of fact is an interlocutory order and cannot be appealed from after the expiration of twenty-one days. Krehl v. Burrell, 10 Ch. D. 420; 48 L. J., Ch. 383; 39 L. T. 461; 27 W. R. 234—C. A. See cases ante, col. 141.

An action in the Chancery Division to restrain the obstruction of a right of way claimed by the plaintiff over land belonging to the defendant, was tried by a Judge of the Chancery Division without a jury on the 4th and 6th December, and the judge having stated that he would first try the issue of fact whether the plaintiff was entitled to the alleged right of way, found that the plaintiff was entitled to the alleged right of way, and reserved his judgment on the finding to a future day. On the 28th January, upon motion for judgment by the plaintiff, the judge gave judgment in his favour, granting a mandatory injunction. In April the defendant gave notice of appeal from the order, which embodied both the finding of fact and the judgment:—Held, that the appeal from the finding of fact ought to have been brought within twenty-one days from the 6th of December, and that the appeal could only proceed upon the footing that the plaintiff was entitled to the right of way. Id.

— Order partly Final and partly Interlocutory.—When an order on an interlocutory application and an order on further consideration are made at the same time and are included in one order, an appeal from the order on the interlocutory application must nevertheless be brought within twenty-one days, although such order in effect determines the issue in the cause. Cummins v. Herron, 4 Ch. D. 787; 46 L. J., Ch. D. 423; 36 L. T. 41; 25 W. R. 325—C. A.

— Rule Absolute for New Trial.—An order absolute for a new trial is an interlocutory order, an appeal from which must be brought within twenty-one days from the date thereof, under Ord. LVIII. r. 15. Highton v. Treherne, 48 L. J., Ex. 167; 39 L. T. 411; 27 W. R. 245—C. A.

— To vary Certificate.—Goods seized in execution were claimed by the trustees of a settlement made by the debtor. A decree was made in an interpleader suit directing an inquiry whether the settlement was a valid settlement of the goods, and who were entitled to them. The chief clerk certified that the settlement was invalid, and the judgment creditor entitled. By an order made on further consideration and on adjourned summons to vary the certificate, the court declared the settlement valid, and ordered the certificate to be varied accordingly, and directed the proceeds of the goods to be paid to the trustees:—Held, that the substantial part of this order was an order to vary the certificate, which was an interlocutory order, and that an appeal brought after twenty-one days was too late. White v. Witt, 5 Ch. D. 589; 46 L. J., Ch. 560; 37 L. T. 110; 25 W. R. 435—C. A.

— Special Case stated by Arbitrator—Opinion of Court on.—An action having been referred, with power for the arbitrator to state a special case, he stated a case for the opinion of the court on a point of law. The case was to be sent back to the arbitrator if the court was in favour of the plaintiff, and judgment was to be entered for the defendant if the court decided in favour of the latter. The court decided in favour of the plaintiff, and referred the matter back to the arbitrator:—Held, that it was a final and not an interlocutory order. Shubbrook v. Tufnell, 9 Q. B. D. 621; 46 L. T. 749; 30 W. R. 740—C. A.

An arbitrator to whom an action had been referred stated a case for the opinion of the court, asking for its decision upon certain points; the case was to go back to the arbitrator whichever way the court decided; on an appeal from the decision of the court:—Held, to be an interlocutory order within the meaning of Ord. LVIII. r. 15, and that it must be brought within twenty-one days. Collins v. Paddington (Vestry), 5 Q. B. D. 368; 49 L. J., Q. B. 264, 612; 42 L. T. 573; 28 W. R. 588—C. A.

— Order depriving of Costs.—The plaintiffs after a trial with a jury recovered 5*l.*, and the judge at the trial ordered judgment for that sum, but without costs. The divisional court reversed this judgment as to costs:—Held, that the appeal from the order of the divisional court was not an appeal from an interlocutory order. Maraden v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 7 Q. B. D. 641; 50 L. J., Q. B. 318; 44 L. T. 239; 29 W. R. 580—C. A.

— Addition as to Costs made to Decree.—An addition made to a decree upon motion giving directions as to costs as to which the decree itself was silent, is a portion of the decree, and therefore can be examined in an appeal from the decree, and is not an interlocutory order within the meaning of Ord. LVIII. r. 15. The City of Manchester, 5 P. D. 221; 49 L. J., P. 81; 42 L. T. 521—C. A.

— Against Order on Summons in Administration Suit.—After an action had been brought for the administration of a testator's estate the executrix carried on the testator's trade with his assets, and incurred a trade debt for which the creditor brought an action and obtained judgment and execution, under which he seized some of the testator's assets. The sheriff interpleaded, and the proceeds of the sale were paid into court in the administration action. The creditor took out a summons in the administration action claiming the proceeds of the sale, but his claim was refused:—Held, that the order, although finally determining the rights of the parties, was an interlocutory order under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. LVIII. r. 15, and that an appeal must be brought within twenty-one days. Phrycey v. Phrycey, 12 Ch. D. 305; 41 L. T. 607—C. A.

— Petition under Lands Clauses Act.—A petition having been presented for payment out of court of a fund paid in under the Lands Clauses Act as the purchase-money of a devised estate, the court, on the 18th of June, made an order declaring the construction of the will and directing inquiries as to the persons interested. An application was made on behalf of some of the parties who were resident in America to extend the time for appealing to four weeks from the 8th of July, in order to allow time for the persons acting for them under a power of attorney to consult them as to appealing:—Held, that the order was a final one. Jacques, In re, Carlisle Corporation, Ex parte, 18 Ch. D. 392; 45 L. T. 297; 30 W. R. 394—C. A.

— Order under Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874.—The time within which an appeal can be brought from an order under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, s. 9, is twenty-one days. Blyth and Young, In re, 13 Ch. D. 416; 41 L. T. 746; 28 W. R. 266—C. A.

— Order under Trustee Relief Act.—Under Ord. LVIII. rr. 9, 15, an appeal from an order made upon a petition under the Trustee Relief Act must be brought within twenty-one days. Baillie, In re, 4 Ch. D. 785; 46 L. J., Ch. 330; 35 L. T. 917; 25 W. R. 310—C. A.

— Order in Winding-up and in an Action.—An action was brought by a debenture holder of a company on behalf of himself and the other debenture holders to enforce their securities. After this an order was made for winding-up the company. An arrangement was proposed for the making over the undertaking to the Secretary of State for India on certain terms, and an order was made in the winding-up and in the action sanctioning the arrangement and declaring that no moneys payable by the Secretary of State to the stockholders and debenture holders of the company under the arrangement should be treated as assets of the company. An unsecured creditor of the company, who did not know of this order at the time when it was made, applied after a lapse of more than twenty-one days from his receiving a copy of the order, but within the time for appealing from a final order in an action, for leave to appeal against it:—Held, that as the applicant had no such interest that he could have been a party to the action the order must, as regarded him, be treated as an order made only in the winding-up, that Ord. LVIII. r. 9, applied, and that he was out of time. Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, In re; Wood v. Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, 23 Ch. D. 248; 49 L. T. 228—C. A.

Before Judicature Acts.—The defendant leased a coal mine to the plaintiffs, reserving royalties and a dead rent. They covenanted to work the coal in a fair, honest, and workmanlike manner, and to use all reasonable diligence, . . . accidents or other unavoidable causes excepted. After a time they discontinued working the coal, being prevented from doing so by an influx of water which drowned the mine. They continued to pay the dead rent for several years, but at length the defendant refused to receive it, and commenced an ejectment against the plaintiffs for breach of the covenant to work the mine. The plaintiffs then filed a bill to restrain the action. The defendant demurred on the ground that the remedy was at law. The demurrer was overruled. The defendant put in an answer, and thereby claimed the benefit of the demurrer. He afterwards died, and the suit was revived against his representative. The suit came on to be heard, and an injunction was granted to restrain the action. An appeal was brought from the decree, and also from the order overruling the demurrer:—Held, that the defendant was not too late in appealing from the order overruling the demurrer, and the demurrer was allowed with costs. Simpson v. Ingleyby, 27 L. T. 695; 20 W. R. 993—L. J.

A person against whom a decree was made by the Court of Appeal was at the date of the decree residing out of the jurisdiction, and suffering from softening of the brain, of which disease he died, nearly three years after the date of the decree:—Held, that these were not such peculiar circumstances as to render it just and expedient to enlarge the time for enrolment of the decree under the Gen. Ord. XXIII. r. 28. Hooper v. Gumm, 26 L. T. 537—L. J.

b. From what Period Time Runs.

Several Distinct Claims in One Application.—When several distinct claims are joined in one application, and an order is made allowing some of them and making no mention of the others, an appeal asking that all the claims should be allowed, must be brought within twenty-one days from the hearing of the application. Berdan v. Birmingham Small Arms and Metal Company, 7 Ch. D. 24; 47 L. J., Ch. 96; 37 L. T. 588; 26 W. R. 89—C. A.

On a summons specifying five distinct matters in regard to which the defendant desired better particulars, the application was granted with regard to two, and the order contained no express reference to the other three. On appeal by the defendant from such order:—Held, that the appeal not having been brought within twenty-one days from the refusal of the application, was too late. Id.

When several claims are joined in one application, and some of the claims are allowed and some refused, an appeal from the refusal must be brought within twenty-one days from the date of the refusal, not from the date of perfecting the order. Trail v. Jackson, 4 Ch. D. 7; 46 L. J., Ch. 16; 25 W. R. 36—C. A.

Refusal—Order as to Costs.—When an interlocutory motion is refused, and the court at the same time makes an order as to the costs of the motion, this addition does not enlarge the time for appealing, which still begins to run from the time of the refusal of the order, and not from the time of its being perfected by entry. Swindell v. Birmingham Syndicate, 3 Ch. D. 127; 45 L. J., Ch. 756; 35 L. T. 111; 24 W. R. 911—C. A.

Signing not Pronouncing Order.—When an order has been made, the twenty-one days allowed for appealing run from the signing of the order and not from the day when it was pronounced. Lewer, In re, Garrard, Ex parte, 5 Ch. D. 61;

Dismissal of Action — Pronouncing Judgment.—The time for appealing from the dismissal of a suit at the hearing dates from the time of pronouncing the judgment; the word "application" in Ord. LVIII. r. 15, being applicable to the hearing of a suit as well as to an interlocutory proceeding. Where a suit in Chancery was brought to an issue on replication filed and heard under the old practice, it was held that the appeal must be regulated by the new practice, and the bill having been dismissed, the time for appealing was calculated from the pronouncing of the decree. International Financial Society v. City of Moscow Gas Company, 7 Ch. D. 241; 47 L. J., Ch. 258; 37 L. T. 736; 26 W. R. 272—C. A.

Payment out of Court—Refusal of Part.—A petitioner applied for payment out of court of the whole of a fund, his title to one moiety of which was not disputed. The court below ordered payment to him of one moiety only:—Held, that an appeal from this order was not an appeal from the refusal of an application, and that the time for appealing did not begin to run till the order was drawn up. Mitchell, In re, 9 Ch. D. 5—C. A.

c. Extension of Time.

Application not Ex parte.—After the expiration of the time limited for bringing an appeal, special leave to appeal will not be given upon an ex parte application. Lawrence, In re, Erennett v. Lawrence, 4 Ch. D. 139; 46 L. J., Ch. 119; 25 W. R. 107—C. A.

Grounds for Granting.—The grounds for allowing an extension of time for appeal considered. Blyth and Young, In re, 13 Ch. D. 416; 41 L. T. 746; 28 W. R. 266—C. A.

By Baggallay and Theisger, L.J.J., that although before judgment applications for extension of time should be freely granted, yet after judgment applications of that kind ought to be allowed only with caution. Collins v. Paddington (Vestry), 5 Q. B. D. 368; 49 L. J. Q. B. 264, 612; 42 L. T. 573; 28 W. R. 588—C. A.

By Bramwell, L.J., that an application for extension of time ought to be granted at any stage of an action, whenever an unintentional mistake has been committed, and the damage to the opposite party may be repaired by payment of costs or otherwise. Id.

Correctness of Decision Doubted.—After the expiration of the time allowed by Ord. LVIII. r. 15, for appealing from a final decree, the court will not, without special circumstances, enlarge the time for appealing. The mere fact that the Court of Appeal has in a subsequent case thrown doubt upon the correctness of the decision, is not a sufficient ground. Craig v. Phillips, 7 Ch. D. 249; 47 L. J., Ch. 239; 37 L. T. 772; 27 W. R. 293—C. A.

Mistake.—The mere fact that an appellant has misconstrued one of the rules, and by reason of such mistake has omitted to bring his appeal in time, is not a sufficient ground for enlarging the time for appeal. International Financial Society v. City of Moscow Gas Company, 7 Ch. D. 241; 47 L. J., Ch. 258; 37 L. T. 736; 26 W. R. 272—C. A.

A misapprehension of the meaning of the rules of court by counsel or solicitor is not sufficient ground to induce the court to extend the time for setting down the appeal. Mansel, In re, Rhodes v. Jenkins, 7 Ch. D. 711; 47 L. J., Ch. 870; 38 L. T. 403; 26 W. R. 361—C. A.

The Court of Appeal will not enlarge the time for appealing where, owing to the mistake, made bonâ fide, by the appellant's legal advisers, the time within which the appeal should have been brought has been allowed to run out. Highton v. Treherne, 48 L. J., Ex. 167; 39 L. T. 411; 27 W. R. 245—C. A.

A contributory, on the 29th of March, being twenty-one days from the pronouncing of a refusal to remove his name from the list, gave fourteen days' notice of appeal. On the 1st of April, conceiving that he ought to have given only a four days' notice, he withdrew his notice of appeal, and on the following day gave a four days' notice of appeal. On the hearing of the appeal, the objection was taken that it was too late:—Held, that the time ought to be extended. Ambrose Lake Tin and Copper Company, In re, Taylor's case, 8 Ch. D. 643; 47 L. J., Ch. 696; 38 L. T. 587; 26 W. R. 602—C. A.

A petition for winding-up a company having been dismissed, the petitioner's solicitor wrote a letter to the company's solicitor urging him to get the order drawn up, adding, "as we are advised and intend to give notice of appeal." No formal notice of appeal was given till more than twenty-one days had elapsed from the dismissal of the petition, when the petitioner gave a supplemental notice of appeal:—Held, that there was no such mistake or accident as would justify the court in extending the time for appeal. Mistake by appellant may be a ground for extending the time for appeal, without misconduct by respondent. Observations of James and Baggallay, L.J.J., in Blyth and Young, In re (13 Ch. D. 416) upon McAndrew v. Barker (7 Ch. D. 701) respecting the grounds for extension of time for appeal, approved. New Cullao, In re, 22 Ch. D. 484; 52 L. J., Ch. 283; 48 L. T. 251; 31 W. R. 185—C. A.

Fresh Parties Interested.—Where an order was made in 1861 which had been acted on until 1882, some of the property affected by the order had been incumbered, and fresh parties had become interested in the question who relied on the order of the court:—Held, that extension of time to appeal would not be granted. Peareth v. Marriott, 22 Ch. D. 182; 48 L. T. 170—C. A.

Special Grounds—Company—Order on Winding-up Petition.—The shareholders in a company passed an extraordinary resolution to wind up the company voluntarily, but the resolution was void, the majority of members who voted not being entitled to vote. A creditor filed a petition in the Chancery Court of the Duchy of Lancaster for a supervision order, or for a compulsory winding-up order, and as the court and the petitioner were ignorant of the fact that the resolution was invalid, a supervision order was made. Five months afterwards the petitioner discovered the invalidity of the resolution, and then moved before the Vice-Chancellor that the supervision order might be discharged, and a compulsory winding-up order made. This motion having been refused by the Vice-Chancellor on the ground of want of jurisdiction to rehear the petition, the petitioner appealed from the refusal of the motion, and also applied to the Court of Appeal for leave to appeal against the original order notwithstanding the lapse of time. The application for leave to appeal was opposed by the executors of a previous member, who had transferred their testator's shares to escape liability less than twelve months before the presenting of the original petition, but more than twelve months before the case came before the Court of Appeal, on the ground that if an order were now made on the original petition they would be made liable under the 38th section of the Companies Act, 1862:—Held, that leave to appeal, notwithstanding the lapse of time, ought to be given, the mistake as to the validity of the resolution forming a special ground for the application, and the respondents having no equity to resist it. Observations on the principle on which the court grants extension of time for appeal. New Callao, In re (22 Ch. D. 484), approved. Manchester Economic Building Society, In re, 24 Ch. D. 488—C. A.

— Administration Suit.—After an action had been brought for the administration of a testator's estate the executrix carried on the testator's trade with his assets, and incurred a trade debt for which the creditor brought an action and obtained judgment and execution, under which he seized some of the testator's assets. The sheriff interpleaded, and the proceeds of the sale were paid into court in the administration action. The creditor took out a summons in the administration action claiming the proceeds of the sale, but his claim was refused:—Held, that the order, although finally determining the rights of the parties, was an interlocutory order under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. LVIII. r. 15, and that an appeal must be brought within twenty-one days and enlargement of time refused. Phycsey v. Phycsey, 12 Ch. D. 305; 41 L. T. 607—C. A.

— No Equity against Respondents.—Leave to appeal notwithstanding the lapse of time was refused, the respondents not having done anything to raise an equity against them. McAndrew v. Barker, 7 Ch. D. 701; 47 L. J., Ch. 340; 37 L. T. 810; 26 W. R. 317—C. A. S. P., Mansel, In re, Rhodes v. Jenkins, 7 Ch. D. 711; 47 L. J., Ch. 870; 38 L. T. 403; 26 W. R. 361—C. A.

— Fund still in Court.—In the winding-up of a company, Jessel, M. R., following a reported decision of his own, ordered a certain fund, claimed by a creditor as against the liquidator, to be paid to the liquidator. The creditor allowed the time for appealing to expire. Afterwards the decision which had been followed was overruled by the Court of Appeal. The creditor then applied for leave to appeal against the order of the Master of the Rolls:—Held, that as the fund in question was still within the control of the court, leave to appeal should be given. Normanton Iron and Steel Company, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 223; 29 W. R. 300—C. A.

— Appeal from Decree declaring Future Rights.—A testator gave, after the death of his wife, a legacy to his son E. S. for life and after his death to his children, and if he died without issue it was to be divided among the testator's "surviving children." Six other legacies were given in a similar way. All the seven children survived the testator. A suit for administration was instituted to which all were parties. In 1836 an order on further consideration was made, at which time six of the children were living, and it was declared, that on the death of the widow, E. S. would become entitled to the interest on the legacy for life; that on his death it would be divisible among his children then living, but if he died without leaving issue, then among the children of the testator who were living at the testator's decease. The testator's widow died in 1838, and E. S. died in 1881 without ever having had a child. At this time one child only of the testator was living, and he applied for leave to appeal against the order of 1836, on the ground that it was irregular in making a prospective declaration as to future rights:—Held, that leave to appeal ought not to be granted, the fact that a declaration was made as to future rights being no sufficient reason for giving such leave in a case where all parties who could in any event be interested were before the court and adult when the declaration was made. Brandon v. Brandon (7 D. M. & G. 365) and Walmesley v. Foxhall (1 D. J. & S. 451) considered and distinguished. Curtis v. Sheffield (No. 2), 21 Ch. D. 1; 51 L. J., Ch. 535; 46 L. T. 177; 30 W. R. 581—C. A.

— Appellant Unaware of Order.—An appeal against an order in excess of jurisdiction was allowed more than a year after it was made, the appellant having applied for leave to appeal as soon as he became aware of the existence of the order. Padstow Tidal Loss and Collision Assurance Association, In re, Bryant, Ex parte, 20 Ch. D. 137; 51 L. J., Ch. 344; 45 L. T. 774; 30 W. R. 326—C. A.

— Where Interlocutory Order really final.—A petition having been presented for payment out of court of a fund paid in under the Lands Clauses Act as the purchase-money of a devised estate, the court, on the 18th of June, made an order declaring the construction of the will and directing inquiries as to the persons interested. An application was made on behalf of some of the parties who were resident in America to extend the time for appealing to four weeks from the 8th of July, in order to allow time for the persons acting for them under a power of attorney to consult them as to appealing:—Held, that as the order was a final one, the case, though within the letter, was not within the spirit of rule 9 of the Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. LVIII., requiring an appeal to be brought within twenty-one days, and that the extension of time ought to be granted. Jacques, In re, Carlisle Corporation, Ex parte, 18 Ch. D. 392; 45 L. T. 297; 30 W. R. 394—C. A.

— Some Parties only Served.—Notice of an appeal from the refusal to annul an adjudication of bankruptcy must be served on the trustee in bankruptcy as well as on the petitioning creditor. And if notice of the appeal is served on the petitioning creditor in time, but is not served in time on the trustee, the appeal must be dismissed. The time for appealing will not be extended in such a case. Ward, Ex parte,

— Mere Communication of Intention to Appeal.—The mere communication by an unsuccessful party to his opponent of his intention to appeal is not sufficient notice of appeal: nor, in the absence of other special circumstances, is it ground for an extension of time for appealing. Blyth and Young, In re, 13 Ch. D. 416; 41 L. T. 746; 28 W. R. 266—C. A.

A person against whom an order in a winding-up had been made for payment of money to the official liquidator served on the official liquidator a notice: "Take notice that it is the intention of J. L. to prosecute an appeal from the order made in this matter by the vice-warden of the stannaries on the 29th of May, 1878, whereby J. L. was ordered," &c.:—Held, that this notice was sufficient, and the appeal was ordered to be set down. West Jewell Tin Mining Company, In re, Little's case, 8 Ch. D. 806—C. A.

An arbitrator, to whom an action had been referred, stated a special case as to a question of damages for the opinion of the Queen's Bench Division: judgment was given upon the 1st of April, for the defendants. A few days after the plaintiff's solicitor wrote both to the arbitrator and to the defendants' solicitor, stating that an appeal would be brought: on the 18th he had an attack of illness which incapacitated him from attending to business until the 25th: he was informed by counsel on the 26th that it was then too late to set down the appeal as from an interlocutory order; and accordingly, on the 12th of May, he gave a fourteen days' notice of appeal as from a final order of judgment. At the hearing on the 23rd of February following, an objection was taken that the decision of the Queen's Bench Division was an interlocutory order or judgment, and that the appeal not having been brought within twenty-one days was too late: the objection having been allowed, the plaintiff then moved for an extension of time for appealing:—Held, that the application ought not to be granted. West Jewell Tin Mining Company, In re, Little's case (8 Ch. D. 806), distinguished. Collins v. Paddington (Vestry). 5 Q. B. D. 368; 49 L. J., Q. B. 264—612; 42 L. T. 573; 28 W. R. 588—C. A.

d. Other Points.

Sundays, &c., whether Included.—By Ord. LVII., r. 2, Sundays, Christmas Days and Good Fridays are only excluded from the computation of limited time for doing any act where such time is less than six days or expires on one of the excluded days. Gilbert, In re, Viney, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 794; 46 L. J., Bk. 80; 36 L. T. 43; 25 W. R. 364—C. A.

Objection as to Time—Costs of Affidavit filed by Respondent after Appeal set down.—If a respondent to an appeal takes the objection that the notice of appeal was given too late, and the appeal is dismissed on that ground, the appellant will not be ordered to pay the costs of affidavits filed by the respondent after the appeal was set down. Fardon's Vinegar Company, Ex parte, Jones, In re, 14 Ch. D. 285; 49 L. J., Bk. 74; 43 L. T. 11; 28 W. R. 821—C. A.

Costs incurred by Appellant with Knowledge of Respondent.—A respondent who, after the time for appealing has expired, knowingly allows his opponent to incur expense in preparing for the appeal, without warning him of his intention to object to the appeal being heard, may be deprived of his costs. Blyth and Young, In re, 13 Ch. D. 416; 41 L. T. 746; 28 W. R. 266—C. A.

5. NOTICE OF APPEAL.

Sufficiency of.—A person against whom an order in a winding-up had been made for payment of money to the official liquidator served on the official liquidator a notice: "Take notice that it is the intention of J. L. to prosecute an appeal from the order made in this matter by the vice-warden of the stannaries on the 29th of May, 1878, whereby J. L. was ordered," &c.:—Held, that this notice was sufficient, and the appeal was ordered to be set down. West Jewell Tin Mining Company, In re, Little's case, 8 Ch. D. 806—C. A.

A petition for winding-up a company having been dismissed, the petitioner's solicitors wrote a letter to the company's solicitor urging him to get the order drawn up, adding, "as we are advised and intend to give notice of appeal." No formal notice of appeal was given till more than twenty-one days had elapsed from the dismissal of the petition, when the petitioner gave a supplemental notice of appeal:—Held, that the letter could not be treated as an informal notice of appeal, and therefore the appeal was too late. Little's case (8 Ch. D. 806) considered and distinguished. New Callao, In re, 22 Ch. D. 484; 52 L. J., Ch. 283; 48 L. T. 251; 31 W. R. 185—C. A.

The mere communication by an unsuccessful party to his opponent of his intention to appeal is not sufficient notice of appeal. Blyth and Young, In re, 13 Ch. D. 416; 41 L. T. 746; 28 W. R. 266—C. A.

Signature by London Agent—Name of principal Solicitor, Mistake in.—A notice of appeal, given in due time, was signed by L. and J. as London agents for M. and D., who were, in fact, the solicitors of the appellant, though no order to change solicitors had then been made, S. and Son being the solicitors on the record. L. and J. were also agents for S. and Son. After the notice had been given, and the time for appealing had expired, the order to change solicitors was obtained:—Held, that the error only amounted to a false description, and that, as the respondents had not been misled, the notice was good. Kettlewell v. Watson, 52 L. J., Ch. 818; 48 L. T. 840; 31 W. R. 709—C. A.

Seemingly, a notice of appeal need not be signed by a solicitor unless in the case of a pauper. Id.

Notice by Respondent.—On the application of a trustee in bankruptcy, the registrar of a county court declared two bills of sale which the bankrupt had executed void against the trustee. On appeals by the two grantees, the chief judge affirmed the decision as to the first bill of sale, but held that the second bill of sale was valid as against the trustee. The first grantee gave notice of appeal, addressed to the trustee and to the second grantee. The trustee gave no original notice of appeal, but served notice on both the grantees that, on the hearing of the first grantee's appeal, he should contend that the decision of the chief judge as to the second bill of sale ought to be varied in his favour:—Held, that this was a good notice under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. LVIII. r. 6. Payne, Ex parte, Cross, In re, 11 Ch. D. 539; 40 L. T. 296; 27 W. R. 368.

By an order in an administration suit a fund which, according to the construction to be put upon a will and codicil, was payable to A. or B. or C. was directed to be paid to C. B. appealed, the notice of appeal having, by the direction of the court, been served on A. as well as C. On the dismissal of B.'s appeal:—Held, that under Ord. LVIII. r. 5, it was open to A. also to ask for a reversal of the order for payment to C., although he had given no notice of appeal, but on C.'s request the further hearing was adjourned. Hunter v. Hunter, 24 W. R. 527—C. A.

Respondent varying order in which Appellant has no interest.—A respondent who seeks to have an order varied on a point in which the appellant has no interest, cannot proceed by notice under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. LVIII. r. 6, but must give a notice of appeal. Cavan-der's Trusts, In re, 16 Ch. D. 270; 50 L. J., Ch. 292; 29 W. R. 405—C. A.

Who must be Served.—By an order in an administration suit a fund, which, according to the construction to be put upon a will and codicil, was payable to A. or B. or C., was directed to be paid to C. A. appealed, serving notice of appeal upon C. only:—Held, that, whether or not the appellant was right under Ord. LVIII. r. 3, in serving C. only, the appeal could not be heard in the absence of B., and that the court would, in exercise of the discretion given to it by the same rule, order the appeal to stand over in order that B. might be served. Hunter v. Hunter, 24 W. R. 504—C. A.

An appellant ought to serve notice of appeal on all parties who will be affected by the order of the Court of Appeal, and if a party who would be so affected is not served, he may appear without service and obtain his costs. And this rule applies, although the appeal fails through irregularity, and never comes on to be heard. New Callao, In re, 22 Ch. D. 484; 52 L. J. Ch. 283; 48 L. T. 251; 31 W. R. 185—C. A.

Substituted Service.—In a proper case the Court of Appeal has jurisdiction to make an order for substituted service of a notice of appeal, though no express provision to that effect is contained in the rules of court. Warburg, Ex parte, Whalley, In re, 24 Ch. D. 364; 49 L. T. 243—C. A.

Amendment of Notice of Appeal.—The Court of Appeal has full discretion, under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. LVIII., rule 3, to allow a notice of appeal to be amended as to dates or otherwise, and special circumstances are not required to justify such amendment. Stockton Iron Furnace Company, In re, 10 Ch. D. 335; 48 L. J., Ch. 417; 40 L. T. 19; 27 W. R. 433—C. A.

Withdrawal of Appeal—Revocation of Withdrawal.—The defendant in an action having given notice of appeal against an order, wrote to the plaintiff saying that he proposed to withdraw his appeal, and asking for his consent to his doing so. The plaintiff at once consented to the withdrawal. Two days afterwards the defendant wrote to say that he was under misapprehension as to a material fact, and intended to go on with the appeal. No step was taken by either side to remove the appeal from the list of appeals, and both parties filed affidavits in support of their case:—Held, that the defendant had no power to revoke his withdrawal of the appeal, and that the appeal could not be heard. Watson v. Care (No. 2), 17 Ch. D. 23; 50 L. J., Ch. 561; 44 L. T. 117; 29 W. R. 768—C. A.

Notice, Form of.—Service of notice of an appeal motion not signed by the solicitors prosecuting the appeal is invalid, and unless the irregularity is waived by the other side, will not prevent the inrolment of the original order. Limehouse Works Company, In re, 9 L. R. Ch. 266; 43 L. J., Ch. 483; 30 L. T. 4; 22 W. R. 288.

6. SETTING DOWN APPEAL FOR HEARING.

Within what Time.—An appeal must be entered with the proper officer of the Court of Appeal before the day mentioned in the notice of appeal for the hearing, or if that day happens to be in a vacation when the office is closed, then before the next day of the sitting of the court, otherwise the respondent will be entitled to have the appeal motion dismissed as an abandoned motion, although the notice of appeal was given in time. National Funds Assurance Company, In re, 4 Ch. D. 305; 46 L. J., Ch. 183; 35 L. T. 689; 25 W. R. 151—C. A.

Notice of appeal from an interlocutory order made on the 24th of January was given on the 13th of February for the 18th of February, but owing to a mistake of the solicitor's clerk was not set down till the 19th. The appeal came on to be heard on the 20th:—Held, that, not having been set down till after the day for which notice was given, it must be dismissed. Mansel, In re, Rhodes v. Jenkins, 7 Ch. D. 711; 47 L. J., Ch. 870; 38 L. T. 403; 26 W. R. 361—C. A.

Order not drawn up by Respondents.—An interlocutory order having been made in an action on the 3rd of April, the defendants on the 23rd of April gave notice of appeal for the 30th of April. The order was not drawn up till the latter end of June, and the defendants then set down the appeal. Upon its coming on to be heard the plaintiffs objected that it could not be heard, as it had not been set down in time:—Held, that as it was the duty of the plaintiffs to draw up the order, and the appeal had been set down as soon as the plaintiffs had enabled the defendants to comply with the requisition of Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. LVIII., rule 8, that an office copy of the order shall be produced, the objection could not be sustained. Harker, In re, Goodbarne v. Fothergill, 10 Ch. D. 613; 40 L. T. 408; 27 W. R. 587—C. A. Cp. Smith v. Grindley, infra.

Setting down on Second Notice after Abandonment of First.—A final decree having been passed and entered on the 4th of December, the defendant on the following day served notice of appeal for the 19th, but by mistake his solicitor did not set it down till the 19th. A few days afterwards the plaintiff's solicitor informed the defendant's solicitor that the appeal had not been set down in time, and stated that he should insist on the objection. The appellant's solicitor then sent to the plaintiff's solicitor a fresh notice of appeal, offering to pay the costs occasioned by the first and asking him to consent to the first entry of the appeal being struck out. The plaintiff's solicitor refused to comply with this request, and returned the second notice of appeal. The defendant set down the second notice, and applied to have the first entry struck out, and to have the second notice and the entry of it treated as valid:—Held, that the appeal must proceed on the notice: and the applicant's costs were made costs in the appeal, no costs of the motion being given to the plaintiff. Norton v. London and North Western Railway Company, 11 Ch. D. 118; 40 L. T. 597; 27 W. R. 773—C. A.

Practice—Production of Order.—An appeal from the refusal of an interlocutory motion may be set down without production of the order appealed from, or a copy of it. Smith v. Grindley, Smith v. Charrington, 3 Ch. D. 80; 35 L. T. 112; 24 W. R. 956—C. A.

Ord. LVIII. r. 8, does not apply to such a case. Ib. Cp. Harker, In re, Goodbarne v. Fothergill, supra.

If not set down a Respondent should not appear.—When notice of motion of appeal is given, but the party giving it neglects to take the proceedings before the officer of the court directed by Ord. LVIII. r. 8, and the matter is not in the court paper of the day, the other party ought not to appear, but may make a substantive application for his costs of the motion. Webb v. Mansel, 2 Q. B. D. 117; 25 W. R. 389—C. A.

7. SECURITY FOR COSTS OF APPEAL.

In what Cases—Poverty or Insolvency.—The court refused to require an insolvent appellant to give security for the costs of the appeal, when the question at issue had not been previously considered in a court of error. Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Company, 1 C. P. D. 556; 35 L. T. 160.

An appellant will be ordered to give security for the costs of the appeal who is in insolvent circumstances, and also is vexatiously and unreasonably prosecuting the appeal. Ueil v. Brearley, 8 C. P. D. 206; 47 L. J., Ch. 380; 38 L. T. 249; 26 W. R. 371—C. A.

The facts that an appellant is a pauper and is seeking to restrain the respondent from administering on the footing upon which letters of administration were granted to him without taking proceedings to have the administration revoked are special circumstances, within Ord. LVIII. r. 15, sufficient to require the appellant to give security for costs. Hankin v. Turner, Ivory, In re, 10 Ch. D. 872; 39 L. T. 285; 27 W. R. 20—C. A.

The plaintiff, who was in receipt of parochial relief, was ordered by the Court of Appeal to give security for the costs of appeal, the court being of opinion that the appeal was a speculative one. Ib.

Per Cotton, L. J.: The insolvency of an appellant is prima facie a sufficient reason for ordering him to give security for costs. Ib.

A defendant in an action which had been tried by a judge without a jury gave notice of appeal against the judgment, and also obtained ex parte a rule nisi for a new trial. The appellant being in insolvent circumstances, was ordered to give security for costs. Waddell v. Blockey, 10 Ch. D. 416; 40 L. T. 286; 27 W. R. 233—C. A.

The court has jurisdiction to make a defendant who is appealing give security for the costs of the appeal, and will, where the defendant is not a man of substance, and is merely a nominal defendant, stay the appeal until security is given. Hastings (Corporation) v. Icail, 9 L. R., Ch. 758; 43 L. J., Ch. 728; 31 L. T. 262; 22 W. R. 783.

The mere poverty of an appellant, without any other circumstance, is sufficient ground for requiring security for the costs of the appeal to be given, under Ord. LVIII. r. 15. Harlock v. Ashberry, 19 Ch. D. 84; 51 L. J., Ch. 96; 45 L. T. 602; 30 W. R. 112—C. A.

Insolvency of the appellant is of itself sufficient ground for ordering him to give security for the costs of an appeal. Ueil v. Brearley (3 C. P. D. 206) not followed. Spencer, In re, Spencer v. Hart, 45 L. T. 396—C. A.

Action conducted by Solicitor for his own Benefit.—When a plaintiff in error, defendant below, died after joinder in error in the Exchequer Chamber, that court stayed proceedings till security for costs should be given to the defendant in error, upon affidavits shewing ground for believing that the plaintiff in error had died insolvent, and that his attorney was prosecuting the writ in error at his own risk and for his own benefit. Haygarth v. Wilkinson, 12 Q. B. 851; 12 Jur. 727.

Appeal by Company against Winding-up Order.—See COMPANY.

Foreigner Domiciled Abroad.—The fact that an appellant is a foreigner domiciled abroad with no assets in this country, is a "special circumstance" within Ord. LVIII. r. 15, and entitles the respondent to security for costs of an appeal from an interlocutory order. Grant v. Banque Franco-Egyptienne, 2 C. P. D. 430; 47 L. J., C. P. 41; 26 W. R. 68—C. A.

A defendant living abroad, and appealing to a court of error, may be compelled to give security for the costs in error. Dudley (Earl) v. Lumley, 8 W. R. 543.

The court or a judge can order the defendant in an action to find security for costs, and where the defendant had brought error, was out of the country, and had not put in bail, the court refused to set aside an order that he should give security. Hill v. Fox, 3 H. & N. 547; 27 L. J., Ex. 416.

A plaintiff in error was a foreigner residing abroad, and had given security for costs in the court below. The court of error after joinder in error stayed proceedings until security was given for the costs of the proceedings in error. Bougheux v. Swayne, 3 El. & Bl. 829; 18 Jur. 894—Ex. Ch.

If a plaintiff in error resides out of the jurisdiction, the court may require him to give security for costs; and unless he does so, the defendant in error may proceed on his judgment. Lewis v. Orens, 5 B. & A. 265.

Appellant a Lunatic.—The court will not compel security for costs in error on the ground of the plaintiff in error being a lunatic. Steel v. Allan, 2 B. & P. 437.

— Order to wind up Company.—Where an order has been made to wind up a limited company on the ground that it is unable to pay its debts, and an appeal is brought by the company alone, the appellants will be ordered to give security for the costs of the appeal. Photographic Artists' Co-operative Supply Association, In re, 48 L. T. 454; 31 W. R. 509—C. A.

— Suit under Old Practice.—The court will in a proper case direct substantial security for costs to be given under Ord. L.V. of February, 1876, in a suit proceeding under the old practice. Republic of Costa Rica v. Erlanger, 3 Ch. D. 62; 45 L. J., Ch. 743; 35 L. T. 19; 24 W. R. 955—C. A. Reversing the decision of Malins, V.-C., 24 W. R. 880.

— Character of Order appealed from.—On an application for security for the costs of an appeal, it is a material circumstance in favour of the application that the appeal is from the refusal of an order in the nature of a mandamus against a county court judge, who is made a respondent on the appeal. Clarke v. Roche, 46 L. J., Ch. 372; 25 W. R. 309—C. A.

Time for Applying.—After the costs incident to an appeal have been actually incurred by a respondent, and the time is fixed for the hearing of the appeal, it is too late to apply for an order that the appellant shall give security for costs. Grant v. Banque Franco-Egyptienne, 1 C. P. D. 143; 34 L. T. 470; 24 W. R. 338—C. A.

Delay.—An application for security for costs of an appeal ought to be made within a reasonable time; and, as a general rule, if made after the appeal is in the paper for hearing, would be too late. But where a motion for security for the costs of an interlocutory appeal and the appeal itself came into the paper on the same day, and it appeared that the motion for security had been delayed by reason of the court not having sat to hear such applications, the application was granted. Indian, Kingston, and Sandhurst Gold Mining Co., In re, 22 Ch. D. 83; 52 L. J., Ch. 31; 31 W. R. 34—C. A.

An application for the security for the costs of an appeal will be refused unless it is made promptly before costs of the appeal have been already incurred. Judgment was given in an action on the 22nd March. On the 6th April the defendant gave notice of appeal. The taxation of costs was not completed until the 4th November, the delay not being occasioned by either party. The plaintiffs then issued a fi. fa. for the amount of their taxed costs, to which the sheriff's return was nulla bona. On the 11th November the plaintiffs applied to the Court of Appeal that the appellant should give security for costs, the case being then ninth out of the list for hearing:—Held, that the application was too late, and on that ground must be refused. Saltash (Mayor) v. Goodman, 43 L. T. 464—C. A.

Appellant out of Jurisdiction.—An application for security for costs of an appeal must be made promptly. As a general rule it is too late if it is made where the appeal is in the paper for hearing. But the court will take into account special circumstances. Where a motion for security for costs and the appeal came into the paper on the same day, and it appeared that notice of appeal had been given in the long vacation, and that the motion for security had been delayed by reason of the court not having sat to hear such applications on the usual day, the application was granted. Indian, Kingston, and Sandhurst Mining Company, In re, 22 Ch. D. 83; 52 L. J., Ch. 31; 48 L. T. 52; 31 W. R. 34—C. A.

Seemingly, the court will be more strict in enforcing promptness where the application is on the ground of poverty than where it is on the ground of the appellant being out of the jurisdiction. Id.

Application, by whom made.—When one plaintiff is dissatisfied with the judgment of a court, he may appeal, though his co-plaintiff does not wish to appeal; the latter should be made a respondent; and if he has any reason to doubt about security for costs if successful, he should apply that the appellants may give security. Beckett v. Attwood, 18 Ch. D. 54; 44 L. T. 660; 29 W. R. 796—C. A.

Service of Notice without Leave.—Notice of motion by a respondent that the appellant may be directed to give security for the costs of an appeal may be served without leave. Grills v. Dillon, 2 Ch. D. 325; 45 L. J., Ch. 432; 34 L. T. 781; 24 W. R. 431—C. A.

Form of Order.—A plaintiff appealed from a decree dismissing his bill. Upon proof of his having no means to answer the costs of an appeal, the appeal was stayed until he made a deposit of 50*l.*; but the court declined to order that in default of his doing so within a given time the appeal should be dismissed. Wilson v. Smith, 2 Ch. D. 67; 45 L. J., Ch. 421; 34 L. T. 471; 24 W. R. 421—C. A.

It is not the practice of the Court of Appeal, when ordering an appellant to give security for costs, to fix a time within which this is to be done. Polini v. Gray, Sturla v. Freccia, 11 Ch. D. 741; 49 L. J., Ch. 41; 40 L. T. 861—C. A.

Where an intending appellant having been ordered to give security for costs within a certain time has failed to do so, his right of appeal is gone for ever, although the usual period for appealing has not expired; and his appeal will be dismissed with costs. The form of order given in Seton, p. 1614, 4th edition, being correct. Harris v. Fleming, 30 W. R. 555—C. A.

Offering Security for Costs of Appeal.—An appellant who is clearly liable to give security for costs ought to offer security without an application to the court, and, if the offer is reasonable, it ought to be accepted; and in the case of an application to the court, the court in dealing with the costs will consider whose conduct has made it necessary. The Ship Constantine, 4 P. D. 156; 27 W. R. 747—C. A.

What Security.—When security for the costs of an appeal was ordered to be given, a bond with sureties was allowed. Phosphate Sewage Company v. Hartmont, 2 Ch. D. 811—C. A.

Dismissal if Security not given.]—An appellant who had been ordered to give security for the costs of an appeal from a decree failed to do so for nine months. At the end of that time, which was more than a year after the decree, the respondent moved to have the appeal dismissed with costs for want of prosecution, and the delay not being explained the court ordered accordingly. Judd v. Green, 4 Ch. D. 784; 46 L. J., Ch. 257; 35 L. T. 873; 25 W. R. 293—C. A.

When an appellant has been ordered to give security for costs and fails to do so, the respondent is entitled to have the appeal dismissed for want of prosecution after a reasonable time has elapsed, although no time was fixed by the order for completing the security for costs. Vale v. Oppert, 5 Ch. D. 633; 25 W. R. 610—C. A.

If the order is not complied with in a reasonable time the respondent may move to dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution; but what is a reasonable time must depend on the circumstances of each case. Polini v. Gray, Sturla v. Freccia, 11 Ch. D. 741; 49 L. J., Ch. 41; 40 L. T. 861—C. A.

Costs of Application.]—When security for costs of an appeal was ordered to be given, the costs of the application were ordered to follow the result of the appeal. Phosphate Sewage Company v. Hartmont, 2 Ch. D. 811—C. A.

8. STAYING PROCEEDINGS PENDING APPEAL.

To what Court made, where Action dismissed.]

—Where an action has been dismissed with costs, an application to stay proceedings for costs pending an appeal must be made in the first instance to the court below and not to the Court of Appeal. Wilson v. Church, (11 Ch. D. 576) explained. Otto v. Lindford, 18 Ch. D. 394; 51 L. J., Ch. 102; 30 W. R. 418—C. A.

When an action has been altogether dismissed by a divisional court, no order can be made under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. LVIII. r. 16, to stay proceedings pending an appeal; but the Court of Appeal will, in a proper case, grant an injunction to restrain any of the parties parting with property till the hearing of the appeal. Wilson v. Church, 11 Ch. D. 576; 48 L. J., Ch. 690; 41 L. T. 50; 27 W. R. 843—C. A.

Refusal by Court below to stay—Time within which Application may be made to Court of Appeal.]—In an action by patentees judgment was given referring it to the official referee to assess the damages occasioned to the plaintiffs by the defendants' infringement, and ordering payment within twenty-one days after service of the report. The defendants appealed, and set down their appeal on the 18th of April, and then moved to stay proceedings under the judgment pending the appeal. This was refused by Chitty, J. On the 25th of June, the official referee made his report, and on the 14th of July, more than twenty-one days after the above refusal, the defendants gave notice of motion before the Court of Appeal that the time for payment of the damages might be extended till after the hearing of the appeal. The plaintiffs took the objection that the application could not be made as an original motion, and as an appeal motion was out of time:—Held, that Ord. LVIII. r. 16, gives concurrent jurisdiction to the court below and to the Court of Appeal as to staying proceedings pending an appeal; that rule 17 does not take away any of the jurisdiction thus given to the Court of Appeal, but only requires that it shall not be exercised till an application has first been made to the court below, and that the application to the Court of Appeal to stay proceedings when an order for that purpose has been refused by the court below, is not properly an appeal motion, and need not be brought within twenty-one days from the refusal. Att.-Gen. v. Swansea Improvements and Tramways Company (9 Ch. D. 46) considered. Cropper v. Smith, 24 Ch. D. 305; 49 L. T. 548; 32 W. R. 212—C. A.

—Rule for New Trial.]—A rule nisi for a new trial granted by the Court of Appeal should not be drawn up so as to include a stay of proceedings. The appellant's proper course in such a case is to apply to a master at chambers for a stay. Goddard v. Thompson, 47 L. J., Q. B. 382; 38 L. T. 166; 26 W. R. 362—C. A.

—Appeal from Refusal.]—The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to make an order to stay otherwise than on appeal from the refusal of such an order. Ib.

The renewal before the Court of Appeal of an application, under Ord. LVIII., to stay proceedings pending an appeal, after a similar application has been made to the court below and refused, is not an appeal, and does not therefore come within the ordinary rule as to an appeal from an exercise of discretion. Cooper v. Cooper, 2 Ch. D. 492; 45 L. J., Ch. 667; 24 W. R. 628—C. A.

An application to the Court of Appeal, under Ord. LVIII. rr. 16, 17, to stay the proceedings under a judgment pending an appeal to that court, inasmuch as it cannot be made until after an application has been made to the court of first instance, is not an original motion, but a motion by way of appeal, though it need not be formally entered as an appeal. Att.-Gen. v. Swansea Improvements and Tramways Company, 9 Ch. D. 46; 48 L. J., Ch. 72; 26 W. R. 840.

Must be on Notice.]—Notice must be given to the other side of any application to stay execution under a decision that is appealed from. Republic of Peru v. Weguelin, 24 W. R. 297.

Appeal on point of Law—Staying Trial of Issues of Fact.]—Where there is an appeal upon a question of law raised by way of demurrer or preliminary objection, the court will not stay the trial of issues of fact pending the appeal. Palmer's Application, In re, 22 Ch. D. 88; 31 W. R. 33—C. A.

Staying Inquiries.]—Inquiries having been directed as to the amount to be paid to a plaintiff who had succeeded in an action for specific performance and damages, the court, upon the ground that no irreparable injury would result, refused an application by the defendant to stay proceedings pending an appeal upon the main question. Hyam v. Terry, 29 W. R. 32.

Proceedings under an Account.]—In an action by a patentee to restrain alleged infringement of letters patent for the manufacture of pumps, a judgment was made granting a perpetual injunction against the defendants, who were pump manufacturers, and directing an account of the profits made by them by the sale of pumps made in infringement of the letters patent. The defendants forthwith gave notice of appeal and set the appeal down for hearing, and then applied to stay proceedings under the account till the appeal was heard. This application was refused by Bacon, V.-C.:—Held, that as the discovery given by the account would enable the plaintiff to take proceedings against the customers of the defendants, and the defendants, supposing them to be ultimately successful, might thus sustain irreparable injury in their business, the appeal ought to be advanced, and proceedings under the account stayed till the hearing. Adair v. Young, 11 Ch. D. 136; 40 L. T. 598—C. A.

Preventing Appeal, if Successful, from being Nugatory.]—Where an unsuccessful party is exercising an unrestricted right to appeal, it is the duty of the court in ordinary cases to make such order for staying proceedings under the judgment appealed from as will prevent the appeal, if successful, from being nugatory. But the court will not interfere if the appeal appears not to be bona fide, or there are other sufficient exceptional circumstances. And when the court makes an order to stay proceedings pending an appeal it will put the appellants on terms to speed the appeal; and it will not interfere with the execution of the order of the court below respecting costs, except to put the solicitor who is to receive the costs upon an undertaking to refund them if required to do so. Wilson v. Church, 12 Ch. D. 454—C. A.

In a suit by a bondholder of a railway company on behalf of himself and other bondholders, against the company, claiming that the money advanced should be returned, instead of its being applied in the undertaking, judgment was given for the plaintiff with costs, and it was ordered that the money should be forthwith distributed among the bondholders. The bonds were payable to bearer, and the bondholders were very numerous and many were residing abroad. On the other hand the defendant company was insolvent, and it was very doubtful whether, if the undertaking was carried on, the shareholders would get any benefit from it. The defendants appealed, and moved to stay proceedings pending the appeal:—Held (dissentiente, James, L. J.), that there were sufficient grounds to induce the court to stay the distribution of the fund pending the appeal; and that the special circumstances of the company were not sufficient to prevent the court from interfering. Id.

Cp. cases ante, APPEAL TO HOUSE OF LORDS.

On what Terms Granted.]—An appeal was brought by a defendant from a decree which ordered him to pay costs. On motion to stay proceedings pending the appeal, the order was made on payment into court by the defendant of the costs below and on payment of the costs of the application to stay. Cooper v. Cooper, 2 Ch. D. 492; 45 L. J., Ch. 667; 24 W. R. 628—C. A.

Costs of Application.]—The costs of an application to stay proceedings pending an appeal must be paid by the applicant. Cooper v. Cooper, 2

When the parties appealing had applied to a vice-chancellor to stay proceedings pending the appeal and had been refused, they appealed to the Court of Appeal and were there successful in their application:—Held, that the costs of the application should be costs in the appeal. Adair v. Young, 11 Ch. D. 136; 40 L. T. 598—C. A.

9. EVIDENCE ON APPEAL.

a. Fresh Evidence.

Notice to Opponent—Leave of Court.]—An appellant who wishes to produce further evidence on the hearing of an appeal should give to the other side notice of his intention to apply at the hearing of the appeal for leave to produce such evidence. Hastie v. Hastie, 1 Ch. D. 562; 45 L. J., Ch. 298; 34 L. T. 13; 24 W. R. 564—C. A.

When a party was desirous to adduce further evidence upon an appeal from a judgment after the cause had been heard upon the merits:—Held, that he might give notice to the other side that he would apply at the hearing for special leave to adduce such evidence. Justice v. Mersey Steel and Iron Company, 24 W. R. 199—C. A.

Where a party wishes to examine fresh witnesses at the hearing of an appeal, he must apply for leave by motion previously to the hearing of the appeal. Hastie v. Hastie (1 Ch. D. 562) only applies to affidavits and documentary evidence. Dicks v. Brooks, 13 Ch. D. 652; 28 W. R. 525—C. A.

When Allowed.]—Where at the trial of an action the witnesses have been examined vivâ voce, further evidence by affidavit of the same witnesses will not in general be admitted on an appeal. Taylor v. Grange, 15 Ch. D. 165—C. A.

The application for leave to adduce fresh evidence on appeal is an indulgence. That a party might have shaped his case better in the court below is no ground for giving leave. Nothing is more dangerous than to allow fresh oral evidence to be introduced after a case has been discussed in court. The exact point on which evidence is wanted having thus been discovered, to allow fresh evidence to be introduced at that stage would offer a strong temptation to perjury. For my part I think that in considering whether leave should be granted, the moral elements of the case ought to be taken into consideration. Sanders v. Sanders, 19 Ch. D. 380; 51 L. J., Ch. 279; 45 L. T. 637; 30 W. R. 281—per Jessel, M. R.

Where a judge is about to decide in favour of a litigant without hearing evidence with which he is prepared, his counsel may insist on the evidence being heard before the delivery of the decision; but if the counsel waives his right and accepts the decision, the court, on appeal, may hear the evidence before reversing the decision of the court below. Jacobson, Ex parte, Pincoffs, In re, 22 Ch. D. 312; 48 L. T. 197; 31 W. R. 554—C. A.

Where an applicant in the court below produces no evidence on a point which he is able to adduce, but does not do so because he did not know what objection the court raised:—Held, that evidence should be admitted on appeal.

Leave to Subpoena without Prejudice.—On an application to subpoena a witness who had been subpoenaed before the court to attend for examination on the hearing of an appeal, the court granted leave to subpoena him without prejudice to the question as to whether or not his evidence should be admitted. Coal Examining Co. v. Governor's Case, 24 W. R. 36.

Power of Court to order Examination of Witnesses.—The Court of Appeal may order certain witnesses on either side to attend for examination before the court below, in preference to ordering a new trial. McCallum v. Giffin, 6 Q. B. D. 515; 44 L. T. 914; 29 W. R. 408; 45 J. P. 628—C. A.

b. In Other Cases.

Duty of Appellant.—It is the duty of an appellant to bring before the Court of Appeal the whole of the evidence, oral as well as written, on which the order appealed from was founded, and if he does not do this, his appeal ought to be dismissed. Firth, Ex parte, Curburn, In re, 19 Ch. D. 419; 51 L. J., Ch. 473; 45 L. T. 120; 30 W. R. 529—C. A.

Note of Oral Evidence lost—Power of Court.—The Court of Appeal, however, has power, by way of indulgence, in a case where a note of oral evidence has been accidentally lost, to allow that evidence to be taken over again. Id.

Evidence voluminous—Copies.—On an ex parte application for directions in a pending appeal, where the evidence was very voluminous and consisted entirely of written affidavits, the court intimated that, notwithstanding Ord. LVIII, r. 11, it would not be necessary to have additional office copies of the affidavits taken for production to the members of the court, but that the office copies of their own affidavits usually taken by the solicitors on each side and the ordinary copies supplied by them to the solicitors on the other side would, with the assistance of the briefs of the junior counsel in the case, be sufficient. Crouford v. Hornsea Steam Brick and Tile Works Company, 24 W. R. 122—C. A.

When the affidavits read at the hearing in the court below, when an order was made from which the defendant appealed, were very voluminous, and had not been printed, the court, on the application of the plaintiff, in order that expense might be saved, dispensed with Ord. LVIII, rule 11, requiring printed copies to be produced on appeal, and ordered the officer in charge of the affidavits to attend in court on the hearing of the appeal with the affidavits for the use of the court. Nickles v. Morris, 24 W. R. 102—C. A.

Filing Affidavits.—Affidavits which are intended to be used on appeal should be filed with the Clerk of the division of the High Court from which the appeal comes. Watts v. Watts, 45 L. J., Ch. 65—C. A.

Judge's Notes, Request for, in case of Poverty of Appellant.—Where an appellant had, by reason of his poverty, been unable to take shorthand notes of the evidence in the court below, the Court of Appeal sent a request in writing to the judge of the court below for a copy of his notes of the evidence, that the appellant might not be prejudiced in the prosecution of his appeal. Drace v. Mason, 41 L. T. 573—C. A.

Costs of Printing Judge's Notes.—The cost of printing the judge's notes of evidence were made costs of the appeal. Orr-Ewing v. Johnston, 13 Ch. D. 465—C. A.

Shorthand Notes—Right to read Judge's Notes.—At the hearing of an appeal a party is entitled to read a shorthand writer's notes of the evidence taken in the court below as his impression of what passed; and the judge's notes will be taken by the Court of Appeal to represent rightly the whole effect. See In re. Laming v. Ger., 41 L. T. 744; 28 W. R. 217—C. A.

Shorthand Notes of Evidence—Costs of.—It is a settled rule that the costs of shorthand writers' notes of evidence will not be allowed on taxation unless there is in the order a direction to that effect. Such a direction will only be inserted in exceptional cases; the notes of the judge, supplemented by those of counsel, being amply sufficient, if not better, for all ordinary purposes. The general utility of shorthand writers' notes considered. De la Warr (Earl) v. Miles, 19 Ch. D. 80; 45 L. T. 421; 30 W. R. 35—C. A.

The costs of copies of the printed shorthand writer's notes of the evidence in the court below were made costs in the appeal. Orr-Ewing v. Johnston, 13 Ch. D. 465—C. A.

As a general rule the Court of Appeal refuses the costs of shorthand notes of the evidence in the court below. Kelly v. Byles, 13 Ch. D. 682; 49 L. J., Ch. 181; 28 W. R. 585—C. A. See also Bewley v. Atkinson, 13 Ch. D. 300—C. A.

The Court of Appeal has power to allow the costs of all shorthand notes properly used in the appeal, whether taken for the purposes of the appeal or not. Hill's Executors v. Managers of the Metropolitan District Asylum, 49 L. J., Q. B. 668; 43 L. T. 462; 28 W. R. 664—C. A.

Time within which Application for Costs of Shorthand Notes used on Appeal should be made.—Where shorthand notes of the evidence and proceedings in the court below are used on appeal, an application to be allowed, on taxation, the costs of the notes as costs of the appeal must be made before the judgment of the Court of Appeal is entered. Id.

Alteration of Order after being drawn up.—After the order of the Court of Appeal has been drawn up, the court has no power to alter the order by adding a direction that the costs of shorthand writers' notes of the evidence be allowed. De la Warr (Earl) v. Miles, supra.

— On what Grounds allowed.—The court will not allow the costs of shorthand notes of evidence except under very special circumstances. Vernon v. St. James's Vestry, 16 Ch. D. 473; 44 L. T. 229; 29 W. R. 222—C. A.

The court allowed the respondents the costs of copies of a shorthand writer's notes of evidence taken before the registrar, on the ground that they had been served by the appellant with notice that such notes would be read. Harris, Ex parte, Ward, In re, 30 W. R. 561—C. A.

Costs will not be allowed of shorthand notes of evidence which are not used on the hearing of an appeal, the decision turning on a question of law. Webster, Ex parte, Morris, In re, 22 Ch. D. 136; 52 L. J., Ch. 375—C. A.

Where the court has used the shorthand writers' notes of evidence taken in the court below, the costs will be allowed. Smith v. Chadwick, 20 Ch. D. 81; 51 L. J., Ch. 621—C. A.

It is the duty of the taxing master in a bankruptcy appeal to decide as to the costs of the transcript of a shorthand writer's notes of the depositions. Cocks, Ex parte, Poole, In re, 21 Ch. D. 407—C. A.

— Of Judgment—Costs of.—The court generally allows the costs of the shorthand writers' notes of the judgment of the court below, if the transcript of the judgment is made use of. Collyer v. Isaacs, 45 L. T. 567; 30 W. R. 71—C. A.

Costs of the transcript of the registrar's judgment in a bankruptcy appeal were ordered to be included in the costs of the trustee. Cocks, Ex parte, Poole, In re, 21 Ch. D. 407—C. A.

The costs of shorthand writers' notes of a judgment are not allowed when it has appeared in the reports, provided that the report appeared a sufficient length of time before the briefs were delivered; if the report appeared too late, the costs will be allowed. London and South Western Railway Company v. Gomm, 20 Ch. D. 589; 46 L. T. 455—C. A.

— Printed Copies—Agreement to share Printer's Bill.—Under the common order of the Court of Appeal giving the costs of the appeal, and of the shorthand writer's notes of the evidence and of the judgment in the court below, the solicitor of the successful party, when the shorthand notes have been printed in the first instance, is entitled on taxation of the costs to be allowed, in addition to the printer's bill, 3d. per folio for one printed copy of the shorthand notes of the evidence supplied to each of his counsel on the appeal, and 3d. per folio for one printed copy of the shorthand notes of the judgment supplied for the use of each judge of the Court of Appeal. Singer Manufacturing Company v. Loog, 52 L. J., Ch. 288; 49 L. T. 484; 31 W. R. 392—C. A.

10. HEARING OF THE APPEAL.

Before what Judges.—An appeal can be heard by the Court of Appeal, although one of the judges then in the court is a judge of the division in which the action is pending, if he has taken no part in making the order appealed from. Fisher v. Val de Tracera Asphalt Company, 1 C. P. D. 259; 45 L. J., C. P. 135; 24 W. R. 198—C. A.

In case of Non-appearance of Appellant.—When no one appears for an appellant, the appeal will, upon the application of the respondent, be dismissed with costs, and there is no necessity that the respondent should prove that he has been served with a notice of appeal. Lox, Ex parte, Lox, In re, 7 Ch. D. 160; 47 L. J., Bk. 24; 37 L. T. 583; 26 W. R. 229—C. A.

Right to Begin.—On an appeal by a defendant, the leading counsel for the defendant begins; the evidence of the plaintiff is then read; the evidence of the defendant is then read; the junior counsel for the defendant is then heard; the counsel for the plaintiff are then heard; counsel for the defendant replies. Giffard v. Williams, 5 L. R., Ch. 546.

— Cross Appeals on Cross Demurrers.—Where there are cross appeals on cross demurrers before the Court of Appeal, and the burden of proof is on the defendant, so that if he fails in his appeal, the cross appeal becomes immaterial, the defendant will be entitled to begin. Clarke v. Bradlaugh, 7 Q. B. D. 38; 50 L. J., Q. B. 342—C. A.

Number of Counsel.—In ordinary cases of appeal only two counsel will be heard on the same side. Hoare v. Bremridge, 42 L. J., Ch. 1; 27 L. T. 593; 21 W. R. 43—L. J. S. P., Sneesby v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 1 Q. B. D. 42; 45 L. J., Q. B. 1—C. A.; Ties v. West Ham Union, 46 L. T. 151—C. A.

Signing by Counsel.—A petition of appeal by a plaintiff, who sued in formâ pauperis, was allowed to be set down, although signed by one counsel only. Jones v. Gregory, 4 De G., J. & S. 58. Circumstances under which a petition of rehearing was received on the signature of one counsel only. Midland Counties Benefit Building Society, In re, 4 De G., J. & S. 468.

Advancing Hearing.—In a suit, the whole object of which was to restrain the alleged improper use of a trade name, a decree for a perpetual injunction was made at the hearing. The defendant, having appealed, applied to have the hearing of the appeal advanced:—Held, that as the right to an injunction was involved, and irreparable injury might result to the defendant, the hearing might be advanced. Lazenby v. White, 19 W. R. 291—L. J.

In an action where an account was ordered and notice of appeal was given:—Held, that as the discovery given by the account would enable the successful party to take proceedings against the other party's customers, and the other party, supposing the appeal to be successful, might thus sustain irreparable injury in the business, the appeal ought to be advanced.—Adair v. Young, 11 Ch. D. 136; 40 L. T. 598—C. A.

Notice to discontinue Action, effect of.—A plaintiff gave notice of appeal from the refusal of an injunction. Shortly afterwards the plaintiff's solicitors wrote to the defendants' solicitors to withdraw the notice of appeal. Two days after this the plaintiff's solicitors gave the defendants' solicitors notice of discontinuance of the action. The defendants' solicitors declined to consent to the withdrawal of the appeal except on terms to which the plaintiff's solicitors did not agree, and the appeal came on in its turn:—Held, that the discontinuance of the action put an end to the appeal, and that no order could be made except to strike it out of the paper. Combeare v. Lewis, 13 Ch. D. 469; 28 W. R. 330—C. A.

Point not raised in Court below—Leave to raise in Court of Appeal.—An appellant will not be allowed to raise in the Court of Appeal a point which he did not raise in the court below, even though there is some evidence in support of it, if the nature of that evidence is such that, by any possibility, the respondent might have been able to rebut it if the point had been raised originally. Firth, Ex parte, Concuburn, In re, 19 Ch. D. 419; 51 L. J., Ch. 473; 45 L. T. 120; 30 W. R. 529—C. A.

A plaintiff cannot on appeal make a case not made in his pleadings, or in the court below, unless he obtain the leave of the court. New Zealand Land Company v. Watson (per Bramwell, L. J.), 7 Q. B. D. 374; 50 L. J., Q. B. 433; 44 L. T. 675; 29 W. R. 694—C. A.

Refusal of Application at Trial for Leave to amend Pleadings.—When at the trial of an action an application for leave to amend the pleadings is refused, the refusal forms part of the judgment, and it is unnecessary to appeal separately from it; but on an appeal from the judgment the court of appeal has power, if it thinks fit, to give leave to amend. Laird v. Briggs, 16 Ch. D. 663; 44 L. T. 361—C. A.

Power of Court of Appeal to amend Record of Trial.—At the trial of an action the jury found certain issues in favour of the plaintiff, and the judge reserved judgment. The verdict was entered as a general verdict for the plaintiff, but the judge, notwithstanding the verdict, gave judgment for the defendant. On an appeal by the plaintiff from the judgment, the Court of Appeal amended the record by entering the verdict for the plaintiff on the issues only, and affirmed the judgment. Clack v. Wood, 9 Q. B. D. 276; 47 L. T. 144; 30 W. R. 931—C. A.

Varying Order of Court below as to Costs.—If we were to vary the order of the court below as to costs when an appeal on the merits fails, we should practically be allowing an appeal for costs only, and appeals would be brought nominally on the merits, but really only for the purpose of varying the order as to costs. Harpham v. Shacklock, 19 Ch. D. 215; 45 L. T. 572; 30 W. R. 50—C. A., per Jessel, M. R. S. P., Llanocer v. Ilomfray, 19 Ch. D. 232.

Order of Appeal Court—Varying Minutes—Notice of Motion to vary.—Where any party is dissatisfied with an order as settled by the registrar, and desires to bring the matter before the court, he must, whether the order be an order of the Court of Appeal or of a court of first instance, give notice of motion to vary the minutes. General Share and Trust Company v. Welley Brick and Pottery Company, 20 Ch. D. 130; 51 L. J., Ch. 464; 46 L. T. 70; 30 W. R. 695—C. A.

Power of Court to rehear.—Under the system of procedure established by the Procedure Acts

no judge of the High Court has any jurisdiction to rehear an order, whether made by himself or by any other judge, the power to rehear being part of the appellate jurisdiction which is transferred by the acts to the Court of Appeal. St. Nazaire Company, In re, 12 Ch. D. 88; 41 L. T. 110; 27 W. R. 854—C. A.

After final judgment has been pronounced by the Court of Appeal it is not competent to the court to rehear the appeal on the ground of the discovery of fresh facts. The proper course is for the party complaining to commence an original action impeaching the decree. Flower v. Lloyd, 6 Ch. D. 297; 46 L. J. Ch. 838; 35 L. T. 454; 25 W. R. 793—C. A.

Seemingly, that where the decree is impeached on the ground of fraud, such an action may be commenced without leave of the court. Id.

To obtain leave to file a bill of review on the ground of new matter discovered, the matter must be not only material, but such that by employing reasonable diligence could not possibly have been used at the hearing. Michael v. Fripp, 18 W. R. 423.

11. COSTS OF THE APPEAL.

General Rule.—Under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, Ord. LV., costs are in the discretion of the court, and the opinion of the judges of the Court of Appeal is that as a general rule, the successful appellant will get his costs. The old rule that the successful appellant has to bear his own costs is no longer to be acted upon, unless the particular court in the particular case shall make an order to the contrary. Mem., 1 Ch. D. 41—C. A.

On an appeal commenced under the practice of the Supreme Court a successful appellant will, in the absence of special circumstances, get his costs of the appeal. Olivant v. Wright, 45 L. J. Ch. 1—C. A. See also S. P., Masters, Ex parte Winsor, In re, 1 Ch. D. 113; 45 L. J. Bk. 18; 33 L. T. 613; 24 W. R. 113.

Succeeding on point not raised below.—When an appellant succeeds on a point not raised in the court below, he will be allowed the costs in the court below, but not the costs of the appeal. Hussey v. Payne, 8 Ch. D. 670; 47 L. J., Ch. 751; 38 L. T. 543; 25 W. R. 703—C. A.

Where an appellant is successful on an appeal upon a point not adjudicated upon in the court below, the general rule is that he will not be allowed his costs. Goddard v. Jeffreys, 46 L. T. 904—C. A.

Judgment of Admiralty Division varied—Collisions—Both Vessels found to blame.—Where the Court of Appeal vary a judgment of the Admiralty Division that one of two vessels only is to blame for a collision by finding both to blame, no order will be made as to costs either in the Court of Appeal or in the court below, but each party will pay his own costs of the whole litigation. The Hector (No. 1), 52 L. J. P. 47—C. A.

Interlocutory Application—Costs below and in Court of Appeal.—Where, upon an interlocutory application the judge below has based his decision upon the merits of the whole case, the Court of Appeal will decide the question of costs both below and on appeal. Wilkinson v. Hull,

Barnsley, and West Riding Railway and Dock Company, 30 W. R. 617—C. A.

Further Trial—Costs of Former Trial.]—A case being sent down by the Court of Appeal for further trial, the respondent was ordered to pay the costs of appeal but not the costs of the former trial. Shardlow v. Cotterill, 51 L. J., Ch. 353; 45 L. T. 572—C. A.

Notice by Respondents to Vary Judgment.]—Where on an appeal notice has been given by the respondents that they intend to apply to have the judgment below varied, and the appeal is dismissed, the appellant will be ordered to pay the costs of the appeal, except such as were occasioned by the notice. The Lauretta, 4 P. D. 25; 48 L. J., P. D. & A. 53; 40 L. T. 444; 27 W. R. 902—C. A.

Costs of Appeal where Cross-Notice of Appeal—Apportionment.]—A respondent who has given cross-notice of appeal under Ord. LVIII. r. 6, is in the same position as to costs as if he had presented a cross-appeal. Where there were two respondents to an appeal, one of whom gave cross-notice of appeal respecting his co-respondent, the court made an apportionment of the costs of the appeal. Harrison v. Cornwall Minerals Railway Company, 18 Ch. D. 334; 51 L. J., Ch. 68; 45 L. T. 498—C. A. S. P., Johnstone v. Cox, 19 Ch. D. 17; 45 L. T. 657; 30 W. R. 114—C. A.

In an action for redemption of a mortgage vested in the defendant, R. as a trustee for the defendant D., who was in possession, D. set up the case that he was not in possession by virtue of the mortgage, but under a lease. The court decided that he was in possession as mortgagee, and made a decree on that footing, but without rests. The defendants appealed. The plaintiff gave notice that at the hearing of the appeal he should ask to have the decree varied by directing the account to be taken with rests. The Court of Appeal held that the decree was right in treating D. as mortgagee in possession, but refused to direct rests:—Held, that as the case was one where the costs could not have been materially increased by the notice, the costs ought not to be apportioned as in Harrison v. Cornwall Minerals Company (18 Ch. D. 334), but that the defendants should have 5*l.* for their costs incidental to the notice. Robinson v. Drakes, 23 Ch. D. 98; 48 L. T. 740; 31 W. R. 871—C. A.

Costs of Shorthand Writers' Notes.]—See supra, EVIDENCE.

Costs of Unnecessary Motions in Court of Appeal.]—On the 26th of June an appellant in bankruptcy was ordered to give additional security for the costs of the appeal. On the 4th of November, the security not having been given, the respondent's solicitor, without having previously written to the appellant's solicitors, gave notice of motion to dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution. On the 13th of November the additional security was given, and on the 14th of November the motion to dismiss came on to be heard:—Held, that the appellant must pay the costs of the motion, and that the appeal could not be heard until he had done so. Isaacs, Ex parte, Baum, In re (No. 2), 10 Ch. D. 1; 47 L. J. Bk. 111; 39 L. T. 520; 27 W. R. 297—C. A.

Appeal Withdrawn—Notice of Motion for Costs of Appeal.]—An appellant's solicitors wrote to the solicitors of the respondent withdrawing their notice of appeal as irregular. The respondent, who had delivered briefs to oppose the appeal, applied ex parte to discharge the notice of appeal with costs:—Held, that notice of motion must be given. Oakwell Collieries, In re, 7 Ch. D. 706; 26 W. R. 577—C. A.

Appeal Abandoned after Notice of Appeal.]—On the 20th of December, 1880, C. gave notice of appeal, but did not set it down. On the 11th of January he sent a letter withdrawing his notice of appeal. On the next day the solicitor for the respondents wrote to C. saying that he had delivered briefs, and that unless C. would undertake to pay the respondent's costs of the appeal the usual proceedings would be taken to enforce payment of them. C. did not answer this letter. The respondents then moved that the appeal might be dismissed, and that C. might be ordered to pay the costs of the appeal and of this application, and an order was made accordingly. Charlton v. Charlton, 16 Ch. D. 273; 29 W. R. 406—C. A.

Where parties who have set down their appeal obtain leave to withdraw it, they will only be ordered to pay such costs as they would have had to pay if the appeal had been heard that day and dismissed with costs. Att.-Gen. v. Halifax (Corporation), 5 L. R., Ch. 116; 22 L. T. 82.

The relators in an information appealed against the decree of a vice-chancellor. After the appeal was set down costs were incurred by an application to the attorney-general to withdraw his fiat. The appellants then applied for leave to withdraw the appeal. The court, on giving leave, refused to make any special order as to the costs occasioned by the application to the attorney-general. Id.

Of Application for Costs of Abandoned Notice of Appeal.]—The costs of an application for the costs of an abandoned notice of appeal will not be allowed unless a previous demand for payment of them has been made and not complied with. Griffin v. Allen, 11 Ch. D. 913; 28 W. R. 10—C. A.

Of Abandoned Notice of Motion.]—A defendant in an action which had been tried by a judge without a jury gave notice of appeal against the judgment, and also obtained ex parte a rule nisi for a new trial. He did not set down the appeal for hearing, but, before the argument of the rule for a new trial, gave fresh notice of appeal from the judgment. There was a substantial question to be tried as to the measure of damages:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the first notice of appeal as an abandoned motion: Secondly, that the second notice of appeal was unnecessary, inasmuch as the whole question could be tried under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XL. r. 10, upon the application to make the rule for a new trial absolute. Waddell v. Blockley, 10 Ch. D. 416; 40 L. T. 286; 27 W. R. 233—C. A.

tion of Action.]—An application by a defendant in an action in the Queen's Bench Division, to strike out the statement of claim as embarrassing, having been refused by a divisional court, the defendant appealed, and the Court of Appeal made an order "that the judgment of the court below be reversed with costs of this appeal and of the proceedings in the court below." The defendant applied to the master to tax the costs, which he declined to do on the ground that they were costs of an interlocutory application, and that the taxation must stand over till the termination of the action:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that the practice of the common law divisions to have only one taxation of costs in an action does not apply where costs are given by the Court of Appeal, and that under an order of the Court of Appeal, directing payment of costs, without any intimation that the taxation and payment are to be postponed, the party to whom they are ordered to be paid is entitled to have them taxed and paid forthwith. Phillipps v. Phillipps, 5 Q. B. D. 60; 28 W. R. 376—C. A.

Enforcing Order for Payment pending Appeal.]

—A party to whom costs have been ordered to be paid will not be restrained from enforcing the order pending an appeal to the House of Lords, if his solicitors undertake to refund if the order should be reversed. Morgan v. Elford, 4 Ch. D. 352; 25 W. R. 136.

The payment of costs, to be paid under a decision against which there is a bonâ fide intention to appeal to the House of Lords, will not be stayed where the solicitor receiving such costs personally undertakes to repay them in the event of the order of the court below being reversed. Grant v. Banque Franco-Egyptienne, 3 C. P. D. 202; 47 L. J., C. P. 455; 38 L. T. 622; 26 W. R. 669—C. A.

The mere chance of a litigant obtaining costs upon a decision at some subsequent stage of the proceeding is no ground for staying the payment of costs already ordered to be paid under a separate judgment. Ib.

12. IN CHANCERY BEFORE JUDICATURE ACTS.

[Cases which may be usefully consulted under the present practice will be found under this subhead.]

Practice.]—When a judge of a court of first instance declines to decide a question on a petition, and expresses his wish that it should be brought before the Appeal Court, the proper course is for the petitioner to present a short petition of appeal pro forma. Berkeley (Earl), In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 56; 44 L. J., Ch. 3; 23 W. R. 195.

When a judge has decided on an adjourned summons a question which has arisen in proceedings in his chambers, but no order has been drawn up, no appeal can be brought from his decision. Vyse v. Foster, 10 L. R., Ch. 236; 44 L. J., Ch. 344; 23 W. R. 299.

Special leave had been given to make an original motion before the Court of Appeal in a cause which had been heard before the court, and in which an appeal was pending in the House of Lords:—Held, that the respondent had no right to have the motion first heard before the vice-chancellor. Powell v. Elliot, 20 W. R. 194.

A motion by defendants to expunge evidence for scandal and impertinence was ordered to stand over till the hearing of the cause. At the hearing a decree was made both on the hearing and on the motion, by which substantial relief was given, and the motion was refused, and the evidence sought to be expunged was entered as read. The plaintiff appealed from part of the decree, which was varied by the Lords Justices:—Held, that the whole decree was opened to the respondents on the appeal, and on their application the order on the motion was reversed, and the evidence directed to be expunged. Middlemas v. Wilson, 10 L. R. Ch. 230; 44 L. J., Ch. 476; 32 L. T. 105; 23 W. R. 301.

As to Quantum of Damages Assessed by Jury.]

—The Court of Appeal will not entertain an appeal from an order of the court below assessing damages, unless it is shown that the court below has acted on a wrong principle in assessing the quantum of damages. Bull v. Ray, 30 L. T. 1; 22 W. R. 283.

Amount Involved.]

—An appeal will not be allowed when the amount in dispute is only 1*l.* 15*s.* National Assurance and Investment Society, In re, Cross, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 221; 41 L. J., Ch. 341; 26 L. T. 53; 20 W. R. 324.

A solicitor who had successfully prosecuted a claim on behalf of a creditor, under the winding-up of a company, applied to the court for a lien on the dividends payable to his client to the amount of his costs, which amounted to 1*l.* 15*s.* The application having been refused, the solicitor appealed. The court refused to entertain an appeal for so trifling an amount, although it was stated that it was a representative case, which would govern many others. Ib.

Costs of Appeal.]—The established rule, that the Court of Appeal will not give the costs of the appeal to a successful appellant, except under special circumstances, is still in force. If the court does not specially give the costs the appellant is not entitled to them. Denny v. Hancock, 6 L. R., Ch. 138; 40 L. J., Ch. 193; 23 L. T. 795; 19 W. R. 234.

The Court of Bankruptcy follows this rule, and will not, as a matter of course, give the costs of an appeal to a successful appellant. Matthews, Ex parte, Cherry, In re, 12 L. R., Eq. 596; 40 L. J., Bk. 90; 19 W. R. 1005.

The costs of a successful appeal will not be given in the absence of misconduct on the part of the respondent. Stannard v. Lee, 6 L. R., Ch. 346; 40 L. J., Ch. 489; 24 L. T. 459; 19 W. R. 615.

When the decision of the court below is reversed the Court of Appeal does not usually give to the successful appellant the costs of the appeal, although it has power to give such costs in special cases. Alexander v. Mills, 6 L. R., Ch. 124; 40 L. J., Ch. 73; 24 L. T. 206; 19 W. R. 310.

An appeal on the construction of a will, if unsuccessful, will in general be dismissed with costs. Clark v. Henry, 6 L. R., Ch. 588.

Where a decree of the court below, although in substance affirmed, was varied to the extent of protecting the interests of persons other than the respondent, no costs were given. London and South Western Railway Company v. Black-

The Court of Appeal refuses to inquire into the various causes which may have influenced the decision of the court below in awarding costs, and therefore an appeal for costs will not generally be entertained; but where the judge of the court below placed on record on the face of the decree the reason why he ordered the party to pay the costs, and such reason was founded on the determination of a question of law, the Court of Appeal allowed the question of law to be argued on the appeal, that it might determine whether the reason embodied in the decree by the judge below was well founded. Walker v. French, 21 W. R. 493.

An appellant gave notice to a respondent whose costs the appellant had been ordered to pay, that no alteration in the order as to his costs was asked for, and offered to pay his costs:—Held, that the respondent was not entitled to his costs of appearing on the appeal. Uymann v. Elkan, 7 L. R., Ch. 130; 41 L. J., Ch. 246; 25 L. T. 813.

The costs of an unnecessary party to an appeal ordered to be paid by the appellant. Scholefield v. Lockwood, 4 De G., J. & S. 22.

When exceptions for scandal have been overruled in the court below, but allowed on appeal, the court gave the successful appellant his costs, both of the appeal and in the court below as between solicitor and client. Christie v. Christie, 8 L. R., Ch. 499; 42 L. J., Ch. 544; 28 L. T. 607; 21 W. R. 493.

Repayment of Money on Reversal.—When money has been paid under a decree which is afterwards reversed, it must be repaid with interest. Imperial Mercantile Credit Association v. Coleman, 40 L. J., Ch. 262.

III. APPEAL FROM JUDGE IN CHAMBERS.

1. Practice in Chancery Division.
2. Practice in Common Law Divisions.

1. PRACTICE IN CHANCERY DIVISION.

From Judge in Chambers to Judge in Court—Practice when Appeal to Court of Appeal Desired.—In the Rolls Court it is the practice, following the former practice of Jessel, M. R., to adjourn summonses into court for argument or judgment in cases in which an appeal is desired. If there is no such adjournment, the proper course, so far as any application to the court below is concerned, is for a party wishing to appeal to move in court to discharge the order made in chambers, not to apply to the court below for leave to appeal direct to the Court of Appeal. Holloway v. Cheston, 19 Ch. D. 516; 51 L. J., Ch. 208; 30 W. R. 120. But see next case.

Where, on a summons heard in chambers, an order has been made by the judge and not adjourned into court, and there is a desire to appeal against it, the proper course is not to move in court, on notice, to discharge the order, or for a certificate that the judge does not desire it to be reheard, but to make an application in chambers. Holloway v. Cheston (supra) not followed. Butler's Wharf Company, In re,

Anderson v. Butler's Wharf Company, 21 Ch. D. 131; 51 L. J., Ch. 694; 30 W. R. 723.

When a case has been heard by a judge in chambers in the Chancery Division, and parties desire to appeal to the Court of Appeal without another argument before the judge in court, it is a proper and convenient practice for the judge to refuse leave to go straight to the Court of Appeal, and to insist on an argument in court, as the Court of Appeal, after the hearing in court, has the benefit of a judgment of the court below, with the reasons, if any, for the decision. Manchester Val de Travers Paving Company v. Slagg, 47 L. T. 556—C. A.

An appeal on a mere point of practice, such as security for costs, may be made from an order made in chambers, without obtaining the judge's certificate. Northampton Coal Company v. Midland Waggon Company, 7 Ch. D. 500; 38 L. T. 82; 26 W. R. 485—C. A.

An order made by a judge of the Chancery Division, personally in chambers may be appealed from equally with an order made by him in court. Blum, In re, Thomas v. Blum, 6 Ch. D. 346; 25 W. R. 871—C. A.

As a general rule, however, a certificate should be obtained from the judge that he does not desire to hear any further argument in court. But the object of such a certificate is only to satisfy the Court of Appeal that the judge has judicially determined the matter, and, if otherwise satisfied of that fact, the Court of Appeal will hear the appeal without a certificate if the judge declines to give one. Id.

Application should in such a case be made to the Court of Appeal for leave to set down the appeal without the judge's certificate. Id.

A caveat against the enrolment of an order in chambers is not prosecuted with effect by service within twenty-eight days after it is warned of notice of motion before the judge in court to discharge the order. Lewis, In re, Republic of Paraguay, Ex parte, 45 L. J., Ch. 62—C. A.

Doubts thrown on the propriety of the practice of the Court of Appeal in Chancery in refusing to hear an appeal from an order in chambers, though made by the judge himself, without an application to the judge in court to discharge the order. Id.

An appeal can be made direct to the Court of Appeal, without leave, from an order made in chambers, where the matter has been fully argued before the judge himself; the fact that it has been so made should appear on the order itself, or be certified by the chief clerk. Murr v. Cooke, 34 L. T. 751; 24 W. R. 756.

The Court of Appeal will only hear an appeal from an order made in chambers, when the judge who makes the order certifies that the case has been so fully argued before him, that he does not desire to hear it re-argued in court. Warrant Finance Company, Ex parte, 5 L. R., Ch. 88; 39 L. J., Ch. 185.

Notice of Appeal—Time for.—In an action to set aside a contract for fraud, on the 23rd June, the judge made an order in chambers, upon a summons taken out by the defendants. The order was not drawn up, passed and entered until the 14th July. On the 18th July, the plaintiff gave notice of a motion in court to discharge the order. The judge refused the motion, on the ground that it was his invariable rule that notices of motion to discharge orders made in his chambers must be given within twenty-one days from the date of pronouncing the order, and not from the date of its being perfected, whether the order was a simple refusal of an application or not. Sect. 50 of the Judicature Act, 1873, provides that orders made by a judge in chambers (except the discretionary orders mentioned in sect. 49) may be set aside or discharged upon notice by any divisional court, or by the judge sitting in court, "according to the course and practice of the division of the High Court to which the particular cause or matter in which such order is made may be assigned." There did not appear to be any settled practice of the Chancery Division as to the time within which such appeals from the judge in chambers to the judge in court should be brought:—Held, that following the analogy of Ord. LVIII. r. 15, the limit of time for applying to a judge in court to discharge an order made by him in chambers is twenty-one days from the date of pronouncing the order in the case of a simple refusal, and, in other cases, twenty-one days from the date of the perfecting of the order. Heatly v. Newton, 19 Ch. D. 326; 51 L. J., Ch. 225; 45 L. T. 455; 30 W. R. 72—C. A.

Ord. LVIII. r. 15, limiting the time for bringing appeals, does not apply to the time for making motions before a divisional court or a judge in court to discharge an order in chambers; but in the Chancery Division the practice is, that no such motion shall be made without special leave after twenty-one days. Dickson v. Harrison, 9 Ch. D. 243; 47 L. J., Ch. 761; 38 L. T. 794; 26 W. R. 730—C. A.

2. PRACTICE IN COMMON LAW DIVISIONS.

Order of Judge in Chambers—What is.]—An order made by a registrar sitting as judge under Ord. LIV. is not, for the purposes of the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 50, an order made by a judge in chambers, and hence, where such an order has been reviewed by a judge in court, an appeal from the judge's decision will lie without special leave. The Vivar, 2 P. D. 29; 35 L. T. 782; 25 W. R. 453—C. A.

Time for Appealing.]—Ord. LIV. r. 6 (as amended R. March, 1879, r. 8), which directs that an appeal from a decision at chambers shall be made within eight days, applies to decisions at chambers during the long vacation; and if that period has elapsed without the sitting of a divisional court, the right to appeal is lost, unless the party decided against obtains an extension of time. An order empowering the plaintiff to sign judgment upon a specially indorsed writ, was made by a judge at chambers upon the 29th of August: the time for appealing to a divisional court was on the 2nd of September, extending conditionally upon payment into court of the sum sued for within fourteen days. This condition was never fulfilled, and no divisional court sat during the long vacation. Upon the first day of Michaelmas sittings, the defendant moved the Exchequer Division to set aside the order made upon the 29th of August:—Held, that as more than eight days had elapsed since the order was made, no appeal could lie. Runtz v. Sheffield, 4 Ex. D. 160; 48 L. J., Ex. 385; 40 L. T. 539—C. A.

An order having been made in chambers on the 20th of June, the defendant, on the 24th, gave notice of appeal to a divisional court for Saturday, the 28th. The court sat on the 26th to hear motions, and was sitting on the 28th, but not for the purpose of hearing motions. The defendant brought forward his motion on the 30th, being the next day on which the court sat to hear motions:—Held, that the appeal motion was out of time, since a court to which an application to enlarge the time could be made had been sitting within the eight days. Stirling v. Du Barry, 5 Q. B. D. 65; 28 W. R. 405—C. A.

When notice of motion of appeal from a decision in chambers was given on the eighth day after the decision:—Held, that under Ord. LIV. r. 6, it was too late, as the notice must be given so that the motion can be heard within eight days after the decision appealed against. Fox v. Wallis, 2 C. P. D. 45; 35 L. T. 690; 25 W. R. 287—C. A.

By Ord. LIV. r. 6, appeals from chambers "shall be by motion, and shall be made within eight days after the decision appealed against." It is not a sufficient compliance with this rule to give notice of motion within eight days. Deykin v. Coleman, 36 L. T. 195; 25 W. R. 294—C. A.

A judge at chambers having made an order on the 29th of August, the party affected by such order moved the divisional court to rescind it during the Michaelmas sittings within eight days from the commencement of such sittings:—Held, that the application was too late, inasmuch as by Ord. LIV. r. 6, an appeal from a judge at chambers must be within eight days from the decision appealed against. Crom v. Samuels, 2 C. P. D. 21; 46 L. J., C. P. 1; 35 L. T. 423; 25 W. R. 45.

When an appellant from chambers has only the eighth and last day whereon to move, and it happens that no divisional court sits on that day, the right of appeal is not lost, but the appellant must move the next practicable court. Forrest v. Davis, 26 W. R. 534.

When the last of the eight days, limited by Ord. LIV. r. 6, for appealing from a decision at chambers expires on a Sunday, the appellant has the following Monday for appealing. Taylor v. Jones, 45 L. J., C. P. 110; 34 L. T. 131.

Extension of Time.]—By one of the general orders of the Judicature Act, 1875, eight days only are given for an appeal to the divisional court against an order made by a judge at chambers:—Held, that that limitation of time does not affect the right to appeal against an order made in vacation at chambers, when no divisional court would be sitting within the eight days. The time for appealing against such an order ought, almost as a matter of course, to be enlarged. Wallingford v. Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas. 685; 50 L. J., Q. B. 49; 43 L. T. 258; 29 W. R. 81—H. L. (E.)

Where an order had been made at chambers, and the eight days had, under such circumstances, expired without an appeal to the divisional court, the fact that an execution had in the meantime issued, makes no difference in the matter. Id.

Under Ord. VII. r. 6, the court or a judge has power to enlarge the time for appealing against an order in chambers, notwithstanding that the time for appealing has elapsed, and that the action stands dismissed under the order. Carter v. Stubbs, 6 Q. B. D. 116; 50 L. J., Q. B. 161; 43

L. T. 746; 29 W. R. 132—C. A. Affirming 50 L. J., Q. B. 4.

What Orders are before Court of Appeal.]—An order at chambers was made refusing leave to defend, except on terms, the time for performing which was allowed by the defendant to expire, and another order at chambers was afterwards made refusing leave to enlarge the time within which the first order might be contested. An appeal was then taken to the divisional court against the second order, when that court desired that the notice of motion should be considered as amended so as to include the first order:—Held, that the two orders were thus brought fully before the court, and the judgment then given must be taken as applicable to both of them. Wallisford v. Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas. 685; 50 L. J., Q. B. 49; 43 L. T. 258; 29 W. R. 81—H. L. (E).

For the same reason, in an appeal against that judgment, the Court of Appeal must be considered to have had both the orders brought under its revision, and on an appeal to the House of Lords both the orders and both the judgments were brought into discussion. Id.

Fresh Affidavit.]—The divisional court on an appeal from chambers will, as a matter of convenience, allow a new affidavit made since the date of the order at chambers to be read. Robinson v. Bradshaw, 32 W. R. 95.

Costs.]—Costs follow a reversal of a decision of a judge at chambers. Friend v. London, Chatham, and Doker Railway Company, 25 W. R. 735—C. A.

IV. APPEALS FROM MASTER TO JUDGE IN CHAMBERS.

What the subject of Appeal—Appeal for Costs.]—The enactment in s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, that no order by the High Court, or any judge thereof, as to costs only which by law are left to the discretion of the court, shall be subject to any appeal, does not apply to the order of a master or district registrar, and therefore a judge of such court has power to vary as to costs an order of a district registrar dismissing the action without costs. Foster v. Edwards, 48 L. J., Q. B. 767.

Time for Appealing.]—In order that an appeal from a master to a judge at chambers may be in time, according to Ord. LIV. r. 4, it is not sufficient that the appeal summons should be taken out within four days from the master's decision, but it must be heard or adjourned within the four days. Bell v. North Staffordshire Railway Company, 4 Q. B. D. 205; 48 L. J., Q. B. 518; 27 W. R. 263.

Extension of Time for Appeal.]—Within four days from the decision of a master at chambers, an appeal summons was taken out and made returnable at a date after the expiration of the four days, but on the first day when any judge would sit at chambers:—The court held, that, under the circumstances, the time might be enlarged under Ord. LVII. r. 6, and that no summons for that purpose was necessary under Ord. LIV. r. 1. Gibbons v. London Financial

Association, 4 C. P. D. 263; 48 L. J., Ch. 514; 27 W. R. 619.

On the 2nd November an order was made dismissing an action unless a statement of claim was delivered within seven days, and on the 9th November this time was extended by three days. On the 14th November the plaintiff delivered his statement of claim, and on the following day the defendant drew up and served the order of the 2nd November. On the 17th November the master, and subsequently a judge, made an order that the statement of claim do stand:—Held, that the time of appealing from the order of the 2nd November should be extended. Metcalfe v. British Tea Association, 46 L. T. 31.

V. APPEAL FROM CHIEF CLERK TO JUDGE.

Adjournment to Judge.]—An adjournment from the chief clerk to the judge in person is not in the nature of an appeal. Watts, In re, Smith v. Watts, 22 Ch. D. 1; 52 L. J., Ch. 209; 48 L. T., 167; 31 W. R. 262—C. A.

VI. APPEALS FROM INFERIOR COURTS.

Appeal from Court of Passage of Liverpool exercising Admiralty Jurisdiction—Security for Costs.]—The appeal from the Court of Passage of Liverpool exercising admiralty jurisdiction is under the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 71), s. 26, and security for costs must be given before the instrument of appeal is lodged. The Ganges, 5 P. D. 247; 43 L. T. 12—C. A.

County Palatine of Lancaster.]—Ord. LVIII. of the Rules of Court, 1875, applies to appeals from the court of the County Palatine of Lancaster as well as to appeals from the High Court of Justice, and the time for appealing is now regulated by rule 15 of that Order, and is no longer governed by the General Orders of 1855 regulating appeals from the court of the County Palatine. Lee v. Nuttall, 12 Ch. D. 61; 48 L. J., Ch. 616; 41 L. T. 4; 27 W. R. 805—C. A.

Time for Entry—Setting down for Hearing—Notice of Appeal.]—Where a rule nisi is obtained on a motion by way of appeal to reverse a judgment of an inferior court, unless the appeal be entered in the list at the crown office of the Queen's Bench Division, in compliance with Ord. LVIII. r. 19, before the day named for the hearing of the appeal in the notice to show cause, the appeal will be taken to have been abandoned, and the appellant will have lost his right to be heard. Donnan v. Brown, 42 L. T. 30.

From Quarter Sessions to Divisional Court.]—See sub tit. JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

From County Court to Divisional Court.]—See COUNTY COURT.

From Mayor's Court to Divisional Court.]—See MAYOR'S COURT.

Mason v. Mason, 8 P. D. 21; 52 L. J., P. 27; 48 L. T. 290; 31 W. R. 361—C. A.

Leave was refused to a defendant to adduce fresh evidence on the hearing of an appeal for the purpose of proving admissions made by the plaintiff in conversation. Glorer v. Daubney, 4 De G., F. & J. 561.

Leave to Subpoena without Prejudice.—On an application to subpoena a witness who had made no affidavit in the suit, to attend for examination on the hearing of an appeal, the court granted leave to subpoena him without prejudice to the question as to whether or not his evidence should be admitted. Coal Economising Gas Company, In re, Gover's Case, 24 W. R. 36.

Power of Court to order Examination of Witnesses.—The Court of Appeal may order certain witnesses on either side to attend for examination before the court itself, in preference to ordering a new trial. McCollin v. Gilpin, 6 Q. B. D. 518; 44 L. T. 914; 29 W. R. 408; 45 J. P. 828—C. A.

b. In Other Cases.

Duty of Appellant.—It is the duty of an appellant to bring before the Court of Appeal the whole of the evidence, oral as well as written, on which the order appealed from was founded, and if he does not do this, his appeal ought to be dismissed. Firth, Ex parte, Courburn, In re, 19 Ch. D. 419; 51 L. J., Ch. 473; 45 L. T. 120; 30 W. R. 529—C. A.

Note of Oral Evidence lost—Power of Court.—The Court of Appeal, however, has power, by way of indulgence, in a case where a note of oral evidence has been accidentally lost, to allow that evidence to be taken over again. Id.

Evidence voluminous—Copies.—On an ex parte application for directions in a pending appeal, where the evidence was very voluminous and consisted entirely of written affidavits, the court intimated that, notwithstanding Ord. LVIII. r. 11, it would not be necessary to have additional office copies of the affidavits taken for production to the members of the court, but that the office copies of their own affidavits usually taken by the solicitors on each side and the ordinary copies supplied by them to the solicitors on the other side would, with the assistance of the briefs of the junior counsel in the case, be sufficient. Croxford v. Hornsea Steam Brick and Tile Works Company, 24 W. R. 422—C. A.

When the affidavits read at the hearing in the court below, when an order was made from which the defendant appealed, were very voluminous, and had not been printed, the court, on the application of the plaintiff, in order that expense might be saved, dispensed with Ord. LVIII. rule 11, requiring printed copies to be produced on appeal, and ordered the officer in charge of the affidavits to attend in court on the hearing of the appeal with the affidavits for the use of the court. Sickles v. Morris, 24 W. R. 102—C. A.

Filing Affidavits.—Affidavits which are intended to be used on appeal should be filed with the officer of the division of the High Court from which the appeal comes. Watts v. Watts, 45 L. J., Ch. 658—C. A.

Judge's Notes, Request for, in case of Poverty of Appellant.—Where an appellant had, by reason of his poverty, been unable to take shorthand notes of the evidence in the court below, the Court of Appeal sent a request in writing to the judge of the court below for a copy of his notes of the evidence, that the appellant might not be prejudiced in the prosecution of his appeal. Dence v. Mason, 41 L. T. 573—C. A.

Costs of Printing Judge's Notes.—The cost of printing the judge's notes of evidence were made costs of the appeal. Orr-Ewing v. Johnston, 13 Ch. D. 465—C. A.

Shorthand Notes—Right to read Judge's Notes.—At the hearing of an appeal a party is entitled to read a shorthand writer's notes of the evidence taken in the court below as his impression of what passed; and the judge's notes will be taken by the Court of Appeal to represent rightly the whole effect. Gee, In re, Laming v. Gee, 41 L. T. 744; 28 W. R. 217—C. A.

Shorthand Notes of Evidence—Costs of.—It is a settled rule that the costs of shorthand writers' notes of evidence will not be allowed on taxation unless there is in the order a direction to that effect. Such a direction will only be inserted in exceptional cases; the notes of the judge, supplemented by those of counsel, being amply sufficient, if not better, for all ordinary purposes. The general utility of shorthand writers' notes considered. De la Warr (Earl) v. Miles, 19 Ch. D. 80; 45 L. T. 424; 30 W. R. 35—C. A.

The costs of copies of the printed shorthand writer's notes of the evidence in the court below were made costs in the appeal. Orr-Ewing v. Johnston, 13 Ch. D. 465—C. A.

As a general rule the Court of Appeal refuses the costs of shorthand notes of the evidence in the court below. Kelly v. Byles, 13 Ch. D. 682; 49 L. J., Ch. 181; 28 W. R. 585—C. A. See also Beuley v. Atkinson, 13 Ch. D. 300—C. A.

The Court of Appeal has power to allow the costs of all shorthand notes properly used in the appeal, whether taken for the purposes of the appeal or not. Hill's Executors v. Managers of the Metropolitan District Asylum, 49 L. J., Q. B. 668; 43 L. T. 462; 28 W. R. 664—C. A.

Time within which Application for Costs of Shorthand Notes used on Appeal should be made.—Where shorthand notes of the evidence and proceedings in the court below are used on appeal, an application to be allowed, on taxation, the costs of the notes as costs of the appeal must be made before the judgment of the Court of Appeal is entered. Id.

Alteration of Order after being drawn up.—After the order of the Court of Appeal has been drawn up, the court has no power to alter the order by adding a direction that the costs of shorthand writers' notes of the evidence be allowed. De la Warr (Earl) v. Miles, supra.

— On what Grounds allowed.—The court will not allow the costs of shorthand notes of evidence except under very special circumstances. Vernon v. St. James's Vestry, 16 Ch. D. 473; 44 L. T. 229; 29 W. R. 222—C. A.

The court allowed the respondents the costs of copies of a shorthand writer's notes of evidence taken before the registrar, on the ground that they had been served by the appellant with notice that such notes would be read. Harris, Ex parte, Ward, In re, 30 W. R. 561—C. A.

Costs will not be allowed of shorthand notes of evidence which are not used on the hearing of an appeal, the decision turning on a question of law. Webster, Ex parte, Morris, In re, 22 Ch. D. 136; 52 L. J., Ch. 375—C. A.

Where the court has used the shorthand writers' notes of evidence taken in the court below, the costs will be allowed. Smith v. Chadwick, 20 Ch. D. 81; 51 L. J., Ch. 621—C. A.

It is the duty of the taxing master in a bankruptcy appeal to decide as to the costs of the transcript of a shorthand writer's notes of the depositions. Cocks, Ex parte, Poole, In re, 21 Ch. D. 407—C. A.

— Of Judgment—Costs of.—The court generally allows the costs of the shorthand writers' notes of the judgment of the court below, if the transcript of the judgment is made use of. Culler v. Isaacs, 45 L. T. 567; 30 W. R. 71—C. A.

Costs of the transcript of the registrar's judgment in a bankruptcy appeal were ordered to be included in the costs of the trustee. Cocks, Ex parte, Poole, In re, 21 Ch. D. 407—C. A.

The costs of shorthand writers' notes of a judgment are not allowed when it has appeared in the reports, provided that the report appeared a sufficient length of time before the briefs were delivered; if the report appeared too late, the costs will be allowed. London and South Western Railway Company v. Gomm, 20 Ch. D. 589; 46 L. T. 455—C. A.

— Printed Copies—Agreement to share Printer's Bill.—Under the common order of the Court of Appeal giving the costs of the appeal, and of the shorthand writer's notes of the evidence and of the judgment in the court below, the solicitor of the successful party, when the shorthand notes have been printed in the first instance, is entitled on taxation of the costs to be allowed, in addition to the printer's bill, 3d. per folio for one printed copy of the shorthand notes of the evidence supplied to each of his counsel on the appeal, and 3d. per folio for one printed copy of the shorthand notes of the judgment supplied for the use of each judge of the Court of Appeal. Singer Manufacturing Company v. Loog, 52 L. J., Ch. 288; 49 L. T. 484; 31 W. R. 392—C. A.

10. HEARING OF THE APPEAL.

Before what Judges.—An appeal can be heard by the Court of Appeal, although one of the judges then in the court is a judge of the division in which the action is pending, if he has taken no part in making the order appealed from. Fisher v. Val de Travers Asphaltic Company, 1 C. P. D. 259; 45 L. J., C. P. 135; 24 W. R. 198—C. A.

In case of Non-appearance of Appellant.—When no one appears for an appellant, the appeal will, upon the application of the respondent, be dismissed with costs, and there is no necessity that the respondent should prove that he has been served with a notice of appeal. Louis, Ex parte, Louis, In re, 7 Ch. D. 160; 47 L. J., Bk. 24; 37 L. T. 583; 26 W. R. 229—C. A.

Right to Begin.—On an appeal by a defendant, the leading counsel for the defendant begins; the evidence of the plaintiff is then read; the evidence of the defendant is then read; the junior counsel for the defendant is then heard; the counsel for the plaintiff are then heard; counsel for the defendant replies. Giffard v. Williams, 5 L. R., Ch. 546.

— Cross Appeals on Cross Demurrers.—Where there are cross appeals on cross demurrers before the Court of Appeal, and the burden of proof is on the defendant, so that if he fails in his appeal, the cross appeal becomes immaterial, the defendant will be entitled to begin. Clarke v. Bradlaugh, 7 Q. B. D. 38; 50 L. J., Q. B. 342—C. A.

Number of Counsel.—In ordinary cases of appeal only two counsel will be heard on the same side. Hoare v. Bremridge, 42 L. J., Ch. 1; 27 L. T. 593; 21 W. R. 43—L. J. S. P., Snecoby v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 1 Q. B. D. 42; 45 L. J., Q. B. 1—C. A.; Iles v. West Ham Union, 46 L. T. 151—C. A.

Signing by Counsel.—A petition of appeal by a plaintiff, who sued in formâ pauperis, was allowed to be set down, although signed by one counsel only. Jones v. Gregory, 4 De G., J. & S. 58. Circumstances under which a petition of rehearing was received on the signature of one counsel only. Midland Counties Benefit Building Society, In re, 4 De G., J. & S. 468.

Advancing Hearing.—In a suit, the whole object of which was to restrain the alleged improper use of a trade name, a decree for a perpetual injunction was made at the hearing. The defendant, having appealed, applied to have the hearing of the appeal advanced:—Held, that as the right to an injunction was involved, and irreparable injury might result to the defendant, the hearing might be advanced. Lazenby v. White, 19 W. R. 291—L. J.

In an action where an account was ordered and notice of appeal was given:—Held, that as the discovery given by the account would enable the successful party to take proceedings against the other party's customers, and the other party, supposing the appeal to be successful, might thus sustain irreparable injury in the business, the appeal ought to be advanced.—Adair v. Young, 11 Ch. D. 136; 40 L. T. 598—C. A.

Notice to discontinue Action, effect of.—A plaintiff gave notice of appeal from the refusal of an injunction. Shortly afterwards the plaintiff's solicitors wrote to the defendants' solicitors to withdraw the notice of appeal. Two days after this the plaintiff's solicitors gave the defendants' solicitors notice of discontinuance of the action. The defendants' solicitors declined to consent to the withdrawal of the appeal except on terms to which the plaintiff's solicitors did not agree, and the appeal came on in its turn:—Held, that the discontinuance of the action put an end to the appeal, and that no order could be made except to strike it out of the paper. Conybeare v. Lewis, 13 Ch. D. 469; 28 W. R. 330—C. A.

Point not raised in Court below—Leave to raise in Court of Appeal.—An appellant will not be allowed to raise in the Court of Appeal a point which he did not raise in the court below, even though there is some evidence in support of it, if the nature of that evidence is such that, by any possibility, the respondent might have been able to rebut it if the point had been raised originally. Firth, Ex parte, Couchburn, In re, 19 Ch. D. 419; 51 L. J., Ch. 473; 45 L. T. 120; 30 W. R. 529—C. A.

A plaintiff cannot on appeal make a case not made in his pleadings, or in the court below, unless he obtain the leave of the court. New Zealand Land Company v. Watson (per Bramwell, L. J.), 7 Q. B. D. 374; 50 L. J., Q. B. 433; 44 L. T. 675; 29 W. R. 694—C. A.

Refusal of Application at Trial for Leave to amend Pleadings.—When at the trial of an action an application for leave to amend the pleadings is refused, the refusal forms part of the judgment, and it is unnecessary to appeal separately from it; but on an appeal from the judgment the court of appeal has power, if it thinks fit, to give leave to amend. Laird v. Briggs, 16 Ch. D. 663; 44 L. T. 361—C. A.

Power of Court of Appeal to amend Record of Trial.—At the trial of an action the jury found certain issues in favour of the plaintiff, and the judge reserved judgment. The verdict was entered as a general verdict for the plaintiff, but the judge, notwithstanding the verdict, gave judgment for the defendant. On an appeal by the plaintiff from the judgment, the Court of Appeal amended the record by entering the verdict for the plaintiff on the issues only, and affirmed the judgment. Clark v. Wood, 9 Q. B. D. 276; 47 L. T. 144; 30 W. R. 931—C. A.

Varying Order of Court below as to Costs.—If we were to vary the order of the court below as to costs when an appeal on the merits fails, we should practically be allowing an appeal for costs only, and appeals would be brought nominally on the merits, but really only for the purpose of varying the order as to costs. Harpham v. Shacklock, 19 Ch. D. 215; 45 L. T. 572; 30 W. R. 50—C. A., per Jessel, M. R. S. P., Llanover v. Homfray, 19 Ch. D. 232.

Order of Appeal Court—Varying Minutes—Notice of Motion to vary.—Where any party is dissatisfied with an order as settled by the registrar, and desires to bring the matter before the court, he must, whether the order be an order of the Court of Appeal or of a court of first instance, give notice of motion to vary the minutes. General Share and Trust Company v. Wetley Brick and Pottery Company, 20 Ch. D. 130; 51 L. J., Ch. 464; 46 L. T. 70; 30 W. R. 695—C. A.

Power of Court to rehear.—Under the system of procedure established by the Procedure Acts

no judge of the High Court has any jurisdiction to rehear an order, whether made by himself or by any other judge, the power to rehear being part of the appellate jurisdiction which is transferred by the acts to the Court of Appeal. St. Nazaire Company, In re, 12 Ch. D. 88; 41 L. T. 110; 27 W. R. 854—C. A.

After final judgment has been pronounced by the Court of Appeal it is not competent to the court to rehear the appeal on the ground of the discovery of fresh facts. The proper course is for the party complaining to commence an original action impeaching the decree. Flower v. Lloyd, 6 Ch. D. 297; 46 L. J. Ch. 838; 35 L. T. 454; 25 W. R. 793—C. A.

Seemingly, that where the decree is impeached on the ground of fraud, such an action may be commenced without leave of the court. Id.

To obtain leave to file a bill of review on the ground of new matter discovered, the matter must be not only material, but such that by employing reasonable diligence could not possibly have been used at the hearing. Michael v. Fripp, 18 W. R. 423.

11. COSTS OF THE APPEAL.

General Rule.—Under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, Ord. LV., costs are in the discretion of the court, and the opinion of the judges of the Court of Appeal is that as a general rule, the successful appellant will get his costs. The old rule that the successful appellant has to bear his own costs is no longer to be acted upon, unless the particular court in the particular case shall make an order to the contrary. Mcm., 1 Ch. D. 41—C. A.

On an appeal commenced under the practice of the Supreme Court a successful appellant will, in the absence of special circumstances, get his costs of the appeal. Olivant v. Wright, 45 L. J. Ch. 1—C. A. See also S. P., Masters, Ex parte Winsor, In re, 1 Ch. D. 113; 45 L. J. Bk. 18; 33 L. T. 613; 24 W. R. 113.

Succeeding on point not raised below.—When an appellant succeeds on a point not raised in the court below, he will be allowed the costs in the court below, but not the costs of the appeal. Hussey v. Payne, 8 Ch. D. 670; 47 L. J., Ch. 751; 38 L. T. 543; 26 W. R. 703—C. A.

Where an appellant is successful on an appeal upon a point not adjudicated upon in the court below, the general rule is that he will not be allowed his costs. Goddard v. Jeffreys, 46 L. T. 904—C. A.

Judgment of Admiralty Division varied—Collision—Both Vessels found to blame.—Where the Court of Appeal vary a judgment of the Admiralty Division that one of two vessels only is to blame for a collision by finding both to blame, no order will be made as to costs either in the Court of Appeal or in the court below, but each party will pay his own costs of the whole litigation. The Hector (No. 1), 52 L. J. P. 47—C. A.

Interlocutory Application—Costs below and in Court of Appeal.—Where, upon an interlocutory application the judge below has based his decision upon the merits of the whole case, the Court of Appeal will decide the question of costs both below and on appeal. Wilkinson v. Hull,

Barnsley, and West Riding Railway and Dock Company, 30 W. R. 617—C. A.

Further Trial—Costs of Former Trial.]—A case being sent down by the Court of Appeal for further trial, the respondent was ordered to pay the costs of appeal but not the costs of the former trial. Shardlow v. Cotterill, 51 L. J., Ch. 353; 45 L. T. 572—C. A.

Notice by Respondents to Vary Judgment.]—Where on an appeal notice has been given by the respondents that they intend to apply to have the judgment below varied, and the appeal is dismissed, the appellant will be ordered to pay the costs of the appeal, except such as were occasioned by the notice. The Lauretta, 4 P. D. 25; 48 L. J., P. D. & A. 55; 40 L. T. 444; 27 W. R. 902—C. A.

Costs of Appeal where Cross-Notice of Appeal—Apportionment.]—A respondent who has given cross-notice of appeal under Ord. LVIII. r. 6, is in the same position as to costs as if he had presented a cross-appeal. Where there were two respondents to an appeal, one of whom gave cross-notice of appeal respecting his co-respondent, the court made an apportionment of the costs of the appeal. Harrison v. Cornwall Minerals Railway Company, 18 Ch. D. 334; 51 L. J., Ch. 68; 45 L. T. 498—C. A. S. P., Johnstone v. Cox, 19 Ch. D. 17; 45 L. T. 657; 30 W. R. 114—C. A.

In an action for redemption of a mortgage vested in the defendant, B. as a trustee for the defendant D., who was in possession, D. set up the case that he was not in possession by virtue of the mortgage, but under a lease. The court decided that he was in possession as mortgagee, and made a decree on that footing, but without rests. The defendants appealed. The plaintiff gave notice that at the hearing of the appeal he should ask to have the decree varied by directing the account to be taken with rests. The Court of Appeal held that the decree was right in treating D. as mortgagee in possession, but refused to direct rests:—Held, that as the case was one where the costs could not have been materially increased by the notice, the costs ought not to be apportioned as in Harrison v. Cornwall Minerals Company (18 Ch. D. 334), but that the defendants should have 5l. for their costs incidental to the notice. Robinson v. Drakes, 23 Ch. D. 98; 48 L. T. 740; 31 W. R. 871—C. A.

Costs of Shorthand Writers' Notes.]—See supra, EVIDENCE.

Costs of Unnecessary Motions in Court of Appeal.]—On the 26th of June an appellant in bankruptcy was ordered to give additional security for the costs of the appeal. On the 4th of November, the security not having been given, the respondent's solicitor, without having previously written to the appellant's solicitors, gave notice of motion to dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution. On the 13th of November the additional security was given, and on the 14th of November the motion to dismiss came on to be heard:—Held, that the appellant must pay the costs of the motion, and that the appeal could not be heard until he had done so. Isaacs, Ex

parte, Baum, In re (No. 2), 10 Ch. D. 1; 47 L. J. Bk. 111; 39 L. T. 520; 27 W. R. 297—C. A.

Appeal Withdrawn—Notice of Motion for Costs of Appeal.]—An appellant's solicitors wrote to the solicitors of the respondent withdrawing their notice of appeal as irregular. The respondent, who had delivered briefs to oppose the appeal, applied ex parte to discharge the notice of appeal with costs:—Held, that notice of motion must be given. Oakwell Collicries, In re, 7 Ch. D. 706; 26 W. R. 577—C. A.

Appeal Abandoned after Notice of Appeal.]—On the 20th of December, 1880, C. gave notice of appeal, but did not set it down. On the 11th of January he sent a letter withdrawing his notice of appeal. On the next day the solicitor for the respondents wrote to C. saying that he had delivered briefs, and that unless C. would undertake to pay the respondent's costs of the appeal the usual proceedings would be taken to enforce payment of them. C. did not answer this letter. The respondents then moved that the appeal might be dismissed, and that C. might be ordered to pay the costs of the appeal and of this application, and an order was made accordingly. Charlton v. Charlton, 16 Ch. D. 273; 29 W. R. 406—C. A.

Where parties who have set down their appeal obtain leave to withdraw it, they will only be ordered to pay such costs as they would have had to pay if the appeal had been heard that day and dismissed with costs. Att.-Gen. v. Halifax (Corporation), 5 L. R., Ch. 116; 22 L. T. 82.

The relators in an information appealed against the decree of a vice-chancellor. After the appeal was set down costs were incurred by an application to the attorney-general to withdraw his fiat. The appellants then applied for leave to withdraw the appeal. The court, on giving leave, refused to make any special order as to the costs occasioned by the application to the attorney-general. Id.

Of Application for Costs of Abandoned Notice of Appeal.]—The costs of an application for the costs of an abandoned notice of appeal will not be allowed unless a previous demand for payment of them has been made and not complied with. Griffin v. Allen, 11 Ch. D. 913; 28 W. R. 10—C. A.

Of Abandoned Notice of Motion.]—A defendant in an action which had been tried by a judge without a jury gave notice of appeal against the judgment, and also obtained ex parte a rule nisi for a new trial. He did not set down the appeal for hearing, but, before the argument of the rule for a new trial, gave fresh notice of appeal from the judgment. There was a substantial question to be tried as to the measure of damages:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the first notice of appeal as an abandoned motion: Secondly, that the second notice of appeal was unnecessary, inasmuch as the whole question could be tried under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XL. r. 10, upon the application to make the rule for a new trial absolute. Waddell v. Blockley, 10 Ch. D. 416; 40 L. T. 286; 27 W. R. 233—C. A.

tion of Action.]—An application by a defendant in an action in the Queen's Bench Division, to strike out the statement of claim as embarrassing, having been refused by a divisional court, the defendant appealed, and the Court of Appeal made an order "that the judgment of the court below be reversed with costs of this appeal and of the proceedings in the court below." The defendant applied to the master to tax the costs, which he declined to do on the ground that they were costs of an interlocutory application, and that the taxation must stand over till the termination of the action:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that the practice of the common law divisions to have only one taxation of costs in an action does not apply where costs are given by the Court of Appeal, and that under an order of the Court of Appeal, directing payment of costs, without any intimation that the taxation and payment are to be postponed, the party to whom they are ordered to be paid is entitled to have them taxed and paid forthwith. Phillipps v. Phillipps, 5 Q. B. D. 60; 28 W. R. 376—C. A.

Enforcing Order for Payment pending Appeal.]

—A party to whom costs have been ordered to be paid will not be restrained from enforcing the order pending an appeal to the House of Lords, if his solicitors undertake to refund if the order should be reversed. Morgan v. Elford, 4 Ch. D. 352; 25 W. R. 136.

The payment of costs, to be paid under a decision against which there is a bonâ fide intention to appeal to the House of Lords, will not be stayed where the solicitor receiving such costs personally undertakes to repay them in the event of the order of the court below being reversed. Grant v. Banque Franco-Egyptienne, 3 C. P. D. 202; 47 L. J., C. P. 455; 38 L. T. 622; 26 W. R. 669—C. A.

The mere chance of a litigant obtaining costs upon a decision at some subsequent stage of the proceeding is no ground for staying the payment of costs already ordered to be paid under a separate judgment. Id.

12. IN CHANCERY BEFORE JUDICATURE ACTS.

[Cases which may be usefully consulted under the present practice will be found under this subhead.]

Practice.]—When a judge of a court of first instance declines to decide a question on a petition, and expresses his wish that it should be brought before the Appeal Court, the proper course is for the petitioner to present a short petition of appeal pro formâ. Berkley (Earl), In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 56; 44 L. J., Ch. 3; 23 W. R. 195.

When a judge has decided on an adjourned summons a question which has arisen in proceedings in his chambers, but no order has been drawn up, no appeal can be brought from his decision. Vyse v. Foster, 10 L. R., Ch. 236; 44 L. J., Ch. 344; 23 W. R. 299.

Special leave had been given to make an original motion before the Court of Appeal in a cause which had been heard before the court, and in which an appeal was pending in the House of Lords:—Held, that the respondent had no right to have the motion first heard before the vice-chancellor. Powell v. Elliot, 20 W. R. 194.

A motion by defendants to expunge evidence for scandal and impertinence was ordered to stand over till the hearing of the cause. At the hearing a decree was made both on the hearing and on the motion, by which substantial relief was given, and the motion was refused, and the evidence sought to be expunged was entered as read. The plaintiff appealed from part of the decree, which was varied by the Lords Justices:—Held, that the whole decree was opened to the respondents on the appeal, and on their application the order on the motion was reversed, and the evidence directed to be expunged. Middlemas v. Wilson, 10 L. R. Ch. 230; 44 L. J., Ch. 476; 32 L. T. 105; 23 W. R. 301.

As to Quantum of Damages Assessed by Jury.]

—The Court of Appeal will not entertain an appeal from an order of the court below assessing damages, unless it is shown that the court below has acted on a wrong principle in assessing the quantum of damages. Ball v. Ray, 30 L. T. 1; 22 W. R. 283.

Amount Involved.]—An appeal will not be allowed when the amount in dispute is only 11. 15s. National Assurance and Investment Society, In re, Cross, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 221; 41 L. J., Ch. 341; 26 L. T. 53; 20 W. R. 324.

A solicitor who had successfully prosecuted a claim on behalf of a creditor, under the winding-up of a company, applied to the court for a lien on the dividends payable to his client to the amount of his costs, which amounted to 11. 15s. The application having been refused, the solicitor appealed. The court refused to entertain an appeal for so trifling an amount, although it was stated that it was a representative case, which would govern many others. Id.

Costs of Appeal.]—The established rule, that the Court of Appeal will not give the costs of the appeal to a successful appellant, except under special circumstances, is still in force. If the court does not specially give the costs the appellant is not entitled to them. Denny v. Hancock, 6 L. R., Ch. 138; 40 L. J., Ch. 193; 23 L. T. 795; 19 W. R. 234.

The Court of Bankruptcy follows this rule, and will not, as a matter of course, give the costs of an appeal to a successful appellant. Matthews, Ex parte, Cherry, In re, 12 L. R., Eq. 596; 40 L. J., Bk. 90; 19 W. R. 1005.

The costs of a successful appeal will not be given in the absence of misconduct on the part of the respondent. Stannard v. Lee, 6 L. R., Ch. 346; 40 L. J., Ch. 489; 24 L. T. 459; 19 W. R. 615.

When the decision of the court below is reversed the Court of Appeal does not usually give to the successful appellant the costs of the appeal, although it has power to give such costs in special cases. Alexander v. Mills, 6 L. R., Ch. 124; 40 L. J., Ch. 73; 24 L. T. 206; 19 W. R. 310.

An appeal on the construction of a will, if unsuccessful, will in general be dismissed with costs. Clark v. Henry, 6 L. R., Ch. 588.

Where a decree of the court below, although in substance affirmed, was varied to the extent of protecting the interests of persons other than the respondent, no costs were given. London and South Western Railway Company v. Black-

The Court of Appeal refuses to inquire into the various causes which may have influenced the decision of the court below in awarding costs, and therefore an appeal for costs will not generally be entertained; but where the judge of the court below placed on record on the face of the decree the reason why he ordered the party to pay the costs, and such reason was founded on the determination of a question of law, the Court of Appeal allowed the question of law to be argued on the appeal, that it might determine whether the reason embodied in the decree by the judge below was well founded. Walker v. French, 21 W. R. 493.

An appellant gave notice to a respondent whose costs the appellant had been ordered to pay, that no alteration in the order as to his costs was asked for, and offered to pay his costs:—Held, that the respondent was not entitled to his costs of appearing on the appeal. Upmann v. Elkhan, 7 L. R., Ch. 130; 41 L. J., Ch. 246; 25 L. T. 813.

The costs of an unnecessary party to an appeal ordered to be paid by the appellant. Scholefield v. Lockwood, 4 De G., J. & S. 22.

When exceptions for scandal have been overruled in the court below, but allowed on appeal, the court gave the successful appellant his costs, both of the appeal and in the court below as between solicitor and client. Christie v. Christie, 8 L. R., Ch. 499; 42 L. J., Ch. 544; 28 L. T. 607; 21 W. R. 493.

Repayment of Money on Reversal.—When money has been paid under a decree which is afterwards reversed, it must be repaid with interest. Imperial Mercantile Credit Association v. Coleman, 40 L. J., Ch. 262.

III. APPEAL FROM JUDGE IN CHAMBERS.

1. Practice in Chancery Division.
2. Practice in Common Law Divisions.

1. PRACTICE IN CHANCERY DIVISION.

From Judge in Chambers to Judge in Court—Practice when Appeal to Court of Appeal Desired.—In the Rolls Court it is the practice, following the former practice of Jessel, M. R., to adjourn summonses into court for argument or judgment in cases in which an appeal is desired. If there is no such adjournment, the proper course, so far as any application to the court below is concerned, is for a party wishing to appeal to move in court to discharge the order made in chambers, not to apply to the court below for leave to appeal direct to the Court of Appeal. Holloway v. Cheston, 19 Ch. D. 516; 51 L. J., Ch. 208; 30 W. R. 120. But see next case.

Where, on a summons heard in chambers, an order has been made by the judge and not adjourned into court, and there is a desire to appeal against it, the proper course is not to move in court, on notice, to discharge the order, or for a certificate that the judge does not desire it to be reheard, but to make an application in chambers. Holloway v. Cheston (supra) not followed. Butler's Wharf Company, In re,

Anderson v. Butler's Wharf Company, 21 Ch. D. 131; 61 L. J., Ch. 694; 30 W. R. 723.

When a case has been heard by a judge in chambers in the Chancery Division, and parties desire to appeal to the Court of Appeal without another argument before the judge in court, it is a proper and convenient practice for the judge to refuse leave to go straight to the Court of Appeal, and to insist on an argument in court, as the Court of Appeal, after the hearing in court, has the benefit of a judgment of the court below, with the reasons, if any, for the decision. Manchester Val de Travers Paving Company v. Slagg, 47 L. T. 556—C. A.

An appeal on a mere point of practice, such as security for costs, may be made from an order made in chambers, without obtaining the judge's certificate. Northampton Coal Company v. Midland Waggon Company, 7 Ch. D. 500; 38 L. T. 82; 26 W. R. 485—C. A.

An order made by a judge of the Chancery Division, personally in chambers may be appealed from equally with an order made by him in court. Elson, In re, Thomas v. Elson, 6 Ch. D. 346; 25 W. R. 871—C. A.

As a general rule, however, a certificate should be obtained from the judge that he does not desire to hear any further argument in court. But the object of such a certificate is only to satisfy the Court of Appeal that the judge has judicially determined the matter, and, if otherwise satisfied of that fact, the Court of Appeal will hear the appeal without a certificate if the judge declines to give one. Id.

Application should in such a case be made to the Court of Appeal for leave to set down the appeal without the judge's certificate. Id.

A caveat against the inrolment of an order in chambers is not prosecuted with effect by service within twenty-eight days after it is warned of notice of motion before the judge in court to discharge the order. Lewis, In re, Republic of Paraguay, Ex parte, 45 L. J., Ch. 62—C. A.

Doubts thrown on the propriety of the practice of the Court of Appeal in Chancery in refusing to hear an appeal from an order in chambers, though made by the judge himself, without an application to the judge in court to discharge the order. Id.

An appeal can be made direct to the Court of Appeal, without leave, from an order made in chambers, where the matter has been fully argued before the judge himself; the fact that it has been so made should appear on the order itself, or be certified by the chief clerk. Murr v. Cooke, 34 L. T. 751; 24 W. R. 756.

The Court of Appeal will only hear an appeal from an order made in chambers, when the judge who makes the order certifies that the case has been so fully argued before him, that he does not desire to hear it re-argued in court. Warrant Finance Company, Ex parte, 5 L. R., Ch. 88; 39 L. J., Ch. 185.

Notice of Appeal—Time for.—In an action to set aside a contract for fraud, on the 23rd June, the judge made an order in chambers, upon a summons taken out by the defendants. The order was not drawn up, passed and entered until the 14th July. On the 18th July, the plaintiff gave notice of a motion in court to discharge the order. The judge refused the motion, on the ground that it was his invariable rule that notices of motion to discharge orders made in his chambers must be given within twenty-one days from the date of pronouncing the order, and not from the date of its being perfected, whether the order was a simple refusal of an application or not. Sect. 50 of the Judicature Act, 1873, provides that orders made by a judge in chambers (except the discretionary orders mentioned in sect. 49) may be set aside or discharged upon notice by any divisional court, or by the judge sitting in court, "according to the course and practice of the division of the High Court to which the particular cause or matter in which such order is made may be assigned." There did not appear to be any settled practice of the Chancery Division as to the time within which such appeals from the judge in chambers to the judge in court should be brought:—Held, that following the analogy of Ord. LVIII. r. 15, the limit of time for applying to a judge in court to discharge an order made by him in chambers is twenty-one days from the date of pronouncing the order in the case of a simple refusal, and, in other cases, twenty-one days from the date of the perfecting of the order. Heatly v. Newton, 19 Ch. D. 326; 51 L. J., Ch. 225; 45 L. T. 455; 30 W. R. 72—C. A.

Ord. LVIII. r. 15, limiting the time for bringing appeals, does not apply to the time for making motions before a divisional court or a judge in court to discharge an order in chambers; but in the Chancery Division the practice is, that no such motion shall be made without special leave after twenty-one days. Dickson v. Harrison, 9 Ch. D. 243; 47 L. J., Ch. 761; 38 L. T. 794; 26 W. R. 730—C. A.

2. PRACTICE IN COMMON LAW DIVISIONS.

Order of Judge in Chambers—What is.]—An order made by a registrar sitting as judge under Ord. LIV. is not, for the purposes of the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 50, an order made by a judge in chambers, and hence, where such an order has been reviewed by a judge in court, an appeal from the judge's decision will lie without special leave. The Vivar, 2 P. D. 29; 35 L. T. 782; 25 W. R. 453—C. A.

Time for Appealing.]—Ord. LIV. r. 6 (as amended R. March, 1879, r. 8), which directs that an appeal from a decision at chambers shall be made within eight days, applies to decisions at chambers during the long vacation; and if that period has elapsed without the sitting of a divisional court, the right to appeal is lost, unless the party decided against obtains an extension of time. An order empowering the plaintiff to sign judgment upon a specially indorsed writ, was made by a judge at chambers upon the 29th of August: the time for appealing to a divisional court was on the 2nd of September, extending conditionally upon payment into court of the sum sued for within fourteen days. This condition was never fulfilled, and no divisional court sat during the long vacation. Upon the first day of Michaelmas sittings, the defendant moved the Exchequer Division to set aside the order made upon the 29th of August:—Held, that as more than eight days had elapsed since the order was made, no appeal could lie. Rwntz v. Sheffield, 4 Ex. D. 150; 48 L. J., Ex. 385; 40 L. T. 539—C. A.

An order having been made in chambers on the 20th of June, the defendant, on the 24th, gave notice of appeal to a divisional court for Saturday, the 28th. The court sat on the 26th to hear motions, and was sitting on the 28th, but not for the purpose of hearing motions. The defendant brought forward his motion on the 30th, being the next day on which the court sat to hear motions:—Held, that the appeal motion was out of time, since a court to which an application to enlarge the time could be made had been sitting within the eight days. Stirling v. Du Barry, 5 Q. B. D. 65; 28 W. R. 405—C. A.

When notice of motion of appeal from a decision in chambers was given on the eighth day after the decision:—Held, that under Ord. LIV. r. 6, it was too late, as the notice must be given so that the motion can be heard within eight days after the decision appealed against. For v. Wallis, 2 C. P. D. 45; 35 L. T. 690; 25 W. R. 287—C. A.

By Ord. LIV. r. 6, appeals from chambers "shall be by motion, and shall be made within eight days after the decision appealed against." It is not a sufficient compliance with this rule to give notice of motion within eight days. Deykin v. Coleman, 36 L. T. 195; 25 W. R. 294—C. A.

A judge at chambers having made an order on the 29th of August, the party affected by such order moved the divisional court to rescind it during the Michaelmas sittings within eight days from the commencement of such sittings:—Held, that the application was too late, inasmuch as by Ord. LIV. r. 6, an appeal from a judge at chambers must be within eight days from the decision appealed against. Crom v. Samuels, 2 C. P. D. 21; 46 L. J., C. P. 1; 35 L. T. 423; 25 W. R. 45.

When an appellant from chambers has only the eighth and last day whereon to move, and it happens that no divisional court sits on that day, the right of appeal is not lost, but the appellant must move the next practicable court. Forrest v. Davis, 26 W. R. 534.

When the last of the eight days, limited by Ord. LIV. r. 6, for appealing from a decision at chambers expires on a Sunday, the appellant has the following Monday for appealing. Taylor v. Jones, 45 L. J., C. P. 110; 34 L. T. 131.

Extension of Time.]—By one of the general orders of the Judicature Act, 1875, eight days only are given for an appeal to the divisional court against an order made by a judge at chambers:—Held, that that limitation of time does not affect the right to appeal against an order made in vacation at chambers, when no divisional court would be sitting within the eight days. The time for appealing against such an order ought, almost as a matter of course, to be enlarged. Wallington v. Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas. 685; 50 L. J., Q. B. 49; 43 L. T. 258; 29 W. R. 81—H. L. (E.)

Where an order had been made at chambers, and the eight days had, under such circumstances, expired without an appeal to the divisional court, the fact that an execution had in the meantime issued, makes no difference in the matter. Id.

Under Ord. VII. r. 6, the court or a judge has power to enlarge the time for appealing against an order in chambers, notwithstanding that the time for appealing has elapsed, and that the action stands dismissed under the order. Carter v. Stubbs, 6 Q. B. D. 116; 50 L. J., Q. B. 161; 43

L. T. 746; 29 W. R. 132—C. A. Affirming 50 L. J., Q. B. 4.

What Orders are before Court of Appeal.]—An order at chambers was made refusing leave to defend, except on terms, the time for performing which was allowed by the defendant to expire, and another order at chambers was afterwards made refusing leave to enlarge the time within which the first order might be contested. An appeal was then taken to the divisional court against the second order, when that court desired that the notice of motion should be considered as amended so as to include the first order:—Held, that the two orders were thus brought fully before the court, and the judgment then given must be taken as applicable to both of them. Wallisford v. Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas. 685; 50 L. J., Q. B. 49; 43 L. T. 258; 29 W. R. 81—H. L. (E).

For the same reason, in an appeal against that judgment, the Court of Appeal must be considered to have had both the orders brought under its revision, and on an appeal to the House of Lords both the orders and both the judgments were brought into discussion. Id.

Fresh Affidavit.]—The divisional court on an appeal from chambers will, as a matter of convenience, allow a new affidavit made since the date of the order at chambers to be read. Robinson v. Bradshaw, 32 W. R. 95.

Costs.]—Costs follow a reversal of a decision of a judge at chambers. Friend v. London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, 25 W. R. 735—C. A.

IV. APPEALS FROM MASTER TO JUDGE IN CHAMBERS.

What the subject of Appeal—Appeal for Costs.]—The enactment in s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, that no order by the High Court, or any judge thereof, as to costs only which by law are left to the discretion of the court, shall be subject to any appeal, does not apply to the order of a master or district registrar, and therefore a judge of such court has power to vary as to costs an order of a district registrar dismissing the action without costs. Foster v. Edwards, 48 L. J., Q. B. 767.

Time for Appealing.]—In order that an appeal from a master to a judge at chambers may be in time, according to Ord. LIV. r. 4, it is not sufficient that the appeal summons should be taken out within four days from the master's decision, but it must be heard or adjourned within the four days. Bell v. North Staffordshire Railway Company, 4 Q. B. D. 205; 48 L. J., Q. B. 518; 27 W. R. 263.

Extension of Time for Appeal.]—Within four days from the decision of a master at chambers, an appeal summons was taken out and made returnable at a date after the expiration of the four days, but on the first day when any judge would sit at chambers:—The court held, that, under the circumstances, the time might be enlarged under Ord. LVII. r. 6, and that no summons for that purpose was necessary under Ord. LIV. r. 1. Gibbons v. London Financial

Association, 4 C. P. D. 263; 48 L. J., Ch. 514; 27 W. R. 619.

On the 2nd November an order was made dismissing an action unless a statement of claim was delivered within seven days, and on the 9th November this time was extended by three days. On the 14th November the plaintiff delivered his statement of claim, and on the following day the defendant drew up and served the order of the 2nd November. On the 17th November the master, and subsequently a judge, made an order that the statement of claim do stand:—Held, that the time of appealing from the order of the 2nd November should be extended. Metcalfe v. British Tea Association, 46 L. T. 31.

V. APPEAL FROM CHIEF CLERK TO JUDGE.

Adjournment to Judge.]—An adjournment from the chief clerk to the judge in person is not in the nature of an appeal. Watts, In re, Smith v. Watts, 22 Ch. D. 1; 52 L. J., Ch. 209; 48 L. T., 167; 31 W. R. 262—C. A.

VI. APPEALS FROM INFERIOR COURTS.

Appeal from Court of Passage of Liverpool exercising Admiralty Jurisdiction—Security for Costs.]—The appeal from the Court of Passage of Liverpool exercising admiralty jurisdiction is under the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 71), s. 26, and security for costs must be given before the instrument of appeal is lodged. The Ganges, 5 P. D. 247; 43 L. T. 12—C. A.

County Palatine of Lancaster.]—Ord. LVIII. of the Rules of Court, 1875, applies to appeals from the court of the County Palatine of Lancaster as well as to appeals from the High Court of Justice, and the time for appealing is now regulated by rule 15 of that Order, and is no longer governed by the General Orders of 1855 regulating appeals from the court of the County Palatine. Lee v. Nuttall, 12 Ch. D. 61; 48 L. J., Ch. 616; 41 L. T. 4; 27 W. R. 805—C. A.

Time for Entry—Setting down for Hearing—Notice of Appeal.]—Where a rule nisi is obtained on a motion by way of appeal to reverse a judgment of an inferior court, unless the appeal be entered in the list at the crown office of the Queen's Bench Division, in compliance with Ord. LVIII. r. 19, before the day named for the hearing of the appeal in the notice to show cause, the appeal will be taken to have been abandoned, and the appellant will have lost his right to be heard. Donovan v. Brown, 42 L. T. 30.

From County Court to Divisional Court.]—See COUNTY COURT.

From Mayor's Court to Divisional Court.]—See MAYOR'S COURT.

I. WHAT RIGHTS APPORTIONABLE.

Right of Turbary under a Demise of Lands.]—A., by deed in 1735, demised lands to B. and C. for a term of 889 years, and covenanted that B. and C., "their executors, administrators and assigns, and every of them, should and might from time to time, and at all times during the grant, raise, cut and carry away from off certain bog lands" (the absolute property of the lessor, and not included in the lease), "turf sufficient to be expended on the premises." B. and C. covenanted to repair all houses and outhouses that were or thereafter might be built upon the premises. In 1735, B. and C. partitioned the lands, and in 1856 the Irish Incumbered Estates Court granted B.'s moiety to D., with the appurtenances:—Held, that the right of turbary was apportionable, and that D. was entitled to a proportional share. Hargrove v. Congleton (Lord), 12 Ir. C. L. R. 368.

II. PERIODICAL PAYMENTS.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22.]—This statute applies to cases in which the interest of the person interested in such rents and payments is terminated by his death, or by the death of another person; but does not apply to the case of a tenant in fee, or provide for apportionment of rent between the real and personal representative of such person, whose interest is not terminated at his death. Broune v. Amyot, 3 Hare, 173; 13 L. J., Ch. 232; S. P., Beer v. Beer, 12 C. B. 60; 21 L. J., C. P. 124; 16 Jur. 223.

Where A. was by deed appointed to the offices of auditor and superintending manager of B.'s estates at a salary payable half-yearly, and B. had revoked the appointment in the middle of a current year:—Held, that 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2, did not enable A. to recover a proportionate part of the salary, in respect of that portion of the year during which he held the offices. Lovendes v. Stamford and Warrington (Earl), 18 Q. B. 425; 21 L. J., Q. B. 371; 16 Jur. 903.

The statute applies to cases where payment for the whole period must be made to some person, and does not include a payment under a contract between employer and employed, for services performed, where the payment entirely ceases upon the determination of the claimant's right to receive it. Ib.

Where it can be predicated that the interest mentioned in sect. 2 of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, has been determined, the rents and other payments there mentioned shall be apportioned; but where this cannot be predicated, the interest being between the heir and the executor, the heir shall take the whole, and there shall be no apportionment. Clulow, In re, 3 Kay & J. 689; 26 L. J., Ch. 513.

2. ANNUITIES AND RENT CHARGES.

Annuities, who Entitled.]—Where an annuity was granted by deed to A. during the joint lives of B. and C., charged upon lands and payable by two equal portions on the 1st of May and 1st of November in each year, to pay the same to B. during the joint lives of B. and C., and then to C. if she survived:—Held, that C. having survived B., and died on the morning of the 1st of May, A. was entitled to the entire sum due upon that day. Robinson v. Robinson, 2 Ir. C. L. R. 370.

A. covenanted on his marriage to pay an annuity to his wife during her life. By will he confirmed the annuity, and devised his residuary real and personal estate to his wife for life, with remainders over:—Held, that the payments of the annuity were apportionable between the value of the life estate and the value of the reversion. Yates v. Yates, 6 Jur., N. S. 1203.

An estate was devised to A. for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail, with remainder to the right heirs of the testator. C. was the heir of the testator, and died without issue:—Held, that his executors were not entitled, as against his heir, to an apportionment of the rent growing due at his death. Clulow, In re, 26 L. J., Ch. 513; 3 Kay & J. 689.

A tenant for life granted a rent-charge, chargeable on lands, for the life of the grantor, provided the grantee should so long live, with a power of distress and a covenant for further assurance, to a relative, as a suitable provision for her, with an apportionment clause in the event of the death of the grantee between two days of payment. The grantor died between the days of payment, leaving the grantee surviving:—Held, first, that independently of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, there could be no apportionment. Leathley v. French, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 401.

Held, secondly, that the court could not imply an intention that there should be an apportionment on the death of the grantor, having regard to the express apportionment clause on the death of the grantee in the lifetime of the grantor. Ib.

Annuities, independently of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, are not apportionable, unless granted for the maintenance of infants or married women living separate from their husbands. Ib.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 11, William the Fourth was empowered by indenture under the great seal, to grant to the queen an annuity of 100,000*l.*, to commence after his decease and continue during her life, and to be paid out of the Consolidated Fund on the 31st March, the 30th June, the 30th September and the 31st December, by even and equal portions, the first payment to be made at such of the days as should first happen after the decease of his majesty. The king was empowered to settle Marlborough House and Bushy Park upon her majesty for her life, and upon her executors for one year after her demise. He exercised these powers, by an indenture, expressing that he was desirous to settle an ample revenue for supporting the honour and dignity of her majesty, and that the grant was made for her jointure, and in satisfaction of her dower, and of his especial grace, certain knowledge and mere motion. He died on the 20th June 1837, and on the 30th of the same month a full quarter of the annuity was paid to the Queen Dowager. She died on the 2nd December, 1849. Upon application for a mandamus to the Lords of the Treasury for the payment of the arrears of the annuity subsequently to the 30th September, 1849:—Held, that the annuity was not apportionable. Reg. v. Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, 16 Q. B. 357; 20 L. J., Q. B. 305; 15 Jur. 767.

A terminable annuity is apportionable under 7 & 8 Will. 4, c. 22. Sutton v. Ennis, 18 W. R. 882; 4 Ir. R., Eq. 325.

Under Apportionment Act, 1870.]—The 33 & 34 Vict. c. 35, is retrospective and makes every species of income, from whatever source derived, apportionable as between tenant for life and remainderman, where the tenant for life dies after the passing of that act. Thacker, In re, 28 L. T. 56; 21 W. R. 285.

By an order of the Court of Chancery made in 1855, an annuity of 100*l.* was directed to be paid to W. during her life. W. died in 1872:—Held, that the annuity was apportionable to the day of her death. Id.

A testator after the Apportionment Act, 1870, bequeathed —1. to trustees, such sum to carry interest at 4½ per cent. until the same should be paid or appropriated, upon trust, with the consent of his wife, to invest the same in certain specified securities, and to pay the annual income of the legacy and the investments thereof, including in such income the interest payable in respect of such legacy, to his wife, for life, with remainders over. Interest was paid to the widow up to the day when, pursuant to an order of the court, the bequeathed sum was invested in stocks on some of which five months' dividend had then accrued:—Held, that the Apportionment Acts did not apply, and that the widow was entitled to the whole of the dividends when received upon the purchased stocks. Clarke, In re, Barker v. Perowne, 18 Ch. D. 160; 50 L. J., Ch. 733; 44 L. T. 736; 29 W. R. 730.

A grandfather bequeathed his residuary personal estate to trustees for his two granddaughters in equal shares at twenty-one or marriage, and directed that in case they or either of them should marry under twenty-one, their shares should be settled upon them and their children in the usual form. The granddaughters married under twenty-one, one in 1867, and the other in 1870, after the passing of the Apportionment Act, 33 & 34 Vict. c. 35:—Held, that in both cases the income of the trust funds was apportionable down to the date of the respective marriages. Clive v. Clive, 7 L. R., Ch. 433; 41 L. J., Ch. 386; 26 L. T. 409; 20 W. R. 477.

A testator bequeathed a legacy of 10,000*l.* with interest from his death at 4 per cent. per annum to trustees upon trust to pay the income to certain persons during the life of one of them, and after her death upon trust for other persons. The estate was insufficient for payment in full of his legacies, and the realization of his assets occupied several years:—Held, that moneys from time received by the trustees and applicable to the legacy were divisible rateably between capital and income, so as to attribute to income 4½ per cent. from the testator's death on the amount attributed to capital. Tinkler, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 456.

c. 35, applies to a specific devise of real estate, and generally as between the real and personal representatives, and that in a case where a will has been made before and the testator has died after the passing of the Act. Hastick v. Pedley, 19 L. R., Eq. 271; 44 L. J., Ch. 143; 23 W. R. 155.

The Apportionment Act, 1870, applies to every will executed before, and confirmed by a codicil executed after, its passing; and, semble, also to every will coming into operation after its passing. Constable v. Constable, 11 Ch. D. 681; 48 L. J., Ch. 621; 40 L. T. 516.

The income arising from personalty specifically bequeathed is not apportionable under the Apportionment Act, 1870, as between the specific legatee and the estate of the testator. Whitehead v. Whitehead, 16 L. R., Eq. 628; 29 L. T. 289.

Rent Charge.]—Upon the death of a tenant for life, under a will executed before the Apportionment Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, of tithes which after the act were commuted for a rent-charge, payable at fixed periods:—Held, that the award of the tithe commissioners was "an instrument under which the rent-charge was payable" within s. 2, and therefore the rent-charge was apportionable. Heasman v. Pearne, 8 L. R., Eq. 599. See also Leathby v. French, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 401.

3. RENTS.

When apportionable under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22.]—A. died in 1838, having, by will, given real estates to trustees, in trust, after keeping up his mansion, to pay five-eighths of the net rent to his widow for life. The widow died in 1847, and rents were receivable on the next rent day, under leases created by A. anterior to 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22:—Held, that the rents were apportionable. Knight v. Boughton, 12 Beav. 312; 19 L. J., Ch. 66.

The act extends to Scotland. Fordyce v. Bridges, 1 H. L. Cas. 1.

And to a tenant in tail. Baillie v. Lockhart, 2 Macq. H. L. Cas. 258.

Where a tenancy from year to year has been originally created by the owner of the fee, it is not determined by the death of a tenant for life, claiming under the original lessor, and 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 15, does not therefore apply to such a case. Cattley v. Arnold, 1 Johns. & H. 651; 28 L. J., Ch. 352; 5 Jur. N. S. 361.

The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, does not apply to rents reserved by parol. Id.; S. P., Alexander, In re, 4 Ir. Ch. R. 257.

Therefore, where an owner of the fee demised by parol to tenants from year to year, and died, having devised the estates to a tenant for life, with remainder over, upon the death of the tenant for life:—Held, that the remainderman was entitled to the whole of the rents accruing for the half-year in which he died, without apportionment. Id.

So also, where the parol demise originated with the tenant for life. Id.

The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, applies where either the instrument creating the life interest or the lease under which the rent is payable, is dated after the statute. Llewellyn v. Rous, 12 Jur. N. S. 580; 35 Beav. 591.

An equitable tenant for life under a settlement of freehold leases for lives, obtained a renewed grant for lives to himself. At his death the property was in the occupation of yearly tenants, under parol demises by him:—Held, that the rents were not apportionable either under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, or 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22. Mills v. Trumper, 4 L. R., Ch. 320; 20 L. T., 384; 17 W. R. 428.

A testator, whose will came into operation before 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, gave the rents of his real estates to his son after he should attain twenty-one, and directed personal estate to be invested in funds or securities, with power to invest in land. The son attained his majority in July, 1854:—Held, that he was entitled to receive the whole of the rents which became due in September on the devised estates and on the purchased estates, without regard to the date of the leases under which the rents became payable. Fletcher v. Moore, 26 L. J., Ch. 530; 3 Jur. N.S. 458.

A devise in trust for one for life, the remainder for his first and other sons in tail, remainder for testator's own right heirs. The devisee for life proved to be heir-at-law of the testator, and died intestate and without leaving issue:—Held, that notwithstanding the interposition of an estate tail which might have arisen and prevented the remainder in fee from vesting absolutely, the death of the devisee was not a determination of his interest, within the meaning of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, and therefore the rents were not apportionable between his heir and his personal representative. Clulow, In re, 3 Kay & J. 689; 26 L. J., Ch. 513.

Where leases were granted after 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, came into operation, under a power contained in a settlement made before:—Held, that the rents were apportionable. Lock v. De Burgh, De Burghersh (Lord) v. Burgh, 4 De G. & S. 470; 20 L. J., Ch. 384; 15 Jur. 961.

The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, applies to all cases where either the lease reserving the rent, or the instrument creating the life interest in it, has been executed since the passing of the statute. Plummer v. Whiteley, Johns. 585; 29 L. J., Ch. 247; 5 Jur., N. S. 1416.

Rent reserved by a lease granted after the act under a power in a settlement executed before the act:—Held, to be apportionable between the executors of the tenant for life under the settlement and the remainderman. Id.

The act also applies to a case of an expiration of a term in trustees to accumulate rents, for payment of debts, legacies and other charges, with remainder to a tenant for life; as well as to the case of an estate for life to A., remainder to B. St. Aubyn v. St. Aubyn, 1 Drew. & Sm. 613; 30 L. J., Ch. 917; 5 L. T., 519; 9 W. R. 922.

But the act only applies to rents reserved at fixed periods, and does not apply to royalties in the nature of rents, payable at uncertain periods; such as royalties payable upon the selling of ore from a mine. Id.

The Apportionment Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2, is not intended to apply as between a mortgagee (of a tenant for life) who has not entered and a remainderman, so as to give the mortgagee a right to rents which he would not have had until entry if the tenant for life had lived. Paget v. Anglesca (Marquis), 17 L. R., Eq. 283; 43 L. J., Ch. 437; 29 L. T., 721; 22 W. R. 507.

C. occupied two parcels of land upon an understanding that he should let off a portion of it when he could. He paid the rent agreed upon for more than a year, and he then let off a portion of each parcel to A. and B. separately, who paid rent to D., and C. continued to hold the residue himself. The rent becoming in arrear, the landlord distrained:—Held, that there was evidence that the rent was apportionable, and that the landlord was entitled to distrain. Flesher v. Trotman, 6 L. T. 218—Ex. Ch.

Commissioners under the powers of a private act purchased land lying partly in two parishes for the purpose of forming a metropolitan road, and charged it with the payment of an annual rent. By the Metropolis Roads Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 78), s. 4, it was provided that so much of the road as lay within any parish mentioned in a schedule, which included the two parishes, should be dealt with as part of the common highways of the parish, and all quit rents and other outgoings payable in respect thereof should be paid as part of the expenses of maintenance:—Held, that the effect of the Metropolis Roads Act was to apportion the rent between the two parishes; and that the representatives of the person from whom the land was bought were entitled to recover from each of the parishes a proportional part of the rent; and that the proper form of declaration was one framed on the statute, and not for use and occupation. Sansom v. St. Leonard (Vestry), Shoreditch, 4 L. R., C. P. 654; 38 L. J., C. P. 286; 15 W. R. 40.

Under Apportionment Act, 1870.]—The Apportionment Act, 1870, applies to every will executed before, and confirmed by a codicil executed after, its passing; and, semble, also to every will coming into operation after its passing. Constable v. Constable, 11 Ch. D. 681; 48 L. J., Ch. 621; 40 L. T. 516.

A testator, by a will executed before the passing of the Apportionment Act, 1870, bequeathed his residuary personality to trustees upon certain trusts; and he devised his real estate to trustees on certain trusts, and, subject thereto, to his son for life, with remainders over in strict settlement. But he provided that his son should not take any estate under the will unless, within a year after the testator's death, he executed a settlement of certain other real estate, upon limitations corresponding to those created by the will of the devised real estate. And the testator gave the clear and undisposed of rents of his real estate to trustees, upon trust for the son, if he should make the settlement required of him within the year, and, if not, then upon trust for the persons who would thereupon become entitled to the devised real estate. By a codicil, executed after the passing of the act, the testator made some alterations in his will, and in all other respects confirmed it. The son executed the settlement required of him within a year after the testator's death:—Held, that the rents of the devised real estate accruing due at the time of the testator's death must be apportioned between the son and the persons interested in the residuary personality. Id.

A testator seized in fee devised real estate by a will dated before the Apportionment Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 35); and confirmed by a codicil dated after the act:—Held, that the rents were apportionable between the executor and the devisee. Capron v. Capron, 17 L. R., Eq. 288; 43 L. J., Ch. 677; 29 L. T. 826; 22 W. R. 347.

Semble, that the result would have been the same without the codicil. Ib.

The residue of a term under a lease having become vested in the trustee of the lessee, who was a liquidating debtor, the trustee assigned over during a current quarter. In an action, brought after the expiration of the quarter against the trustee by the lessor, to recover a proportionate part of the quarter's rent up to the time of the assignment over by him:—Held, that the Apportionment Act, 1870, applied, and that the lessor was entitled to recover. Secaucus Bank v. Thomas, 4 Ex. D. 94; 48 L. J., Ex. 344; 40 L. T. 558; 27 W. R. 491.

The 33 & 34 Vict. c. 35, has not the effect of altering the usual contract of purchase, so as to entitle a purchaser to obtain out of the purchase-money lodged by him, the portion of the head-rent from the last gale day to the time of his purchase. Krillor, In re, 6 Ir. R., Eq. 329.

Since the Apportionment Act, 1870, a devise of the testator's estate in fee does not, per se, pass that portion of the current gale of rent which had accrued at the time of his death. Rosengrave v. Burke, 7 Ir. R., Eq. 186.

When a gift of part of a farm, subject to an entire rent, described it as "containing about ninety-eight acres, subject to the proportion of rent the same bears to the whole," and the gift of the other part of the farm had described it as "containing about twenty acres, subject to the proportion of rent to which the entirety of the lands is subject," the proportion of the rent to be borne by the twenty acres and ninety-eight acres respectively was to be determined by their relative value, and not by acreage. O'Connor v. O'Connor, 19 W. R. 90.

4. DIVIDENDS AND INTEREST.

Profits of a Company—4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22.]

—Dividends out of profits, from time to time declared by a commercial company, are apportionable under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22. Hartley v. Allen, 27 L. J., Ch. 621; 4 Jur., N. S. 500.

But a simple sum of money of me to be divided among the shareholders is not so apportionable. Ib.

For the purpose of apportionment a dividend is to be taken as payable on the day on which it was actually payable, and not on the last day of the period during which it was earned. Ib.

If a company is so constituted that its dividends are to be declared, and therefore become due at fixed periods, such dividends are apportionable. Marwell, In re, 1 H. & M. 610; 32 L. J., Ch. 333; 9 Jur., N. S. 350; 7 L. T. 224; 11 W. R. 480.

Secus, as to the dividends of companies; as railway companies governed by the Companies Clauses Act, which have no fixed period for declaring a dividend, and are under no obligation to declare a dividend at all. Ib.

When a dividend is apportionable, it is with reference to the last payment, not to the period during which the profits were earned, that the proportions are to be calculated. Ib.

The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2, applies to a determinable interest in dividends, created by a will made after the passing of the act, in exercise of a power contained in a deed dated before the act. Wardroper v. Cusfield, 33 L. J., Ch. 605; 10 Jur., N. S. 194; 9 L. T. 753; 12 W. R. 458.

VOL. I.

Railway Debentures.—Interest payable upon railway debentures is not within the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, not being part of one entire thing, which the dividends on stock are. If a testator, possessed of railway debentures, dies after the time at which the interest is due, but before it is declared, that portion which accrued due in his lifetime is capital and not income, as between tenants for life and remaindermen. Roger, In re, 1 Drew. & Sm. 338; 30 L. J., Ch. 153; 6 Jur., N. S. 1363; 3 L. T. 397; 9 W. R. 64.

Railway debentures are in the nature of mortgages, and the interest accrues due de die in diem. Ib.

Money in Court.—The land of an intestate having been sold compulsorily, one-third of the purchase-money was paid into court to the widow's dower account, and invested:—Held, that the dividends on such investment were apportionable, under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 15, between the heir-at-law and the legal personal representatives of the widow. Harrop v. Wilson, 34 Beav. 166; 11 Jur., N. S. 102; 11 L. T. 699; 13 W. R. 334.

The Apportionment Act, 1870, applies to all instruments, whether coming into operation before or not till after the passing of the act. Cline, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 213; 30 L. T. 249; 22 W. R. 512.

Dividends on a fund in court representing real estate of a testator who died in 1827, are apportionable as between successive tenants for life. Ib.

Current Dividends.—A settlor assigned securities to trustees upon trust after his death, during the minority of A., to pay such portion of the income as they should think proper, for his maintenance and education; and when he should have attained twenty-one, and thenceforth until he should attain thirty, by and out of the income to pay to him such annual sum as they should in their discretion think proper, not exceeding 5,000*l.*, and accumulate the unapplied portion, and stand possessed of the accumulations upon the trusts thereafter declared concerning the fund; and upon further trust, when and so soon as he should have attained thirty, to stand possessed of the funds, and the annual produce, upon trust that they and he shall pay unto and permit him and his assigns to receive and take the whole of the dividends, interest, and annual produce, during his life, for his and their own use and benefit, with limitations over. Upon his attaining thirty:—Held, that there must be an apportionment of the current dividends. Donaldson v. Donaldson, 10 L. R., Eq. 635; 40 L. J., Ch. 64; 23 L. T. 550; 18 W. R. 1104.

Stock in a Canal Company.—Bequest of stock in a canal company to trustees to pay the dividends to the testator's wife for life, and afterwards to fall into the residue:—Held, that the dividends were apportionable. Pollock v. Pollock, 18 L. R., Eq. 329; 44 L. J., Ch. 168; 30 L. T. 779; 22 W. R. 724.

Payments by way of Bonus.—The word "dividends" in the Apportionment Act, 1870, includes payments by way of bonus or surplus profits to the shareholders of a public company, even though such payments may be only occasional and not strictly periodical: as for instance, where the payments are made under the deed of settlement of a life assurance society, providing for distribution of a bonus or surplus profits among its shareholders once in every five years, "unless a special meeting of shareholders shall otherwise direct." Griffith, In re, Carr v. Griffith, 12 Ch. D. 655; 41 L. T. 540.

A bonus or surplus profits accruing on shares in the company specifically bequeathed by a will dated in 1875, held to be apportionable under the Apportionment Act, 1870. Ib.

Public Companies.—The words "trading or other public companies" in s. 5 of the Apportionment Act, 1870, include any public company, but not a private partnership. Ib.

A life assurance society, unincorporated, but established in 1843 by a deed of settlement, with a board of directors, 100,000*l.* capital, and list of shareholders, and possessing certain powers and concessions under a special act of parliament, passed in 1868, held to be a "public company" within the meaning of s. 5 of the Apportionment Act, 1870. Ib.

Private Partnership.—A testator bequeathed the dividends and income of his share and interest in an iron company to A. for life, and after his death he gave the share and interest to his daughter absolutely. The testator died in October, 1870. The iron company was a private trading partnership regulated by a deed of partnership, under which the accounts were made up in the January of each year, and the profits of the previous year ascertained, which account was settled and signed by all the partners. The managing partner then decided what dividend should be paid to the partners, and the dividend was paid by instalments in the next few months:—Held, that the dividend in respect of the profits realized during 1870, which was declared in January, 1871, was not a dividend or a periodical payment within the Apportionment Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 35), and was not apportionable, and that the whole belonged to the tenant for life. James v. Ogle, 8 L. R., Ch. 192; 42 L. J., Ch. 334; 28 L. T. 245; 21 W. R. 239. Affirming 14 L. R., Eq. 419; 41 L. J., Ch. 633; 27 L. T. 367; 20 W. R. 794.

A testatrix, who died in 1858, directed her trustees to carry on a business and to apply the net profits as to one-fourth upon trust for C. for life, and after his death upon trust for his widow for life; and the testatrix left the mode and time of ascertaining or dividing the profits wholly in the discretion of the trustees, except that they should, every January, draw up a balance-sheet, shewing the net profits during the year ending on the preceding 31st of December. C. died on the 23rd December, 1877, and his widow, as next tenant for life, claimed to be entitled to the whole of the one-fourth share of the net profits for the half-year ending on the 31st of that month:—Held, first, that, independently of the Apportionment Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 35), the person entitled to take a share of net profits must be living at the time when the profits were ascertained. Cox, In re, 9 Ch. D. 159; 47 L. J., Ch. 735; 27 W. R. 63.

Held, secondly, that the share of net profits in question was neither a dividend nor a periodical payment within the meaning of that act. Ib.

Share in a Colliery—Accumulation of Profits.]

—A testator directed his executors to manage and carry on the share he might have in any colliery at the time of his death, and to permit his wife to receive the profits during her life. At the time of his death he was entitled to a share in a colliery partnership, carried on by him in partnership with four other persons under a deed which contained a provision for yearly settlements of accounts, and that upon such settlements the clear profits, or a portion, if the majority in value of the partners should so direct, should be added to the joint-stock of the company or be divided between the partners in proportion to their respective shares, or passed to their respective separate accounts. For a considerable period after the death of the testator no dividend was paid to the partners, but the undivided profits, when there were any, were accumulated. Afterwards dividends were paid which did not exhaust the profits; no resolutions were passed declaring that any portion of the profits should be added to the joint-stock of the company, but the undivided credit balances were at the end of each year carried forward to the profit and loss account and employed for the general purposes of the concern. On the death of the widow:—Held that the accumulations of profits made during her life and not divided, belonged to the testator's estate and not to her representatives, and that they were entitled, under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, to an apportioned share of the profits made in the year which was current at the time of her decease. Straker v. Wilson, 6 L. R., Ch. 503; 40 L. J., Ch. 630; 24 L. T., 763; 19 W. R. 761.

Rate of Interest on value of Shares.—H., by his will, gave his property to trustees upon trust, to convert, or in their discretion to retain, present investments. The estate was administered by the court, and, acting on the chief clerk's certificate, some of the investments were retained, and, in particular, several shares in the West Middlesex Waterworks, which were shewn to have paid a high dividend, and also to have increased in value since the death of the testator. On a question as to the apportionment of the dividends on these shares between a tenant for life and remaindermen:—Held, that the tenant for life was only entitled to interest at 4 per cent. per annum on the value of the shares at the death of the testator. Furley v. Hyder, 42 L. J., Ch. 626.

5. SALARIES.

The clerk of the crown resigned his office in the middle of the half-year:—Held, entitled to recover from his successor, as money had and received, an apportioned part of that half-year's salary which had been paid to him. Treacy v. Corcoran, 8 Ir. R., C. L. 40.

I. CONTRACT OF APPRENTICESHIP.

1. GENERAL REQUISITES.

Indentures must be Executed.]—No agreement whatever will constitute an apprenticeship unless there are indentures executed. Rees v. Whitechurch, 1 Bott's P. L. 532; Burr. S. C. 540; Rees v. Margran, 5 T. R. 153; Rees v. Maicman, Burr. S. C. 290; Rees v. Stratton, Burr. S. C. 272; Rees v. Kingncare, Burr. S. C. 839.

What Constitutes.]—A contract to serve for three years, at so much per week, the master agreeing to teach the other a trade, and the latter agreeing, if he lost any time to the prejudice of his master, to abate so much per day, constitutes an apprenticeship, if the instrument is sealed and stamped. Rees v. Rainham, 1 East, 531.

Contract of Hiring.]—L. agreed, on behalf of his son, that he should serve M. from the date of the agreement until a certain specified time, M. paying, at the expiration of the term, five pounds to the son; L. to find his son clothes, washing, and all other necessities, and M. meat, drink, and lodging:—Held, that this was a contract of hiring, and not of apprenticeship. Rees v. Billinghay, 1 N. & P. 149; 5 A. & E. 676; 2 H. & W. 419.

Counterpart.]—If an apprentice is bound, it is not necessary to the validity of his indenture, that the master should sign a counterpart. Rees v. Fleet, Cald. 31; Rees v. St. Peter's on the Hill, 2 Bott's P. L. 367. See Millership v. Brookes, 5 H. & N. 797; 29 L. J., Ex. 369.

Father and Apprentice Illiterate.]—An indenture having been prepared for binding a boy apprentice, he and his father, being unable to write, desired a third person to write their names opposite two of the seals, and he did so. The indenture was not read to them. The apprentice immediately afterwards took the indenture to the master and left it with him; and afterwards stated that when he did so he considered himself bound; and he went into the service under the indenture:—Held, that the indenture was sufficiently executed and delivered. Rees v. Longnor, 1 N. & M. 576; 4 B. & Ad. 647.

Date.]—A printed indenture of apprenticeship executed on one day, but bearing date on another, is not void by 8 Ann. c. 9, and 5 Geo. 3. c. 46, s. 19. Rees v. Harrington, 4 A. & E. 618; 6 N. & M. 163; 1 H. & W. 747.

Two Persons, two Trades.]—An indenture by which an apprentice was bound for seven years, to serve one person for the first four years, and his own father for the last three, to learn two different trades, is valid. Rees v. Louth, 8 B. & C. 247; 2 M. & R. 273.

Death of one of two Partners.]—Where an apprentice is bound to two partners, on the death of one he becomes in law the apprentice of the survivor. Rees v. St. Martin's, Exeter, 1 H. & W. 69; 4 N. & M. 385; 2 A. & E. 655.

Surety.]—In an action against a surety on an indenture of apprenticeship of A. to serve B. and C., the surety pleaded that there never were or was any services or service for A. to perform to or for B. and C. jointly. To this plea they, after setting out the indenture whereby the surety covenanted for the service of A. as apprentice to B., surgeon, and C., surgeon and apothecary, replied that at the time of executing the indenture B. and C. were not in partnership, nor did they carry on business jointly or on the same premises, but that they carried on business wholly separate and apart from and independent of each other, which the surety at the time of executing the indenture well knew, and that B. and C. never represented to him that they should carry on business in partnership:—Held, that the replication was bad in substance. Popham v. Jones, 13 C. B. 225.

Second Master.]—If a service by an apprentice with a second master, can in other respects be construed to be a good service under the indenture with the first master, it is immaterial whether the second master knew the fact of the apprenticeship or not. Rees v. Sandhurst, 1 N. & P. 296; W. W. & D. 34; 6 A. & E. 130.

Escrow, Delivery subject to Condition.]—An indenture of apprenticeship sealed and delivered to an attorney who is acting for all the parties to it, with directions that it is not to take effect till something else is done, operates merely as an escrow. Millership v. Brookes, 5 H. & N. 797; 29 L. J., Ex. 369.

Objectionable Conduct of Apprentice—Bill in Equity.]—A bill in equity by an apprentice praying that his master might be ordered to execute the indenture of apprenticeship, and to take into his employ and teach him his trade, was dismissed without costs, it appearing that the conduct of the apprentice was objectionable, on account of his idleness, and other unsatisfactory particulars. Brown v. Banks, 3 Giff. 190; 7 Jur., N. S. 1273; 4 L. T. 698.

Locality of Business—Change of—Division of Business.—The plaintiff was bound apprentice to the defendants and their partners and successors in business in the trade of an engineer; and his father covenanted to provide him with board, lodging, and other necessaries. At the date of the indenture the business was carried on by the four defendants in London, where also the father of the apprentice resided, but there was no stipulation in the indenture as to the place where the business should be carried on. Before the term of the apprenticeship expired the defendants' partnership was dissolved and two firms established, one in London, consisting of two of the defendants, and the other at Derby, consisting of the other two; the manufacturing part of the old business being carried on at Derby and the selling part in London. The defendants called on the plaintiff to attend at the place of business at Derby:—Held, that there was an implied stipulation that the contract was to be performed at the place where the business was carried on and the parties resided at the date of the indenture; and that the direction to the apprentice to go to Derby was an unreasonable command which he was not bound to obey. Eaton v. Western, 9 Q. B. D. 636; 52 L. J., Q. B. 41—C. A.

Held, also, that as the business was not carried on in its entirety by either of the two new firms, neither of them was the successor of the original firm or entitled to the services of the apprentice. Royce v. Charlton (infra) overruled. Ib.

—Implied Stipulation.—A deed of apprenticeship contained the usual provision that the master should teach the apprentice, but no express provision as to the place where the contract was to be performed by the master:—Held, that no stipulation could be implied that it was to be performed at the place where at the time of its execution the master carried on business and the parties to the deed resided. Royce v. Charlton, 8 Q. B. D. 1; 45 L. T. 712; 30 W. R. 274; 46 J. P. 197. Overruled by preceding case.

2. PARTIES WHO MAY TAKE APPRENTICES.

Semble, that an infant may take an apprentice. Rex v. St. Petroz, Dartmouth, 4 T. R. 196.

But the binding an apprentice to feme covert is void. Rex v. Guilford, 2 Chit. 284.

The 10 Geo. 2. c. 31, s. 5, after reciting the inconvenience which happens by watermen, wherry-men and lightermen taking apprentices before they are housekeepers, or have any settled habitation for themselves or their apprentices, enacts, that it shall not be lawful for any waterman, though a freeman of the (waterman's) company, or his widow, to take and keep any person as his or her apprentice, unless he or she shall be the occupier of some house or tenement wherein to lodge him or herself and such apprentice; and that he or she shall keep such apprentice in the same house or tenement wherein he or she shall lodge or lie, on pain of forfeiting ten pounds for every offence. By s. 4. no such freeman, or freeman's widow, shall take or retain more than two apprentices at the same time, under a penalty:—Held, that any contract to take an apprentice, entered into by a freeman or widow, not being an occupier of some house, &c., or having already two apprentices, was prohibited; and, therefore, where a pauper bound himself by indenture of apprenticeship to serve the widow of a waterman, she not having such house, &c., but it being understood that he was to live at the house of a freeman of the company (which he did), and to serve him conformably to the indenture, he having two other apprentices at the time, such indenture was absolutely void. Rex v. Gracesend, 3 B. & Ad. 240.

3. AGREEMENTS IN CONTEMPLATION OF APPRENTICESHIP.

On Trial.—If a lad goes on liking, with a view to his being bound an apprentice, his intended master cannot charge for his board and lodging for the first month, nor, perhaps, for so long a time as he conducts himself with propriety; but if he stays for many months, behaving ill, after complaints to his father of his misconduct, it will be for the jury to say whether there was any contract, either express or implied, that his father should pay for his board and lodging. Earratt v. Burghart, 3 C. & P. 381.

—Board and Lodging.—So, in another case, under similar circumstances, it was held, that, if no fresh agreement was entered into, the master was not entitled to charge for the board and lodging of the lad whom he employed in his trade; and by consequence, could not set it off in an action by the lad's father for money lent. Wilkins v. Wells, 2 C. & P. 231.

The defendant being desirous of apprenticing his son to the plaintiff, it was verbally agreed between them that the son should go on trial for a month, and if the parties were satisfied, he should be bound apprentice for four years, the defendant to pay a premium by instalments. The son went on trial, and remained above sixteen months, when the defendant removed him. No deed of apprenticeship was executed, or any part of the premium paid:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover for the son's board and lodging during any part of the time he remained with him. Harrison v. James, 7 H. & N. 804; 31 L. J., Ex. 248.

—Two Years' Compensation for Services.]

The defendant agreed with the plaintiff's father to receive the plaintiff (who was a minor) into his service on trial, and to take him as an apprentice, if he approved of it. The plaintiff went to and worked for the defendant nearly two years. Several applications were made during that time by the father, to take him on paying 10*l.*: this was agreed to; but the defendant shortly after quarrelled with the plaintiff, and told him to go home about his business. He went home; and on the father applying to the defendant for an explanation, the latter told him to go and do his worst. The father then caused a letter to be written to the defendant by his attorney, requiring him either to take the plaintiff as his apprentice, or recompense him for his work, but no satisfactory answer was given; and the plaintiff, by his next friend, brought an action to recover compensation for his service. The judge put it to the jury on these facts,—whether or not the defendant's conduct was such as warranted the father in considering the contract for an apprenticeship as rescinded; and he further stated, that if they thought it was, they were to give the plaintiff such compensation for his work as they thought proper. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, with damages, by way of compensation for his services:—Held, that the direction was right, and the verdict not to be disturbed. Phillips v. Jones, 1 A. & E. 333.

Breach—Board and Lodging Prior to.]—Where a surgeon agreed with the defendant to take his son an apprentice in consideration of a premium; and after the son had served a short time, the agreement was broken off on account of the refusal to pay the expense of the stamp for the indenture:—Held, that the surgeon could not recover damages for a breach of the agreement, nor for the board and lodging of the son during the time he remained with him. Keene v. Parsons, 2 Stark. 506.

Board and Lodging—Agreement.]—A. placed his son with B., a chemist and druggist, who intended to pass his examination at Apothecaries' Hall, but was delayed in so doing by ill health. It was intended that A.'s son should be apprenticed to B., but he stayed for five years with B., having his board and lodging, and being taught the business of a chemist and druggist, and he then left B., and was never apprenticed to him:—Held, that, to entitle B. to recover for the board, lodging and teaching of A.'s son, the jury must be satisfied that A.'s son was placed with B. upon an agreement or understanding that B. was to be paid for his board and lodging and for teaching him;—but that if the jury was not so satisfied, or if they thought that A.'s son was not to be paid for till B. had passed his examination at Apothecaries' Hall, and that A.'s son was then to be apprenticed to B. as an apothecary:—Held, that B. was not entitled to recover anything for the board and lodging and teaching during the five years. Atticaters v. Courtney, Car. & M. 51.

4. CONSIDERATION AND STAMPING.

Operation of 8 Anne, c. 9—Sum truly Inserted.] 8 Anne, c. 9, s. 39, makes void indentures of apprenticeship in which the full sum or sums of money received, given, paid, secured or contracted for are not truly inserted. It does not apply where the sum actually paid is inserted in the indenture, though it is a less sum than that which was originally agreed for, and the reduction was made to diminish the amount of the stamp duty. King v. Lowe, 3 C. & P. 620; S. P., Shepherd v. Hall, 3 Camp. 180.

Undertaking to pay Further Sum by Mother.]—An undertaking by the mother of an apprentice, without the knowledge of her husband, to pay the master a sum of money beyond the premium inserted in the indenture and paid by the husband at the time of its execution (the stamp on the indenture being sufficient for both sums), does not make the indenture void, the undertaking being void, and no fraud being practised on the revenue. Rex v. Burton-on-Dunsmore, 3 M. & R. 631; 9 B. & C. 872.

The consideration expressed in an indenture of apprenticeship was 4*l.*, to be paid to the master by a public charity; but the apprentice's mother privately agreed to pay, and did pay, the master, after execution of the indenture, 1*l.* in addition:—Held, that the indenture (though stamped) was void by s. 39, the full sum contracted for, with, or in relation to, the apprentice, not being inserted. Rex v. Baildon, 3 B. & Ad. 427.

—By Grandfather.]—Trustees of a charity bound out an apprentice to R.: the consideration expressed in the indenture was 10*l.*, paid by the trustees. Previously to the execution of the indenture, the apprentice's grandfather, who was no party to the indenture, had agreed with the mistress that the premium should be 25*l.*; and subsequently to the execution the grandfather paid to the mistress 15*l.*: the trustees were entirely ignorant of the contract, or of the payment of any sum beyond the 10*l.*:—Held, that the agreement by the grandfather to pay the additional sum of 15*l.* was a binding agreement, and that therefore the indenture was void by 8 Anne, c. 9, s. 39, for not stating the full consideration. Rex v. Amersham, 6 N. & M. 12; 4 A. & E. 508; 1 H. & W. 694.

Apprentice Covenanting to Maintain Himself.]—In indentures the apprentice covenanted to provide for himself meat, drink, lodging, and physic in sickness, during the term, for which benefit to the master no additional duty was paid: the indentures were held to be admissible evidence, it not appearing that weekly payments, which the master covenanted to make to the apprentice during the term, were not an equivalent. Rex v. Walton-in-le-Dale, 3 T. R. 515.

Friends.]—If the friends of an apprentice covenant to maintain him, and to provide him with clothes, it is not such a benefit as is liable to the duty imposed by 8 Anne, c. 9, s. 45. Rex v. Leighton, 4 T. R. 732; Nolan, 100.

Earnings of Apprentice.]—A master stipulating for 4*d.* out of every 1*s.* of the earnings of his apprentice, is no benefit to him within the statute, for which an additional duty is to be paid, being by law entitled to the whole. Rex v. Wantage, 1 East, 601.

Agreement prior to Indentures.]—Nor is an agreement before the binding to pay the master 30*s.*, to clothe the apprentice, within the statute, and the indenture is not void for want of inserting it therein. Rex v. North Onam, Burr. S. C. 145; 2 Stra. 1132.

Necessaries.]—Nor is an agreement by the father of an apprentice to provide necessaries for his son, in consideration of a weekly sum to be paid him by the master, within the statute. Rex v. Portsea, Burr. S. C. 834.

Agreement Contemporaneous with Indenture.]

—A sum of 99l. 19s. was paid as an apprentice fee, and was stated as the consideration in the indenture. Contemporaneously with the indenture, a written agreement was made between the master and the apprentice's uncle, that the latter should pay 150l. more for the board of the apprentice during the term, 50l. of which was paid, and notes given for the residue. This was not stated in the indenture:—Held, that the consideration was truly stated, and that the indenture was not void under 8 Anne, c. 9. Hawkins v. Clutterbuck, 2 C. & K. 811.

Premium paid by Society—Fraud upon.—A father, upon apprenticing his son to B. by a charitable society, agreed to give him, in addition to a premium of 20l. to be paid by the society, four l O U's for 5l. each, payable at intervals of a year. The boy was apprenticed, and served the full term; the indenture stating the consideration to be 20l., paid by the society; after the expiration of the term, B. sued the father upon his l O U's:—Held, that the transaction was not a fraud upon the society. Wentlake v. Adams, 5 C. B., N. S. 248; 27 L. J. C. P. 271; 4 Jur., N. S. 1021.

Held, also, that the indenture being void by 8 Anne, c. 9, s. 39, for not truly setting forth the consideration, did not prevent B. from suing the father upon the l O U's, the execution of the indenture (though void) being a sufficient consideration for his promise to pay the additional 20l. Ib.

Exempt.—A binding with the consent of trustees of funds bequeathed for that purpose, though they do not execute, is exempt from duty. Rees v. Quainton, 2 M. & S. 338.

Public Charity—Stamp—Fraud.—A pauper was bound apprentice by trustees of a public charity. The master covenanted to find him meat, drink, apparel, washing, &c. Before the execution of the indenture, the father of the pauper, who was not a party to it, agreed with the master to find the pauper clothing and washing during the term; and he did so. It did not appear that the trustees were privy to this engagement:—Held, that the indenture did not require to be stamped, because either the agreement by the father to provide clothes was not a thing secured to be given to or for the benefit of the master, within 55 Geo. 3, c. 184; or, assuming that it was, then it was void as being a fraud on the trustees, who had bound out the apprentice on the faith that the master was to provide clothes. Rees v. Aylesbury, 3 B. & Ad. 569.

Parish Officers—Premium.—The premium given by parish officers upon the binding out of a poor apprentice, need not be set out in the indenture in words at length; such an indenture being exempted from any duty by s. 40, and the insertion of the premium being required for no other purpose but to ascertain the amount of the duty. Rees v. Oadby, 1 B. & A. 477.

Master or Mistress.—Neither is any duty payable for any consideration-money, unless it is given to the master or mistress of the apprentice. Rees v. Saint Petroz, Dartmouth, 4 T. R. 169.

Assignment—Stamping.—An assignment of a parish apprentice is not subject to the regulations imposed by 8 Ann. c. 9, and need not, therefore, be stamped within two months, nor must the consideration paid for such assignment be set forth in it. Rees v. Ide, 2 B. & Ad. 866.

— Unstamped—Admissible Evidence. —

An unstamped assignment of a parish apprentice stated that the new master, in consideration of 3l. 10s. paid him by the old master, agreed to accept the apprentice:—Held, that parol evidence was admissible to show that the money paid on the assignment was parish money; and, therefore, that the instrument did not require a stamp. Rees v. Llangunnor, 2 B. & Ad. 616.

A boy was apprenticed by the trustees of a charitable fund, and a premium of 15l. paid out of the fund; before the expiration of the term, the master, at the request of the apprentice, verbally, and without the knowledge of the trustees, consented to his serving the remainder of his term with another person; and agreed to give that person 6l., as part of the 15l. paid as a premium on the binding:—Held, that the 6l. was a valuable consideration paid to the second master, "other than what was given by any public charity," and, therefore, that the transfer was void for want of a stamped assignment. Rees v. Fakenham, 4 N. & M. 553; 2 A. & E. 528; 1 H. & W. 222.

— Additional Year's Service.—An assignment of an apprenticeship indenture contained a stipulation for an additional year's service with a new master:—Held, that the common assignment stamp was sufficient. Morris v. Cox, 3 Scott, N. R. 116; 2 M. & G. 659; 9 D. P. C. 661; 5 Jur. 367. See 16 & 17 Vict. c. 59.

Single Stamp.—An indenture to two masters, to serve them consecutively in distinct trades, requires only a single stamp. Rees v. Louth, 2 M. & R. 273; 8 B. & C. 247.

Time for Stamping.—The 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, does not repeal 8 Ann. c. 9, as to the time for stamping indentures of apprenticeship; and, therefore, an indenture of apprenticeship (a premium having been paid with the apprentice), must be stamped with the ad valorem duty, within the time prescribed by 8 Ann. c. 9, ss. 36, 37, 38, and if not stamped, is wholly void. Rees v. Church Hulme, 5 B. & Ad. 1029.

An indenture of apprenticeship, in which no consideration is expressed, is not within 8 Ann. c. 9, which limits the time of stamping to particular periods, in no case exceeding six months; and is therefore receivable in evidence, though stamped more than a year after execution. Smith v. Agett, 8 D. P. C. 411.

— Ex.

Want of Stamp—Effect.—No action can be maintained by the plaintiff on a note given to him by the defendant, as an apprentice fee with his son, who was to be bound to the plaintiff, if it appears that the indenture executed was void by the statute, for want of the insertion of such premium therein, and a proper stamp in respect of the same; although the plaintiff did in fact maintain the apprentice for some time, and until he absconded. Jackson v. Warwick, 7 T. R. 121.

Indenture Void—Premium not Inserted—Recovery.—Money paid as a premium for an apprentice, by a parent to a master under an indenture, cannot be recovered back if such indenture is void for not having the amount of the premium inserted therein; although the statutes relative to the duties payable on such indentures impose a penalty on the master alone for such omission; as the parent, by executing the instrument, must be considered to be aware of its illegality, and therefore in paridelioto with the master. Stokes v. Twitoken, 2 Moore, 538; 8 Taunt. 492.

Insufficient Stamp.—Where a boy was bound apprentice in 1827, by indenture, upon a premium of 30*l.*, which was agreed to be paid, and for which a bill was given; and the indenture had a 1*l.* stamp only impressed upon it; and the apprentice having served his master for five months, and a difference having arisen between the master and the father, and it having been discovered that the stamp was insufficient, the apprentice left his master's service:—Held, that the apprentice might have compelled him to continue that instruction and maintenance, by causing the indenture to be properly stamped. Mann v. Lent, 10 B. & C. 877; M. & M. 240.

5. COMPULSORY BINDING.

[5 Eliz. c. 4, avoided all indentures of apprenticeship other than for seven years: but 54 Geo. 3, c. 96, repealed that statute, and enacted that it might be lawful for persons to take apprentices though not according to the provisions of the 5 Eliz. c. 4.]

The statute related only to infants, and not to adults. Smedley v. Gooden, 3 M. & S. 189.

The 5 Eliz. c. 4, was construed as rendering indentures made for a less time voidable only, and not void. Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13; S. P. Rez v. St. Nicholas, Burr. S. C. 91; 2 Stra. 1066.

Antedating Indenture.—A minor, by an indenture of apprenticeship, put himself apprentice to his father to learn the trade of a tailor. The indenture first bore date the 12th of December, 1813, but the parties, for the fraudulent purpose of enabling the minor to exercise the trade of a tailor, and have the full benefit of the 5 Eliz. c. 4, then in force, after five years' apprenticeship, caused the indenture, before execution, to be antedated two years; on an appeal touching the validity of this indenture:—Held, that as it was fraudulently intended to contravene 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 31, it was altogether void. Rez v. Barnston, 3 N. & P. 167; 7 A. & E. 858; 2 Jur. 537.

Guardians of Poor—Years.—Where a statute, incorporating guardians of the poor of a district, enacted that it should be lawful for the corporation to bind out apprentices for any number of years, "provided such child be not bound for a longer term than until he or she shall have attained twenty-two, if a boy, and twenty, if a girl:—Held, that an indenture, by which a boy fifteen-and-a-half was bound for seven years, was voidable only and not void. Rez v. St. Gregory, Canterbury, 4, N. & M. 137; 2 A. & E. 99.

Assent of Boy.—By a local act, property was vested in guardians of the poor of a city for the benefit of the poor, and they were required to give a bond to provide for and maintain sixteen poor boys of the city, and to cause them to be instructed, and to "put them out apprentices, after they and every of them should have attained thirteen, and before fifteen:—Held, that the act did not authorize the guardians to apprentice a boy without his assent, especially if the boy was beyond fifteen; and that, consequently, where a boy never executed an indenture of apprenticeship, and was seventeen when the guardians apprenticed him, the indenture was invalid, and the boy did not acquire a settlement under it. St. Nicholas, Rochester v. St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, 12 C. B., N. S. 645; 31 L. J., M. C. 258; 9 Jur., N. S. 101; 6 L. T., 495.

6. DISSOLUTION.

By Bankruptcy of Master.—[By 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 170, similar to 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 49, the bankruptcy of the master will operate as a discharge of the apprentice, and premium may be returned.]

—Where a fiat of bankruptcy had been issued against the master of an apprentice, but was afterwards annulled by means of a composition between the bankrupt and his creditors:—Held, that the indentures of apprenticeship were discharged. Allen v. Chata, 1 Beav. 274.

By Death.—Apprenticeship is determined by the death of the master. Rez v. Clark, Burr. S. C. 782; Baxter v. Burfield, 2 Strange, 1266; 1 Bott's P. L. 696.

—By indenture an infant, with the consent of his father, bound himself apprentice to a tradesman, "his executors and administrators, such executors or administrators carrying on the same trade or business, and in the town of W.," and with him and them to serve for the term of seven years; and the master, in consideration of the service of the apprentice, covenanted to teach and instruct him, or cause him to be taught and instructed, during the term:—Held, first, that upon the death of the master the apprentice was bound to serve his widow, who was his executrix, whilst she carried on the same business in the same town, and that she was bound to teach the apprentice. Cooper v. Simmonds, 7 H. & N. 707; 31 L. J., M. C. 138; 8 Jur., N. S. 81; 5 L. T., 712; 10 W. R. 270.

Held, secondly, that it was no answer to an information against the apprentice for absenting himself from the service of the executrix that he had consulted an attorney, who advised him that the apprenticeship was determined by the death of the master, and that he had acted on the bona fide belief that the advice was correct. Ib.

On attaining Majority.—When an infant apprentices himself under an indenture of apprenticeship, such indenture is only voidable upon his attaining his majority, and if he intends to disaffirm it, he must do so within a reasonable time after he arrives at full age. What is a reasonable time is a question of fact for the court before which it is brought for decision. Wray v. West, 15 L. T., 180.

An apprentice, bound by indenture for seven years, while under twenty-one, is entitled to put an end to the apprenticeship when he attains that age, but must give to his master reasonable notice of his intention so to do. Coghlan v. Culaghan, 7 Ir. C. L. R. 291.

By Absenting of Apprentice.]—The absenting of himself from his master's service by an apprentice is not an avoidance of the apprenticeship. 1b.

On Relinquishment of Trade or Business.]—By an indenture of apprenticeship an infant, with the consent of his father, put himself apprentice to a person described as "an auctioneer, appraiser and corn-factor, to learn his art, and with him after the manner of an apprentice to serve" for a certain period. The father was party to the indenture, and entered into covenants for the performance of its terms on the behalf of the apprentice:—Held, that the fact of the master's having during the continuance of the apprenticeship relinquished the trade of corn-factor was an answer to an action brought by him against the father for a desertion of his service by the apprentice; and this, though the father had by parol consented to the discontinuance of that trade, and allowed the son to continue to serve after it. Ellen v. Topp, 6 Ex. 424; 20 L. J., Ex. 241; 15 Jur. 451.

By indenture between A. and B., B. covenanted to teach A. the art and mystery of an apothecary. At the time of the indenture being executed B. kept a shop, making up his own prescriptions and those of other medical men. B. subsequently closed his shop and confined his business to that of a general practitioner, making up his own prescriptions, but not those of other medical men:—Held, that this did not disqualify B. from teaching A. the art and mystery of an apothecary, so as to entitle the latter to a direction in an action brought by him for breach of the covenant in the indenture. Butty v. Monks, 12 L. T. 832; 15 Ir. C. L. R. 388.

Before Breach.]—To an action on an indenture of apprenticeship, the defendant pleaded, that when the indenture was entered into the plaintiffs were partners, and that, before any breach of duty by the apprentice, the partnership was dissolved. The court refused to set aside the plea on the ground that it was not issuable. Lloyd v. Blackburn, 9 M. & W. 363; 1 D., N. S. 647.

Indenture being given Up.]—Apprenticeship is determined by the indenture being given up, though not cancelled. Rea v. Titchfield, Burr. S. C. 511.

And by the master telling his apprentice he might go where he pleased, and giving up his indenture. Rea v. Notton, Burr. S. C. 629.

Where there has been such an agreement between the master and the apprentice to give up the indenture, that, to an action of covenant brought by the former, the latter could plead the matter in bar, the indentures are considered as cancelled, though the indentures still subsist in fact. Rea v. Harburton, 1 T. R. 139.

Verbal Agreement.]—A verbal agreement by a master, "upon being paid three pounds, to set his apprentice at liberty, and to give him up his indenture," does not discharge the indenture. Rea v. Warden, 2 M. & R. 24.

The mother of an apprentice, before the expiration of his apprenticeship, applied to his master to give him up to her, to which he consented, and the apprentice left him; but the indenture remained in the hands of the overseers, and was never applied for, or given up:—Held, that the apprenticeship was not put an end to by the agreement between the parties. Rea v. Skeffington, 3 B. & A. 382. See also Rea v. Warminster, 3 B. & A. 121.

Master Receiving Money.]—Where a master receives money of his apprentice, who is of full age, to vacate his indenture, the relation is dissolved, although the indenture remains uncanceled. Rea v. Devonshire (Justices), Cald. 32.

By Consent.]—The apprenticeship of an infant may be dissolved with the consent of all parties concerned. Rea v. Waddington, Burr. S. C. 766; S. P. Rea v. Spaurston, S. C. 801.

Continuance of Service.]—Where an apprentice was bound for seven years to A., and served him in his house between five and six, and resided at his mother's for the remainder of the term, having previously agreed with A. that he might work for whom he pleased on his paying a weekly sum to A., who also during the term occasionally gave him work for which he was not paid:—Held, that this was not a continuance of the service to A. for seven years under the indenture. Rea v. Inman, 4 B. & A. 55.

Breach of Conditions.]—Where a master had agreed by indorsement (unstamped) on the indenture to cancel it, "provided the apprentice made no engagement or entered into any person's service in a particular town:—Held, that the apprentice setting up a trade for himself in the town was a breach of the condition, which entitled the master to recall him into his service. Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13.

7. PROCEEDINGS ON.

Covenants.]—The covenants in an indenture of apprenticeship are distinct from and independent of each other. Winstone v. Linn, 2 D. & R. 465; 1 B. & C. 460.

Misconduct.]—And consequently misconduct in an apprentice affords no justification to the master for putting an end to the contract. Phillips or Philips v. Clift, 4 H. & N. 168; 28 L. J., Ex. 153; 5 Jur., N. S. 74; 32 L. T., O. S. 282.

Plea "not his deed."]—To an action on a deed of apprenticeship, the defendant pleaded that the indenture was not his deed:—Held, that a special demurrer to such plea was not frivolous. Bird v. Holman, 2 D., N. S. 234; 9 M. & W. 761.

Pledings.]—Action by father of an apprentice, against the master, for not teaching the apprentice: plea, that he did teach, until the apprentice ran away, and never returned: replication, that, on a certain day, the master refused to take back the apprentice, and thereby discharged him: rejoinder, that the apprentice had previously enlisted as a soldier, and that the father never requested the master to take the apprentice when he was able to return: surrejoinder, that soon after the apprentice had enlisted, the master refused to take him back, and wholly discharged him:—Held, that the surrejoinder was bad, and no answer to the rejoinder; and that the plea was a good answer, and that the father should have alleged an offer to return the apprentice. Hughes v. Humphreys, 9 D. & R. 715; 6 B. & C. 680. And see Cuming v. Hill, 3 B. & A. 59.

Jurisdiction of Court of Equity.—A Court of Equity has no jurisdiction to order the cancellation of articles of apprenticeship, and the return of a portion of the premium, on the ground of the wrongful refusal of the master to continue to instruct his apprentice in his trade, according to his agreement. Webb v. England, 29 Beav. 44; 30 L. J., Ch. 222; 7 Jur., N. S. 153; 3 L. T., 574; 9 W. R. 183.

Surety's Obligation for good Conduct.—To a statement of claim alleging that the defendant had become surety on an indenture of apprenticeship for the faithful service of the apprentice, and that the apprentice had not faithfully served, but had absented himself, the defendant pleaded that while the apprentice was in the plaintiff's service the plaintiff assaulted him and inflicted personal injury upon him, and threatened to do him grievous bodily harm, and that the apprentice, fearing that grievous bodily harm would be inflicted upon him, left the service:—Held, that the statement of defence should be amended by adding an allegation that the apprentice had reasonable ground for such fear. Halliwell v. Council, 38 L. T. 176.

8. PROOF OF.

Averment in Declaration.—An averment in a declaration on the 8 Ann. c. 9, against a master of an apprentice, for not inserting the true consideration in the indenture, that A., the apprentice, by an indenture executed, put himself apprentice to the defendant, may be proved by the production of that part of the indenture executed by the defendant, in which it is recited that A. had put himself apprentice. Burleigh v. Sibbs, 5 T. R. 465.

Admissions—Parol Evidence.—It was proved by a pauper that he had been bound apprentice twenty-three years before by the overseers of a parish, to A. for seven years, that the indenture was signed and sealed, and that he served the seven years, and that A. had the indenture; that, when the apprenticeship expired, the pauper asked A. for the indenture, who said the overseers had it:—Held, that the declarations of A., who might have been called as a witness, were not admissible, and that parol evidence of the contents was not admissible, the indenture not having been sufficiently accounted for. Rez v. Denio, 7 B. & C. 620; 1 M. & R. 294; S. P., Rez v. Castleton, 6 T. R. 236.

Settlement by Apprenticeship.—To prove a settlement by apprenticeship, evidence was given that proper search had been made for an indenture, but in vain; and a person deposed that more than sixty years back he worked with the same master as the pauper, and always believed him to be apprenticed to that master; that the pauper was instructed there by a journeyman, and lodged and boarded in the house with two others, who were apprentices:—Held, evidence from which a settlement by apprenticeship under an indenture might be presumed. Reg. v. Fordinbridge, El. Bl. & El. 678; 27 L. J., M. C. 290; 4 Jur., N. S. 951.

Appellants against an order of removal set up a settlement of a pauper by apprenticeship under an indenture which had been lost. To prove proper search, they proposed to ask certain witnesses what enquiries they had made of, and what answers they had received from, parties who were likely to have the document in their possession; but the parties themselves were not called. The sessions refused to allow the questions to be put:—Held, that the evidence was admissible, upon the preliminary inquiry whether proper search had been made, though it might not be admissible in the main issue before the court. Reg. v. Braintree, 1 El. & Bl. 51; 4 Jur., N. S. 1238; 28 L., M. C. 1.

Expired Indenture—Custody.—An expired indenture of apprenticeship sometimes remains with the master and sometimes with the apprentice, but the most proper custody is with the apprentice; and although shortly after the expiration of the apprenticeship search might be required amongst the papers of both, yet, after the lapse of some years, proof of search among the papers of the apprentice is sufficient to warrant justices in admitting secondary evidence of its contents. Reg. v. Hinckley, 3 B. & S. 885; 32 L. J., M. C. 158; 9 Jur., N. S. 1054; 8 L. T. 270; 11 W. R. 663.

II. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTIES.

1. MASTER.

Condition Precedent.—It is a condition precedent to the liability of a master, on a covenant to teach an apprentice his trade, that the apprentice should be ready and willing to be taught by the master. Raymont or Raymond v. Minton, 1 L. R., Ex. 244; 35 L. J., Ex. 153; 12 Jur., N. S. 435; 14 L. T. 367; 14 W. R. 675; 4 H. & C. 371.

Personal Trust—Assignment.—The interest of a master in his apprentice is a mere personal trust; and an indenture not being assignable in his lifetime, except by custom, and with the consent of the apprentice, the master's executors cannot maintain an action on a bond for performance of the covenants in the indenture, unless his executors are named. Baxter v. Burfield, 1 Bott's P. L. 581; 2 Str. 1266.

Harbouring Apprentices.—The master may have an action against those who detain an apprentice after knowing him to be such. Rez v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 745.

Enticing away.—No action will lie for enticing away an apprentice unless there is a valid contract of apprenticeship. Cox v. Muncy, 6 C. B., N. S. 375.

Injuring or Disabling.—In an action for permanently injuring the hand of an apprentice, whereby loss of service accrued, the master may recover for the prospective damage, and is not limited to the loss up to the time of the commencement of the action; for the damage alone is not the cause of action, but the illegal act and the damage together; and the master could not bring a fresh action as often as fresh damage resulted. Hodson v. Stalbrass, 3 P. & D. 200; 11 A. & E. 301; 9 C. & P. 63; 8 D. P. C. 482.

Discharging Apprentice—Absence—Damages.]

—When an apprentice has absented himself, the fact that the master declined to have any trouble taken to find him, and described him as worthless, though it will not sustain a plea of leave and licence, may be material in mitigation of damages, and the jury can only give the real value of his services up to the time of action. Russell v. Shinn, 2 F. & F. 695.

—Misconduct.—A person has no right to turn away an apprentice because he misbehaves; but the case of a young man seventeen years old, who, under a written agreement not under seal, is placed with a surgeon as pupil and assistant, and with whom a premium is paid, is a case between that of apprenticeship and service; and if such a person, on some occasions, comes home intoxicated, this alone will not justify the surgeon in dismissing him. But if the pupil and assistant, by employing the shop-boy to compound the medicines, occasions real danger to the surgeon's practice, this would justify the surgeon in dismissing him. Wise v. Wilson, 1 C. & K. 622. See Mercer v. Wall, 5 Q. B. 447; 14 L. J., Q. B. 267; 9 Jur. 576.

A declaration alleged that the defendant agreed with the plaintiff to take his son as an apprentice for three years, to learn the business of a tea broker; and in consideration of 200*l.* to teach him such business and pay him a salary, provided that he should obey all commands and give his services entirely to the business during office hours. Breach, that the defendant dismissed the son from his service. Plea, that the son misconducted himself in the service, by wilfully disobeying the orders of the defendant, and by habitually neglecting his duties and refusing to give his services during office hours without just cause, wherefor the defendant discharged him:—Held, that the proviso empowered the defendant to discharge the apprentice, and that the plea was good. Westwick v. Theodor, 10 L. R., Q. B. 224; 44 L. J., Q. B. 110; 32 L. T. 696; 23 W. R. 620.

Unlawfully Quitting Service—Damages.]

Where there is a contract of apprenticeship by deed, and the apprentice unlawfully quits the service, the master can only recover damages up to the time of action, when the term of apprenticeship would end. Lewis v. Peachey, 1 H. & C. 518; 31 L. J., Ex. 496; 10 W. R. 797.

Habitual Thief.—If an apprentice, whose master's business lies in precious articles, constantly lying about, is an habitual thief, the master may discharge him. Cox v. Matthew, 2 F. & F. 397.

Absenting—Taking back.—If an apprentice absents himself from his master, and his master takes him back, and an action is afterwards brought for such absenting, the taking back, to constitute a defence, must be specially pleaded. Wright v. Gihon, 3 C. & P. 583.

—Sunday.—The staying out by an apprentice on a Sunday evening, beyond the time allowed him, is not such an unlawful absenting of himself as will enable his master to maintain an action against a person who became bound for the due performance of the indenture. Ib.

—In Scotland.—An apprentice to a barber in Scotland, bound by his indenture "not to absent himself from his master's business on holidays or week-days, late hours or early, without leave, went away on Sundays without leave, and without shaving his master's customers:—Held, that he could not be lawfully required to attend his master's shop on Sundays for the purpose of shaving the customers, and that that work, and all other sorts of handicraft, were illegal in England as well as in Scotland, not being work of necessity, or mercy, or charity. Phillips v. Innes, 4 C. & F. 234.

Harbouring—Earnings.—A master is entitled to maintain an action for the work and labour of his apprentice, against another who harbours him after desertion. Foster v. Stewart, 3 M. & S. 191.

So a master of an apprentice who has been seduced from his service to work for another person, may waive the tort, and bring an action for work and labour done by his apprentice, against the person who tortiously employed him. Lightly v. Clouston, 1 Taunt. 112.

So the captain of a ship of war, detaining an impressed apprentice after notice, is liable to the master for wages for the service of the apprentice. Eades v. Vandeput, 5 East, 39, n.; 4 Dougl. 1.

Even if the captain has knowledge of the fact from the apprentice's assertion merely. Ib.

Prize money gained by an apprentice serving on board a letter of marque ship, does not belong to the master of the apprentice, the usage being proved to be, that such money is the property of the apprentice. Carsan v. Watts, 3 Dougl. 350.

Deductions from Wages.—When in a deed of apprenticeship the master covenanted to find meat, drink, lodging, and all other necessities, and certain wages:—Held, that he was not entitled to set off the cost of clothes and washing supplied to the apprentice against the wages due to him, and a custom among masters to deduct the cost of clothes and washing from the wages paid to the apprentice could not be supported on the ground that clothes and washing being necessities in the ordinary sense of the word, such a custom would contravene the terms of the deed. Abbott v. Bates, 45 L. J., C. P. 117; 33 L. T. 491; 24 W. R. 101—C. A.

Impressment.—If an apprentice is impressed, the master cannot sue out a habeas corpus to bring him up to be discharged, though the apprentice may. Rez v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 745; Rez v. Reynolds, 6 T. R. 497.

Nor where an apprentice is impressed, if he is willing to enter into the service. Landown, Ex parte, 5 East, 38. Grocot, Ex parte, 5 D. & R. 610.

The master, however, may have a warrant to the commander of the vessel to have the apprentice discharged. Ib.

Such warrant is granted by the Chief Justice of Q. B. Apprentices' Case, 1 Leach, C. C. 208; S. P., Rex v. Parkins, 2 Ld. Ken. 295.

2. APPRENTICE.

Infant.—An infant may bind himself apprentice by indenture, because it is for his benefit. Rex v. Arundel, 5 M. & S. 257. And see Keane v. Boycott, 2 H. Bl. 511; Drury v. Drury, 5 Bro. C. C. 570.

An infant can do no act to bind himself, except such as is clearly for his own benefit; therefore, though he may bind himself an apprentice, he cannot dissolve the indenture. Rex v. Wigston, 5 D. & R. 339; 3 B. & C. 484.

— Bona fide advance by Trustee of.—A trustee bona fide advanced a sum to apprentice an infant, in the life of his father, who was in great pecuniary distress, and while the infant's interest in the trust fund was contingent, and before a power of advancement had come into operation:—Held, that in taking the accounts as against the trustee, the amount ought to be allowed him. Worthington v. McCrae or McCraw, 23 Beav. 81; 26 L. J., Ch. 286.

Avoiding Indenture.—The indenture cannot be avoided when the apprentice is before a magistrate, charged with misbehaviour under the indenture. Rex v. Eccerred, Cald. 26.

Nor by the apprentice's absenting himself from the service. Smedley v. Gooden, 3 M. & S. 189; S. P., Cogan v. Calaghan, 7 Ir. C. L. R. 291.

Return to Habeas Corpus.—A return to a habeas corpus for the discharge of an apprentice above twenty-one, stating the custom of London, that every citizen and freeman of the city may take as an apprentice any person above fourteen, and under twenty-one, to serve for seven years and more, must shew that the apprentice was within those ages when he bound himself apprentice; for the court will not intend that from matter dehors the return. Eden, Ex parte, 2 M. & S. 226.

The court has no power to discharge an apprentice from his indentures who has bound himself when an infant to serve till twenty-five, and who, when he came of age, elected to avoid indentures, after which he had been committed to the house of correction for a misdemeanor, in absenting himself from his master's service, when it appeared by the return to a habeas corpus that he was committed upon a regular conviction by two magistrates. Gill, Ex parte, 7 East, 376; 3 Smith, 369.

Seventeen years of Age.—An apprentice of seventeen years of age, and upwards, bound by indenture (which stated her to be fourteen) for seven years, is entitled to be discharged at twenty-one. Davis, Ex parte, 5 T. R. 715.

Deserting—Wages.—An indentured apprentice deserting his service, on entering on board ship cannot maintain an action for wages. Bright v. Lucas, Peake's Add. Cas. 121.

Dismissal—Damages.—In an action for an unlawful dismissal of an apprentice, the measure of damages is the loss or injury that has been incurred by the apprentice from the time of his dismissal to the time of action. Addams v. Carter, 6 L. T. 130.

The measure of damages in an action upon an apprenticeship deed, for wrongful dismissal, is the loss actually sustained by the specific breach of covenant complained of up to the time of action brought, and the jury cannot therefore take into consideration the possible injury the plaintiff may have sustained by reason of his wrongful dismissal, as such damages are not damages in the ordinary course of things flowing from the breach. Parker v. Catheart, 17 Ir. C. L. R. 787.

Breach of Agreement by retirement of one of two Partners.—An agreement by two partners to teach an apprentice his trade is broken if one of them retires from the business and so fails to teach him. Couchman v. Sillar, 22 L. T. 480; 18 W. R. 757.

Effect of Covenant to serve.—A covenant in an apprenticeship deed that the apprentice will honestly remain with and serve his master for a certain term, is, though in terms absolute, subject to an implied condition that the apprentice shall continue in a state of ability to perform his contract. To an action, therefore, by the master for breach of the covenant, a plea that the apprentice was prevented by the act of God, to wit, permanent illness, which arose after the making of the deed and before breach, is good. Boast v. Firth, 4 L. R., C. P. 1; 38 L. J., C. P. 1; 19 L. T. 264; 17 W. R. 29.

3. FATHER.

Son's Assent necessary.—A father cannot bind his infant son an apprentice without his assent; therefore, an indenture of apprenticeship executed by the master and father, but not by the apprentice himself, is invalid. Rex v. Arcsby, 3 B. & A. 584.

Where the master and father of a boy agreed, under seal, that the master should teach the son the art and mystery of weaving for five years, and find utensils, and the son should receive half his earnings, and the master the other half; under which the boy served out the time as an apprentice:—Held, that this agreement between the father and master (to which the son was no party), not binding the son, or the father for him, to any service to the master, but the son's service in fact, being merely voluntary, was no apprenticeship in point of law. Rex v. Cromford, 8 East, 25.

Adult must Execute.—An indenture binding an adult as an apprentice, which was not executed by herself, but only by her father-in-law and the master, though with her consent, does not constitute her an apprentice. Rex v. Hipon, 9 East, 295.

Absenting—Plea Covenant.—In an action on an indenture of apprenticeship, by the master against the father, the declaration assigned for breach, that the apprentice absented himself from the service, and he pleaded that his son faithfully served till he came of age, and that he then avoided the indenture:—Held, that this was no answer to the action, as it did not discharge the father's liability on the covenant, which was that his son should serve for seven years. Cum- ing v. Hill, 3 B. & A. 59. And see Hughes v. Humphreys, 6 B. & C. 680; 9 D. & R. 715.

Covenant—Plea and Performance.—The father of an apprentice covenanted to provide his son with washing; afterwards the master suggested that the father should allow the son a certain sum of money a year, and the master supply the son with washing, and the son pay him for it. This was acceded to, and the master accordingly supplied the washing:—Held, that the master could not recover in an action on the indenture against the father for his not providing the son with washing, if the master provided the washing, by agreement, on the credit of either the father or the son; and that, in an action on the covenant, a plea of performance by the father was supported by proof of those facts. Blackburne v. Davis, 1 C. & K. 167.

Recovery of Premium on Death of Master.—A father apprenticed his son to a watchmaker and jeweller for the term of six years, paying to the master a premium. The master duly instructed the apprentice for a year, and then died. The father sought, in an action against the master's executrix for money had and received, to recover the whole or some part of the premium, on the ground of failure of consideration:—Held, that such failure being only partial, the action was not maintainable. Whincup v. Hughes, 6 L. R., C. P. 78; 40 L. J., C. P. 104; 24 L. T. 74; 19 W. R. 439.

Return of Premium.—A deed of apprenticeship contained a provision that, in the event of the failure of the health of the apprentice, so as to incapacitate him from following the profession of a civil engineer, before the 1st of April, 1866, the master should refund to the father 50*l.* of the premium; it being agreed that the production at any time before that day of a certificate signed by two duly qualified medical men, testifying as to the fact, should be conclusive evidence that the health of the apprentice had failed, so as to incapacitate him from following his profession. The health of the apprentice failed, and he died on the 4th of August, 1865. On the 28th of March, 1866, the master was served with a certificate in the terms of the condition, dated the 24th of March, but referring to the state of health of the apprentice in June, 1865:—Held, that the certificate was a sufficient compliance with the condition to entitle the father to recover the 50*l.* Derby v. Ilmber, 2 L. R., C. P. 247; 15 L. T. 538.

III. JURISDICTION OF JUSTICES.

20 Geo. 2, c. 19.—The 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 4, enabling two magistrates, "upon application or complaint made upon oath, by any master against such apprentice," as is described in the act, touching any misdemeanour in such service, to hear and determine the same, and to commit or discharge the apprentice, extends to a complaint in writing, preferred by the master, and verified by the oath of another person. Finley v. Jovle, 12 East, 248.

—6 Geo. 3, c. 25.—This statute is not repealed by 6 Geo. 3, c. 25, s. 1, empowering the justices to oblige an apprentice absenting himself from his master's service to serve out, after the expiration of the apprenticeship, such time of absence, as to make satisfaction for it; and in default of such satisfaction, to commit the apprentice; for, the remedy given to the master by the latter statute is cumulative to the punishment inflicted on the apprentice by the former statute for his offence. Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13.

Conviction for Misbehaviour.—A conviction on 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, of an apprentice for misbehaviour must shew on the face of it that he is an apprentice within 4 Geo. 4, c. 29, which extends previous acts to apprentices upon whose binding out no larger sum than 25*l.* has been paid. Rea v. Taylor, 7 D. & R. 622.

Under 5 Eliz., c. 4, s. 35—Premium.—The justices at sessions have no power under 5 Eliz., c. 4, s. 35, on making an order for the discharge of an apprenticeship, to direct the return of any part of the premium already paid to the master, or the non-payment of any part of it remaining unpaid. East v. Pell, 4 M. & W. 665; 1 H. & H. 421.

Expiration of Indenture before Complaint.—Under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 2, a justice of the peace has jurisdiction to inquire into and hear a complaint made by an apprentice claiming wages due from his master notwithstanding the term of apprenticeship has expired and the indenture of apprenticeship determined before the complaint is made; and an apprentice sworn to give evidence touching such complaint, who has given false testimony upon the hearing of the complaint, may be convicted of perjury. Reg. v. Proud, 1 L. R., C. C. 71; 36 L. J., M. C. 62; 10 Cox, C. C. 455; 16 L. T. 364; 15 W. R. 796.

IV. PARISH APPRENTICES.

Chimney Sweepers—under Eight.—The 28 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 4, made void the indentures if children under eight were bound to chimney-sweepers. Rea v. Hipwell, 8 B. & C. 466; 2 M. & R. 474.

Assent of Justices—Requisites.—The assent of justices to the binding of a parish apprentice, under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, must shew on the face of it that the justices were at the time acting within the local limits of their jurisdiction. Starerton (Overacker) v. Ashburton (Overacker), 4 El. & Bl. 526; 24 L. J., M. C. 53; 1 Jur., N. S. 233.

So also an order of justices for binding an apprentice, under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139. Reg. v. St. George, Bloombury, 4 El. & Bl. 520; 24 L. J., M. C. 49; 1 Jur., N. S. 231.

The approval of the justices must be sealed as well as signed, by 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 11. Rea v. Stoke Damarel, 7 B. & C. 563; 1 M. & R. 458.

56 Geo. 3, c. 139.—Where an indenture stated in the body of it that the binding was with the approbation of two justices, whose names were thereunto subscribed, and the allowance at the foot of the indenture purported to be signed by the justices before the indenture was executed by any of the parties and referred by date and the names of the justices, to the order for binding, such a reference is a compliance with 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, as the allowance is in such case part of the indenture. Reg. v. Aldborough, 13 Q. B. 190; 3 New Sess. Cas. 486; 18 L. J., M. C. 81; 13 Jur. 322.

— 28 Geo. 3, c. 48—Chimney Sweep—Not under Eight.—An indenture of apprenticeship under 28 Geo. 3, c. 48, by which a boy, not under eight years, bound himself apprentice to a chimney-sweeper with the consent of his parent, was valid, without the consent of two justices, and therefore a settlement was gained by service under it. Reg. v. Epsum, 4 El. & Bl. 1003; 24 L. J., M. C. 119; 1 Jur., N. S. 474.

— Jurisdiction — Metropolis.—By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 63, s. 3, indentures for binding parish apprentices within any city, borough, or town corporate, shall be allowed by two justices, one acting for and on behalf of the county, and the other acting for and on behalf of the city, borough, or town corporate within the limits of which such child shall be bound. By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 14, a magistrate of the metropolitan police courts may do at a police court any act which may be done by more than one justice. A pauper was bound apprentice by a parish, which was within the city and liberty of Westminster, into a parish in the county of Middlesex. Justices for the county of Middlesex have concurrent jurisdiction, and usually act in the liberty of Westminster:—Held, that 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 14, gave one police magistrate jurisdiction to allow the indenture. Reg. v. St. George's, Bloomsbury, 16 Q. B. 1005; 20 L. J., M. C. 200; 15 Jur. 799.

By Guardians.—By a local act directors and acting guardians of the poor, or any five of them, were to bind out pauper apprentices. An indenture of apprenticeship was executed, which purported to be between the guardians of the poor of the one part, and the apprentice's mistress of the other part; and in the operative part it witnessed "that the directors and acting guardians, by virtue of the act, did put, place, and bind the pauper as apprentice." The covenants by the mistress were made with the guardians, and by one of them she bound herself not to assign over the apprentice without the consent of the directors and acting guardians. In witness thereof the guardians caused the seal of the union to be put to the indenture; and the indenture was subscribed by two justices:—Held, that by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 63, s. 2, the indenture was rendered valid. Reg. v. Isle of Wight (Guardians), 10 L. T. 370; 12 W. R. 744.

By the Parish Officers before 1st October, 1844.—The 43 Eliz. c. 2, does not require absolutely two churchwardens in every parish for the management of the poor; and, therefore, an indenture binding out a poor apprentice, by one churchwarden (where by custom there was but one) and one overseer, was good within s. 5, which requires it to be executed by the greater part of the churchwardens and overseers. Reg. v. Skilton (Earl), 1 B. & A. 275.

— 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12—where Township has no Churchwardens.—Since 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, an indenture executed by the overseers of a township which has no churchwardens or chapel-wardens, and maintains its own poor separately, is valid, although neither of the churchwardens of the parish at large within which the township is situate join in the execution. Reg. v. Nantwich, 16 East, 228.

— Evidence of Execution.—An indenture, executed by a churchwarden and an overseer of the poor of a hamlet maintaining its own poor separately from the parish at large, not being impeached by evidence negating its execution by a majority of the churchwardens and overseers of the hamlet, will be deemed good, by intending that there were two overseers for the hamlet, as required by 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, s. 21, and only one churchwarden by custom, in the same place. Reg. v. Hinckley, 12 East, 361.

— Under 22 Geo. 3, c. 83—Requisites.—Where a parish is incorporated with others for the maintenance of its poor, and a guardian is appointed under 22 Geo. 3, c. 83, the churchwardens and overseers may bind out poor children apprentices, and the indentures need not be signed by the guardian. Reg. v. Lutterworth, 5 D. & R. 343; 3 B. & C. 487.

— Under 51 Geo. 3, c. 80.—The 51 Geo. 3, c. 80, extends to parishes where there are three officers only, one of whom acts as churchwarden as well as overseer; and, therefore, an indenture in such a case, signed by two parish officers, one of whom acted in a double capacity, was valid. Reg. v. St. Margaret's, Leicester, 2 B. & A. 200.

And notwithstanding that statute, an indenture signed by two parish officers, one of whom acted in the double capacity of churchwarden and overseer, was good. Reg. v. Stoke Golding, 1 B. & A. 173.

— Under 54 Geo. 3, c. 107.—The binding of an apprentice by the churchwarden of a township and one of two overseers is made valid by 54 Geo. 3, c. 107, s. 2. Reg. v. Stainforth, 11 Q. B. 66; 3 New Sess. Cas. 53; 17 L. J., M. C. 25; 12 Jur. 95.

Notice to Overseers—56 Geo. 3, c. 139.—No settlement was acquired by service under an indenture of apprenticeship ordered, made and allowed under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, unless the notice required by s. 2 was duly given, and was proved to the justices before allowance. Reg. v. Whiston, 6 N. & M. 65; 4 A. & E. 607.

But where an indenture of apprenticeship appeared on the face of it to be ordered and allowed by justices under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 2, it was prima facie to be presumed that the notice was duly given, and was proved before the magistrates by whom the indenture was allowed. Ib.

Under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 2, when an apprentice is bound from one parish into another, notice must be given to the overseers of the latter, though both be in the same county and jurisdiction of the peace. Reg. v. Threlkeld, 4 B. & Ad. 229; 1 N. & M. 14.

Where a parish apprentice is bound into another parish by assignment of the indenture of apprenticeship, notice from the churchwardens and overseers of the first parish to those of the second was not requisite under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 2. Re v. Exminster, 1 N. & P. 603; 6 A. & E. 598; W., W. & D. 244.

— Sufficiency of.—Where a pauper was bound apprentice under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, it was sufficient, if a notice of the intended binding, directed generally to the overseers of the parish into which the apprentice was to be bound, was served on one of such overseers. Reg. v. Holme, 9 Q. B. 71; 2 New Sess. Cas. 364; 15 L. J., M. C. 125; 10 Jur. 737.

Indentures—Effect of Fraud.—An indenture of apprenticeship of an infant pauper, sanctioned by the overseers and magistrates acting bona fide, is not avoided by its having been fraudulently contrived between the parent and nominal master, for the purpose of obtaining a premium from the parish, and keeping such infant at home. Re v. Great Sherpy, 2 M. & R. 286; 8 B. & C. 74.

— Rules of Poor Law Commissioners.—The rules of the poor law commissioners for binding poor children apprentices, excepting as to the signature by the apprentices, are directory only, and non-compliance with them will not make indentures void. Reg. v. St. Mary Magdalen, Bermondsey, 2 El. & Bl. 809; 23 L. J., M. C. 1; 17 Jur. 1075.

— Stamp.—The stamp is no part of the indenture, and a statement that it is duly stamped is sufficient. Reg. v. Keighley, 8 Q. B. 877; 2 New Sess. Cas. 321; 15 L. J., M. C. 102; 10 Jur. 492.

— Misnomer of Apprentice.—A misnomer of the apprentice in the body of the indenture will not affect its validity. Reg. v. Wooldale, 6 Q. B. 549; 1 New Sess. Cas. 377; 14 L. J., M. C. 13; 9 Jur. 83.

— Order for Binding, presumption of.—On appeal against an order of removal, the respondents alleging a parish apprenticeship, and ground having been laid for the reception of secondary evidence, the pauper and his father stated that in 1824 they, with the overseers and P., were before the magistrates for the purpose of the pauper being bound to P.; that the magistrates asked the father whether he had any objection to his son being bound to P.; that papers were drawn up, and that the pauper went to P. the next morning, and remained with him between two and three years, until the death of P. The respondents also produced the register-book of the parish, which contained an entry that the pauper had in 1824 been bound apprentice to P.:—Held, that the sessions were justified in presuming that an order for binding was made, and that it was referred to in the indenture of apprenticeship, as directed by 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 1. Reg. v. Broadhempston, 1 El. & Bl. 155; 28 L. J., M. C. 18; 5 Jur., N. S. 267.

— Date of Order Omitted in.—Where a parish apprentice was bound by the order of two justices, which was referred to in the indenture, in which the date of the order was omitted:—Held, that such indenture was void by 56 Geo. 3, c. 139. Re v. Baurburgh, 3 D. & R. 338; 2 B. & C. 222.

Dissolution of Contract.—An infant parish apprentice and his master cannot by themselves vacate the indenture. Re v. Gwinear, 3 N. & M. 297; 1 A. & E. 152.

— To Cancel at Twenty-one.—But a parish apprentice may agree with his master to cancel his indentures, at twenty-one, though bound till twenty-four. Bierlow v. Warslow, 1 W. Bl. 592.

— Death of Mistress, Effect of.—A parish apprentice, who was not living at the time of his mistress's death with her appointee under 32 Geo. 3, c. 57, though living with her son by her individual consent, could not gain a settlement in another parish by serving another mistress with the consent of the son and assignee of the original mistress, given after the death of the original mistress; the contract of service being declared by the recital of the act to be at an end upon the death of the original mistress, unless continued in the manner described in the act. Re v. Sheephead, 15 East, 59.

I. IN ORDINARY CASES.

1. PARTIES TO REFERENCES.

By Agents and Assignees.—H. and M., being partners, had covered wires with gutta percha for R., in pursuance of a contract. They afterwards assigned the partnership business to H., with power to him to take proceedings in their name for the recovery of debts due to them, to enforce existing contracts, and to deal in respect thereof as they themselves might have done. H., after the assignment, also covered wires for R. on his own account, and brought two actions against him, one in his own name, the other in the names of H. and M. It was agreed between H. and R. to refer both actions, and all matters in difference, as well between H. and M. and R. as between H. and R.; whereupon an order of reference was drawn up, and an award had been made:—Held, that the award was not bad for want of finality in awarding a discontinuance of H. and M.'s action without determining the cause of action, as it appeared that the discontinuance had been entered before or at the time of making the order of reference, and that it was left to the arbitrator to decide whether the discontinuance should remain, and it was intended that he should not proceed further in that action. Hancock v. Reid, 2 L., M. & P. 584; 21 L. J., Q. B. 78; 15 Jur. 1036.

An assignee of debts under a power to compound and receive them may refer. Banfield v. Leigh, 8 T. R. 571.

By Solicitors.—An attorney, authorized to appear for a party in an action, has, incidentally, authority to refer it without any fresh authority to that effect; and an attorney, having appeared for a corporation, to the knowledge of the directors, the corporation is bound by his acts as attorney, though not authorized to appear by any authority under seal. Fariell v. Eastern Coun- ties Railway Company, 2 Ex. 344; 6 D. & L. 54; 17 L. J., Ex. 223, 297.

If his client withdraws that authority from him, and the attorney nevertheless refers the cause, the validity of the reference cannot be disputed, upon shewing cause against a rule for enforcing the award; and semble, that the client's only remedy is against his attorney. Smith v. Troup, 6 D. & L. 679; 7 C. B. 757; 18 L. J., C. P. 209.

After an order of reference has been made with the consent of counsel and attorney, the court will not set it aside on an affidavit by a party expressly denying his attorney's authority to refer, though the application is made before any step taken by the arbitrator, excepting the appointment of a meeting. Filmer v. Delber, 3 Taunt. 486; 1 Chit. 193.

Where matters in a suit in Chancery were ordered by the vice-chancellor, with the consent of the attorneys of the parties in the suit, to be referred to A. B.:—Held, that no sufficient authority to refer on behalf of infant plaintiffs was shewn, the attorneys in the suit having no such authority, and that therefore the submission was not mutual, and consequently the award was bad. Biddell v. Dowse, 6 B. & C. 255; 9 D. & R. 404. See Jones v. Powell, 7 D. P. C. 483; 1 W. W. & H. 60; Wrightson v. Bywater, 6 D. P. C. 659; 3 M. & W. 199; 1 H. & H. 50.

In an action of trespass A. was plaintiff, and B., C.'s land agent, was the nominal defendant, C. being the party really interested. H., who acted as the defendant's attorney upon the employment of C., and who also acted as C.'s attorney in certain actions and suits depending between C. & A., consented to an order of nisi prius, on the terms that A. should give up to C. the possession of the farm on which the trespass had been committed, and that all proceedings should be stayed in the actions and suits between A. and B. and C., and that C. should pay the taxed costs in the present action, and the further sum of 10*l.* to A. On motion to set aside the order of nisi prius, and a rule of court made thereon, upon the ground that H. had no authority to bind C. by any such arrangement, the court refused to interfere in a summary way. Thomas v. Hewes, 2 C. & M. 519; 4 Tyr. 355.

By Attorneys.—H. & M., who had contracted to cover wires with gutta percha for R., who supplied the wires, afterwards assigned their business to C., and gave him a power of attorney, authorizing him in their names to bring any action or suit, or other proceeding, to enforce any existing contracts, and otherwise to deal in respect thereof as he might think proper. C., after the assignment, covered wires with gutta percha for R. Afterwards C. brought two actions against R., one in his own name, the other in the names of H. & M., to recover a balance for covering the wires. R. pleaded in each action the general issue, payment and set-off. Issue was not joined in the second action. On the trial of the first action, a reference, by consent, was made in the cause of C. v. R., and professed to refer "this cause and all matters in difference in this cause and in the cause of H. & M. v. R., and all matters in difference between the parties, and all matters in difference in the cause of H. & M. v. R. between those parties." After the reference, a rule for a discontinuance having been obtained in the action of H. & M. v. R., the order of reference was amended by consent, and it was ordered that the rule for a discontinuance should be suspended and left to the decision of the arbitrator. R., before the arbitrator, made a claim for damages, in respect of some wires spoilt by M. & R. in covering them. The award decided that the claim was not valid, and awarded a discontinuance in the action of H. & M. v. R.:—Held, that the order of reference was good, although it did not appear on the face of the document that H. & M. consented to the reference, and although they did not, in fact, consent to it, as the power of attorney from them gave C. power to refer all matters arising out of the contract; and the order of reference referred nothing in the names of H. & M., except the matters in the action of H. & M. v. R. Hancock v. Reid, 2 L. M. & P. 584; 21 L. J., Q. B. 78; 15 Jur. 1036.

By Bankrupts, their Assignees and Trustees.]

—A submission by a bankrupt, though of matters which have passed to his assignees, is not void: and payment of costs pursuant to the award may be enforced against him. Milnes, In re, 15 C. B. 451; 24 L. J., C. P. 29; 18 Jur. 1108; or Milnes v. Robertson, 3 C. L. R. 232.

An assignee of an insolvent debtor, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, had power to refer an action brought to recover a debt due to the insolvent, without the consent of the creditors or of the Insolvent Debtors' Court. Sutcliffe v. Brooke, 3 D. & L. 302; 14 M. & W. 855; 15 L. J., Ex. 118; 9 Jur. 1112.

Assignees of a bankrupt, having received money from a debtor to the bankrupt, as a debt due to his estate, and having commenced an action against him for a further demand on the same account, to which he had only pleaded the general issue, agree with him to refer their differences, and the submission is, that all matters in difference between the parties in the cause be referred; the arbitrator has power to award that the assignees shall repay a part of the sum already received, if it appears to have been paid by mistake. Malcolm v. Fullerton, 2 T. R. 645.

Trustees of an insolvent debtor by entering into an arbitration bond, admit that they have assets, and may be directed to pay costs. Wanborough v. Dyer, 2 Chit. 40.

By Executors and Trustees.]

—An award upon a submission by executors, trustees for infants and a married woman, referring matters relating to the estate of the person whom they represent, and touching the administration of the trusts of whose will there had been disputes, will not be set aside, at their instance, for want of mutuality. Warner, In re, 2 D. & L. 148; 13 L. J., Q. B. 370; 8 Jur. 1597.

An award upon a submission of all matters in difference by executors respecting the estate of the deceased and the principal legatees, taking an account of the estate, generally directing its administration, and that one of the parties shall pay the legacy duty, is not void. Id.

An executor does not preclude himself, by referring a cause, from availing himself of a plea of judgment recovered puis darrein continuance, whilst the reference was pending, although it appears from affidavits that he has a certain amount of assets in his hands. Alder v. Parke, 5 D. P. C. 16.

In another case it was held, that proof must be given of assets to make a trustee who has submitted to arbitration personally liable. Davies v. Ridge, 3 Esp. 101.

By Married Women.] Award upon a submission respecting freehold estates and interest in land in Jamaica, some of the parties to be bound by the reference being married women interested in the property:—Held, invalid, by reason of the coverture of the parties whose interests could not be bound by such a reference. Strachan v. Dougall, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 365.—See MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY ACT, 1882.

By Partners or Joint Contractors.]—One partner cannot bind his co-partner by a reference without his consent. Adams v. Bankart, 1 C. M. & R. 681.

A. and B., partners, dissolved the partnership upon the terms that all debts due to and owing by the firm should be received and paid by A. A. employed C., an attorney, in winding up the affairs. A. having brought an action against D., in the names of himself and B., for a debt alleged to be due to the firm, and pleas having been pleaded, all matters in difference between A. and B. and D. were, by an order, and by the consent of the attorneys in the cause, referred. C. acted solely under A.'s instructions, without any express authority from B. In an action on the award:—Held, that the submission was not binding on B. Hatton v. Royle, 3 H. & N. 500; 27 L. J., Ex. 486.

Upon a submission between two individuals (not being partners in trade), and a third person, where the agreement of reference is signed by one of them thus:—"A. for self and B.," on making the submission a rule of court, it must be shewn by affidavit that A. had the authority of B. to sign for him. Aldington and Hancock, In re, 15 C. B., N. S. 375.

A submission by three of five joint-contractors does not bind their co-contractors. Stead v. Salt, 3 Bing. 101; 10 Moore, 389.

Infants.]—Three causes were referred, in one of which an infant sued by his next friend; the other two being actions in which he was the substantial though not the nominal plaintiff. The costs of the causes were to abide the event, and costs of the reference and award were to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator decided all the causes in favour of the defendant, and ordered that the infant should pay all the costs of reference and award:—Held, that this was no excess of authority. Proudfont v. Boyle or Poile, 15 M. & W. 198; 3 D. & L. 524.

A cause was referred to an arbitrator who was to settle all matters in difference between the parties. At the time of the submission, two equity suits were pending in which the parties to the action and also certain infants were concerned:—Held, that the circumstance of infants being parties to those suits did not invalidate the award. Wrightson v. Bywater, 6 D. P. C. 359; 3 M. & W. 199; 1 H. & H. 50.

By acquiescence.]—The plaintiff, a merchant at Dublin, contracted with L., a ship-builder at Quebec (for whom the defendant was London agent), for a ship particularly described in the contract to be paid for by accepting a bill at six months; "and should the vessel, on her arrival at Dublin, exhibit any defect which shall be so declared by two competent persons, L. agrees to put it to rights, at his own expense, on her second voyage." A bill was sent to the plaintiff to accept, which he declined to do, having heard from Quebec that the ship was defective; and he wrote to the defendant, "I only want your guarantee that L. shall perform his contract to the full extent; if you agree to appoint one merchant, I will another. Let them agree to an umpire, and give me a letter of guarantee that L. will abide by the award, and perform his part without delay." The defendant answered, "If you will accept L.'s bill for the price, and return it to us forthwith, I agree to become personally responsible to you for the fulfilment of L.'s contract; and as C. and F. have the confidence of both parties, we suggest that they should be appointed to decide what should be done in case you have cause to complain." The plaintiff replied, "Relying on the guarantee you give me, I send enclosed the bill accepted for the full amount of the new ship." The bill was paid at maturity. The ship arrived in Dublin and was defective. A surveyor was appointed by the plaintiff, and another by C. and F. to survey the ship, who reported it would take 376*l.* to make her equal to the contract, and C. and F. therefore made an award, whereby they ordered the defendant to pay that sum, which he refused to do:—Held, that the plaintiff never acquiesced in the defendant's proposal to refer the matter to C. and F.; that C. and F. never professed to act under any authority derived from the plaintiff, and consequently that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover in respect of the award. Fagan v. Harrison, 8 C. B. 388; 19 L. J., C. P. 105.

If a third person, interested in a pending action, verbally consents to become a party to an order of nisi prius for a reference, he is bound by it, and the court will enforce the order, unless satisfied that the party has been deceived or mistaken in giving his assent. Williams v. Lewis, 7 El. & Bl. 929; 3 Jur., N. S. 1324.

By a memorandum between A. and B. it was agreed that a question of boundary should be referred to a surveyor. The lessees of A. and B. were not parties to the agreement:—Held, that the agreement was evidence for the lessee of A. against the lessee of B., after proof that the lessee of B. had applied to A. for a lease of the spot in dispute, in case the decision should be against B., and that he was present when the boundary was staked out by the referee. Taylor v. Parry, 1 M. & G. 604; 1 Scott, N. R. 576.

2. WHAT MATTERS MAY BE REFERRED.

Criminal Matters.]—A party who has preferred an indictment for an assault may submit the adjustment of the reparation to arbitration, as well as the costs. Baker v. Townshend, 1 Moore, 120; 7 Taunt., 422.

Indictment for non-repair of a highway ratione tenuræ, the record being removed into the Queen's Bench was made up for trial, but before a jury was empanelled the prosecutor and defendant agreed upon leaving the question of liability to reference, and they accordingly, by agreement, submitted all matters in difference relative to the indictment to a barrister, who was to have the same powers in all respects as a judge of assize would have had upon the trial; and a verdict was to be entered according to the result of such award, on the application of either party. It was agreed that the submission might be made a rule of court, if the court should so please:—Held, that the agreement was illegal, as referring an indictment to arbitration, and an award having been made, the court refused to order payment of costs, in pursuance of the award, though the submission had been made a rule of court according to the agreement. Reg. v. Blakemore, 14 Q. B. 544.

The matter in difference was not legally a subject of reference, the question as to liability being of public concern:—Per Lord Campbell, C. J. Id.

Two indictments, one for perjury, another for conspiracy, were removed by certiorari. The indictment for perjury came on for trial, when, by the advice of counsel, it was agreed that no evidence should be tendered, a verdict of not guilty taken on both indictments, and that all matters in difference between the prosecutor and defendant should be referred to a barrister; the cost of the indictment, reference and award to be in his discretion. An order of reference was drawn up, and made a rule of court. After several meetings the defendant revoked his submission, and took steps in a Chancery suit, which was one of the matters of difference so referred. On motion to attach him for contempt, or to set aside the verdict on the indictments:—Held, that it would have been illegal to refer an indictment for perjury, or semble for conspiracy, but that the indictments were not referred, and the verdicts of acquittal given on the ground that no evidence was produced, must, at all events, stand; and there was nothing illegal in referring all matters in difference, and at the same time consenting to a verdict of acquittal, unless there was a corrupt agreement to stifle a prosecution, which did not appear to be the fact. Reg. v. Hardy, 14 Q. B. 529; 19 L. J., Q. B. 196; 14 Jur. 649.

Writ of Trial.—On the trial before the sheriff under a writ of trial, a verdict cannot be taken subject to a reference; for the sheriff is bound to try the matter, and cannot delegate his authority. Wilson v. Thorpe, 6 M. & W. 721.

3. THE SUBMISSION.

a. Jurisdiction to stay Proceedings.

- i. In what Cases.
- ii. Practice thereon.

i. In what Cases.

Statute.—By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 11, whenever the parties to any deed or instrument in writing to be after the 24th October, 1854, made or executed, shall agree that any then existing or future differences between them shall be referred to arbitration, and they or any one claiming through or under them shall nevertheless commence an action in respect of the matters so agreed to be referred, the court or a judge on application by the defendant after appearance and before plea, upon being satisfied that no sufficient reason exists why such matters cannot be or ought not to be referred according to the agreement of the parties, and that the defendant was, at the time of bringing the action, and still is, ready and willing to join and concur in all acts necessary and proper for causing such matters to be decided by arbitration, may stay the proceedings on such terms as to costs and otherwise as may seem fit.

Cases of Fraud.—The Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11, providing for a stay of proceedings, and a reference to arbitration by the court where the parties have agreed to refer, is to be construed liberally, so as generally to give effect to such agreements, except in cases of fraud, or where some relief is required to keep matters in statu quo pending the litigation. Willesford v. Watson, 14 L. R., Eq. 572; 42 L. J., Ch. 90; 38 L. T. 428; 20 W. R. 32. Affirmed, 8 L. R., Ch. 473; 42 L. J. Ch. 447; 28 L. T. 428; 21 W. R. 350.

Charge of Fraud—General Principles on which Court acts.—In a case where fraud is charged, the court will in general refuse to send the dispute to arbitration if the party charged with the fraud desires a public inquiry. But where the objection to arbitration is by the party charging the fraud, the court will not necessarily accede to it, and will never do so unless a prima facie case of fraud is proved. Russell v. Russell, 14 Ch. D. 471; 49 L. J., Ch. 268; 42 L. T. 112.

Power to expel Partner—Charges of Fraud—Discretion.—Partnership articles between A. and B. provided that, if the business should not be conducted to the satisfaction of B., he should have power to give notice to A. to determine the partnership; the articles also contained an arbitration clause providing that any differences in relation to the partnership should be referred to arbitration. B. having given notice to A. for the partnership to be determined, A. brought an action against B., alleging various charges of fraud, and claiming that the notice should be declared void, and that B. should be restrained from announcing the dissolution of the partnership, whereupon B. moved that the matters in question should be referred to arbitration:—Held, that the power to give the notice under the articles was exercisable by B. at his own will and pleasure:—Held, also (A. having, in the judgment of the court, failed to establish a prima facie case of fraud), that the matters in question should be referred to arbitration according to the articles. Ib.

— Question similar to Fraud.—M. effected a policy of insurance on his life with the defendant company, which contained a condition to the effect that all disputes should, if the company or the assured or his legal representatives required it, be referred to arbitration in the manner specified in the company's private act (27 & 28 Vict. c. cxxv). By s. 33 of that act the court or a judge is empowered to order a stay of any proceedings contrary to the act. In an action on the policy, in which it appeared that the only issue to be tried was whether the death of M. was caused by accident or by natural causes:—Held, that the defendant company, in the absence of any suggestion of fraud, were entitled to a stay of proceedings under sect. 33, notwithstanding the fact that the issue and the evidence in support of it might bear upon the conduct of M. and of those who attended him, and so might involve a question similar to that of fraud or no fraud. Minife v. Railway Passengers Assurance Company, 44 L. T. 532.

Fraud—Alteration of Circumstances.—By a contract for the sale of seed (paid for on receipt of the shipping documents), warranted, when shipped, of fair merchantable quality, and equal to the fair average, any dispute arising out of the contract should be settled by arbitration, but the contract should not be void on that account. An action having been brought by the buyers to recover damages for the breach of warranty, the declaration alleged that they had sustained damage by having resold and converted a great part of the seed into oil before they discovered or could reasonably discover the breach of warranty; the court stayed the proceedings, there being nothing on the record to shew that any question of fraud could arise, and nothing to shew such an alteration of circumstances as to induce the court to withdraw the matter from the mode of investigation which the parties themselves had selected. Hirach v. Im Thurn. 4 C. B., N. S. 559; 27 L. J., C. P. 254; 4 Jur., N. S. 587.

Case where Receiver would be appointed.—An action may be referred to arbitration and all proceedings therein stayed under the Common Law Procedure Act, notwithstanding a sufficient case be shewn for the appointment of a receiver in the action. Compagnie du Ségol v. Smith, 49 L. T. 527; 32 W. R. 111.

Discretion—Advantage to which party not entitled by law.—A. and B., having brought an action against C. to recover the price of timber delivered under a contract, and C. having brought a cross action, in which he sought to recover damages against A. and B. for breaches by them of the same contract, the actions, and all matters in difference between the parties, were referred. Before anything was done under the reference A. and B. became bankrupt, and their assignees brought a fresh action against C. for the timber. Upon motion to stay the proceedings in the last-mentioned action:—Held, that assuming the 11th section of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, to apply to such a case (which the court inclined to think it did not), it was not one in which the court would, in the exercise of its discretion, interfere, inasmuch as by so doing, the court would be giving C. an advantage to which the law did not entitle him. Pennell v. Walker, 18 C. B. 651; 26 L. J., C. P. 9.

— Limited Time for Referring.—Where the time for referring differences to arbitration had expired, except as to an isolated dispute arising in the course of the other differences, the court refused to direct a difference. Young v. Buckett, 51 L. J., Ch. 504; 46 L. T. 266; 30 W. R. 511.

— How Exercised.—Where a mining lease contained a clause for referring to arbitration all questions to arise between lessor and lessee relative to or concerning the indenture, or any covenant, clause, matter or thing therein contained, upon the request in writing of either party; and after a bill filed by the lessor in equity to compel the lessee to work the mine in a particular manner, notices to refer had been served by the lessee; upon motion to stay proceedings, held, that the case was one which came within 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 11, but that the section gave the court a discretion; and the court in its discretion refused to stay proceedings on the ground that the notices to refer related to other matters besides those the subject of the suit, and that questions arose in the suit which did not come within the clause in the lease. Wheatley v. Westminster Brymbo Coal and Coke Company, 2 Drew. & Sm. 347; 11 Jur. N. S. 232; 11 L. T. 728; 13 W. R. 400.

Where Legal Question arises.—To an application for a stay of proceedings, on the ground that the instrument upon which the action is brought contains a stipulation that "if any difference should arise between the parties, either in principle or detail," the same shall be referred, it is no answer that the difference is one of law, as to the construction of the instrument. Randegger v. Holmes, 1 L. R., C. P. 679.

In 1868, C. was admitted by purchase into partnership with A. and B., a firm of solicitors, for a term of fifteen years. It was provided by the articles that if at any time any dispute or difference of opinion should arise between the partners relative to any clause, matter or thing therein contained, or to the conduct of any of the partners, or upon any other point whatever, the same should be referred to arbitration. On the 17th of June, 1873, A. and B. served C. with notice, alleging that he had committed several breaches of the articles, and in particular had neglected to keep proper accounts and to make proper entries of business, and declaring the partnership dissolved and determined from the date of serving the notice, under a power contained in the articles. C. refused to admit the validity of this notice of dissolution, and told his partners that he should submit the question of the validity of the notice to arbitration. On the 1st of July A. and B. filed a bill for a partnership account on the footing of a dissolution from the time of serving the notice, and on the same day C. served them with notice requiring them to refer to arbitration all questions that had arisen relatively to the notice of dissolution:—Held, that he was entitled to an order staying proceedings in the suit, pursuant to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11, in order that the questions as to the validity of the notice of dissolution might be determined by arbitration. Pleus v. Baker, 16 L. R., Eq. 564; 43 L. J., Ch. 212.

Reference of Matters to Foreign Court.—L. and three other persons, G., N., and F., all British subjects, entered into an agreement, in the Russian language and registered in Russia, to trade in co-partnership in Russia, providing that the head office of the firm should be in St. Petersburg; and reserving to G. and N. the right to recall their capital within a year, and, if not paid within a month, the firm was to be wound up; and also providing that "all disputes, no matter how or where they shall arise, shall be referred to the St. Petersburg commercial court," whose decision shall be final. L. alleged that there was a contemporaneous English agreement, not registered in Russia, by which G. and N. agreed to compensate him in the event of a dissolution within a year, under the powers reserved to them. The two partners exercised their right within the year to recall their capital, and immediately took steps to wind up the partnership in Russia. L. having thereupon commenced an action in England, alleging that the proceedings of his co-partners, the defendants, were taken without his knowledge and sanction, and were invalid and not binding on him, and claiming a dissolution of the partnership, relief in respect of the English agreement, the appointment of a receiver and other relief, they moved for a stay of proceedings in the action and a reference to the St. Petersburg commercial court:—Held, that an agreement to refer all disputes to a foreign court is within s. 11 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, and that the defendants were entitled to an order on their motion; and that, although the court had jurisdiction to appoint a receiver pending a reference to arbitration, it was not proper to do so except under special circumstances, as the course of litigation before the tribunal chosen by the parties themselves would thereby be interfered with. Law v. Garrett, 8 Ch. D. 26; 38 L. T. 3; 26 W. R. 426. Affirming 37 L. T. 602.

Whether whole Agreement must be in One Document.—The statute does not give the court power to stay proceedings in an action upon a deed or an instrument, unless the deed or instrument contains an agreement to refer differences, though the parties have made such an agreement in writing subsequently to the differences arising. Blythe v. Lafone, 1 El. & Bl. 435; 28 L. J., Q. B. 164; 5 Jur., N. S. 364. See Mason v. Hadden, 6 C. B., N. S. 526.

An agreement to refer is within sect. 11 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, although contained in a separate instrument from that under which the dispute arose. Randall v. Thompson, 1 Q. B. D. 748; 45 L. J., Q. B. 713; 35 L. T. 193; 24 W. R. 837—C. A.

A farming lease contained an agreement to refer to arbitration all matters in dispute, "touching these presents, or any clause, matter, or thing herein contained, or the construction hereof, or anything to be done under the covenants or agreements herein contained, or any matter in any way connected with these presents, or the operation hereof, or the rights, duties, or liabilities of either party in connection with the premises." By a supplemental deed of even date, which contained no arbitration clause, the lessor released the lessee from the observance of certain of the restrictive covenants in the lease. The assignees of the lessor having brought ejectment for alleged breaches of covenant, the defendant moved for a stay of proceedings and that the matter might be referred:—Held, that the lease and supplemental deed must be read and construed as one instrument, and that, therefore, although the alleged breaches arose under the supplemental deed, the matters in dispute came within the arbitration clause, and would be left to the decision of the arbitrator. Wade-Gery v. Morrison, 37 L. T. 270.

Held, that it was no objection to the application that an arbitrator could not award ejectment; for that the court could give effect, if necessary, to the finding of the arbitrator in that respect. Id.

Arbitration Clause applicable though determined.—An order was made under sect. 11 of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, where it appeared that the parties had gone on dealing under the terms of a former agreement, which contained a clause for reference to arbitration. Hattersley v. Hatton, 3 F. & F. 116.

Articles for a partnership for one year contained an arbitration clause. The partnership was continued beyond the year and ultimately dissolved:—Held, that the arbitration clause was in force, and proceedings in a suit for accounts by one of the partners against the other were stayed under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11. Gillett v. Thornton, 19 L. R., Eq. 599; 44 L. J., Ch. 398; 23 W. R. 437.

Agreement to Refer must subsist.—To support an application for a stay of proceedings under sect. 11, or for an enlargement of time under sect. 15 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, the agreement to refer must at the time of the application be still capable of being carried into effect. Randall v. Thompson, 1 Q. B. D. 748; 45 L. J., Q. B. 713; 35 L. T. 193; 24 W. R. 837—C. A.

The plaintiff bought a cargo of maize from the defendant. The contract contained a clause that if any dispute should arise "the contract not to be void, it being agreed to leave the same to be settled by two London cornfactors, whose decision should be final." The plaintiff having paid 650*l.* on account, afterwards rejected the maize, as not being of the crop and quality contracted for, and sued the defendant to recover the 650*l.* The defendant obtained an order for stay of proceedings under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11:—Held, that the order to stay was properly made. Moffat v. Cornelius, 39 L. T. 102—C. A. Affirming 26 W. R. 914.

Conduct of Applicant.—When a partner proceeded to wind up a partnership concern with the assistance of the Court of Chancery, the defendant moved, pursuant to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1856 (Ireland), s. 14, to stay all proceedings in the case, the parties having agreed to refer the matter to arbitration. It appearing that after the dissolution of the partnership the defendant persisted in carrying on the business, the motion was refused, such conduct of the defendant not coming within the section of the partnership deed which provided that all disputes relating to the partnership business arising between the partners should be referred. Dennehy v. Jolly, 22 W. R. 449.

What Matters in Dispute are within the Agreement.—Articles of partnership between the plaintiff and other persons for performing a contract contained an agreement that any dispute between the partners should be settled by arbitration, but there was no agreement that the submission to arbitration might be made a rule of court. One of the partners became a liquidating debtor, and the defendant was appointed his trustee, and he elected to carry on the contract. The defendant claimed to have purchased the shares of the plaintiff and other partners in the undertaking. The plaintiff brought an action against the defendant asking for an account of the partnership dealings. The main questions at issue were whether the shares of the other partners were purchased on behalf of the plaintiff and defendant or of the defendant alone, and whether the defendant had purchased the share of the plaintiff as well as of the other partners. The defendant moved for an order under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11, staying all proceedings in the action, and referring the matters in question to arbitration, but before the motion was heard the plaintiff revoked the agreement for arbitration:—Held, that the matters in dispute were not within the agreement for arbitration, and the motion was accordingly refused. Piercy v. Young, 14 Ch. D. 200; 42 L. T. 710; 28 W. R. 845—C. A.

The question whether the matters in dispute are within the agreement for arbitration is one which the court will decide, and will not leave to the arbitrator. Id.

In a bill in equity for the dissolution of a partnership at will, carried on upon the terms of an indenture, after the expiration of the period fixed by the indenture, the plaintiff alleged that disputes had arisen between himself and the defendant, his partner, and prayed for a dissolution of the partnership, the realization of the assets, and the appointment of a receiver. The defendant put in a plea, stating that one of the clauses of the indenture provided, that in case any difference should at any time during the partnership, or after the expiration thereof, arise between the partners, the same should be referred to arbitration, and neither of the partners should proceed against the other at law or in equity until the reference had been determined, and that the award should be made a rule of court. The plea was overruled, on the grounds that the clause did not contemplate the entire dissolution of the partnership, which could not be considered as a matter in dispute; that all the bill prayed could be done without any disputes having arisen at all; and that consequently the plea met an immaterial averment in the bill, and that much of what was prayed by the bill was dehors the arbitration clause. Wood v. Robson, 15 W. R. 756.

By a charterparty it was agreed, that "should any dispute arise between the owner and charterer, the matters in dispute shall be referred." The owner having brought an action for freight, and the charterer having preferred a cross claim for damages for the captain's refusal to ship a reasonable amount of cargo, and for general disobedience of orders, and being willing to refer all matters:—

Held, a case for the interference of the court to stay the action. Seligmann v. Le Bouillier, 1 L. R., C. P. 681.

In an action for a wrongful dismissal, on a contract to pay salary, and also to give a share of the profits during a certain time, the contract contained a clause for reference to arbitration of disputes relating to the construction of the deed, or as to the accounts, the contest being as to the right to dismiss for neglect of duty:—Held, that the action was not referable. Smith v. Allen, 3 F. & F. 156.

In an action on a charterparty against a surety for freight, he was not allowed a reference of a claim for compensation for a breach of a warranty of the capacity of the vessel; that being a claim of which the charterer only could take advantage, and not the surety. Dauvt v. Lazard, 27 L. J., Ex. 399.

By an agreement in writing, a ship was chartered at a fixed sum per month. It was provided, that should any difference of opinion arise between the parties to this contract, either in principle or detail, the same should be referred. The charterer claimed from the shipowner damages for a breach of an implied warranty of seaworthiness, and desired to have this claim referred. The shipowner did not comply, and the charterer commenced an action. The hire became due, the shipowner demanded it from the charterer, and, on his refusal, commenced an action against him. The ground of refusal was that the charterer desired to have all matters referred together, whereby he would have the benefit of a set-off. On a rule by the charterer to stay proceedings in the shipowner's action:—Held, that though there was no dispute as to the subject matter of the action itself, viz., the hire, which was admittedly due, the circumstances gave the court jurisdiction; and the court being satisfied, notwithstanding the pendency of the cross action, that the charterer had always been desirous to refer all matters, and that the application was bona fide, and that justice would be done by staying the action, made the rule absolute. Russell v. Pellegrini, 6 El. & Bl. 1020; 26 L. J., Q. B. 75; 3 Jur., N. S. 184.

By a charterparty it was agreed that the charterers should insure the vessel, and that the policies should be delivered to and be the property of the owners; and there was a stipulation that any question or difficulty which might thereafter arise out of the charterparty should be decided by arbitration. An action having been brought by the owners against the charterers for refusing to deliver them the policies, against which action it was admitted that there was no defence:—Held, not a case for a compulsory reference. Lury v. Pearson, 1 C. B., N. S. 639.

By a written agreement the plaintiff undertook to manage a brewery of the defendant for a certain number of years. Before the time expired the defendant dismissed him for some misconduct, and sent circulars to her customers in different counties, announcing his dismissal, and desiring that no further moneys should be paid to him on her account. The plaintiff having brought an action for this as a violation of the agreement:—Held a proper case for staying proceedings. Wickham v. Hardy, 28 L. J., Ex. 215; 5 Jur., N. S. 871.

ii. Practice thereon.

Party to apply—Trustee in Liquidation.]—

Whether the trustee in the liquidation was a party entitled to make the application within the 11th section of the Common Law Procedure Act, quære. Piercy v. Young, 14 Ch. D. 200; 42 L. T. 710; 28 W. R. 843—C. A.

Whether all Parties must Join.—A mining lease contained a clause providing that if any dispute, question or difference should arise between the parties, "touching these presents, or any clause, matter or thing herein contained, or the construction, or the working of the mines, or any compensation or satisfaction to be paid or made, or any other thing to be done under the covenants by the lessees herein contained, or touching the rights, duties and liabilities of either party in connection with the premises," the matter in difference should be referred to two arbitrators or their umpire, pursuant to, and so as in all respects to conform to the provisions in that behalf contained in the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854. The lessors having filed a bill to restrain the lessees from working adjoining mines by means of a shaft sunk on the lessor's land, some of them applied to stay proceedings in the suit, and to refer the matter in difference to arbitration under the above-mentioned clause:—Held, that the subject-matter of the suit was within the arbitration clause, and that it was not necessary for all to join in the application to stay proceedings in the suit. Willesford v. Watson, 14 L. R., Eq. 572; 42 L. J., Ch. 90; 20 W. R. 32. Affirmed on appeal, 8 L. R., Ch. 473; 42 L. J., Ch. 447; 28 L. T. 428; 21 W. R. 350.

Application for, after Appearance and "before Plea or Answer."—The 11th section of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, is imperative in requiring an application to the court to send to arbitration matters which the parties have originally agreed shall be decided by arbitration, to be "after appearance and before plea or answer," in the action in which it is sought to stay proceedings. Where, therefore, after statement of defence delivered, a defendant applied to the court under the section:—Held, that the application was made too late, and that the action must proceed to the hearing. Inquiries as to matters at issue in the action directed to be made before the hearing. West London Dairy Society v. Abbott, 44 L. T. 376; 29 W. R. 584.

Onus of Proof.—By the act regulating an insurance company it was provided that any question arising under any policy should, if either the company or the assured or the representatives of the assured required it, be referred to arbitration under the act, and it was provided that if a policy-holder or his representatives commenced any action a judge might, on the application of the company, "upon being satisfied that no sufficient reason exists why the matter cannot be or ought not to be referred to arbitration," stay proceedings in the action. An action having been commenced by the representatives of a policy-holder to recover the sum assured, the company disputing their liability, the company obtained an order to stay proceedings in the action in order that the dispute might be referred to arbitration:—Held, that the burden lay on the plaintiffs to shew that some sufficient reason existed why the dispute should not be referred to arbitration, and not on the company to shew that no such reason existed, and that as no such reason had been shewn the order to stay proceedings was right. Hodgson v. Railway Passengers Assurance Company, 9 Q. B. D. 188—C. A.

Proceedings stayed with Liberty to apply.—A. and B., on dissolving partnership in 1866, agreed to refer matters in dispute to arbitration. Arbitrators were appointed in 1869, who held their first meeting in May, 1870. A's arbitrator shortly afterwards died, and A. refused to appoint another, but filed a bill to have the partnership wound up in chancery. The time for making the award had been enlarged to 25th March, 1872. On motion by B. to stay proceedings, it was ordered that proceedings should be stayed till further order, with liberty to both parties to apply if no award should be made before the 25th March, 1872. Kitchen v. Turnbull, 20 W. R. 253.

b. Amendment of Orders of Reference.

In what Cases.—The court will amend an order of reference ad nisi prius, made a rule of court, by inserting such omitted matters as are incident to the substance of the agreement between the parties. Erans v. Senior, 5 Taunt. 662.

An order of reference will not be varied upon a suggestion by one party of subsequently discovered matter. Drake v. Brown, 2 C. M. & R. 270.

But the terms of a submission were amended by the erasure of a condition to file no bill in equity, where the bill was essential to the justice of the case. Grimstone v. Bell, 4 Taunt. 254.

Where the christian and surname are transposed by mistake in an order of reference, the court will allow that mistake to be amended. Price v. James, 2 D. P. C. 435.

After Award.—Where an arbitrator awarded a larger sum than that mentioned in the order of reference, and there appeared to be a mistake in the order as to the sum, semble, that the court would amend the order. Annan v. Job, 10 Jur. 926.

Where a rule under the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 3, referring a cause, was silent as to costs, and it appeared that the understanding of the officer of the court and the parties on the drawing up of the rule was, that the costs would abide the event, and the arbitrator awarded in favour of the plaintiff, with costs, the court amended the rule nunc pro tunc, so as to give effect to the intention of the parties when the rule was drawn up. Bell v. Postlethwaite, 5 El. & Bl. 695; 25 L. J., Q. B. 63; 1 Jur., N. S. 1167.

So, where the words "and all matters in difference" were improvidently inserted in an order of reference, under the same sentence, and the arbitrator made his award in favour of the plaintiff, stating that there were no matters in difference but those in the cause, the court, on motion to set aside a fi. fa. issued to enforce the award, amended the order by striking out the words "and all matters in difference." Kendil v. Merrett, 18 C. B. 173; 25 L. J., C. P. 251; 2 Jur., N. S. 523.

Reference by Consent.—The court will not amend an order of reference drawn up by one of the parties thereto, upon affidavits by such party that an error was made by him in copying a document attached by consent to the order of reference. Wynn v. Nicholson, 7 C. B. 819; 6 D. & L. 717; 18 L. J., C. P. 231.

It is not competent to the court to amend an order of reference which has been drawn up "by consent," unless it is made manifest that there has been some omission on the part of its officer, or that by some accident or mistake the order is not in accordance with the intention of the parties, or that some fraud has been practised. Vanderbyl v. McKenna, 3 L. R., C. P. 252.

A consent order was drawn up in a printed form, which contained no power to the arbitrator to amend:—Held, that the order could not be amended by inserting therein a power to amend. Ib.

Practice.—Upon moving for a rule to amend the postea in a cause referred at nisi prius in order to make it conformable to the award for taxing costs, it is not necessary to bring before the court the order of reference, but it is enough to shew the award which recites it; for if there is anything in the order of nisi prius itself inconsistent with what is recited in the award, it is for the other side to shew it. Cooper v. Pegg, 16 C. B. 264.

c. Revocation.

i. By Death.

At Common Law.—At common law the death of a party does not operate as a revocation of a submission where the arbitrator is in the situation of a person appointed by vendor and purchaser to fix the value and price of an estate sold. Calcedonian Railway Company v. Lockhart, 3 Macq. H. L. Cas. 808.

Death before Award.—An arbitrator's power is determined by the death of the parties to the submission, or any one of them. Edmunds v. Cuz, 3 Doug. 406.

At any time before the award. Cooper v. Johnson, 2 B. & A. 394.

But the court will not set aside an award made after the death of one of the parties, where a cause is referred by order of nisi prius. Ib.

So where a verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to an award, and before award made the defendant died:—Held, that a subsequent award of a verdict for the defendant, and judgment thereon, could not be supported. Toussaint v. Hartop, 7 Taunt. 571; 1 Moore, 287; Holt, 335.

So, also, if a juror is withdrawn, and the cause referred, an award made after the defendant's death is bad. Ib.

Where all the matters referred under an order of nisi prius will be embraced in the verdict and judgment, the death of either of the parties before the award is made will not revoke the submission. Bower v. Taylor, cited in Rhodes v. Haigh, 3 D. & R. 610; 2 B. & C. 345.

But it is otherwise if the verdict and judgment will not embrace all the matters referred. Rhodes v. Haigh, 3 D. & R. 608; 2 B. & C. 345.

Where the plaintiff had died before award made, and the arbitrator had enlarged the time after his death:—Held, that an award made afterwards was valid, and binding upon the defendant. Tyler v. Jones, 4 D. & R. 740; 3 B. & C. 144.

One of the parties to an order of reference had died before the award was actually made:—Held, that this did not prevent the arbitrator from proceeding to make his award. Harding v. Wickham, 4 L. T. 738; 9 W. R. 652.

An award against trustees and guardians of an infant tenant for life of the realty, who died before the award was made, is not binding. Bristow v. Binne, 3 D. & R. 184.

Death after Award, but before Judgment.—The death of the defendant after the making of an award, in pursuance of a rule of court, where no verdict or judgment has been entered up, abates the suit, and the court will not enforce the performance of the award by attachment. Maffey v. Godwyn, 1 N. & M. 101; S. C., 1 D. P. C. 538, sub nom. Reg. v. Maffey.

Clause in Agreement, Effect of.—It is best, in entering into a reference, to stipulate that the reference shall not be defeated by the death of one of the parties before award made. Toussaint v. Hartop, 7 Taunt. 571; Moore, 287; Holt, 335.

By order of nisi prius, a cause was referred with liberty for the arbitrator to examine the parties, but the death of either was not to operate as a revocation of the reference. The plaintiff died before he was examined, and before the arbitrator had made his award; whereupon the defendant having revoked his submission, on the ground, as he alleged, of his having lost the opportunity of examining the plaintiff, the court ordered him to pay the costs of a trial occasioned by the termination of the reference. Smith v. Fielder, 10 Bing. 306; 3 M. & Scott, 853; 2 D. P. C. 764.

The death of either of the submitting parties will not determine the authority of the arbitrator, or vacate the subsequent proceedings upon the reference, where the deed or instrument of submission contains a proviso that the submission shall not vacate or expire through the death of either of the parties. Maodougall v. Robertson (in error), 2 Y. & J. 11; 1 M. & P. 147; 4 Bing. 435.

So, where matters in a suit in equity, and all disputes were ordered by the vice-chancellor, with the consent of the attorneys of the parties in the suit, to be referred, and there was a clause that in case any of the parties should happen to die before the award, the reference was not to abate, but the executors and administrators of the parties so dying were to be considered and taken as parties to the order, in like manner as their testator or intestate:—Held, that the death of one of the parties before the award was made did not revoke the authority of the arbitrator, but that the executors were bound by his award made after the death of the testator. Dowse v. Core, 10 Moore, 272; 3 Bing. 20; S. C. (in error) sub nom. Biddle v. Dowse, 9 D. & R. 404; 6 B. & C. 255.

So the authority of an arbitrator under a rule of court, which empowers him to deliver his award to the parties or their executors, does not determine by the death of one of the parties before the award is executed. Clarke v. Crofts, 4 Bing. 143; 12 Moore, 349.

So, where A. and B., partners, referred all matters in difference between them and C.; and if either of the parties should die before the award was made, it was to be delivered to his personal representatives, or such of them as should desire the same. Pending the arbitration B. died. Several meetings were held after his death, and C. protested against the arbitrator's proceeding unless the executor of B. was made a party. An award having been made in favour of A., without B.'s executor having been made a party, the court refused on that ground to set aside the award. Hare, In re, 6 Bing. N. C. 158; 8 D. P. C. 71; 8 Scott, 367.

ii. By Bankruptcy and Insolvency.

Bankruptcy is no revocation of a submission to arbitration. Hemsworth v. Brian, 1 C. B. 131; 2 D. & L. 844; 14 L. J., C. P. 134.

In a submission by an order of nisi prius, in an action between A. and B., it is stipulated that a certain sum of money shall be placed by B. in the hands of C., the arbitrator, to abide the event of the award. B., after placing the sum in the hands of C., becomes bankrupt. The submission is not revoked, nor are the assignees of B. entitled to demand back the money. Taylor v. Marling or Shuttleworth, 2 M. & G. 55; 2 Scott, N. R. 374.

If one of two parties who have submitted disputes to arbitration become bankrupt, if all his interest in the matter in dispute pass to the assignees, the other may revoke the submission without being liable to an action: for the submission was no longer mutual, and therefore not binding. Marsh v. Wood, 9 B. & C. 659; 4 M. & R. 504.

Where a cause was referred by order of nisi prius, and the plaintiff became bankrupt after the reference, but before the award:—Held, to be no revocation of the submission. Andrews v. Palmer, 4 B. & A. 250; S. P., Snook v. Hellyer, 2 Chit. 43.

After traverse of an extent in aid, the prosecutor and defendant agreed to refer the amount of the debt due to the former; and an award was made for payment of money by the defendant to the prosecutor; before which, however, the defendant was discharged under an insolvent act, having inserted this debt in his schedule. The crown being no party to the reference, the award was set aside, and the insolvency held to exonerate the defendant from liability to an attachment for not performing it. Rea v. Bingham, 2 Tyr. 46.

iii. By Marriage.

A submission by a woman is revoked by marriage. McCave v. O'Ferrall, 8 C. & F. 30; S. P. Charnley v. Winstanley, 5 East. 266.

iv. By Act of the Party.

Before 3 & 4 Will. 4.—Where a cause was referred by order of nisi prius, either party had power to revoke the submission, and the court could not vacate the revocation, or compel the party revoking to pay costs to the other party, unless a power to do so was given by the order of reference. Shee v. Cowen, 10 B. & C. 483.

A judge's order directed that a cause should be referred, and that either party wilfully preventing the arbitrator from making an award by affected delay or otherwise, should pay such costs as the court thought reasonable and just:—Held, that such order might be made a rule of court after one of the parties had revoked the authority of the arbitrator. Aston v. George, 2 B. & A. 395; 1 Chit. 204.

Where parties by bond have agreed to submit matters in difference between them to arbitration, and that the submission should be made a rule of court, it was competent to either, even since the 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, to revoke by deed his submission, and notify the same to the arbitrators before the authority was executed. Milne v. Gratrix, 7 East, 608.

Where a cause was referred under a judge's order, and one of the parties, before the award was published, and before the order was made a rule of court, revoked his submission, and the arbitrator made an award notwithstanding such revocation, the court set it aside, although the order had been made a rule of court before any application to set aside the award was made. Clapham v. Higham, 7 Moore, 703; 1 Bing. 87.

So, where a cause was referred to arbitration by an order of nisi prius, and the arbitrator, after a notice of revocation in writing, made an award directing a verdict to be entered for the defendant, the court set aside the award, assuming it to be a nullity. Doe d. Turnbull v. Brown, 8 D. & R. 100; 5 B. & C. 384.

Statute.—By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39, the power and authority of arbitrators or umpires appointed by or in pursuance of any rule of court, or judge's order, or order of nisi prius in any action, or by or in pursuance of any submission to reference containing an agreement that such submission shall be made a rule of court, shall not be revocable by any party to such reference without leave of the court or a judge; and the arbitrators or umpires are to proceed with the reference notwithstanding any such revocation, and to make an award, although the person making such revocation shall not afterwards attend; and the court or judge may from time to time enlarge the time for making the award.

In what Cases Statute Applies.—The statute does not apply to arbitrators appointed in pursuance of a clause in a deed, that all disputes shall be referred to the arbitration of two persons, who are directed to choose an umpire before they proceed, but which umpire has not been appointed. Bright v. Durnell, 4 D. P. C. 756.

Application for Leave to Revoke.—A judge's order for the revocation of the authority of an arbitrator under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39, cannot issue upon an ex parte application. Clarke v. Stoken, 5 D. P. C. 32; 2 Hodges, 1; 2 Bing. N. C. 651; 3 Scott, 90.

In what Cases Leave Given.—To induce the court to permit a party to rescind his submission under the statute, strong grounds must be laid before them. James v. Attwood, 7 Scott, 841.

Where there did not appear to have been any misconduct on the part of the parties or arbitrators, the court refused to direct a submission to be revoked. Woodcroft, In re, 9 D. P. C. 538; 5 Jur. 771.

All matters in difference in a cause were referred by order of nisi prius, the arbitrator to have power to reserve points of law for the court; the evidence tendered at the arbitration was objected to by the defendant on several grounds. The arbitrator considered the objections valid, but received the evidence, undertaking to raise the question of its admissibility on his award, but declining to pledge himself to state all the objections. The defendant applied for leave to revoke his submission on the ground that the evidence had been improperly admitted, and that by its admission the arbitration would be much protracted and the expense increased:—Held, no ground for leave to revoke the submission under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39, although the admissibility of the evidence appeared to the court very doubtful. Scott v. Vansandau, 1 Q. B. 102; 4 P. & D. 725.

A writ was issued, and by consent an order was made referring "the claims of the plaintiff in the action." The plaintiff made other claims, and the arbitrator decided on them, although the defendants objected:—Held, that if the matter in dispute were not within the jurisdiction of the arbitrator, the defendant should have applied to the court to revoke the submission. Purcell v. Eastern Counties Ry. Co., 2 Ex. 344; 6 D. & L. 54; 17 L. J., Ex. 297.

An arbitrator having erroneously refused to require the plaintiff to produce his books, the court, upon application before award, ordered that the arbitrator's authority should be revoked, unless the plaintiff allowed the defendant to open and look at the books. Hart v. Duke, 32 L. J., Q. B. 55; 9 Jur., N. S. 119; 11 W. R. 75.

An action and a chancery suit were, with the consent of the parties to the action, referred at nisi prius. One of the parties to the chancery suit was not a party to the action, but nothing was said when the suit was referred as to obtaining his consent to the reference. His refusal afterwards to concur therein, held to be no reason for rescinding the reference, as the award might dispose of the action and the suit also, so far as concerned the parties to the reference, who were bound by their submission. Wilson v. Morrell, 15 C. B. 720; 3 C. L. R. 333; 1 Jur., N. S. 310.

When Submission may be Revoked without Leave.—The 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, and the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, apply to references of civil proceedings only. When criminal matters, therefore, are referred, the submission is revocable at common law. Rees v. Bardell, 5 A. & E. 619; 2 H. & W. 401; 1 N. & P. 74.

And without the leave of the court or a judge. Rees v. Skillicee, 2 D. P. C. 238.

By a deed between P., the plaintiff, and the defendant, P. covenanted with the plaintiff that he would commence and forthwith build and finish a gas-holder tank, and that the work should be completed on or before the 30th June, 1853, or in default P. should forfeit to the plaintiff 50*l.*, and 20*s.* for every day the completion should be delayed beyond the time; and the defendant, as P.'s surety, covenanted with the plaintiff that P. should perform the covenants on his part, which should be subsisting, and in default, that the defendant would pay to the plaintiff such sums as E., or other the engineer for the time being of the plaintiff, should adjudge to be proper to be paid for such default. In an action for not finishing the work on the 30th June, 1853, and for not paying the amount which E. had adjudged proper to be paid to the plaintiff for the default of P. in performing the covenant:—Held, that the adjudication of E. was not in the nature of an award by an arbitrator, and that therefore his power to adjudicate could not be revoked by any of the parties to the deed. Northampton Gaslight Company v. Parnell, 15 C. B. 630; 3 C. L. R. 409; 24 L. J., C. P. 60; 1 Jur., N. S. 211.

A plaintiff agreed with the defendant to empty a millpool for 5*d.* a cubic yard of mud, the admeasurement of the mud removed to be settled by N., and if any dispute arose, the dispute to be referred to N., to be by him decided:—Held, that although the former part of the agreement was not revocable, the latter part was revocable. Mills v. Bayley, 2 H. & C. 86; 32 L. J., Ex. 179; 9 Jur., N. S. 499; 8 L. T. 392; 11 W. R. 598.

An agreement not under seal, for submission of the matters therein mentioned to arbitration, did not provide that it should be made a rule of any court of record; nor did it contain words purporting that the parties to it intended that it should not be made such. It was, however, unusual in its terms, and created certain trusts of the property directed to be sold by order of the arbitrators. Pending the reference under the submission, one of the parties to it, by a deed poll under his hand and seal, revoked the agreement for the submission. A motion by the other party to the agreement to make it, notwithstanding such revocation, an order of court, was refused with costs. Drury, In re, 38 L. J. Ch. 278; 19 L. T. 763.

The power to revoke without the leave of a court a submission to arbitration, which does not contain a consent clause for making the submission a rule of court, is not affected by the C. L. P. Act, 1854. Thomson v. Anderson, 9 L. R., Eq. 523; 39 L. J., Ch. 468; 22 L. T. 570; 18 W. R. 445.

A. and B., having dissolved partnership, signed an agreement by which, after stating that B. had offered A. 18,000*l.* for the purchase of his interest in the partnership business and assets, and that A. had declined the offer, but was willing to accept 20,000*l.*, they agreed to leave it to a referee to say what sum should be paid by B. to A.:—Held, that the agreement was revocable by either party at any time before the award was made. Id.

A submission, which is not made in any action, and does not contain an agreement that it shall be made a rule of court, is revocable by either party at pleasure before an award is made, although such submission has been made a rule of court pursuant to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 17. Rouse, In re, 6 L. R., C. P. 312; 40 L. J., C. P. 145; 23 L. T. 865; 19 W. R. 438.

An existing dispute was referred to arbitration. One of the parties, no award having been made, revoked his submission and brought an action:—Held, that by the revocation the agreement to refer was at an end, and that sect. 11 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125), did not apply. Randall v. Thompson, 1 Q. B. D. 748; 45 L. J., Q. B. 713; 35 L. T. 193; 24 W. R. 837.—C. A. Compare Moffat v. Cornelius, 39 L. T. 102.—C. A.

Although a particular submission to arbitration may be revoked, a general agreement to refer to arbitration cannot be revoked by one of the parties. Piercy v. Young, 14 Ch. D. 200;

42 L. T. 710; 28 W. R. 845—C. A.; S. P., Christie v. Noble, 14 Ch. D. 203 (*), W. N. 1880, 71.

v. Action for Revoking Submission or not Appointing Arbitrator.

When maintainable.—A submission by deed may be revoked by deed and notice of revocation before award made; but the arbitrators are right in afterwards proceeding to award, because the party continuing in submission is entitled to his action for damages on non-performance of the covenant to abide by the award. King v. Joseph, 5 Taunt. 452.

So, if bound in a penalty, the penalty is not avoided by the revocation. Ib.

A revocation of a submission not under seal, before award made, is in effect a breach of an agreement to stand to, obey, abide, and perform an award, for which an action will lie. Brown v. Turner, M'Clel. & Y. 464; 1 C. & P. 651.

A declaration for such breach may state that the defendant undertook to perform the agreement, and not to revoke the submission, and lay the revocation as a breach. Ib.

An action will lie on an agreement, when the parties bound themselves in a penalty "for the true and faithful observance and performance of the award which should be made," where one party revoked his submission before an award was made. Warburton v. Storer, 6 D. & R. 213; 4 B. & C. 103.

Refusing to Nominate Arbitrator.—Semble, that no action can be maintained, for refusing to nominate an arbitrator, in pursuance of a covenant to refer matters. Tattersall v. Groot, 2 B. & P. 131.

By a lease of quarries for a term, it was agreed that, in case any difference should arise during the term as to the amount of rent, it should be fixed by arbitration; and the lessee covenanted that he would appoint an arbitrator; differences as to the amount of the rent having arisen between the lessor and lessee, which had not terminated at the death of the latter, and the defendant having become his personal representative and entered into possession, and having failed, though requested, to appoint an arbitrator:—Held, that an action for breach of the covenant was sustainable against him sued as assignee. Donegal (Marquis) v. Verner, 6 Ir. R. C. L. 504.

d. Making Submission a Rule of Court.

i. In what Cases.

Under 9 & 10 Will. 3].—By 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, s. 1, merchants, traders, and others, desiring to end any controversy, suit, or quarrel, for which there is no other remedy but by personal action or suit in equity, may, by arbitration, agree that their submission of their suit to the award or umpirage of any person shall be made a rule of any of his majesty's courts of record, and insert the agreement in the submission, which may, on affidavit of the witnesses thereto, or any one of them, be made a rule of court, and enforced by the usual means.

The act was made to put submissions, where no cause was depending, upon the same footing as where there was, and is only declaratory of what the law was before in the latter cases. Lucas v. Wilson, 2 Burr. 701.

Where the plaintiff's attorney, having received a sum of money from the defendant for the plaintiff in the progress of a cause, entered into an agreement to secure it to the latter, in which was contained a proviso that the agreement should be made a rule of court:—Held, that the court had not authority to direct it to be done, as the 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, was confined to cases of submission to arbitration, and the plaintiff's attorney was no party to the original suit; and that therefore the plaintiff's only remedy was by action for the breach of the agreement. Steers v. Harrop, 7 Moore, 466; 1 Bing. 133.

But a judge's order for referring a cause may be made a rule of court, though the defendant gave no authority to his attorney to consent to its being made a rule of court. Paull v. Paull, 2 D. P. C. 340; 2 C. & M. 235; 4 Tyr. 72.

The courts have jurisdiction, though the submission is to make the award, instead of the submission, a rule of court. Pedley v. Westmacott, 3 East, 603.

So, where a submission contained an agreement that the award, instead of the submission, might be made a rule of court, which was done; the court refused to set aside the rule, holding that they had jurisdiction under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15. Storey, Ex parte, 7 A. & E. 602; 2 N. & P. 667; 2 Jur. 46.

So also a submission may be made a rule of court, where the bond, made between the trustee of a wife and her husband, recited that a suit for a separation had been instituted between the husband and wife, and that, in order to put an end to any contest about the terms of separation, it had been agreed that all matters should be referred to S., and either of the parties should be "at liberty to apply to the court" to make the award a rule of court. Soilleux v. Herbet, 2 B. & P. 444.

The court will not make a submission to an award a rule of court, where part of the matter agreed to be referred has been made the subject of an indictment. Watson v. McCullum, 8 T. R. 520.

A deed contained a covenant, that if any question should arise between the parties touching certain payments by instalments, which it was agreed that one should make to the other, it should be referred to P. to arbitrate, determine and award between them; and the parties covenanted that they would stand to and obey the award, so as it should be made before a day certain, but that it should be lawful for the arbitrator to enlarge the time, so as the period to which the time should be so enlarged should not exceed another day specified; and that special submission should be made a rule of court. The arbitrator enlarged the time so far as he had power, and then an order was procured from a judge enlarging the time beyond the last day named in the deed; and the arbitrator, within the time specified in the order, but after the last day named in the indenture, made his award. Upon objection that the judge had no power, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, to make the order, because that statute applies only to submissions capable of being made rules of court under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, and that the covenants were not a submission within the latter statute, because they were a submission of prospective disputes:—Held, that the covenants amounted to a submission, and that there was nothing in that statute to prevent a submission in writing from being made a rule of court, merely because it is a submission of prospective disputes. Parkes v. Smith, 15 Q. B. 297; 19 L. J., Q. B. 405; 14 Jur. 761.

It is no objection to making a submission a rule of court, that all the proceedings taken under it are null and void. Anon., 10 Jur. 525.

Under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 17.—By this section, every agreement or submission to arbitration by consent, whether by deed or instrument in writing not under seal, may be made a rule of any one of the superior courts of law or equity, on the application of any party thereto, unless the agreement or submission contain words purporting that the parties intend that it should not be made a rule of court, and if in the agreement or submission it is provided that the same may be made a rule of one in particular of such courts, it may be made a rule of that court only, and if when there is no such provision, a case is stated for the opinion of the court, and the court is specified in the award, and the document authorizing the reference has not, before the award is published, been made a rule of court, such document may be made a rule only of the court specified in the award; and where the document authorizing the reference is or has been made a rule or order of any one of such courts, no other of such courts shall have any jurisdiction to entertain any motion respecting the arbitration or award.

Submission must be in writing.—A parol reference, although in pursuance of a general written agreement to refer, cannot be made a rule of court under this provision. Glaysker, In re, 3 H. & C. 442; 34 L. J., Ex. 41; 10 Jur. N. S., 1208; 11 L. T. 638; 13 W. R. 165.

By an agreement for the transfer of a business, it was stipulated that, "in case any dispute should arise between the parties concerning any matter relating to the business, or the agreement or its construction, such disputes should be referred to such member of the firm of B. & Co. as should be appointed by that firm to undertake the reference, in accordance with and subject to the provisions of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854." Disputes having arisen, B. & Co. appointed a member of their firm to be arbitrator, and he duly made his award:—Held, that there was a sufficient submission in writing to be made a rule of court. Willcox, In re, 1 L. R., C. P. 671.

The court has no authority under the statute to make a parol submission to an award a rule of court. Ansell v. Beans, 7 T. R. 1.

In what Cases.—An order of reference of a cause at nisi prius may be made a rule of court, although it does not contain a clause empowering the parties to that effect. Harrison v. Smith, 1 D. & L. 876; 8 Jur. 560; S. P. Millington v. Claridge, 3 C. B. 609.

Nor can an agreement for a reference not arising out of an action or a suit be made a rule of court. Bradford v. Maningham, 3 F. & F. 88.

Where there was an agreement in a lease that future disputes, if they should arise between the parties, should be referred to the arbitration of two persons, one to be named by each party, and that if either party, after receiving notice in writing from the other of his appointment of an arbitrator, should for seven days neglect to appoint another arbitrator, the arbitrator appointed should act as arbitrator for both parties, and there was a further agreement in the lease that the submission might be made a rule of court:—Held, that, upon an affidavit that disputes had arisen, and that one party had in writing given notice of his appointment of an arbitrator, and that the other had for more than seven days afterwards neglected to appoint another arbitrator, the lease and the written appointment by the one party might be made a rule of court. Newton v. Hetherington, 19 C. B., N. S. 342; 12 L. T. 633; 13 W. R. 863.

By a rule of a corn trade association all disputes arising out of transactions connected with the trade are to be referred to two arbitrators, to be appointed by the parties, or, if they refuse, by the chairman of the association. A broker having entered into a contract for the sale of corn per account of F. pursuant to the rules, F. denied that the broker was his agent, and refused to deliver the corn or appoint an arbitrator. The chairman having appointed arbitrators, and an award having been made:—Held, that the court would not make the award a rule of court unless it was made clearly to appear that the broker was the agent of F. Henshaw & Falk, In re, 12 L. T. 638; 13 W. R. 870.

The lease of a farm contained a clause that if the premises should during the term be sold, the tenant should, if required by the landlord or the owners for the time being, quit at six months' notice, and the tenant and landlord should each appoint a valuer to estimate the compensation to be given to the tenant, and the valuers should, before proceeding to value, name an umpire. The premises having been sold during the term, and notice given to the tenant by deed between the parties, the amount of compensation to be paid to the tenant was referred to A. and B., or such third person as they should by indorsement thereon before proceeding to value appoint. There were clauses empowering the arbitrators to examine the parties, and their witnesses, and requiring the parties to produce books, &c., relating to the matters in difference:—Held, an arbitration within 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 17. Hopper, In re, 8 B. & S. 109; 2 L. R., Q. B. 367; 36 L. J., Q. B. 97; 15 L. T. 566; 15 W. R. 443.

After Revocation.—Where an agreement to refer matters, not under seal, was afterwards duly revoked by deed, the court refused an application to make such agreement a rule of court. Drury, In re, 38 L. J., Ch. 278; 19 L. T. 763.

Words purporting that Rule of Court not Intended.—By a written instrument the plaintiff agreed to build four houses on land of the defendant, the defendant to grant the plaintiff a lease when the houses were completed; the architects for the time being of the defendant were to certify as to the progress of the work, and if there should be any unnecessary delay or unsatisfactory conduct on the part of the builder with regard to the erection of the buildings, or any matter or thing connected therewith ("the fact of such delay or unsatisfactory conduct to be ascertained and decided in writing by the architects, against whose decision there shall be no appeal"), then it should be lawful for the defendant to employ other persons to execute the works and to sell the buildings and lease the land to other persons. On an application to make the agreement a rule of court, under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 17:—Held, that, assuming the agreement to be "an agreement or submission to arbitration" within the section, the clause that there was to be no appeal against the decision of the architects amounted to "words purporting that the parties intended that it should not be made a rule of court." Wadsworth v. Smith, 6 L. R., Q. B. 332; 40 L. J., Q. B. 118; 19 W. R. 797.

Against Will of one Party.—A submission under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 35, may be made a rule of court against the will of the other party. Harper, Ex parte, 18 L. R. Eq. 539; 22 W. R. 942.

ii. Rule of what Court.

Where an order of reference of an inferior court of record, by consent, contained a clause that the order might, at the option of either party, be made a rule of the Court of Queen's Bench, under 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 15:—Held, that as an agreement of reference between the parties, it might be made a rule of court. Harlow v. Winstanley, 1 L. M. & P. 425; 19 L. J., Q. B. 430; 15 Jur. 426.

Where an agreement of reference is to be made a rule in the alternative of one of two courts, and it is made a rule of one, it cannot be made a rule of the other. Wispenny v. Bates, 1 D. P. C. 559; 2 C. & J. 379; 2 Tyr. 466.

A. and B. entered into an agreement in writing to refer a pending suit and all other matters in difference between them. The agreement contained a stipulation for making the submission and the award a rule of court. An award was made accordingly, but no proceeding was taken under the last-mentioned stipulation. B. filed a bill in equity against A. to set aside the award, and to this bill A. demurred. The Lord Chancellor of England, allowing the demurrer, on the ground that the jurisdiction of the court to interfere by bill was excluded by the statute:—Held, that the Court of Chancery is within 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, and that its jurisdiction must therefore be exercised in the mode pointed out by the statute. Heming v. Swinerton, 2 Ph. 19; 16 L. J., Ch. 90; 10 Jur. 907.

Where a cause in the Exchequer has been referred by a judge's order, and it is part of the order that it shall be made a rule of the Queen's Bench, there is no objection to its being so made. Milstead v. Craufield, 9 D. P. C. 124; 1 W. P. C. 10.

iii. Practice thereon.

Application ex parte.—An application for an order to make a submission to arbitration a rule of court should be made ex parte by summons in chambers. Davey and Railway Passengers Assurance Company, In re Arbitration between, 49 L. J., Ch. 568; 43 L. T. 234—C. A.

An order of reference is made a rule of court by a side-bar rule, which is always ex parte. Roberts v. Evans, 6 B. & S. 4.

Whether Stamping Necessary.—An agreement of reference of a cause, in which the costs, reference and award were to abide the event, contained a clause authorizing either party to make it a rule of court. The arbitrator found that the plaintiff was entitled to recover a less sum than 20*l.*:—Held, that it might be made a rule of court without being stamped. Lloyd v. Mansell, 1 L. M. & P. 130; 19 L. J., Q. B. 192.

Enlargements, whether included.—When the object is to set aside an award, the court will make the order of reference a rule of court omitting the enlargements. Gripe v. Wilkie, 20 W. R. 112.

An order of reference, with the enlargements of time for making the award endorsed on the order, may be made a rule of court on an affidavit verifying the handwriting of the arbitrator to the indorsements, and there need not be an affidavit either by the arbitrator or by the attesting witness, if there be one, verifying the times when the enlargements were made. Roberts v. Evans, 6 B. & S. 1; 34 L. J., Q. B. 73.

Signed as Agent for Another.—A submission was signed by A. "for self and H.," A. and H. being co-plaintiffs; the defendant signed below A.'s signature. The arbitrator made his award in favour of the plaintiffs:—Held, that on production of the affidavit shewing that H. had given A. authority to sign for him, or had subsequently ratified his signature, the submission and award might be made a rule of court. Aldington v. Cheshire, 15 C. B., N. S. 375; 9 L. T. 582; 11 W. R. 202.

Signed by one Party.—Under special circumstances, the court will make a submission a rule of court, though such submission has been signed by one party only. Simpson, In re, 17 L. T. 617.

Rule during Vacation.—The submission to arbitration may be made a rule of court in vacation. Taylor, In re, 5 B. & A. 217.

Motion made on Original Submission.—A motion to make a submission a rule of court must be made upon the original submission; therefore, if it is in the possession of the other party, the court will grant a rule calling on him to produce it. Boston (Lord) v. Mesham, 8 D. P. C. 867; 1 W. P. C. 56.

Where an award is made on a submission by order of reference at nisi prius, the order of reference does not belong exclusively to either party, but the party holding it holds it for the benefit of both parties, and is bound to produce it, in order to its being made a rule of court. Bottomley v. Buckley, 4 D. & L. 157.

Where two parts of a submission were executed, on one of which only the arbitrator indorsed the enlargement of the time for making the award, the court compelled the party in whose possession it was to make it a rule of court. Smith, In re, 1 W. W. & H. 314; 8 D. P. C. 130.

Copy of Submission, when Allowed.—Or the court will grant a rule, allowing a verified copy of the submission to be made a rule of court. Midland Railway Company, In re, 11 Jur. 904.

But if one of two parties to an arbitration wishes to make the submission a rule of court, but the submission is in the possession of the other party, who refuses to produce it, he must apply at chambers for an order to produce the submission before moving the court for a rule on a verified copy. Gething v. Fotheringham, 13 W. R. 96; S. P., Bligh v. Cotton or Cottall, 3 N. R. 117; 12 W. R. 102.

An agreement of reference contained a clause for making such agreement a rule of court. The award being published, and a motion about to be made for setting it aside, the party interested in opposing such motion refused to produce the agreement for the purpose of its being made a rule. The court, in the term next after making the award, permitted a copy of the agreement to be made a rule of court. Plews, In re, 6 Q. B. 845.

An order of reference, with the appointment of an umpire, and two enlargements indorsed thereon, having been accidentally destroyed, the court allowed a duplicate of the order, together with copies of the indorsements on the original, verified by affidavit, to be made a rule of court. Parker v. Bach, 17 C. B. 512.

So, where from some misconduct of the arbitrator, the original order of reference cannot be obtained, a duplicate may be made a rule of court. Thomas v. Philby, 2 D. P. C. 145.

Effect of Judicature Acts.—Where a reference to arbitration has been made under an agreement, the submission ought to be made a rule of court, according to the practice of the Common Law Courts before the Judicature Acts. Jones v. Jones, 14 Ch. D. 593; 43 L. T. 76; 29 W. R. 65—C. A. S. C., 41 L. T. 651.

Costs of Application.—A cause was referred by a judge's order by consent, the costs of the action, reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiff two sums of money on a certain day, and that each party should bear his own costs of the action, reference and award. The defendant did not pay the money on the day appointed, and the plaintiff made the order of reference a rule of court, but before any demand the defendant paid the plaintiff the sum awarded:—Held, that it was in the discretion of the court to order the defendant to pay the costs of making the order of reference a rule of court; and as that step had been taken by the plaintiff, without any demand of payment, he was not entitled to the costs. Carter v. Tong Burial Board, 5 H. & N. 523; 29 L. J., Ex. 293.

Motion to make a submission to arbitration an order of court, the order not being required for any present purpose, was refused with costs. Railway Passengers Assurance Company's Act, 1864, In re, Liscombe, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 236.

e. Validity—Condition precedent to Action.

Jurisdiction of Courts not Ousted.—Agreements or covenants, that, in case of disputes between the parties, all matters in difference shall be referred to arbitration, do not oust the courts of law or equity of their jurisdiction. Thompson v. Charnock, 8 T. R. 139; S. P., Mitchell v. Harris, 2 Ves. Jun. 133; Street v. Rigby, 6 Ves. 822.

A deed by which A., as auditor and manager of an estate, engaged himself that he, who was a barrister, should relinquish so much of his practice as was incompatible with the office, and the whole if required by S., the employer. That if S. should revoke the appointment without adequate cause, the adequacy to be determined in like manner, S. should allow A. a retiring pension a year during their joint lives; and that the adequacy of the cause for any revocation or resignation should be determined by a referee; with a proviso for other reference in case of necessity:—Held, first, that the stipulation for reference was not void as ousting the courts of jurisdiction. Louder v. Stamford and Warrington (Earl), 18 Q. B. 425; 21 L. J., Q. B. 371.

Held, secondly, that A., being dismissed wrongfully, might sue for the retiring pension without having first procured the adequacy of the cause to be decided upon by the referee; the sense of the agreement being that the onus of proving the adequacy of the cause to be adjudicated upon should lie upon that party who did an act (whether revocation or resignation) determining the employment. Id.

A. granted a lease of a coal mine to B. for a term of years, at a royalty, and B. covenanted to raise at least 4,000 tons; and it was agreed between the parties that if any difference or question should arise between them touching any covenant or matter expressed in the deed, or its meaning, it should be settled by two arbitrators, to be nominated within two months after the difference arose; with mutual covenants to obey and perform the award, and not to bring any action or suit without first submitting all matters to arbitration:—Held, that, as the agreements and covenants to refer were absolute to oust the jurisdiction of the courts, they were void for that purpose, and could not be pleaded to an action for not raising the tons of coal. Horton v. Sayer, 4 H. & N. 643; 26 L. J., Ex. 28; 5 Jur., N. S. 989; 33 L. T., O. S. 287; 7 W. R. 735; S. P., Lee v. Page, 30 L. J., Ch. 857; 7 Jur., N. S. 768; 9 W. R. 754.

Action on a contract containing a prospective agreement, that if any difference arose, it should be referred; that a difference arose, and a refusal to refer:—Held, that the action lay. Livingston v. Ralli, 5 El. & Bl. 132; 24 L. J., Q. B. 269; 1 Jur., N. S. 594.

The plaintiff, Mrs. H., who was the wife of the defendant, claimed specific performance of an agreement for a separation deed entered into upon the compromise of a suit in the Divorce Court which was instituted by the husband against the wife for a divorce on the ground of adultery. The agreement was signed by both husband and wife after the husband's evidence in support of his case had been heard, and before the wife's defence had been commenced, and was in these terms:—"Petition and answer dismissed. Deed of separation with usual covenants; costs of preparing deed to be borne by Mr. H. Mr. H. to pay Mrs. H. for herself and child or children 150l. a year quarterly, Mrs. H. to maintain the child or children. Mr. H. to pay wife's costs. In case of difference in working out these terms matter to be referred to Mr. W. and Dr. D." (the leading counsel on each side).—Held, that the agreement on the face of it being complete, the arbitration clause could only come into force in case of difference between the parties, and did not oust the jurisdiction of the court to settle the deed itself. Hart v. Hart, 18 Ch. D. 670; 50 L. J., Ch. 697; 45 L. T. 13; 30 W. R. 8.

Condition Precedent—Amount or Dispute first Determined by Arbitrator.—It is a principle of law that parties cannot by contract oust the courts of their jurisdiction; but any person may covenant that no right of action shall accrue till a third person has decided on any difference that may arise between himself and the other party to the covenant. Scott v. Avery, 5 H. L. Cas. 811; 25 L. J., Ex. 303; 2 Jur., N. S. 815. (Judgment of Exchequer Chamber, 8 Ex. 487; 22 L. J., Ex. 287; 17 Jur. 810, affirmed.)

A. effected in a mutual insurance company a policy of insurance on ship, one of the conditions of which was that the sum to be paid to any insurer for loss should, in the first instance, be ascertained by a committee; but if a difference should arise between the insurer and the committee relative to the settling of any loss, or to a claim for average, or any other matter relating to the insurance, the difference was to be referred, in a way pointed out in the conditions; provided always, that no insurer who refused to accept the amount settled by the committee should be entitled to maintain any action or suit in equity on his policy, until the matter had been decided by the arbitrators, and then only for such sum as they should award, and the obtaining of their decision was declared a condition precedent to the maintaining of an action.—Held, that these conditions were lawful, and that (even should the difference relate to other matters than those of mere amount) till an award made, no action was maintainable. Id.

A condition in a contract to refer any question which may arise out of the contract will be, if so stated, a condition precedent to the right to sue on the contract; but unless the condition expressly stipulates that until arbitration had no action shall be brought, its performance is not precedent to the right to sue on the contract. Ruper v. Lendon, 1 El. & El. 825; 28 L. J., Q. B. 260; 5 Jur., N. S. 491; 7 W. R. 441.

Under a covenant that if the covenantor do or omit a certain act, he will pay to the covenantee such damages as a third person shall award, there is (in the absence of fraud) no demand at law or in equity unless the award is made. Scott v. Liverpool Corporation, 3 De G. & J. 334; 28 L. J., Ch. 236; 5 Jur., N. S. 105; 32 L. T., O. S. 265; 7 W. R. 153.

A policy was entered into with a company against bodily injury from any railway accident directly affecting the assured while travelling by a passengers' train. There was a condition, that, in case of difference of opinion as to the amount of compensation payable in any case, the question should be referred to a person to be named by the secretary for the time being of the Master of the Rolls, and all expenses should be subject to the decision of such arbitrator, and the award made on such arbitration was to be taken as a final settlement of the question, and might be made a rule of court.—Held, that a reference, in the manner prescribed, was a condition precedent to bringing an action for an injury within the policy. Braunstein v. Accidental Death Insurance Company, 1 B. & S. 782; 31 L. J., Q. B. 17.

A policy was subject to the following rule:—"All average claims and claims of abandonment shall be adjusted and settled, conformably to the custom of Lloyd's or the Royal Exchange, by a professional average-stater. But should the committee or the assured be dissatisfied by the adjustment, they may refer the same to two professional average-staters, or to two other competent persons, with power to such two persons to appoint an umpire, and the award of such two persons shall be final; and all other cases of dispute, of whatever nature, shall be referred in like manner; but the committee or assured, by mutual consent, may refer all such adjustments or disputes to one person only, whose award shall also be final, and no action shall be brought until the arbitrators have given their decision:—Held, that no action could be maintained on the policy for a total loss until the claim had been adjusted and settled by arbitration, in pursuance of the rule. Tredwen v. Holman, 1 H. & C. 72; 31 L. J., Ex. 389; 8 Jur., N. S. 1080; 10 W. R. 652.

In an action for the price of goods, a plea, that there being a dispute as to their quality and the price, it was agreed, that the buyer should pay to the seller the amount of the price claimed, less the sum in dispute, and should deposit that sum in the hands of a third party as stakeholder, until such dispute should be adjusted, and that he had done so, and was ready to concur in an adjustment, is a good plea. Page v. Meek, 3 B. & S. 259; 32 L. J., Q. B. 4; 7 L. T. 270; 11 W. R. 23.

A contract contained a clause that the engineer for the time being should have power to make such additions to or deductions from the work as he might think proper, and to make such alterations and deviations as he might judge expedient during the progress of the work; and if by reason thereof he should consider it necessary to extend the time for the completion of the work, or otherwise, the time of completion should be deemed to be not extended; and that the value of all such additions, deductions, alterations and deviations, should be ascertained and added to or deducted from the amount of the contract price. That in the event of the contractors failing to complete their work within the specified time, they should pay 5*l.* as liquidated damages for each day between the day specified for completion and the day when the work should be completed and ready for delivery. And if any doubt, dispute or difference should arise concerning the work, or relating to the quantity or quality of the materials employed, or as to any additions, alterations, deductions or deviations made to, in, or from the work, the same should from time to time be referred to and decided by the engineer, whose decision should be final and binding on both parties. The defendant, by directing extra work, rendered the performance of the contract by the contractors within the stipulated time impossible. In an action to recover the amount of extra works:—Held, that the ascertainment of the value of the extra works was a condition precedent to the right of the contractors to maintain their action. Westwood v. Secretary of State for India, 1 N. R. 262; 7 L. T. 736; 11 W. R. 261.

Held, also, that the defendant having by his own act rendered the performance of the contract impossible within the stipulated time, was not entitled to set off the penalties, although there had been no extension of the time for completion by the engineer. Id.

By a policy of insurance a company covenanted to indemnify the assured against loss by fire, "according to the exact tenor of the articles subjoined." One of the articles subjoined was in the following terms:—All persons assured by this corporation are, upon any loss or damage by fire, forthwith to give notice to the office in London, or to the known agents of the corporation, and within fifteen days after such fire deliver in as particular an account of their loss or damage as the nature of the case may admit, and make proof of the same by their oath or affirmation, and that of their domestics or servants, and by their books of accounts and such other proper vouchers as may be required; which loss or damage, after the same shall be adjusted, shall immediately be paid in money by the corporation without any deduction, or they shall at their option forthwith provide or supply the assured with the like quantity and quality of goods with those burnt or damaged by fire, or at the expiration of sixty days after notice of the fire they shall expend in rebuilding or repairing any building damaged or destroyed by fire, the sum assured thereon, under the direction of able and experienced workmen, if the loss and damage shall in their opinion amount thereto. In case any difference shall arise touching any loss or damage, such difference shall be submitted to the judgment and determination of arbitrators indifferently chosen, whose award in writing shall be conclusive and binding on all parties; but if there shall appear any fraud or false swearing, the claimant shall forfeit all benefit of claim:—Held, that the covenant was not an absolute covenant to indemnify with a collateral agreement to refer disputes to arbitration, but was a covenant to pay an amount adjusted between the parties by agreement or arbitration, and, therefore, that the adjustment of the amount was a condition precedent to a right to sue on the covenant in the policy. Elliott v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation, 2 L. R., Ex. 237; 36 L. J., Ex. 129; 16 L. T. 399; 15 W. R. 907.

A. entered into a written contract with M. for the purchase of a cargo of wheat. The contract contained a clause, "should any dispute arise, the contract not to be void, it being agreed by buyers and sellers to leave the same to be settled by two London corn factors, respectively chosen, with power to call in an umpire, whose decision is to be final." A. brought an action to recover his deposit on the ground of misdescription of the subject-matter of the contract, and applied to set aside the nomination of an arbitrator by M. Some imputations of fraud in A.'s conduct were made by M., but were denied by A.:—Held, that the words of the contract were large enough to make these matters of difference, the settlement of which should be enforced by arbitration. Alexander v. Mendl, 22 L. T. 609.

A building contract contained a clause that, in case of difference between the contractor and his employer, the award in writing of the architect in all matters connected with the works, or their execution, or the value of extra work, or reductions, or the meaning of the plans or specifications, should be final and conclusive, so far as the law permitted, and such award should be a condition precedent to any proceeding whatever at law or in equity in respect of any matter or thing which could or might be the subject of such award:—Held, that the architect's award was not a condition precedent to an action by the employer against the contractor for not completing the buildings, and for leaving them unfinished. Mansfield v. Doolin, 4 Ir. R., C. L. 17.

The rules of a marine insurance association provided that disputes should be referred to arbitration:—Held, that the assurer was not bound to submit a legal point to the decision of arbitration before suing in equity. Alexander v. Campbell, 41 L. J., Ch. 478; 27 L. T. 25.

A policy in a mutual insurance society was subject to the following rules:—(1) That the directors should have full power to adjust, settle and decide all claims and determine all disputes between the society and its members, and that their decision should be final, and that no member should be allowed to bring any action for any claim on the society "except as is provided by these presents;" and (2) that in all cases of loss of any vessel the directors should examine into the circumstances and make such decision and regulations thereon as in their judgment the case might require, and that the owner should not prosecute any action without their consent; and (3) that if any member should be dissatisfied with the decision of the directors he should take certain specified steps to obtain a revision thereof, in the first instance by a board of directors or ultimately by a special general meeting, the decision of which last was to be final:—Held, that an action could be maintained on a policy for a total loss though no final decision by a special general meeting had been obtained in accordance with these rules. Edwards v. Aberayron Mutual Ship Insurance Society, 1 Q. B. D. 563; 34 L. T. 457—C. A.; reversing 44 L. J., Q. B. 67; 23 W. R. 304.

A lessee covenanted with the lessor that he would keep such a number only of hares and rabbits as would do no injury to the crops, and that in case he kept such a number as should injure the crops he would pay a fair and reasonable compensation, the amount of such compensation, in case of difference, to be referred to two arbitrators, or an umpire. The lessor having brought an action for breach of covenant, alleging that the lessee had not kept such a number only of hares and rabbits as would do no injury, but had kept such a number as did injure, and had neglected to pay any compensation:—Held, that upon the true construction of the lease the covenant to refer the amount of compensation was a collateral and distinct covenant, and that the action was maintainable, although there had been no arbitration. Dawson v. Fitzgerald (Lord), 1 Ex. D. 257; 45 L. J., Ex. 893; 35 L. T. 220; 24 W. R. 773—C. A. Reversing judgment of the Exchequer, 9 L. R., Ex. 7; 43 L. J., Ex. 19; 29 L. T. 776; 23 W. R. 162.

When a contract has provided that the certificate of the engineer or of an arbitrator shall be a condition precedent to payment, the court does not obtain jurisdiction because of the power to refer to arbitration. Sharpe v. San Paulo Railway Company, 8 L. R., Ch. 597; 29 L. T. 9.

When under an agreement, legislatively confirmed, the parties were bound to settle by arbitration all differences that might arise between them as to the meaning and effect of the agreement, or as to the mode of carrying it out:—Held, that the jurisdiction of the courts was, by this agreement, excluded, and that all disputes arising under it must be settled by arbitration. Caledonian Railway Company v. Greenock and Wemyss Railway Company, 2 L. R., 8c. App. Cas. 347.

The plaintiff bought of the defendant jute of a particular mark, to arrive from Calcutta, the defendant guaranteeing the jute to be of the average quality of that mark as hitherto imported, and promising that if found to be inferior a fair allowance should be made to the plaintiff. The quality, as alleged by the plaintiff, was found to be inferior, and damages were claimed accordingly. The defendant stated in defence that the purchase was subject to a term that in the event of any dispute arising out of the contract, it was to be referred to jute brokers for arbitration, and that any reference to arbitration was to be demanded within fourteen days of final landing of the jute. The defendant alleged that this was a dispute arising out of the contract, and no reference was demanded within the stipulated time:—Held, that this was a good defence to the action. Pompe v. Fuchs, 34 L. T. 800.

A clause which stipulates that all matters in difference which should arise touching the agreement should be submitted to arbitration, and prohibits any action being brought in respect of the matters actually submitted to arbitration, is a collateral and independent agreement, and an award thereunder is not a condition precedent to such action, except as regards such sums as under the agreement are not payable until the amount thereof has been ascertained by such award. Collins v. Locke, 4 App. Cas. 674; 48 L. J., P. C. 68; 41 L. T. 292; 28 W. R. 189.—P.C.

Where by a written agreement a tenant of a furnished house agrees at the expiration of the tenancy to deliver up possession of the house and the furniture in good order, and in the event of loss, damage, or breakage, to make good or pay for the same, the amount of such payment if disputed to be settled by two valuers, the settlement of the amount of the payment by the valuers is a condition precedent to the right of the landlord to bring an action in respect of the dilapidations. Babbage v. Coulburn, 9 Q. B. D. 235; 51 L. J., Q. B. 638; 46 L. T. 283; 30 W. R. 950. Affirmed, 9 Q. B. D. 237, n.; 52 L. J., Q. B. 50; 46 L. T. 794; 30 W. R. 950, n.—C. A.

Dispute between Building Society and Member.—By the rules of a building society incorporated under the Building Societies Act, 1874, it was provided, pursuant to s. 16, sub-s. 9 of the act, that a reference of every matter in dispute between the society and any member of the society should be referred to the arbitration of the registrar of friendly societies. The plaintiff, who was an advanced member of the society and had executed a mortgage for securing his subscriptions and fines in respect of the advance, commenced an action against the society for an account in respect of the mortgage transaction:—Held, that the jurisdiction of the court was ousted, and that the society was entitled to have the dispute referred to arbitration. Wright v. Monarch Investment Building Society (5 Ch. D. 726) approved. Haak v. London Provident Building Society, 23 Ch. D. 103; 52 L. J., Ch. 541; 48 L. T. 247; 31 W. R. 392.—C. A. Affirmed 52 L. J. Ch. 225; 31 W. R. 378.

f. Compulsory References.

Statute.—By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 3, if it be made appear at any time after issuing the writ, to the satisfaction of the court or a judge, upon application of either party, that the matter in dispute consists wholly or in part of matters of mere account which cannot be conveniently tried in the ordinary way, the court or a judge may decide the matter in a summary manner or order the matter, either wholly or in part, to be referred to an arbitrator appointed by the parties, or to an officer of the court [or in country causes to the judge of a county court]—(But by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 74, s. 5, this provision, as to references to a county court judge, is repealed), upon such terms as to costs and otherwise as the court or judge thinks reasonable, and the decision or order of the court or judge, or the award or certificate of the referee, shall be enforceable by the same process as the finding of a jury upon the matter referred.

By sect. 6, if upon the trial of an issue of fact, which the parties have consented to try before a judge, it shall appear to him that questions arising thereon involve matter of account, he may order such account to be referred.

At what period Order made.—A judge at nisi prius has no power to order a compulsory reference of matters of account, since sect. 3 only applies to a reference before trial, and the 6th section to a reference by a judge on a trial without a jury. Robson v. Lees, 6 H. & N. 258; 30 L. J., Ex. 235; 7 Jur., N. S. 244; 4 L. T. 516.

A judge at nisi prius cannot, under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 6, refer a cause after the jury is sworn, for that section only applies where the judge is trying without a jury. Jeffries v. Lovell, 23 L. T. 782; 19 W. R. 408.

A judge compulsorily referred a cause after the jury was sworn, stating that he did so as if sitting in camera:—Held, that he had no power to do so, but he must first discharge the jury, and adjourn the court, before he can be in a position to sit in camera, and refer the cause. Morgan v. Ainslie, 28 L. T. 120.

Jurisdiction of Judge.—Assuming that a judge at nisi prius cannot, merely upon an application by one party, refer a case to arbitration, yet if a judge at chambers has dismissed an order for that object, on the terms of the cause being thus referred, if the judge at nisi prius is of opinion that the cause cannot be disposed of at nisi prius, he may act upon such order, and refer the cause to arbitration without consent. Purdie v. Furness, 4 F. & F. 942.

A judge of the Mayor's Court, and at nisi prius, has no power to order a cause to be compulsorily referred against the will of one of the parties. Morgan v. Ainslie, 28 L. T. 120.

Dispute consisting wholly or in part of Matters of Account.—When it appears that the matter in dispute in an action consists in part only of matters of account, the court or judge may not refer the whole matter compulsorily under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125 (the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854), s. 3. Clew v. Harper, 3 Ex. D. 198; 47 L. J., Ex. 393; 38 L. T. 269; 26 W. R. 364.—C. A.

Therefore, where in an action for breach of covenants in a lease to repair and to leave the premises in substantial repair, the defendant denies the whole of the breaches, thus raising a question as to his liability, the court has no jurisdiction to refer the action compulsorily under the above section. Ib. But see Ward v. Pilley, 5 Q. B. D. 427; 49 L. J., Q. B. 706; 43 L. T. 301; 28 W. R. 937—C. A.

An action may be referred under s. 3 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, although the question in dispute does not consist entirely of matters of mere account. Martin v. Fyfe, 49 L. T. 107; 31 W. R. 840. But in C. A., though not reversed, the matter was referred to an official referee.

The plaintiffs sued the defendant for 7,129,300 cubic feet of gas sold and delivered, during a period of nearly five years, at a price of 2s. 5d. per 1000 cubic feet. The defendant, as to part of the claim, paid money into court, and pleaded, as to the residue, never indebted and payment. He then obtained an order, compulsorily referring the action, on the ground that the matter in dispute was wholly or in part one of mere account, which could not conveniently be tried by a jury. The plaintiffs applied to rescind this order, alleging that they proposed at the trial to attempt to prove that the defendant had been guilty of fraudulent conduct by the secret abstraction of their gas, and that upon this question, which would regulate the damages awarded, they were entitled to the verdict of a jury:—Held, that the nature of the dispute was not altered because the plaintiffs imputed fraud to the defendant in relation to it; that, substantially, the matter was one wholly or in part of mere account, which could not be conveniently tried by a jury, and that, therefore, the order was rightly made. Birmingham and Staffordshire Gas Company v. Ratcliff, 6 L. R., Ex. 224; 40 L. J., Ex. 136; 19 W. R. 776.

When a matter in dispute consists wholly or in part of matters of mere account, the court or a judge has power to order a reference either of the whole or a part only. Browne v. Emerson, 17 C. B. 361; 25 L. J., C. P. 104; 2 Jur., N. S. 190.

In an action on an attorney's bill, there being a dispute as to items, and also a defence on the ground of negligence, and a judge having made an order to refer compulsorily the matter to the master, the court refused to disturb the order, it not having been made to appear on the part of the defendant at chambers that the defence of negligence was so distinct as that it ought to be tried by a jury. Reece v. Chaffers, 1 L. T. 781; 11 W. R. 307.

Charge of Fraud.—The mere fact that some one item in the account may involve a charge of fraud does not oust the jurisdiction of the judge to order that the cause be referred to the master. Imhof v. Sutton, 2 L. R., C. P. 406; 36 L. J., C. P. 130; 15 L. T. 578.

A plaintiff's claim consisted partly of matters of mere account, which could not be conveniently tried by a jury, and partly in respect of commission, which the plaintiff had paid to the defendant for orders for goods, and which the plaintiff sought to recover back, on the ground that such orders were fictitious:—Held, that a judge had jurisdiction to refer the case compulsorily to a master; and the court refused to interfere with the judge's exercise of such jurisdiction. Ib.

VOL. I.

In an action for work done and materials provided, a judge, at the instance of the plaintiff, made a compulsory order of reference. When before the master, the plaintiff, on cross-examination, charged the defendant with having misled and deceived him in respect of a clause of the contract entered into between them. On motion by the defendant for a rule to shew cause why the issue between the parties should not be tried, and on affidavits stating that the defendant would be seriously prejudiced if the question of fact was not tried by a jury, and that a question of law would arise which ought to be reserved, the court refused the rule, on the ground that the question was one within the province of the master to decide. Trickett v. Green, 1 H. & R. 63; 35 L. J., C. P. 69; 11 Jur., N. S. 1037; 13 L. T. 405; 14 W. R. 141.

Defence of Non-Liability.—A plaintiff sued for work and labour as an auctioneer, and before plea the defendant applied for an order to refer the matter to a master upon an affidavit which stated "that the matter in dispute in this action consists of mere matter of account, which cannot be conveniently tried in the ordinary way," which order, though opposed by the plaintiff, was accordingly made. Upon a subsequent application by the plaintiff to set aside such order, upon the ground that an action for work and labour was not within the operation of the C. L. P. Act, 1852, s. 3, and that it would be competent to the defendant to set up a defence of non-liability:—Held, that such action is within the operation of the clause, and that if when before the master the defendant sets up any other matter of defence, then will be the proper time for the plaintiff to apply to rescind the order. Clark v. Ware, 17 L. T. 144.

Matters of Account, what are.—A judge has power to refer an action for dilapidations. Angell v. Felgate, 7 H. & N. 396; 31 L. J., Ex. 41; 5 L. T. 322; 10 W. R. 83; S. P., Pell v. Addison, 2 F. & F. 291.

And when money is paid into court, and the question is only as to the amount of the dilapidations. Cummings or Cummin v. Birkett, 3 H. & N. 156; 27 L. J., Ex. 216; 4 Jur., N. S. 242.

The court refused to refer compulsorily an action upon bills of exchange. Pellatt v. Markwick, 3 C. B., N. S. 760.

After the writ in an action upon a bond to secure 1000*l.* had been served, the defendant wrote a letter, stating that he had paid 430*l.* over and above all interest which he was liable to pay; and that he was ready to pay the balance, 570*l.* After receipt of this, the attorney for the plaintiff delivered a declaration, to which the defendant pleaded payment. When the cause was in the paper for trial a judge's order was given, by consent, for a reference to the master, who afterwards made his allocatur in the plaintiff's favour for 741*l.* 2s. 6d. and costs. The defendant became bankrupt between the receipt of the letter and the allocatur:—Held, that there was no negligence on the part of the attorney in his not applying, after the receipt of the letter, for an order compulsorily to refer the cause. Chapman v. Van Tull, 8 El. & Bl. 396; 27 L. J., Q. B. 1; 3 Jur., N. S. 1126.

Where, in an ejectment against a builder, on a clause of forfeiture in a building contract, an order of nisi prius had been made, under which the buildings were to be sold, and the builder paid the balance due to him out of the proceeds, and he afterwards sued the employers for money had and received, and also for improperly selling, the court declined either to stay this action, or to refer to the master. Orphan Working School (Trustees) v. Henley, 27 L. J., Ex. 426.

Where there was a set-off to an attorney's bill, and the question of retainer might arise on many of the items:—Held, that the cause involved matter of account, which could not be conveniently tried, and therefore that it must be referred. Goodred v Seale, 2 F. & F. 382.

Amendment of Order.—An order, which was opposed by the plaintiff, referred "the cause and all matters in difference;" an award was made in his favour, stating that there were no matters in difference but those in the cause. On a motion to set aside, for irregularity, a fieri facias issued on this award as on a compulsory reference, the court directed the words "and all matters in difference" to be struck out of the order, as having been improvidently inserted. Kendil v. Merrett, 18 C. B. 173; 25 L. J., C. P. 251; 2 Jur., N. S. 523.

Amending Particulars.—When on the application of a plaintiff a compulsory order of reference of an action has been made, the court has power at any time before the award to amend the particulars of demand. Gibbs v. Knightly, 2 H. & N. 34; 26 L. J., Ex. 294; 3 Jur., N. S. 472.

Rescinding Order.—Where, upon a summons, to refer an action to the master as involving mere matters of account, an order to refer it has been assented to on the part of the plaintiff, and it has been arranged that he shall have the carriage of the order so to refer it, he cannot, after some delay, apply to rescind the order on the ground that it is not a matter of account. Rogers v. Kearns, 29 L. J., Ex. 328.

In an action to recover the amount due to the plaintiff for the insertion by him, on the order of the defendant, of certain advertisements, from time to time, in various newspapers, the court made absolute a rule to set aside a compulsory order of reference, it appearing to the court, on an affidavit of the defendant made subsequently to the order, that the amount sued for was admitted, and that the only question was as to the liability of the defendant, as the agent of a third person, in giving the orders for insertion to the plaintiff. Brown v. Girard, 19 L. T., 324.

g. Stamping Agreements of Reference.

By a memorandum between A. and B., it was agreed, that a question of boundary should be referred to some indifferent surveyor residing at a distance. By a further memorandum, written on the same paper, at a subsequent day, it was agreed that the question should be settled by C.:—Held, that the two memorandums constituted one agreement, requiring only one stamp. Taylor v. Parry, 1 M. & G. 604; 1 Scott, N. R. 576.

An agreement of reference of all matters in difference in a cause does not require a stamp when it does not appear that the matter of the agreement is of the value of 20*l.* Lloyd v. Mansell, 19 L. J., Q. B. 192; 1 L. M. & P. 130.

4. THE ARBITRATOR.

a. Appointment.

An agreement between A. and B. contained the following clauses:—"In every case of any difference between the parties or their representatives, whether touching the true intent or construction of this agreement, or of anything therein expressed, or touching anything to be done or omitted in pursuance of this agreement, or as to any of the incidents or consequences thereof, or otherwise relating to the premises, the matter in question shall be referred to arbitration. Every such reference shall be made to two persons, one to be named by each party. If either party, for fourteen days after being requested by the other party to name an arbitrator, fail so to do, then both arbitrators may be named by the party making such request." Differences having arisen, A. appointed an arbitrator, but B. declined to do so on request; whereupon A. appointed a second arbitrator, and they proceeded to hear and dispose of the matter. The appointment of the arbitrators purported to be made by A. and one C. (who was said to be an incumbrancer on A.'s presumed interest under the agreement) severally, and the notice was also given by A. and C.:—Held, that the appointments were not vitiated by the introduction of the name of C. Haddan, In re, 9 C. B., N. S. 683.

Held, also, that it was not necessary in the appointment of the arbitrators to particularise the matters to be arbitrated upon. Id.

Held, also, that the request to B. to appoint an arbitrator was not rendered invalid by its requiring him to notify the appointment to the solicitors who had been acting for A. throughout the matter instead of to A. himself. Id.

A railway company entered into a contract, one of which was that T., "if and so long as he shall continue to be the company's principal engineer," should be the arbitrator as to matters in difference. Afterwards the company was amalgamated by act of parliament with another railway company. Disputes having arisen between the parties to the contract, T. made two awards as to the subject-matter of it:—Held, that he was still the proper person to make the awards. Wansbeck Railway Company v. Trowsdale, 1 L. R., C. P. 269; 12 Jur., N. S. 740.

Official Referee, by Consent.—When a reference had been ordered to an official referee, and the order of reference was drawn up in the form known as the "Long Order," under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125), and the parties with knowledge of the terms of the order appeared before the referee, who gave his award:—Held, that the referee must be taken to have sat as arbitrator by consent, and that his award was binding on the parties, neither of whom could obtain a new trial. Longman v. East, 3 C. P. D. 142; 47 L. J., C. P. 211; 38 L. T. 1; 26 W. R. 183—C. A.

Where Reference Abortive.—Where a verdict was found for a plaintiff for the damages laid in the declaration, subject to the award of an arbitrator, who declined proceeding in the reference, he having been previously consulted by one of the parties in the cause:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to sign judgment and issue execution against the defendant forthwith for the damages found by the jury, unless he consented to refer the damages to another arbitrator. Woolley v. Clarke, 2 D. & R. 158; S. C. nom. Woolley v. Kelly, 1 B. & C. 68.

Where a plaintiff obtained a verdict, subject to a reference, and the arbitrator died before making his award, and the parties agreed that another should be substituted in his stead, and one of them afterwards objected to such substitution, the court refused to interfere, as the death of the arbitrator had the effect of opening the cause, and as execution could not be issued on the verdict on account of such death. Harper v. Abrahams, 4 Moore, 3.

Substitution.—After a submission by deed, an arbitrator may, with the assent of both parties, be substituted in the place of one of the original arbitrators. Tunno, In re, 2 N. & M. 328; 5 B. & Ad. 488.

Statute.—By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 12, if in case of arbitration the document authorising the reference provides that the reference shall be to a single arbitrator, and all the parties do not, after differences have arisen, concur in appointing one, or if the one appointed refuse to act, or become incapable of acting, or die, and the terms of the document do not shew that it was intended that the vacancy should not be supplied, and the parties do not concur in appointing a new one, or if where the parties or two arbitrators are at liberty to appoint an umpire and do not, or if the appointed umpire refuse to act or become incapable of acting or die, and the terms of the document authorising the reference do not shew that it was intended that a vacancy should not be supplied, and they do not appoint one, then any party may serve the remaining parties or arbitrators with a written notice to appoint an arbitrator or umpire as the case may be, and if within seven clear days after service of the notice no arbitrator or umpire is appointed, a judge may, upon the application of the party who serves the notice, appoint an arbitrator or umpire who has the like power to act as if appointed by consent of all parties.

The section applies to references not only made by any document, but also otherwise, as by act of parliament or by parol. Lord, In re, 1 Kay & Johnson, 90; 24 L. J., Ch. 145.

By an agreement between two telegraph companies whose submarine lines were not then constructed, for the exclusive working of their undertakings in conjunction for twenty years, and for payments each to the other of a proportion of their gross receipts in manner therein-after mentioned, it was arranged amongst other things that either party might, after five years, claim to have the agreement, or any of the provisions thereof, modified in matters of detail by arbitration. In case the parties should not agree upon the sole arbitrator, the matter was to be referred to a sole arbitrator to be appointed in accordance with the Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859, and the provisions of that act were to apply to every reference to arbitration under the agreement, and as if the parties to the reference were railway companies. Amongst other things, one of the two companies claimed, after five years, to vary the proportion of gross receipts to be paid by each to the other, and the other company refused to agree to an arbitration. The Board of Trade, upon application, refused to appoint an arbitrator under the Act of 1859:—Held, upon appeal from a master's order appointing an arbitrator, under s. 12 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, that this order was within the jurisdiction of the court given by that section; but that the claim to vary the proportion of gross receipts was not a matter of detail, and that in respect of this modification the order would not be confirmed. Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Company and Western, &c. Telegraph Company, In re Arbitration between, 42 L. T. 234.

Appointment of One, to act alone.—S. 13 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, provides that when the reference is to two arbitrators, one to be appointed by each party, and either party fails to appoint, the other party may, after giving seven clear days' written notice, appoint an arbitrator to act alone.

The provisions of the C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 13, that where the reference is to two arbitrators, and one party fails to appoint, the other party may appoint his arbitrator to act alone, and an award made by such arbitrator shall be binding on both parties, do not apply where the reference is to three arbitrators, one to be appointed by each of the parties thereto, and the third to be chosen by the two so appointed. Gumm v. Hallett, 14 L. R., Eq. 555; 26 L. T. 468.

Upon a sale of lands, one of the conditions of sale was, that "if any mistake was made in the description of the property, or any error appeared in the particulars of sale, such mistake or error should not annul the sale; but in such a case a reasonable compensation or equivalent should be given or taken, such compensation or equivalent to be settled by two referees, one to be appointed by either party, or an umpire."—Held, that the assessment of the compensation by referees was not an arbitration within the meaning of the C. L. P. Act of 1854, s. 13, so as to entitle one party to appoint a sole arbitrator. Bos v. Helsham, 2 L. R., Ex. 72; 36 L. J., Ex. 20; 15 L. T. 481; 15 W. R. 259.

b. Disqualification and Death.

By reason of Interest.—A dispute having arisen as to the result of a horse race, the stewards (who, by the rules of course, were to be the arbitrators of all disputes) decided against a horse against which one of them had made a bet:—Held, that the decision of the stewards was not invalid on the ground of one of them being an interested arbitrator. Ellis v. Hopper, 3 H. & N. 766; 28 L. J., Ex. 1.

Being indebted to party.—The mere fact of an arbitrator being indebted to one of the parties, is not of itself sufficient to set aside an award, though the other party was ignorant of the circumstance, and, as soon as he knew of it, objected to the arbitrator's proceeding. Morgan v. Morgan, 1 D. P. C. 611.

Death.—A contract for sale of land to a railway company provided that certain specified roads should be provided by the company. This original contract was varied by an agreement, which provided that an estimate of the cost of making one of the roads should be made by A., agent of one party, and submitted to B., agent of the other, for approval, and in case of difference the amount settled by C., and that the company should pay the price to the landowner. B. died before A. submitted any estimate. Specific performance of the original contract was decreed at the suit of the landlord. Firth v. Midland Railway Company, 20 L. R., Eq. 100; 44 L. J., Ch. 313; 32 L. T., 219; 23 W. R. 509.

Where a plaintiff obtained a verdict, subject to a reference, and the arbitrator died before making his award, and the parties agreed that another should be substituted in his stead, and one of them afterwards objected to the substitution, the court refused to interfere, as the death of the arbitrator had the effect of opening the case, and as execution could not be issued on the verdict on account of such death. Harper v. Abrahams, 4 Moore, 3.

See now 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 12, supra.

c. Commencement and Duration of Authority.

i. Generally.

Commencement.—S. and K., watermen on the Thames, agreed to row a right away sculler's race according to the recognized rules of boat racing, the decision of the referee to be final. The stakes were deposited with the defendant. In sculling races between professional watermen it is the custom for the competitors to start themselves, but if either should make default in starting, and any question should in consequence arise, it would be in the power of the referee to determine that question. S. and K. attempted unsuccessfully to start, and K. rowed to the referee, who ordered him to tell S. that if he would not start K. must start without him. K. rowed over the course without S., and the referee awarded the race and the stakes to him, without hearing any evidence or taking any steps to ascertain if his order had been communicated to S., and without having any means of acquiring the knowledge of the fact. In an action by S. to recover his deposit, the jury found that the order of the referee was not communicated to him, and that he had not a fair opportunity of starting:—Held, that the jurisdiction of the referee never attached, and therefore his decision was not final, and S. was entitled to recover. Sadler v. Smith, 10 B. & S. 17; 5 L. R., Q. B. 40; 39 L. J. Q. B. 17; 21 L. T. 502; 18 W. R. 148—Ex. Ch.

If the referee had decided that his order was communicated to S., his decision of that fact would have been final. Id.

An arbitrator enters on a reference, not when he accepts the office, or takes upon himself the functions of arbitrator by giving notice of his intention to proceed, but when he enters into the matter of the reference, either with both parties before him, or under a peremptory appointment enabling him to proceed ex parte. Baker v. Stephens, 8 B. & S. 438; 2 L. R., Q. B. 523; 36 L. J., Q. B. 236; 15 W. R. 902.

When Authority expires.—An action having been referred, under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 s. 3, to a master, "with all the powers of certifying of a judge at nisi prius, the costs of the cause and of the reference to be in the discretion of the master," the master made his award in favour of the plaintiff for a sum not exceeding 20*l.* and directed that the costs of the cause and of the reference should be paid by the defendant. After the award had been taken up, the master indorsed on the award a certificate that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in the superior court:—Held, that the certificate was bad, the master being functus officio when it was given. Bedwell v. Wood, 2 Q. B. D. 626; 46 L. J., Q. B. 725; 36 L. T. 213; S. P. Mordue v. Palmer, 6 L. R., Ch. 22; 40 L. J., Ch. 8; 23 L. T. 752; 19 W. R. 86; and see cases post, AWARD, ALTERATION OF.

Sect. 15 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, directs that the award shall be made within three months after the arbitrator has been appointed and entered upon the reference, unless the time has been enlarged by consent of parties or the court or a judge.

Under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 15, an award, whether original or amended, is made in time if made within three months from the holding of the first meeting, for the purpose of considering the matters referred, and in the case of an amended award, the date of the order referring it back, and not the date of the original appointment, is intended. Baker v. Stephens, 8 B. & S. 438; 2 L. R., Q. B. 523; 36 L. J., Q. B. 236; 15 W. R. 902.

ii. Enlargement of Time.

a. By Consent of Parties.

After Expiration.—An enlargement of the time of reference, made subsequently to the time within which the award ought to have been made had expired, but with the consent of all parties, is good. Jones v. Powell, 1 W. W. & H. 60.

Contents and Form of Consent.—An agreement to enlarge the time for making an award must contain a consent that it shall be made a rule of court, otherwise no attachment will be granted for not performing an award made under it. Jenkins v. Law, 8 T. R. 87.

But where parties, by an indorsement in general terms on the bonds of submission to arbitration, agree that the time for making the award shall be enlarged, such agreement virtually includes all the terms of the original submission to which it has reference; amongst others, that the submission for such enlarged time shall be made a rule of court; and, consequently, the party is liable to an attachment for non-performance of an award made within such enlarged time, under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15. Evans v. Thompson, 5 East, 189; 1 Smith, 380.

A declaration on an arbitration bond, averred that, before the time limited had expired, the parties to the bond, by a deed-poll, indorsed on the back of the bond, agreed to give the arbitrators further time to make their award, and that it was accordingly made within the enlarged time, but not performed by the parties against whom it was so made:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action on such declaration, for the recovery of the amount of the penalty contained in the bond. Greig v. Talbot, 3 D. & R. 446; 2 B. & C. 179.

A judge's order enlarging the time for an arbitrator to make his award should shew on the face of it that the time was enlarged with the defendant's consent, before the latter can be attached for not performing the award; but it seems that the defendant's consent may be collected from other circumstances, so as to cure the objection. Halden v. Glasscock, 8 D. & R. 151; 5 B. & C. 390.

Where, in an action on an arbitration bond, in which the time was limited for the arbitrator to make his award, the declaration stated that the time was afterwards, by mutual consent, enlarged:—Held, that no action would lie on the bond to recover the penalty for not performing the award made after the time first limited. Brown v. Goodman, 3 T. R. 592, n.

B. By Arbitrator.

How often.]—When an arbitrator has power to enlarge the time for making his award to any other day, he may enlarge it more than once. Payne v. Deakle, 1 Taunt. 509; S. P., Anon, 2 Chit. 45.

Effect of.]—If an arbitrator has power to enlarge the time for making his award to any other day, the court will expound it to mean to any other days. Barrett v. Parry, 4 Taunt. 658.

Where an arbitrator enlarges the time for making his award until a particular day, the time is to be construed as inclusive of that day. Kerr v. Jeston, 1 D., N. S. 538; 6 Jur. 1110; S. P., In re Higham, 9 D. P. C. 203.

A submission empowered the arbitrator to say, "by his award in writing, ready to be delivered to the parties, or any of them, on or before the 30th day of December next," or on such further and ulterior day as the arbitrator should signify "by a memorandum in writing under his hand, to be indorsed hereon," what was due by the defendant to the plaintiff:—Held, that it sufficiently appeared that the arbitrator had power to enlarge the time for making his award. Kirk v. Unwin, 2 L. M. & P. 519; 6 Ex. 908; 20 L. J., Ex. 345.

Two out of three Arbitrators.]—Where a cause was referred to two arbitrators, with power to them to appoint a third, the award to be made by a day named, or such other day as they or any two of them should appoint, and the two originally named enlarged the time for making the award before they appointed the third:—Held, that this was an invalid enlargement, and that the award made by the three could not be enforced by attachment. Reade v. Dutton, 2 M. & W. 62; 2 Gale, 228.

Form of.]—After the expiration of the time within which, by an order of reference, an award was to be made, an order was obtained to enable the arbitrator to enlarge the time to the 2nd of November, "or such other or ulterior day as the arbitrator should ultimately appoint, and signify in writing under his hand, to be indorsed on the order of reference." The arbitrator, accordingly, enlarged the time till the 2nd of November, and made his award on the 11th of October:—Held, that it was necessary to indorse such enlargement on the order of reference. Davison v.

Gawtlett, 3 M. & G. 550; 4 Scott, N. R. 220; 1 D., N. S. 198.

Mistake in Award.]—Where the time for making an award had been duly enlarged, but, by mistake, appeared in the recital of the award to have been enlarged after the time for doing so had expired:—Held, no ground for refusing to enforce the award. Lloyd, In re, 6 D. & L. 531.

Enlargement lost.]—So, where the enlargement of the time for making an award was lost, the court, upon an affidavit of the loss, the due making of the enlargement, and the making of the award before the expiration of the enlarged time, allowed the order of reference to be made a rule of court. Phillips v. Higgins, 2 L. M. & P. 96.

Rule, Form of.]—A rule nisi for an enlargement, or for remitting the matters back, or for entering judgment after an award, need not, in terms, be drawn up "upon reading the rule of court making the submission in the cause a rule of court," if it sufficiently appears by the affidavits that the submission has been made a rule of court. Brown v. Collyer, 2 L. M. & P. 470; 20 L. J., Q. B. 426; 15 Jur. 881.

Verification of Enlargement.]—An arbitrator, who has enlarged the time for making his award, may be required to verify the enlargement. Roberts v. Evans, 6 B. & S. 1; 34 L. J., Q. B. 7; 11 Jur., N. S. 15; 11 L. T. 336; 13 W. R. 74.

On his refusal to do so, the court will make an order for his examination. Id.

An enlargement of time by an arbitrator for making his award, indorsed thereupon, and purporting to have been made within the time prescribed by the reference, needs not be proved by an affidavit either of the arbitrator or of an attesting witness, but it is sufficient that there is an affidavit verifying the handwriting and signature of the arbitrator. Roberts v. Evans, 34 L. J., Q. B. 73; 11 Jur., N. S. 321; 11 L. T. 625; 13 W. R. 290.

Waiver of irregular or invalid Enlargement.]

—By the terms of a reference, two arbitrators were to appoint an umpire before entering into consideration of the matters in difference, and to make their award before a certain day, or such time as they, or any two of them, should appoint; the arbitrators, before appointing an umpire, enlarged the time, and afterwards held a meeting, at which the parties attended:—Held, that the latter being aware of these facts, and having attended, could not afterwards make any objection on the ground of the enlargement of the time having been made before the appointment of the umpire. Hick, In re, 8 Taunt. 694.

An objection that the time for making an award has not duly been enlarged, is waived by proceeding in the reference with a knowledge of that fact. Lawrence v. Hodgson, 1 Y. & J. 16; S. P., Hallett v. Hallett, 5 M. & W. 25; 7 D. P. C. 389; 2 H. & H. 3; 3 Jur. 727.

By an order of nisi prius a verdict was entered for the plaintiff, subject to the award of an arbitrator. The plaintiff's attorney neglected to deliver the order of reference to the arbitrator until after the time for making the award had expired:—Held, that it was irregular to try the cause a second time without getting rid of the previous verdict, and that such irregularity was not waived by the defendant attending an order for the examination of the plaintiff's witnesses. Hall v. Rouse, 6 D. P. C. 656; 4 M. & W. 24.

If an arbitrator, who has suffered his time to expire, determines to proceed in the reference, notwithstanding an objection taken on that ground by a party to the reference, and the party protests that any award which the arbitrator may make will be therefore void, his continuing to attend and contest the case before the arbitrator, under such protest, does not give the arbitrator authority to make an award. Ringland v. Lowndes, 17 C. B., N. S. 514; 33 L. J., C. P. 337; 10 Jur., N. S., 860; 12 W. R. 1210—Ex. Ch.; S. P., Davies v. Price, 34 L. J., Q. B. 8; 11 L. T. 203; 12 W. R. 1009—Ex. Ch.

A waiver must be an intentional act with knowledge. Where, therefore, there is an agreement to refer to arbitration, and it is agreed that the award shall be made within a specified time, and the award is not made until after the expiration of such time, and one of the parties, in ignorance of that fact, takes it up and pays the charges for it, his doing so will not amount to a waiver of the condition as to time specified in the agreement. Darnley (Earl) v. London, Chatham and Dover Railway Company, 2 L. R., H. L. 43; 36 L. J., Ch. 404; 16 L. T. 217; 15 W. R. 817—H. L.

An award bad, as being made out of time, is not cured by the party impeaching it having attended the first of several meetings after the expiration of the period limited in the order of reference. Such attendances are only good pro tanto, and do not justify the arbitrator in going on when the parties are absent. Nor do they constitute a parol submission to a fresh arbitration. The later meetings take place on the terms of the original submission. Dunstan v. Norton, 13 L. T. 722.

On a compulsory reference it is no objection to entering up judgment on the award, that the award was made more than three months after the arbitrator entered on the reference, though the order of reference names no time, and no written consent for enlarging the time has been given by the parties, if it appears that the parties have, within a month before the making of the award, acted upon the reference as subsisting, such acting estopping them from contending that the circumstances necessary to give jurisdiction to the arbitrator did not exist. Tyerman v. Smith, 6 El. & Bl. 719; 25 L. J., Q. B. 359; 2 Jur., N. S. 860.

γ. By Court or Judge.

Statute.—By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39, where the submission is by or in pursuance of a rule of court, or judge's order, or order of Nisi Prius, in any action, or by or in pursuance of any submission to reference containing an agreement that such submission shall be made a rule of court, the court or a judge may from time to time enlarge the time for making the award.

Effect of Statute.—The power given to the court or a judge by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39, to enlarge the time for an arbitrator to make his award, is general, and is not confined to cases where there has been a revocation of or attempt to revoke the submission. Burley v. Stephens, 1 M. & W. 156; 4 D. P. C. 255, 770; 1 Gale, 374; S. P., Salkeld, In re, 12 A. & E. 767; 4 P. & D. 732; 4 Jur. 1132.

After Time elapsed.—The power of the court to enlarge the time for making an award under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39, extends to cases where the order or rule of court gives the arbitrator himself power to enlarge, but he has refused or neglected to exercise it. Edwards v. Davies, 2 C. L. R. 681; 23 L. J., Q. B. 278; 18 Jur. 448.

The court has power, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39, to enlarge the time for an arbitrator to make his award, where the arbitrator, having power to do so, has allowed the time limited by the submission for making the award to elapse without doing so. Parberry v. Newnham, or Newman v. Parberry, 7 M. & W. 378; 9 D. P. C. 288; 5 Jur. 175; S. P., Leslie v. Richardson, 6 C. B. 378; 6 D. & L. 91; 17 L. J., C. P. 324; 12 Jur. 730.

Effect of Delay.—But where a cause was referred in 1846, after which both parties had delayed proceeding with the reference, and the arbitrator having omitted to enlarge the time for making his award beyond Easter Term, 1850, the court refused to enlarge the time to Michaelmas Term, 1852, the defendant refusing his consent to such enlargement. Andrews v. Eaton, 7 Ex. 221; 21 L. J., Ex. 110; S. P., Lambert v. Hutchinson, 3 Scott, N. R. 221; 2 M. & G. 858.

The court will not enlarge the time for making an award where there has been a long delay (e.g. three years) since the last step was taken upon the award, and such delay is not satisfactorily explained, because the position of the parties may be altered, and they may be unable to produce their witnesses. Doe d. Maynes or Mays v. Cannew or Cannell, 22 L. J., Q. B. 321; 17 Jur. 347.

Though Contrary to Submission.—A covenant that any differences which may thereafter arise between the parties touching the matters of the deed shall be referred; and although the covenant to abide by the award is expressly subjected to the proviso, "so as" the award be made within a given time, with power to the arbitrator to enlarge the time, but "so as" the enlargement shall not extend beyond a day named, yet if the submission can, by the agreement, be made a rule of court, a judge may, before the expiration of the limited period, or of such enlargement, extend the time for making the award to a day later than the last day named in the submission. Parke v. Smith, 15 Q. B. 297; 19 L. J., Q. B. 405; 14 Jur. 761.

By reference of the 8th of April, 1854, arbitrators were to award by the 25th of June, with liberty to enlarge the time, but not to exceed the 31st of August; if they did not award within the time limited for them, the matters were to be determined by an umpire, who was to make his award within two months from his appointment, with liberty to him to enlarge his time, but not exceeding another two months. On the 20th of April the arbitrators appointed an umpire, and in the appointment stated that his duties should commence officially on the 1st of September, and should terminate before the 1st of January. The arbitrators could not agree. The umpire did not enlarge his time, and the 31st of October passed. The court, without deciding as to the validity or effect of the umpire's appointment, granted a rule, enlarging the time of the umpire for making the award until the end of December. Johnson, In re, 24 L. J., Q. B. 63.

After Award.]—The court or a judge has power to enlarge the time after the arbitrator has made his award. Brown v. Cullyer, 2 L. M. & P. 470; 20 L. J., Q. B. 426; 15 Jur. 881.

By a submission which might be made a rule of court, the time for making the award was limited to a day named, or such further day, not exceeding two calendar months from the date of the submission, as the arbitrator might appoint. The arbitration was closed before the day named, and the arbitrator also before the day named enlarged the time for making the award, but to a day later than the two months. The arbitrator made his award within the enlarged time, but after the two months.—Held, that the court or a judge had power afterwards to enlarge the time for making the award under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39. Ward, In re, 32 L. J., Q. B. 53; 11 W. R. 88.

Death of Party.]—By an order of a judge a cause was referred to two arbitrators, and in the event of their disagreeing to an umpire, with power to examine the parties to the suit. The day fixed for making the award was the 20th of April; that period was subsequently enlarged, by consent, to the 10th of October; on the 24th of July the defendant died; on the 17th of October, by an order of a judge, the time limited for the arbitrators to make their award was extended to the 7th of November. The umpire, on the 6th of November, made an award in favour of the plaintiff. On motion made on the last day but two of Michaelmas Term, to set aside the judge's order for enlarging the time:—Held, too late. Bowen v. Williams, 6 D. & L. 235; 3 Ex. 93.

Upon a reference by order of nisi prius, the arbitrator was to make his award on or before the 24th of August, 1852, or such his ulterior day as he might from time to time appoint. The award was to be delivered to the personal representatives of either party who might die. Meetings were held, and there was an adjournment, with a view to an amicable settlement between the parties. The arbitrator inadvertently allowed the 24th of August to pass without enlarging the time, and in June, 1853, the plaintiff died:—Held, that, under the circumstances of the case, the court would not exercise its discretion by ordering the time to be enlarged. Edwards v. Davies, 2 C. L. R. 681; 23 L. J., Q. B. 278; 18 Jur. 448.

On Bankruptcy of Party.]—A. and B., parties in three actions, submitted all matters in dispute between them to arbitration; B. became bankrupt after the arbitration had been entered upon, and before any award had been made by the arbitrator, who had inadvertently allowed the enlarged period, within which the award was to be made, to expire without further enlargement. The assignees of B., without having become parties to the proceedings, moved the court to enlarge the time for making the award:—Held, that the court even if it had the jurisdiction, would not enlarge the time, there being no mutuality between A. and the assignees of B. Gaffney v. Killen, 12 Ir. C. L. R. App. xxv.

Orders for Enlargement.]—An order for enlarging the time for making an award as to matters in difference was intitled in a cause in the Queen's Bench which was at an end:—Held, that the title was mere surplusage, and did not invalidate the order. Oldfield v. Price, 6 C. B., N. S. 539.

Orders of different judges to the number of eleven, enlarging the time for making an award, were made a rule of court by a single rule. Upperton and Tribe, In re, 3 A. & E. 295; 1 H. & W. 280.

17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 15.]—By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 15, a judge is authorized "for good cause, to be stated in the order for enlargement," to enlarge the time for making an award:—Held, that an order is not invalid for omitting to state any cause for making it; and, therefore, if there is no application to set aside such order, and the order is made within the enlarged time, an objection to the award, on the ground of such omission in the order, cannot be sustained. Burdon, In re, 27 L. J., C. P. 250.

The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 15, applies to references by consent, as well as those under a compulsory order. Lord v. Lee, 9 B. & S. 269; 3 L. R., Q. B. 404; 37 L. J., Q. B. 121; 16 W. R. 856.

The plaintiff and defendant agreed in writing, on the 8th August, 1866, to refer all matters in dispute between them to an arbitrator. The agreement did not limit any time for making the award. The arbitrator entered on the reference at once, but did not make his award within three months after. Afterwards a judge made an order, enlarging the time for making the award; and the plaintiff took up the award within the time so enlarged. In an action upon the award:—Held, that the judge had power to make the order, and that its effect was to ratify the act of the arbitrator, and therefore the action was maintainable. Id.

— After Three Months.]—In a reference under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 11, the court or a judge has power to enlarge the time for making the award, although the three months limited for it by s. 15 have expired. Watson v. Bennett or Bennett v. Watson, 5 H. & N. 831; 29 L. J., Ex. 357; 6 Jur., N. S. 637; 8 W. R. 612.

By a submission in writing the award was to be made within a month, or within such further time (not exceeding three months from the date of the submission) as the arbitrator should enlarge the time to. The award not having been made within the three months:—Held, that a judge, in his discretion, had power to enlarge the time under the C. L. P. Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125), s. 15. Denton, In re, Denton v. Strong, 9 L. R., Q. B. 117; 43 L. J., Q. B. 41; 30 L. T. 52; 22 W. R. 316.

d. Privilege as to Disclosing Evidence.

Before Award taken up.]—Arbitrators whose award has not been taken up are privileged from producing as witnesses, on the subpoena of a party to the submission, the submission, the award, or papers obtained by them from experts for their guidance, and from disclosing the contents of the award, or giving evidence as to the discussions which took place during the investigation, whether public or private; but they are bound to produce documents handed to them during the investigation by the party who calls them as witnesses; and any objections to the production of like documents belonging to other parties can be taken only by such parties, and not by the arbitrators. Ponford v. Swaine, Johns. & H. 433.

Arbitrators are also bound to answer whether a particular subject of inquiry was pressed upon them by either party, but not as to the course of discussion and investigation which followed. Ib.

As to Enlargements of Time.]—On motion to discharge a rule for making an order of reference with the enlargements of time indorsed thereon a rule of court, the court, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 46, ordered the arbitrator to appear before the master to be examined as to the time when the enlargements were made. Roberts v. Evans, 6 B. & S. 1; 34 L. J., Q. B. 7; 11 Jur., N. S. 321; 11 L. T. 625; 13 W. R. 290.

Competency of Arbitrator to Explain Award.]

—An arbitrator may be called as a witness in an action to enforce his award. Buccleuch (Duke) v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 5 L. R., H. L. Cas. 418; 41 L. J., Ex. 137; 27 L. T. 1—H. L.

He may be asked questions as to what passed before him, and as to what matters were presented to him for consideration. Ib.

But no questions can be put to him as to what passed in his own mind when exercising his discretionary power on the matters submitted to him. Ib.

The court will admit evidence of an arbitrator in explanation of his award. Dare Valley Railway Company, In re, 6 L. R., Eq. 429; 37 L. J., Ch. 719.

An arbitrator may be properly asked by the court whether he was or was not required to find specifically on the various issues submitted to him; on being asked, the arbitrator may, but is not compelled, to answer. Wilson v. Hinchley, 18 L. T. 695.

— Since Judicature Acts.]—The former law and practice with regard to references to arbitration are not abolished by the Judicature Act, and consequently, where a cause is referred to an arbitrator for decision according to the old practice, the arbitrator cannot be called on to report to the court with regard to the matter referred to him, but his decision is final. Cruikshank v. Floating Swimming Baths Company, 1 C. P. D. 260; 45 L. J., C. P. 684; 34 L. T. 733; 21 W. R. 644.

An order was made that a cause should be referred to the master, and that the subsequent proceedings should be continued and concluded according to the new practice:—Held, that the reference was not merely for report by the master under the new powers given by the Judicature Act, but for decision, and that the master could not be made to report to the court, but his decision was final. Ib.

e. Actions Against.

Liability to be Sued—Valuer or Arbitrator.]—

The plaintiff purchased the goodwill, stock, and effects of a business at a valuation, the amount of which was to be fixed by valuers, one to be appointed on each side for that purpose, and in case of difference by an umpire to be chosen by the valuers. The plaintiff employed the defendant as his valuer, and he and the valuer appointed by the vendor fixed between them the amount of valuation. In an action for negligence in making such valuation, by which the value of the goodwill was fixed too high, the plaintiff applied to administer interrogatories to the defendant to ascertain the basis on which he had agreed with the valuer of the defendant to calculate the valuation:—Held, that the defendant had not acted in the matter as an arbitrator, but as a valuer only, and was therefore liable to his employer for negligence, and the plaintiff accordingly was allowed to administer the interrogatories. Turner v. Goulden, 9 L. R., C. P. 57; 53 L. J., C. P. 60.

A broker made a contract for the seller as follows:—"Oct. 26, 1869. Sold by order and for account of Mr. P., to my principals, Messrs. S. H. & Son, to arrive, 500 tons black Smyrna raisins, 1869 growth, fair average quality in opinion of selling broker, to be delivered here in London at 22s. per cwt. Shipment November or December, 1869."—Held, that the broker was employed as an arbitrator to determine between the parties any difference which might arise as to the quality of the raisins tendered in fulfilment of the contract; and, consequently, that he was not liable to an action for failing to exercise reasonable care and skill in coming to a decision, he having acted bonâ fide, and to the best of his judgment. Pappa v. Rose, 7 L. R., C. P. 32; 41 L. J., C. P. 11; 20 W. R. 62; affirmed on appeal, 7 L. R., C. P. 525; 41 L. J., C. P. 187; 27 L. T. 348; 20 W. R. 784—Ex. Ch.

L., exercising the avocation known among the mercantile community as an average adjuster, was employed by A. and B., under the terms of an agreement, to examine into and decide upon a disputed claim between them as to the salvage and loss of cargo upon a wreck. Having pronounced his decision, with which A. was dissatisfied, he brought an action for damages, imputing that L. had not used due diligence in ascertaining the facts as to the matters submitted to him, and for negligence in the performance of the duty which he had undertaken for reward. To this L. pleaded that he had decided bonâ fide:—Held, that he was, in reference to the question into which he was commissioned by A. and B. to inquire, in the position of an arbitrator, and that as they must be held to have bound themselves to abide by his award, he in the character that had been imposed upon him by the parties was not liable to an action at the suit of either of them. Tharsis Sulphur and Copper Company v. Loftus, 8 L. R., C. P. 1; 42 L. J., C. P. 6; 27 L. T. 549; 21 W. R. 109.

For Recovery of Stakes.]—A. deposited a stake with B., with a view to a race between A. and K., upon the terms "that the race was to be a right-away sculler's race, and the decision of the referee to be final." In such races the start is made by the men themselves; but if they fail to start through default of either, or both, the referee has power to interfere. There was a default in the start, and the referee, who was stationed at some distance from the starting-post, ordered that K. should inform A. that if he did not start, K. was to row over the course without him. K. rowed over the course without having communicated this order to A., or given him any opportunity of starting, and the referee, without inquiry or communication with A., ordered the stakes to be paid to K. An action having been brought by A. to recover his deposit:—Held, that, as the order of the referee was conditional on its being communicated to A., the order not having been communicated, there never was such a start or a race as was contemplated; the referee's jurisdiction to award the stakes, therefore, did not attach, and his decision was not final, and that A. was entitled to recover. Sadler v. Smith, 10 B. & S. 17; 5 L. R., Q. B. 40; 39 L. J., Q. B. 17; 21 L. T. 502; 18 W. R. 148—Ex. Ch.

f. Delegating Authority.

By Arbitrators to one of themselves.]—A cause, and all matters in dispute, were referred to two merchants and a legal arbitrator; the arbitrators met, and two of them agreed, upon the merits, to find in favour of the plaintiff; but the lay arbitrators agreed to leave a point of law, which had arisen, to the decision of the barrister. The legal arbitrator decided that point in favour of the plaintiff, and executed the award at Birmingham, in accordance with his own views. On the next day, the award was executed in London by one of the lay arbitrators, also in favour of the plaintiff:—Held, that the award was bad, as being a decision by one arbitrator pursuant to a power delegated to him by the other arbitrators, they having no authority so to delegate. Little v. Newton, 2 Scott, N. R. 159; 2 M. & G. 351; 9 D. P. C. 437; 5 Jur. 246.

Where there are three arbitrators, one legal and two lay, no principle of law will authorize the laymen in giving up their opinion on any question of law, which may await upon their decision, to the separate and distinct ruling of the legal arbitrator. Ib.

By Consent of Parties.]—Pending a reference, the parties, by a memorandum to which the arbitrator was an assenting party, agreed that a portion of an account in dispute between them should be settled and adjusted by a third person, whose report was to be adopted by the arbitrator as conclusive evidence:—Held, that this was not an improper delegation of authority by the arbitrator. Sharp v. Nowell, 6 C. B. 253.

Part of Matter in Dispute left to be determined by Another.]—An action by one weir proprietor against another for disturbance of a weir, was referred to an arbitrator, who was to have full power to define and for ever set at rest all disputes, quarrels and controversies touching all manner of rights of depths of weirs, and other water privileges. The arbitrator directed that "for the purposes of defining, denoting and perpetuating the limit of the depth," that within one month such durable erections and marks be placed on the land adjoining to the weir, as B. may direct as being the best adapted for so defining, denoting and perpetuating the limit of the depth of fourteen inches:—Held bad, as being a delegation of the discretion vested in him. Johnson v. Latham, 1 L. M. & P. 348; 19 L. J., Q. B. 329.

On a reference of all matters in dispute between G. & M., the umpire directed that the parties should execute mutual releases of all claims and demands whatsoever, and that in case of dispute the form of the releases should be settled by P.:—Held, that the delegation to P. of authority to settle the releases was void. Goddard, In re, 1 L. M. & P. 25; 19 L. J., Q. B. 305.

An arbitrator, on a reference with respect to the right to a house and premises, directed conveyances to be executed by one party to the other, and awarded that, in case of any dispute arising with respect to the form of those conveyances, those disputes should be settled by such counsel or solicitor as he should appoint:—The court set aside the award, on the ground that the arbitrator, by reserving a future power to himself to delegate the authority to determine disputes between the parties, had exceeded his authority, and as this direction could not be separated from the rest of the award. Tandy, In re, 9 D. P. C. 1044; 5 Jur. 726.

Arbitrators were empowered to decide on what terms a building lease held by an individual under a corporation should be renewed. They awarded that the corporation should put the premises in "good tenantable repair, to the satisfaction of M., builder":—Held, that this reference of the repairs to the judgment of a third person was not within the authority of the arbitrators, and made the award bad. Tynlin v. Fordwich (Mayor, &c.), 6 N. & M. 594; 5 A. & E. 147.

Where an arbitrator made his award "subject to the opinion" of another:—Held, that this was a substituted judgment, and the award therefore bad. Ellison v. Bray, 9 L. T. 730.

Expert may be asked his Opinion.]—Under an authority to arbitrators to call in a competent person to assist them in the valuation of the stock of a partnership, it is no objection to their award that they have availed themselves of the assistance of such person in deciding on the partnership accounts. The arbitrators, by adopting in terms the opinion of such person, do not constitute him an umpire, but make his opinions their own; and their award cannot be impeached on that account. Anderson v. Wallace, 3 C. & F. 26.

Where, by the terms of a submission, an arbitrator is allowed the assistance of an accountant, or any other person for a particular purpose, the arbitrator must not delegate his authority to such assistant, or permit him to interfere in any way with the award. Haigh v. Haigh, 31 L. J. Ch. 420; 8 Jur., N. S. 983—L. J.

Various matters in difference being referred to two arbitrators, the parties consented that they might, in case of difficulty, consult a third person, who was named, and the arbitrators did so on one out of the whole number of questions arising in the investigations, and they adopted the opinion which he gave them upon it, without, as far as appeared, exercising any independent opinion on it, and made their award on the whole of the matters referred:—Held, that the award was not thereby invalidated. Whitmore v. Smith, 7 H. & N. 509; 31 L. J., Ex. 107; 8 Jur., N. S. 514; 6 L. T. 618—Ex. Ch.

It is not ultra vires of an arbitrator to remit to an expert. He may consult men of science, or call in a valuer to assist him, unless prohibited by the terms of the submission. Caledonian Railway Company v. Lockhart, 3 Macq. H. L. Cas. 808.

Report of Expert—Further Evidence.]—An arbitrator who, in making his award as to certain disputed questions of account, was to have regard to the principles of taking the accounts shewn in certain accounts prepared by public accountants, submitted the written statements of claims made by either disputant to such accountants for their report thereon, upon receiving which he forthwith made his own award in accordance therewith and in absence of the parties:—Held, that the award must be set aside without prejudice to any question; first, because the report of the accountants must be considered as evidence on which either party had a right to be heard, and that the issue of the award was made with undue haste; and, secondly, because the arbitrator had too far delegated his own authority to the accountants. Eastern Counties Railway Company v. Eastern Union Railway Company, 3 De G., J. & S. 610.

Upon a reference of an action on a builder's bill to the master, he may appoint a surveyor to report as to value, but he must receive the report in the same way as other evidence, and cannot refuse to hear additional evidence tendered by the parties. Gray v. Wilson, 1 L. R., C. P. 50; 35 L. J., C. P. 123; 14 W. R. 584.

Opinion of Counsel.]—The court refused to set aside an award made by two of three arbitrators, upon a suggestion by the third, that the award had been influenced by the opinion of counsel taken by the others upon a case inaccurately stated; the two arbitrators swearing that the case was not inaccurately stated, and that their minds had been made up as to the award before the opinion was taken. In re Hare, 8 Scott, 267.

Legal Adviser.]—A recital in an award, that it had been drawn by a person who, under the terms of the submission, attended the arbitrator as an attorney, does not constitute any improper delegation of authority. Baker v. Cuttlerill, 7 D. & L. 20; 18 L. J., Q. B. 345; 14 Jur. 1120.

It is highly improper, though not per se a ground for setting aside his award, for an arbitrator to employ the attorney of one of the parties to the reference (though his own attorney also) to assist him in framing the award. Underwood, In re, Bedford and Cambridge Railway Company, In re, 11 C. B., N. S. 442; 31 L. J., C. P. 10; 5 L. T. 581; 10 W. R. 106.

Semble, that a lay arbitrator may avail himself of and charge for professional assistance in preparing his award. Galloway v. Keyworth, 15 C. B. 228; 2 C. L. R. 860; 23 L. J., C. P. 218.

The court will not sanction an award which has been made ex parte, one of the parties having withdrawn from the reference in consequence of the arbitrator (a layman) insisting, in spite of his protest, to retain the services of an attorney to assist him at the hearing. Proctor v. Williams, or Williamson, 8 C. B., N. S. 386; 29 L. J., C. P. 157; 6 Jur., N. S. 758; 1 L. T. 372; 8 W. R. 190.

g. Jurisdiction of Court over Arbitrators.

Entering Nonsuit against direction.]—Where a cause has been referred the court cannot interfere to enter a nonsuit against the arbitrator's direction; but the party objecting to the award must move to set it aside. Peters v. Anderson, 1 Marsh. 238; 5 Taunt. 596.

Restrain from acting.]—Semble, that the court has jurisdiction to restrain by injunction an arbitrator from proceeding with a reference, on the ground of corruption. Malmesbury Railway Company v. Budd, 2 Ch. D. 118; 45 L. J., Ch. 271.

An injunction was granted, at the instance of one of the parties to an arbitration, restraining an arbitrator from continuing to act, the court being of opinion that under the circumstances it was not probable that he would faithfully and honestly discharge his duty. Beddow v. Beddow, 9 Ch. D. 89; 47 L. J., Ch. 588; 26 W. R. 570.

The Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 8, has given no power to the High Court to issue an injunction in a case in which no court before that act had power to give any remedy whatever. Therefore the High Court has no jurisdiction to issue an injunction to restrain a party from proceeding with an arbitration in a matter beyond the agreement to refer, although such arbitration proceeding may be futile and vexatious:—Semble, per Brett, L. J., that the Judicature Act, 1873, has dealt only with procedure, and not with jurisdiction at all, and that if no court had power to issue an injunction before that act, the High Court has no such power now. North London Railway Company v. Great Northern Railway Company, 11 Q. B. D. 30; 52 L. J., Q. B. 380; 48 L. T. 695; 31 W. R. 490.—C. A. Reversing, 47 L. T. 383.

The court will not grant a rule to restrain the arbitrator from proceeding when criminal matters are referred to him. Rea v. Bardell, 5 A. & E. 619.

Compelling to Proceed.]—A cause and all matters in difference were referred: the arbitrator to make and publish his award, ready to be delivered to the parties or either of them, "or if they or either of them should be dead before making the award, to their personal representatives" on or before a certain day. Several meetings were held, but one party died before the reference was concluded. The arbitrator refused to proceed as the executrix of the deceased protested:—Held, that the court could not direct the arbitrator to proceed. Lewin v. Ilcbrook, 11 M. & W. 110; 2 D. N. S. 991; 12 L. J., Ex. 267. S. P., Edwards v. Davies, 23 L. J., Q. B. 278; 18 Jur. 448.

Not Private Arbitrators.]—Where a railway act provided that the expenses of altering the gauge of a railway should be borne by several companies in equitable proportions, to be determined in case of difference by the Board of Trade:—Held, that the Board of Trade and commissioners of railways (who succeeded to the functions of the Board) were not in the position of private arbitrators, but had a discretion which the court could not control, and that a bill to set aside their award, on the ground of undue delegation of authority, and the admission of ex parte statements, could not be sustained. Newry and Banishillen Railway Company v. Ulster Railway Company, 8 De G., Mac. & G. 487.

h. Fees and Remuneration.

Jurisdiction of Court.—The court has no general jurisdiction over arbitrators as to the amount of fees charged by them, whether the reference is under a rule of court or not. Dossett v. Gingell, 2 M. & G. 870; 3 Scott, N. R. 179.

Nor over those of an attorney who prepares the award. Id.

Amount.—When a lay arbitrator charged fifty guineas for four meetings, the master declined as between party and party to allow anything in addition (except the stamp duty) for the charges of an attorney for preparing the award, and a rule to review was refused. Galloway v. Keyworth, 15 C. B. 228; 2 C. L. R. 860; 23 L. J., C. P. 218.

Where arbitrators awarded in favour of the plaintiff, who, in order to take up the award, paid their charges, which were exorbitant. The master, on taxation of the plaintiff's costs, refused to allow the full charge paid by him:—Held, that the excessive charge was properly disallowed. Barnes v. Hayward, 1 H. & N. 742; S. P., Webb v. Wyatt, 3 Jur., N. S. 496.

The amount of the fee which an arbitrator awards to be paid to himself for his award, is examinable by the master. Fitzgerald v. Graces, 5 Taunt. 342.

If arbitrators award an excessive sum to be paid to themselves, the court will refer it to the master to reduce it. Miller v. Robe, 3 Taunt. 461. And see Musselbrook v. Dunkin, 2 M. & Scott, 740; 9 Bing. 605; 1 D. P. C. 722.

If a lay arbitrator avails himself of professional assistance, his charges must be reasonable. Galloway v. Keyworth, 15 C. B. 228; 2 C. L. R. 860; 23 L. J., C. P. 218.

Application for Arbitrator to Refund.—A cause being referred, the arbitrator, in 1825, received from the plaintiff's attorney 87l. for his fees and expenses. In 1827, the parties went before the master, when he allowed only 35l. The defendant, after a lapse of eight years from the time the payment was made (the attorney who paid the money having died in the interim) applied to the court to order the arbitrator to refund the difference:—Held, that the application was too late. Brazier v. Bryant, 3 M. & Scott, 844; 2 D. P. C. 757.

Where a party is compelled to pay to a lay arbitrator an exorbitant sum, in order to take up the award, he may maintain an action to recover the excess beyond what is a proper remuneration for the arbitrator's service. Barnes v. Braithwaite, 2 H. & N. 569.

Recovery of Fees.—Where an award is taken up by one party, and all the costs paid to two out of three arbitrators, the third arbitrator has no remedy against either party in the cause. Burroughes v. Clarke, 1 D. P. C. 48.

An action on an implied promise to remunerate an arbitrator cannot be maintained. Virany v. Warne, 4 Esp. 416. See Swinford v. Burn, Gow, 7.

But an arbitrator may maintain an action on an express promise to pay him the costs of a reference. Hoggins v. Gordon, 2 G. & D. 656; 3 Q. B. 467; 11 L. J., Q. B. 286; 6 Jur. 895.

A declaration stated that a cause was referred to A. and B. and such third person as they should appoint, or of any two of them; that A. and B. appointed C., of which the defendant had notice; and that, in consideration that A., B. and C. would take upon themselves the burthen of the reference, the defendant promised to pay them their reasonable costs of the award; that they proceeded and made their award, ordering the defendant to pay them their costs:—Held, that the three arbitrators could sue on this as a joint contract. Id.

Recovery of Moiety from another party.—Where two parties employ an arbitrator, and one pays the arbitrator's fees to enable him to take up the award (there being no event of the award to entitle either party to costs), the party so paying is entitled to recover from the other a moiety of the sum paid, as money paid to his use. Marnack v. Webber, 6 H. & N. 1; 4 L. T. 553.

By articles of agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, certain differences between them were referred, the costs of the reference and the award to be in the discretion of the arbitrators. The award found a sum due from the defendant to the plaintiff, and directed that the costs of the reference and award, including compensation to the arbitrators, should be borne, one moiety thereof by the plaintiff, and the other moiety by the defendant. The plaintiff took up the award, and paid the whole costs:—Held, that he could not recover a moiety thereof as money paid to the defendant's use. Bates v. Townley, 2 Ex. 152; 19 L. J., Ex. 399.

Naming amount in award.—Upon shewing cause against a rule to pay over to one party to a reference the sum awarded, it appearing that the umpire awarded that a specific amount should be paid for his own and the arbitrator's costs, the court, upon the ground that the specific amount of such costs was mentioned in the award, refused to exercise its summary jurisdiction, and discharged the rule. Parkinson, In re, 30 L. J., Q. B. 178; 9 W. R. 340.

It is no ground for setting aside, or sending back, an award, that the arbitrator has fixed the cost of his own award (the amount not being shewn to be excessive), nor that he has said nothing as to the plaintiff's costs, the plain inference being that he meant the plaintiff to pay his own costs. Rose v. Redfern, 10 W. R. 91.

An arbitrator cannot, unless such power is expressly reserved to him by the submission, award to himself a sum (named or otherwise), for his own costs and expenses. Roberts v. Eberhardt, 3 C. B., N. S. 482; 4 Jur. N. S. 898. S. P., Coombs, In re, 4 Ex. 839; Fernley v. Branson, 15 Jur. 354; 20 L. J., Q. B. 178.

1. Stating Case for Opinion of Court.

Statute.—By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 5, it shall be lawful for the arbitrator, upon a compulsory reference, or upon a reference by consent of parties where the submission is or may be made a rule or an order of the superior courts of law or equity, if he shall think fit, and it is not provided to the contrary, state his award as to the whole or any part thereof in the form of a special case for the opinion of the court; and when an action is referred, judgment, if so ordered, may be entered according to the opinion of the court.

Power to state Case.]—The West Kent Sewerage Board is incorporated by a local act of 38 & 39 Vict. c. clxiii., and by sect. 93 it is enacted that, if any difference arises between the board on the one hand and any constituted authority or person on the other hand, or between any two or more constituted authorities, or between any constituted authority and any parish or person, respecting any assessment of a main sewer rate, or any determination of the board, or any controversy or other matter under the act, the same shall by virtue of the act stand referred for decision to the Local Government Board, whose decision thereon and respecting the costs of the reference shall be final and binding. A dispute having arisen between the West Kent Sewerage Board and the Bexley Local Board respecting a claim made by the local board against the sewerage board for compensation for damage done to the highways, &c. of the district, the disputants, with the consent of the Local Government Board, stated a case for the opinion of this court:—Held, that it was not competent to them to do so, the Local Government Board being by sect. 93 constituted the tribunal whose decision on the matter was to be final and binding, and this not being a submission to arbitration within sect. 5 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854. Bexley Local Board v. West Kent Main Sewerage Board, 9 Q. B. D. 518; 51 L. J., Q. B. 456; 47 L. T. 192; 31 W. R. 119; 46 J. P. 519.

The umpire in an arbitration under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, in which each party had appointed an arbitrator, made his award in the form of a special case for the opinion of a superior court:—Held, that he had the power to state a case, the appointment of an arbitrator being, by the terms of s. 25, a submission to arbitration on the part of the party by whom the same is made, and the arbitration being, therefore, an arbitration by consent within the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 5. Rhodes v. Airedale Drainage Commissioners, 1 C. P. D. 402; 45 L. J., C. P. 861; 35 L. T. 46; 24 W. R. 1053—C. A. Reversing 9 L. R., C. P. 508; 43 L. J., C. P. 323; 31 L. T. 59.

Optional not compulsory Power.]—Where a cause is referred, the arbitrator to be at liberty to state any point of law for the opinion of the court, and he declines to do so, the court will not interfere with his discretion. Miller v. Shuttleworth, 7 C. B. 105; S. P., Wood v. Hotham, 5 M. & W. 674.

An action was referred to the master, who was to be at liberty to state any point of law desired by either party, for the opinion of the court. The master gave his certificate in favour of the plaintiff, and declined to submit to the court for its opinion a point of law which was taken by the defendant on the hearing. The defendant having moved to set aside the certificate:—Held, that the clause giving liberty to the master to state a case was not compulsory; and the matter having been fully discussed before the arbitrator, the court would not set aside the certificate or remit the case to the arbitrator. Gibson v. Parker, 5 L. T. 584.

Form of Case.]—When an arbitrator states a special case, involving a question of law, for the adjudication of the court, he ought to set forth such facts as are necessary to enable the court to determine the question of law. Sheridan v. Nagle, 6 Ir. R., C. L. 110.

If it clearly appears, from reading an award, that an arbitrator intended to leave a particular question of law open, the court will consider it, although in terms the arbitrator may in one part of his award have determined it. Sherry v. Oke, 3 D. P. C. 349; 1 H. & W. 119.

An arbitrator, with liberty, if he should think fit, to report specially to the court, set out a long and rambling statement of the evidence, leaving the court to draw inferences of fact; the court expressed a strong opinion, that this was not a due exercise by the arbitrator of the power entrusted to him. Jephson v. Hawkins, 2 Scott, N. R. 605; 2 M. & G. 366.

An arbitrator decided in favour of the plaintiff, and stated facts, ordering that, if the court should differ from him in opinion on considering those facts, a nonsuit should be entered. The court refused to set aside the award, on the ground that he had come to a wrong conclusion, for though they did not concur in it, it did not appear that there was no evidence in support of it. Barrett v. Wilson, 1 C., M. & R. 586; 3 D. P. C. 220; 5 Tyr. 218.

Appeal on Special Case.]—An action was referred, by order of a judge of the Queen's Bench and consent of parties, to the decision of an arbitrator. The order of reference was made before the passing of the Judicature Acts, and contained a clause that "neither the plaintiff nor the defendant shall bring or prosecute any action or suit against the arbitrator, or bring any writ of error, or prefer any bill in equity against each other, of and concerning the matters so as aforesaid referred." The arbitrator made his award after the passing of the Judicature Acts, and, after disposing of other matters in difference between the parties, as to 1,500*l.* claimed by the plaintiff as damages from the defendant, stated a special case for the opinion of the court under s. 5 of the C. L. P. Act, 1854. The Queen's Bench Division ordered that "judgment be entered for the plaintiff on the special case for 1,500*l.* and costs incurred after the date of the award." On the defendant's appeal from that decision, a preliminary objection was taken to the appeal for the plaintiff:—Held, that no appeal would lie, as the terms of the order of reference amounted to an express agreement by the parties that no appeal should be brought. Jones v. Victoria Graving Dock Company, 2 Q. B. D. 314; 46 L. J., Q. B. 219; 36 L. T. 347; 25 W. R. 501—C. A.

A cause and other matters in difference were referred by consent by order of nisi prius. The order contained no clause relating to the statement of a special case by the arbitrator, but it provided that the parties should not bring error against him or each other respecting the matters referred. The arbitrator, at the request of the parties, stated his award, as to the cause only, in form of a special case for the opinion of the court, and the court gave judgment thereon for the defendant:—Held, first, that the plaintiff could not bring error upon this judgment, the opinion of the court on a special case stated under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 5, being merely an ancillary proceeding to the award, which the arbitrator had still to make, not a judgment of the court as a tribunal, as a judgment upon a special case stated instead of a special verdict is. Gumm v. Fowler, 2 El. & El. 890; 29 L. J., Q. B. 189; 6 Jur., N. S. 1093; 2 L. T. 282; 8 W. R. 436.

Held, secondly, that, independently of the statute, the plaintiff was precluded by express agreement from bringing error. Id.

An arbitrator to whom a cause was referred, was required by the order of reference to state a case for the opinion of the court of Exchequer, at the request of either party; he stated a case accordingly, which was heard and decided by the court:—Held, that this decision was not a judgment on which error could be brought. Courtauld v. Legh, 4 L. R., Ex. 187; 38 L. J., Ex. 124.

J. Proceedings before.

i. Hearing Counsel.

It is competent to arbitrators, under the Friendly Societies Act, to decline to hear counsel. In re Macqueen, 9 C. B., N. S. 793.

Semble, that all arbitrators have a like discretion. Id.

On a case being referred, the plaintiff attended before the arbitrator by counsel, without giving the defendant notice of his intention so to do. The defendant requested an adjournment to give him time to instruct counsel; but the plaintiff refused to consent unless the defendant paid the costs of the day. The arbitrator proceeded ex parte, and certified in the favour of the plaintiff. The court stayed the certificate, and referred the matter back to the arbitrator, and disallowed the plaintiff his costs of the day. Whatley v. Morland, 2 C. & M. 347; 2 D. P. C. 249; 4 Tyr. 255.

ii. Amending Pleadings, &c.

An order of reference of a cause by a judge at chambers, expressed to be made by consent, "on the usual terms," confers on the arbitrator the power of amending the pleadings. Thompsett v. Bouyer, 9 C. B., N. S. 284; 30 L. J., C. P. 1; 7 Jur., N. S. 243; 3 L. T. 276; 9 W. R. 35.

In an action against a lead mine company for damage to cattle, the cause was referred at nisi prius to an arbitrator, with power of a judge as to amendment, and the pleadings were withdrawn. At the reference the plaintiff produced particulars of damage amounting to a much greater sum than the claim sent to the defendant before action. Notwithstanding the defendant's objection, the arbitrator received evidence upon the new particulars, and awarded against the defendant:—Held, that as there were no particulars in the action, the arbitrator did only what is continually done at nisi prius, and had not exceeded his jurisdiction. Hammond v. Kirkby, 17 L. T. 147.

iii. Viewing Premises.

On a reference to an arbitrator of an action for work done by a builder, in respect of houses, it is wholly in the discretion of the arbitrator whether he will have a view of the premises. Munday v. Black, 9 C. B., N. S. 557; 30 L. J., C. P. 193; 7 Jur., N. S. 709; 9 W. R. 274.

Where an arbitrator is to take a view previously to entering on the reference, and he takes such view, the non-recital of the view is no objection to his award. Spence v. Eastern Counties Railway Company, 7 D. P. C. 697; 3 Jur. 846.

iv. Accepting Hospitality from Parties.

Effect of.]—Matters in dispute were referred to three arbitrators, one to be chosen by each of the parties, and one by the two so chosen. On several occasions during the arbitration one of the parties provided luncheon at his expense, of which the arbitrator appointed by him and the third arbitrator, as well as his solicitor and one or two other persons, partook in the absence of the other party (who would not sit at the same table as his adversary) and of his arbitrator:—Held, that, inasmuch as it was not shewn that the parties were influenced by corrupt motives, or were affected by the luncheons, the award could not be set aside on the ground of the luncheons. Moseley v. Simpson, 16 L. R., Eq. 226; 42 L. J., Ch. 739; 28 L. T. 727; 21 W. R. 694.

On the invitation of one of the parties to an arbitration, two arbitrators, the umpire and the attorney of the party dined with him:—Held, that the entertainment of the umpire, though improper, was not a ground for setting aside the award or refusing to enforce it, as it did not appear that there was any intention to corrupt the umpire, or that his judgment was influenced. Hopper, In re, 8 B. & S. 100; 2 L. R., Q. B. 367; 36 L. J., Q. B. 97; 15 L. T. 566; 15 W. R. 443.

It is no ground for a rule, calling on a plaintiff to shew cause why an award made in his favour should not be set aside, that after the hearing and before making his award, he dined with one of the parties and his witnesses. Crosley v. Clay, 5 C. B. 581.

v. Employing Party's Solicitor to prepare Award.—See ante, DELEGATING AUTHORITY.

vi. Partice making false Representations before Arbitrator.

Whether Action lies against.]—It is no ground of action that one party to a reference made a fraudulent representation to an arbitrator, whereby he awarded to the other party a less sum than he would otherwise have done. Blagrove v. Bristol Waterworks Company, 1 H. & N. 369; 26 L. J., Ex. 57.

vii. Where Two or more Arbitrators.

Award, how executed.]—A cause and all matters in difference were referred to the arbitration of three persons, the award of the three, or of any two of them, to be final. The award purported on the face of it to be made by all three, but was executed by two only, the third having refused to sign it when requested to do so:—Held, that the award was good as the award of the two. White v. Sharp, 12 M. & W. 712; 1 D. & L. 1039; 1 C. & K. 848; 13 L. J., Ex. 215; 8 Jur. 344.

An award ought to be signed by all the arbitrators, in the presence of each other. Stallworth v. Inns, 13 M. & W. 466; 2 D. & L. 428; 14 L. J., Ex. 81; 9 Jur. 285.

Where a matter is referred to the award of three arbitrators, or any two of them, the two who execute the award must do so at the same time and place, and in the presence of each other, otherwise it is not what the parties stipulated for, viz., the joint judgment of the two. Peterson v. Ayre, 15 C. B. 724; 23 L. J., C. P. 129; S. P., Wade v. Douling, 4 El. & Bl. 44; 2 C. L. R. 1642; 23 L. J., Q. B. 302; 18 Jur. 728; Hinton v. Mead, 24 L. J., Ex. 140; 1 Jur., N. S. 46.

Upon a reference to three arbitrators, or any two of them, an award made by two, in the absence of, and without finally consulting the third, cannot be supported. Beek, In re, 1 C. B., N. S. 695.

Where a cause was referred to two named, and to such third person as they should appoint, or any two of them, so that the two persons named, and such third person or any two of them, should make their award, and two signed the award on one day, and the third on the day following, the court refused to make absolute a rule on one of the parties to pay money in pursuance of the award. Wright v. Graham, 3 Ex. 131; 18 L. J., Ex. 29.

Matters in difference were referred to two arbitrators, one appointed by each party, and an umpire chosen before proceeding with the reference. The award was to be made by the three, or any two of them. They disagreed, and one of the arbitrators declined having anything more to do with the matter; but the other two afterwards sent to him for his opinion a draft of an award. He objected to this, and stated his objections to both the others:—Held, that an award made by the two, which differed from the one prepared, without considering the objections, and without consultation or discussion with the arbitrator who had objected, was bad. Allen, In re, 5 N. & M. 374; sub nom. Perring, In re, 3 A. & E. 245; 1 H. & W. 285.

viii. Attendance of Witnesses, &c.

Statute.—By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 40, upon references by rule or order of court, or a judge, or of nisi prius, or by submission containing an agreement for making it a rule of court, the court by which the rule or order shall be made, or which shall be mentioned in the submission, or any judge, by rule or order may command the attendance and examination of any person to be named, or the production of any documents to be mentioned in such rule or order; and disobedience shall be deemed a contempt, if in addition to the service of such rule or order an appointment of the time and place of attendance in obedience thereto, signed by one at least of the arbitrators, or by the umpire, before whom the attendance is required, shall also be served, either together with or after the service of such rule or order: Provided, that the witness shall be entitled to the like conduct money, and payment of expenses, and for loss of time, as for and upon attendances at any trial; and provided, that the application for the rule or order shall set forth the county where such witness is residing at the time, or satisfy such court or judge that such person cannot be found: Provided also, that no person shall be compelled to produce any writing or other document that he would not be compelled to produce at a trial, or to attend on more than two consecutive days to be named in such order.

Before statute.—Before the statute, the court refused to compel a witness to attend before an arbitrator, although the reference was by order of nisi prius. Wansel v. Southwood, 4 M. & R. 359.

A partnership-deed contained a clause for referring disputes, and provided, that every award made from time to time should be made a rule of court:—Held, that as it did not appear that the word award was used by mistake for submission, and as there did not appear to have been any intention to make the submission a rule of court, the reference was not within 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, and that, therefore, a judge could not require the attendance of witnesses before the arbitrator. Woodcroft, In re, 9 D. P. C. 538; 5 Jur. 771.

A cause and all matters in difference were referred: the arbitrator to make and publish his award, ready to be delivered to the parties, or either of them, "or if they or either of them should be dead before making the award, to their personal representatives who shall require the same," on or before a certain day. Several meetings were from time to time held, but one of the parties died before the reference was concluded. After his death the arbitrator was requested to proceed with the reference, but he declined doing so, an executrix of a deceased party having refused to attend, and protested against his proceeding:—Held, that the court had no power to compel the executrix to attend before him. Lewin v. Holbrook, 11 M. & W. 110; 2 D., N. S. 991; 12 L. J., Ex. 267; S. P., Edwards v. Davies, 23 L. J., Q. B. 278; 18 Jur. 448.

Rule absolute in first instance.—A rule to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents in their custody before an arbitrator, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 40, where the order of reference has been made a rule of court, is absolute in the first instance. Guarantee Society, In re, 1 D. & L. 907.

Habeas corpus ad testificandum.—The court or a judge has power to issue a habeas corpus ad testificandum to bring up a prisoner in execution for debt to be examined before an arbitrator. Graham v. Glover, 5 El. & Bl. 591; 25 L. J., Q. B. 10; 2 Jur., N. S. 160.

So where the prisoner is in criminal custody. Marsden v. Overbury, 18 C. B. 30; 25 L. J., C. P. 200. See also 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 9.

Enforcing attendance of Witnesses.—A reference of a cause and of "all matters in difference between the parties" to a referee empowered to enter judgment on the award, is not a "trial" within the meaning of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 84, s. 1, so as to enable a party to enforce by subpoena the attendance before the referee of a witness not within the jurisdiction. Hall v. Brand, 12 Q. B. D. 39; 49 L. T. 492; 32 W. R. 133—C. A.

Witness out of England.—The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 84, is not available to compel the attendance of a person in Ireland as a witness before the master of the court upon a compulsory reference. O'Flanagan v. Goghegan, 16 C. B., N. S. 636.

Action in Chancery Division.]—An order may now be made on summons in the Chancery Division, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 40, requiring the attendance of a witness before an arbitrator appointed in an action in that division, and the order will be directed to be served as an ordinary subpoena. Clarborough v. Toot-kill, 17 Ch. D. 787; 50 L. J., Ch. 743.

Postponement for Attendance of Material Witness.]—It is a matter entirely in the discretion of an arbitrator whether he will or will not postpone the reference, in order to give one of the parties an opportunity of bringing a material witness from abroad. And the court will not interfere unless the circumstances under which he refuses to do so are such as to amount to misconduct. Ginder v. Curtis, 14 C. B., N. S. 723.

When an application has been made to arbitrators to afford time to obtain and examine a witness who is absent, and they have honestly (even although erroneously) exercised their discretion as to the materiality of his evidence, and have refused the postponement applied for, their award will not be set aside on that ground. Larchin v. Ellis, 11 W. R. 281.

Discovery—Jurisdiction of Court.]—An order was made in an action by consent referring the action and all matters in difference between the parties to an arbitrator, and the order provided that the parties should produce before the arbitrator all documents in their or either of their custody or power relating to the matters in difference. The plaintiff, whilst the arbitration was pending, took out a summons under Ord. XXXI. r. 12, for an affidavit of documents:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to make the order asked for, there not having been before it "any matter in question in the action" within the meaning of the rule. Penrice v. Williams, 23 Ch. D. 553; 52 L. J., Ch. 593; 48 L. T. 868; 31 W. R. 496.

ix. Conduct of Inquiry.

Presence of Stranger to help Party.]—An arbitrator has a general discretion as to the mode of conducting the inquiry before him. The court refused to set aside an award, on the ground that the arbitrator had declined to permit a stranger to be present, for the purpose of assisting the defendant's attorney with practical hints for the conduct of the defence. Tillam v. Copp, 5 C. B. 211.

Legal Assistance expressly Forbidden.]—Upon an order of nisi prius, the parties agreed to refer the cause to a lay arbitrator, a proposition to appoint a legal one having been expressly negatived. On the opening of the arbitration, the arbitrator claimed to have an attorney by his side during the proceedings, on which one of the parties withdrew, and the arbitration proceeded, and the award was made:—Held, that the award was void, and it was set aside at the instance of such party. Procter v. Williams or Williamson, 8 C. B., N. S. 386; 29 L. J., C. P. 357; 6 Jur. N. S. 758; 1 L. T. 872; 8 W. R. 190.

Question of Fraud.]—Where a compulsory reference is made to the master, he must proceed with the inquiry, even though a question of fraud should incidentally arise before him. In-sull v. Moogen, 8 C. B., N. S. 359; 27 L. J., C. P. 75.

Evidence Struck Out.]—Evidence having been received by arbitrators at a meeting improperly convened, at which neither the plaintiff nor the defendant attended, and it being subsequently agreed that it should be struck out, the court refused to set aside an award which had been made, the arbitrators swearing that they did not consider the evidence in making the award, and the parties subsequently proceeding with their case. Kinguell v. Elliott, 7 D. P. C. 423.

Time to bring Witnesses not allowed.]—Improper conduct of an arbitrator, in making his award without allowing the defendant further reasonable time to bring forward and examine his witnesses, cannot be pleaded in bar to an action on a bond conditioned for the performance of the award; though one of the terms of submission is, that the arbitrator shall examine the witnesses to be produced by the parties, and though the whole of the time limited for the making of the award is occupied in the examination of the plaintiff's witnesses. Grazebrook v. Davis, 8 D. & R. 295; 5 B. & C. 534.

Discretion as to Examination of Parties.]—Where a cause is referred, with power to the arbitrator to settle all matters in difference between the parties, the submission providing also that the parties are to be examined on oath, if thought necessary by him, it is in the discretion of the arbitrator to examine the parties, each in support of his own case, if he thinks fit. Wells v. Benakin, 9 M. & W. 45; 1 D., N. S. 343; 5 Jur. 1087.

By whom Examined.]—Parties to a reference mutually agreed to strike out the clause giving the arbitrator power to examine the parties. At the hearing the plaintiff's attorney tendered the plaintiff as a witness, and he was examined by the arbitrator. The defendant's counsel objected to his admission, but as the arbitrator decided against him he proceeded to cross-examine the plaintiff and went into his case:—Held, that the examining of the plaintiff under those circumstances was a good ground for setting aside the award, and that the objection was not waived by the defendant going on with the arbitration. Smith v. Sparrow, 4 D. & L. 604; 1 B. C. Rep. 240; 16 L. J., Q. B. 139; 11 Jur. 126.

Waiving Irregularities.]—Irregularities in the mode of conducting an arbitration may be waived by continuing the arbitration after they have been discovered. Moseley v. Simpson, 16 L. R., Eq. 226; 42 L. J., Ch. 739; 28 L. T. 727; 21 W. R. 694.

A reference was made to three arbitrators, one to be appointed by each of the parties, and one by the arbitrators so chosen. The parties selected their arbitrators, and the latter selected another whom they erroneously appointed as umpire, and the sittings were commenced without him:—Held, that the irregularity was waived by commencing the proceedings de novo after the mistake was discovered, and by an agreement signed by the parties by which they agreed not to impugn the award on any ground. Ib.

An objection to an award for irregular and improper conduct on the part of the arbitrators is waived, where such conduct had been known to the injured party three weeks before the award was made without any objection being taken. Rignall v. Gale, 2 M. & G. 830; 3 Scott, N. R. 108; 9 D. P. C. 631; 5 Jur. 701.

Administering Oath.—By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 41, when it shall be ordered or agreed in any rule or order of reference, or submission containing an agreement to make it a rule of court, that the witnesses shall be examined upon oath, the arbitrator or umpire, or any one arbitrator, may and are required to administer an oath to such witnesses, or to take their affirmation in cases where affirmation is allowed by law instead of oath; and perjury may be assigned on such oath or affirmation.

This statute does not exclude the power of the court or judge to administer the oath. They have a concurrent jurisdiction with the arbitrator to swear witnesses examined before them, notwithstanding the statute. James v. Attwood, 5 Bing. N. C. 628; 7 Scott, 841.

If, in a cause referred by order of nisi prius, the submission contains a clause that the "witnesses of each party respectively shall be sworn before a judge of a superior court, or a commissioner thereof," the arbitrator is, notwithstanding, entitled to swear the witnesses himself if he think proper to do so, as the above words are merely cumulative, and do not take away the power vested in him by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 41. Hodson v. Wilde or Wise, 1 H. & H. 360; 7 D. P. C. 15; 4 M. & W. 536; 2 Jur. 992.

It is no ground for setting aside an award, that the arbitrator (a layman) has examined witnesses not upon oath or affirmation, if that mode of proceeding was not objected to at the time of their examination. Biggs v. Hansell, 16 C. B. 562; S. P., Ridout v. Pye, 1 B. & P. 91.

It is not absolutely necessary that the evidence before an arbitrator should be taken on oath; the parties may waive it. Wakefield v. Llanelly Railway and Dock Company, 34 Beav. 245.

A cause was referred by an order, which stated that the arbitrators should be at liberty, if they should think fit, to examine the parties and their witnesses on oath:—Held, that it was discretionary with the arbitrators whether they would examine the witnesses on oath or not; and that it was no objection to the award that the witnesses were examined without being sworn, although the party against whom the award was made required, at the time, that they should be sworn. Smith v. Goff, 14 M. & W. 264; 3 D. & L. 47.

Where a cause was referred by an order directing the witnesses to be sworn before a judge, and the arbitrator took the evidence of the plaintiff's witnesses not upon oath, which the defendant objected to, though he permitted his own witnesses to be examined unsworn:—Held, that, by this proceeding, the defendant had waived the objection, and that he could not on this ground impeach the award. Allen v. Francis, 9 Jur. 691.

Evidence by Affidavit.—If a submission to arbitration is "so that the witnesses be examined on oath," affidavits cannot be read; if they are, the award may be set aside. Banks v. Banks, 1 Gale, 46.

Reception of Evidence.—Arbitrators are bound by those rules of evidence which govern the courts of law. Att.-Gen. v. Davison, M'Clel. & Y. 160.

A plaintiff tendered in evidence books containing entries made by himself, which being objected to as inadmissible, the arbitrator stated that the same strictness was not required as on a trial, and received the books:—Held, no ground for setting aside the award for misconduct on his part. Hagger v. Baker, 2 D. & L. 856; 14 M. & W. 9; 14 L. J., Ex. 227.

Action for two calls of 11. each upon 200 shares. The particulars claimed 330*l.*, viz. 150*l.* for a first call upon 150 shares, and 180*l.* for a second call upon 180 shares. The defendant pleaded payment. The cause being referred, the defendant proved the payment of more than 400*l.* It was shown that he was proprietor of 640 shares at the first call, and 1200 at the second; and the arbitrator awarded in favour of the plaintiff:—Held, that the arbitrator, by receiving evidence in respect of more than 200 shares, had not exceeded his authority, but had, at the most, received improper evidence. And a rule for setting aside the award was refused. Eastern Counties Railway Company v. Robertson, 6 M. & G. 38; 6 Scott, N. R. 802; 1 D. & L. 498.

A cause, and all matters in dispute at the time of the reference, were referred:—The arbitrator awarded that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 184*l.* for a balance and interest found to be due at the date of the reference, "excluding from such an account a claim on the part of the plaintiff for a loss alleged to have been sustained to the amount of 32*l.* 19*s.*, on certain varnished hats;" and, as to the claim in respect of the varnished hats, he found "that no sufficient evidence had been laid before him by the plaintiff to shew that, at the date of the reference, he had sustained any loss on the hats, and upon that ground, and for want of sufficient evidence of such loss, he awarded that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover anything in respect thereof:"—Held, a final adjudication of the matters submitted. Cockburn v. Newton, 9 D. P. C. 671; 2 M. & G. 899; 3 Scott, N. R. 261.

Where, in an action on simple contract, to which the defendant pleaded nunquam indebitatus and a set-off, a verdict was taken for the plaintiff for the amount claimed, subject to a reference of the cause, the arbitrator having certified that the verdict entered for the plaintiff be vacated, and a verdict entered for the defendant on both the issues:—Held, that the court will not entertain an application to amend the certificate by entering a verdict for the plaintiff on the first issue, on the ground that the finding was not supported by evidence. Williams v. Mouldsdale, 7 M. & W. 134; 4 Jur. 1038.

A particular of set-off for 20*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* was as follows:—"To fitting up a shop with one pair of glass doors, fanlight, lock, bolts and hinges, to a partition to ditto, and moulding, all complete, and fitting up shop window with glass case and linings, and sundry works, nails, &c. On the hearing of a reference of the cause before an arbitrator, the value of all the specified work in the particular was proved to be worth 9*l.*; but under the words in the particular, "sundry works, nails," &c., the arbitrator (subject to the opinion of the court) admitted evidence of other work done about the premises to the amount of 10*l.* 1*s.* :—Held, that the evidence was rightly received; and that, if the plaintiff was misled or taken by surprise by the particular, he should have asked for an adjournment of the reference, to have enabled him to answer the evidence as to that claim. Eastham v. Tyler, 2 B. C. Rep. 136.

A verdict was taken for 3,000*l.* damages, subject to a barrister, to whom all matters in difference in the cause were referred, with power to decide on the admissibility of evidence, as a judge might, and to reserve points of law for the decision of the court. The arbitrator made a special statement of facts affecting the admissibility of certain depositions in evidence, and awarded that the verdict should be reduced to 1,358*l.*, if the court should be of opinion that the depositions of A. and B. were admissible; to 1,165*l.*, if the court should think the depositions of A. only admissible; and to 579*l.*, if the court should think neither of the depositions admissible :—Held, that the award was final. Scott v. Van Sandau, 6 Q. B. 237; 8 Jur. 114.

A submission referred the amount of loss by fire on "wool in the process of woolling, carding, scribbling, and spinning," but in other parts of the submission "raw wool" was spoken of. The arbitrator, conceiving that he was not justified in taking into his consideration wool which had undergone a part of the process of manufacture, but was not, at the time of the fire, in any of the engines, refused to receive evidence applicable to that wool :—Held, that he was justified in so doing; and the court refused to disturb an award made on that principle. In re Hurst, 1 H. & W. 275.

Where a defendant submitted all matters in difference, and the arbitrators required him, in pursuance of a power given them for that purpose, to produce certain books and papers, and an attachment was moved for against him for not producing them :—Held, that he could not, by affidavit, bring before the court the question, whether those books related to matters in difference between them or not, though it was expressly sworn that the books merely related to old accounts, which had been long since settled, and which it had been agreed between them should form no part of the reference, because, by the general terms of the submission of all matters in difference, it was left in the discretion of the arbitrator to say what were matters in difference, and what were not. Arbuckle v. Price, 4 D. P. C. 174.

If a cause is referred to a barrister, and he improperly admits evidence, the court will not disturb his award. Perryman v. Steggall, 2 D. P. C. 726.

It is no ground for impeaching an award that the arbitrator has been mistaken in point of law, as to the admissibility of certain evidence. Armstrong v. Marshall, 4 D. P. C. 593; 1 H. & W. 643.

An arbitrator's decision on the admissibility of evidence before him is final. Symes v. Goodfellow, 4 D. P. C. 642; 2 Scott, 769; 1 Hodges, 400; 2 Bing. N. C. 532.

Rejection of Evidence.—The refusal of an arbitrator to examine witnesses is sufficient misconduct on his part to induce the court to set aside his award, though he may think that he has sufficient evidence without them. Phipps v. Ingram, 3 D. P. C. 669.

Where all matters in difference in the cause between the parties, in an action against two defendants, were referred, and the arbitrator refused to hear evidence, or adjudicate upon the subject of four cheques drawn by one of the defendants alone, on the ground that it was not a matter in difference between the parties to the reference :—Held, that the award was not final and conclusive, and that it must be set aside. Samuel v. Cooper, 2 A. & E. 752; 1 H. & W. 86; S. C. nom. Samuel v. Levey, 4 N. & M. 520.

Parties had submitted their accounts to an arbitrator, and a report had been made, and a meeting was fixed to close the accounts. At that meeting one of the parties tendered in evidence fresh documents which he had discovered relating to the accounts, and the arbitrator, after looking at them, declined to go into them :—Held, not misconduct affecting the validity of the award, but a rejection of evidence within his, the arbitrator's, authority. Marsh, In re, 16 L. J., Q. B. 330.

Where an arbitrator refused to receive further evidence, tendered by the plaintiff after the close of his case, in consequence of the defendant declining to call evidence of his, and urging that no case had been made out, the court refused to set aside the award on that ground. Hemming v. Parker, 13 L. T. 795; 14 W. R. 328.

An affidavit to set aside an award on the ground that the arbitrator had refused to examine a material witness, should state what reason, if any, he gave for refusing to hear the witness. Bradley v. Ibbetson, 2 L. M. & P. 583.

Receiving Evidence in absence of other Party.—A submission was entered into by A. and B., of all matters in difference between them. The arbitrator gave notice to the parties of his intention to hold a meeting, which was holden and attended by one of the parties, and the solicitor of the other party. The parties met on the following day before the arbitrator, who after hearing both parties, and with their consent, took with him all the books for examination by an accountant. Shortly afterwards, and before making his award, the arbitrator was apprised by the accountant of a supposed error in the accounts as to a sum of money, upon which the arbitrator summoned A., who was more conversant with the accounts than B., to appear before him and the accountant, when the supposed error was explained and set right to the arbitrator's satisfaction. About a month afterwards, the accountant again discovered in the accounts what he supposed an error as to a sum of money, which was explained by A., in like manner as before, to the satisfaction of the arbitrator; but, in both instances, no notice was given to the other party of A.'s intended attendance on the arbitrator. The arbitrator shortly afterwards made his award. The award was set aside. Harcey v. Shelton, 7 Beav. 455; 13 L. J., Ch. 466.

It is no ground for a rule, calling upon a plaintiff to shew cause why an award made in his favour should not be set aside, that the arbitrator allowed the plaintiff's counsel to call the plaintiff to prove his own case; that, after the case had been closed on both sides, he obtained information from each party in the absence of the other. Crossley v. Clay, 5 C. B. 581.

A usage for arbitrators appointed to determine, as between outgoing and incoming tenants of a farm, the value of the away-going crop and the deductions for want of repairs of the farm buildings and fences, to make an award, on inspection of the crops and premises, without notice to the parties, and without evidence may be good; but no usage can justify arbitrators in hearing one party and his witnesses only in the absence of and without notice to the other, Oswald v. Grey (Earl), 24 L. J., Q. B. 69.

All the witnesses of a party against whom the award is made must have been examined, and in his presence, or it will be a ground for setting the award aside; but that must be made clearly to appear, Bedington v. Southall, 4 Price, 232.

An award is not necessarily bad because the arbitrator has taken evidence in the absence of both the parties, Thomas v. Morris, 16 L. T. 398.

Such an irregularity may be so treated by the disputants as to prevent them afterwards taking any objection to it. Id.

When an arbitrator questions a witness, and receives statements from him in the absence and without the consent of one party to the reference, the court will set aside the award, without taking into consideration the nature of the statements, or the probability of their having influenced the decision. Dobson v. Groves, 6 Q. B. 637; 14 L. J., Q. B. 17; 9 Jur. 86.

Unprofessional arbitrators ascertained at a meeting the balance due from A., one of the litigant parties, to B., the other, except a few pounds, which the arbitrators proposed to make payable by A. to B., on account of interest owing by A. to a third person, C., on a mortgage of land, the property of A., which A. was to assign to B. By arrangement between themselves, the arbitrators, without holding any further meeting, questioned C. separately, and in the absence of the parties, as to the amount of interest due; each stated the result of his inquiry to the other, and the reports agreeing, they made their award. The court set aside the award as procured by undue means contrary to 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 16, s. 2, the course pursued having been inconsistent with natural justice. Plews, In re, 6 Q. B. 845; 14 L. J., Q. B. 139; 9 Jur. 160.

After the close of the case of both the parties to an arbitration in which a question arose, which affidavits to set aside the award alleged, but did not shew, to be material, whether the figures on the stern of a Spanish ship denoted English or Spanish feet, two of the three arbitrators, unattended by the parties, asked a person, who had not been called as a witness, whether the figures marked English or Spanish feet. He expressed ignorance of the matter, but another person standing by stated that the numbers marked English feet, as the ship had been lately coppered in England. The arbitrators afterwards made their award. The court refused to set aside the award on the ground of misconduct in the arbitrators. Errazquin and Meek, In re, 2 L. M. & P. 151.

Where arbitrators, who had proceeded in a reference, informed the defendant, who was present at the meeting, that they would suspend their proceedings till the books of account had been referred to:—Held, that having afterwards made an award in his absence, without examining such books, was a ground for setting aside the award. Pepper v. Gorham, 4 Moore, 148.

On a cause being referred, the plaintiff attended before the arbitrator by counsel, without giving the defendant notice of his intention so to do. The defendant requested an adjournment, to give him time to instruct counsel; but the plaintiff refused to consent, unless the defendant paid the costs of the day. The arbitrator proceeded ex parte, and certified in favour of the plaintiff. The court stayed the certificate, and referred the cause back to the arbitrator, and disallowed the plaintiff his costs of the day. Whalley v. Morland, 2 C. & M. 347; 2 D. P. C. 249; 4 Tyr. 255.

An arbitrator greatly errs if he in any the minutest particular takes upon himself to listen to evidence behind the back of any of the parties to the submission. Drew v. Leburn, 2 Macq. H. L. Cas. 1.

On the evidence given by one of the parties at a meeting, of which the other had notice, but did not attend, the sum the party attending was to pay was decreased by the arbitrators. This private examination was held incorrect, and the award set aside. Hick, In re, 8 Taunt. 694.

It is no objection to an award that the arbitrators in the absence of one of the parties have called in the other, and asked him merely, whether he admitted or disputed certain items in an account. Anderson v. Wallace, 3 C. & F. 26.

A defendant moved to set aside an award made by two arbitrators against him, upon the grounds that they had improperly received evidence in his absence, and had also been guilty of improper conduct in holding meetings, and conferring with the plaintiff with respect to the matters in difference, in his absence. The defendant was aware of the existence of these grounds of objection many days before the award was made, but made no objection before the arbitrators. He had notice of the meetings at which the evidence was received, and had been summoned to produce books at them, but he had omitted to attend:—Held, that although it would have been more regular for the arbitrators to send notice of the result of the examinations to the defendant, yet that the court would not, under the circumstances, set aside the award for such irregularities as were disclosed. Bignall v. Gale, 9 D. P. C. 631; 2 M. & G. 830; 3 Scott, N. R. 108; 5 Jur. 701.

Party should have opportunity of being heard.—No custom or usage can justify an arbitrator or umpire in deciding on evidence laid before him without the knowledge of the party against whom he decides, and without giving him an opportunity of being heard. Brook, In re, 15 C. B., N. S. 403; 33 L. J., C. P. 246; 10 Jur., N. S. 704; 10 L. T. 378.

Where, in an action for not repairing, arbitrators made their award upon a view of the premises without calling the parties before them, it was set aside, as other facts might be necessary to be inquired into. Axon, 2 Chit. 44.

A., on the 7th of April, 1866, contracted to buy of B. 250 bales of cotton, "to arrive in Liverpool per ship or ships from Bombay," on the terms of the printed rules of the Cotton Brokers' Association of Liverpool, as indorsed on the contract, at a certain price per lb. for fair new merchants' Oomrawattee, March or April shipment. By one of the rules referred to, it was provided that, upon such a contract, the name of the ship must be given to the buying broker within two calendar months next after the date of shipment named in the contract; and by other rules it was provided that, "in case of any dispute arising out of a contract," the matter was to be referred to two members of the association; and that in the event of one of the parties neglecting for three days after notice to appoint an arbitrator, the chairman of the association was to name two, whose award was to be final. On the 21st of June, the seller's broker gave the buyer's broker the name of a ship on board of which were 225 bales of the cotton, which was shipped at Bombay on the 19th of March. A. declined to accept the cotton, on the ground that the name of the ship had not been given within two calendar months next after the date of shipment. A dispute having arisen as to the meaning of the contract, A. appointed J. as arbitrator on his part. B. neglecting to appoint his arbitrator, the chairman of the association appointed two, viz., J. and D.; but B. objecting to J., inasmuch as he had been the person originally named by A., the chairman withdrew his name, and appointed H. in lieu of him; and the two arbitrators so appointed, having been furnished by A.'s broker with a copy of the contract and of the correspondence, without giving B. an opportunity of being heard, and within two hours of the receipt of notice that they had been appointed, made an award, holding that the declaration made on the 21st of June was not a proper one, and consequently that the buyer had power to cancel the contract:—Sembly, that the omission to give B. an opportunity of being heard before them was misconduct on the part of the arbitrators, and good ground of objection to the award if taken in the proper manner, viz., by motion to set it aside or refer it back. Thorburn v. Barnes, 2 L. R., C. P. 384; 36 L. J., C. P. 184; 16 L. T. 10; 15 W. R. 623.

Notice of Meeting, when necessary.—Where a submission has been made a rule of court, and a party to the submission revokes the authority without leave of the court, he still ought to have notice from the arbitrators to attend their meeting. In re Kyle, 2 Jur. 760.

After one of the parties has failed to attend a meeting, the arbitrator may, at the next, without a peremptory appointment, proceed in his absence. Angus v. Smythies, 2 F. & F. 381.

Where a plaintiff became insolvent after a cause was referred, and the arbitrator gave the attorney of both parties notice of his intention to proceed with the reference; and the plaintiff not attending, the arbitrator proceeded ex parte, the court refused an application by the assignee to set aside the award. Hobbs v. Ferrars, 8 D. P. C. 779; 4 Jur. 825.

Where an arbitrator proceeded in the absence of one of the parties at a third meeting which had been appointed, the absent party not having attended at either of the two previous meetings:—The court set aside the award, as no notice had been given, that, if the party did not attend, the arbitrator would proceed in his absence. Gladwin v. Chilcote, 9 D. P. C. 550; 5 Jur. 749.

Where an arbitrator has made an appointment, and one of the parties, although under the mistaken notion that there will be notice of another meeting before an award is made, goes away without tendering evidence, or intimating that he intends to offer it, the arbitrator may proceed ex parte, and without further notice make an award. Tryer v. Shaw, 27 L. J., Ex. 320.

A party objected to an award, on the ground that he had not had notice of two meetings, at the first of which no evidence was received, but the arbitrator merely adjourned; and at the second of which he attended and handed in a formal protest against the proceedings, upon a ground totally different from that of want of notice:—Held, that he was not entitled to notice of the first meeting, and that he had, by his protest, waived the want of notice of the second. Morphett, In re, 2 D. & L. 967; 14 L. J., Q. B. 259; 10 Jur. 546.

All matters in difference in a cause were referred to a barrister, with power to proceed ex parte, if either of the parties should, by affected delay, prevent making the award, or should not attend after reasonable notice, and without such excuse as the arbitrator should adjudge reasonable. The arbitrator, having in the course of the reference appointed a meeting, was informed by the defendant that he did not intend to be present; one of his reasons being, that, on account of the non-admissibility of certain depositions, which the arbitrator had not rejected as evidence, no award he could make would be valid; and another reason being, that the notice was too short. The arbitrator (having postponed the meeting for a day, of which he gave the defendant notice, but without reference to his communication) proceeded ex parte:—Held, that he was warranted in so doing, though he had not warned the defendant, that, if he absented himself, he would proceed ex parte. Scott v. Van Sandau, 6 Q. B. 237; 8 Jur. 1114.

5. UMPIRE AND UMPIRAGE.

a. Appointment of Umpire.

i. By Arbitrators.

(See 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 14.)

When to be chosen.—If a submission is, that, if arbitrators do not make their award by a day named, then to abide the award of an umpire, to be chosen by the arbitrators; the time for the arbitrators to appoint an umpire commences when the time for their making the award expires. Beck v. Sargent, 4 Taunt. 232.

Arbitrators may choose an umpire either before or after the time limited for making their own award, if the umpire is chosen within the time limited for his umpirage. Harding v. Watts, 15 East, 556. And see Doyley v. Pitslow, 15 East, 557, n.

Arbitrators having power to appoint an umpire may elect one before they enter upon the matter referred to them. Roe d. Wood v. Doe, 2 T. R. 644; S. P., Bates v. Cooke, 9 B. & C. 407.

Such an appointment of an umpire is good, though the arbitrators have before such appointment enlarged the time. Cudliffe v. Walters, 2 M. & Rob. 232.

If one of the arbitrators insists upon producing further evidence, and the other refuses to allow it to be done, this is a sufficient disagreement between the arbitrators to authorize the interference of the umpire. Id.

On a submission to two persons with power to them, if they should not agree, to appoint a third person to be umpire in or to concur and join with them in considering and determining all or any of the matters referred, there is a power to appoint such third person before any difference has arisen, and before any proceedings have been taken on the reference: and that is, indeed, the proper course to pursue; and such third person, when so appointed, is not a third arbitrator, but an umpire, and the effect of his appointment is, that he is to sit with the arbitrators, and hear and consider the matters referred, and if they do not agree in an award, to make an award upon all matters referred, and not merely those in which they do not agree. And it is sufficient to enable him so to act, that at the conclusion of the evidence they arrive at different opinions in some of the matters referred; nor need he, if the time for making the award has expired, wait to see if they ever could agree; and, on the other hand, their sitting with him till the time has expired, and not then repudiating his authority, is a tacit exercise of their power to enlarge the time for making the award, so as to enable him to make it. Winteringham v. Robertson, 27 L. J., Ex. 301.

How to be chosen or appointed.]—Where a cause is referred to two arbitrators, and their umpire in case of dispute, and it is afterwards agreed to appoint an umpire, such appointment must in no case be decided by chance. Ford v. Jones, 3 B. & A. 248; S. P., Cassell, In re, 9 B. & C. 624; 4 M. & R. 555.

But where arbitrators, after tossing up for the choice, abandoned the choice made, and afterwards one of them, by consent of the other, appointed the umpire:—Held, that the appointment was good. Vennikam, In re, 5 Jur. 72.

An umpire may be appointed by lot, if the parties to the reference assent to such a mode of election. Taylor v. Backhouse, 2 L. J., M. & P. 70; 20 L. J., Q. B. 233; 15 Jur. 86. S. P., Tunno, In re, 2 N. & M. 328; 5 B. & Ad. 488; Greenwood, In re, 1 P. & D. 463; 9 A. & E. 699; Jamieson, In re, 4 A. & E. 945.

If a particular mode of appointment is prescribed, it must be followed. Batey v. Townley, 1 Ex. 572; 19 L. J., Ex. 396.

An appointment of an umpire, by lot, consented to by the attorneys' clerk, but not by the attorneys themselves, or their client, is bad, although the parties, in ignorance of the mode of appointment, had attended the arbitrator. Hodson, In re, 7 D. P. C. 569; S. C., nom. Hodson v. Drewry, 1 W. W. & H. 540; 2 Jur. 1088.

Where two arbitrators are empowered to appoint an umpire, such appointment must be the act of the will and judgment of the two, and must not be the result of chance or lot. European and American Steam Shipping Company v. Croskey, 8 C. B., N. S. 397; 29 L. J., C. P. 155; 6 Jur., N. S. 896; 8 W. R. 236.

Where two arbitrators appointed an umpire by lot, and the agent and solicitor of A., a party to the reference, upon being told who had been appointed, and the mode of appointment, raised no objection, and approved of the person appointed, who made his award:—Held, that he was not entitled to have the award set aside upon the ground that the umpire had been irregularly appointed. Blythe and Tyne Railway Company, In re, 11 W. R. 705.

The appointment of an umpire made in writing by two arbitrators requires no stamp. Routledge v. Thornton, 4 Taunt. 704.

The appointment of an umpire is a judicial act. Lord v. Lord, 5 El. & Bl. 404; 26 L. J., Q. B. 34; 1 Jur., N. S. 893.

Where the power to make the appointment was vested in two arbitrators, and where the appointment had not been made or signed by the arbitrators at the same time or in each other's presence, the court refused to make absolute a rule for an attachment for non-performance of the award of the umpire. Ib.

The signing the appointment of an umpire is not a judicial act, and therefore need not be done by the arbitrators at the same time or together. Hopper, In re, 8 B. & S. 100; 2 L. R., Q. B. 367; 36 L. J., Q. B. 97; 15 L. T. 566; 15 W. R. 443.

An appointment of an umpire by lot from two persons, each of whom is acknowledged by both arbitrators to be fit, is valid. Ib.

Proof of Appointment.]—To prove that an umpire was appointed by the arbitrators according to the terms of the submission, it is not sufficient to prove that he acted with them, and put in an award executed by all three, though the appointment of the umpire is recited in the award. Still v. Halford, 4 Camp. 17.

Invalidity—Parties by appearing waive objection.]—An award by an umpire is good, although the arbitrators had no authority to appoint one, and although he examined the parties separately, they having attended him, and made no objection at the time. Matson v. Trouser, R. & M. 17.

ii. By a Court or Judge.

In what Cases.]—By the Companies Act of 1862, ss. 161, 162, on any company being voluntarily wound up, it is lawful, by special resolution, to transfer the business to a new company, provided that any dissentient shareholder may require the liquidators either to abstain from carrying the resolution into effect, or to take his shares at a price, if not agreed upon, to be determined by arbitration under the provisions of the Companies Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16. That act, by ss. 128—130, provides for the appointment of two arbitrators, one by each party; and the arbitrators are to appoint an umpire; but, in case of their default, s. 131 only provides that, if one of the parties is a railway company, the appointment of an umpire is to be by the Board of Trade. A dispute as to the price to be paid for his shares having arisen between a shareholder and a company, not a railway company, and the arbitrators having neglected to appoint an umpire:—Held, that the case was within the C. L. P. Act of 1854, s. 12, and a judge could therefore appoint an umpire under that section. Anglo-Italian Bank and De Rosaz, In re, 2 L. R., Q. B. 452; S. P., De Rosaz v. Anglo-Italian Bank, 4 L. R., Q. B. 462; 38 L. J., Q. B. 161.

A vendor and purchaser entered into an agreement for the sale of property, at a price to be fixed by two valuers, and as to matters in difference between the valuers, by an umpire to be appointed by such valuers before entering upon the valuation. The valuers could not agree upon an umpire:—Held, that 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 12, did not empower the court to appoint an umpire, there being no case of arbitration within that section. Collins v Collins, 26 Beav. 306; 28 L.

J., Ch. 184; 5 Jur., N. S. 30; 32 L. T., O. S. 233; 7 W. R. 115.

The validity of a notice to dissolve a partnership was disputed, and it was agreed that that question, as well as the price to be paid by the continuing partners for the share of the outgoing partner, should be settled by two valuers named in the agreement or their umpire. One of the valuers died before the valuation was made, and the new valuer (appointed under protest) neglected to join with the other valuer in appointing an umpire. Under these circumstances, and by virtue of the C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 12, the court appointed an umpire to act in the matter, in case his services should be required. Boane, In re, 22 L. T. 507; 18 W. R. 723.

Where surveyors have been nominated under the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, s. 85, to settle differences in dispute between a building owner and an adjoining owner as to the erection of a party-wall, and such surveyors had refused to appoint an umpire, the court appointed an umpire under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, notwithstanding that an action was pending to settle the right of one of the parties to an ancient light in the party-wall. McBryde, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 200; 46 L. J., Ch. 153; 35 L. T. 543.

Jurisdiction of Court to carry Agreement into effect.—When two partners made an agreement containing a provision that on the determination of the partnership, one partner should purchase the share of the other at a valuation to be made by two persons, one to be appointed by each partner, and the partnership was carried on for some time under the agreement:—Held, that though the valuation could not be so made, because no umpire was provided, a court of equity would carry the partnership agreement into effect by ascertaining the value of the share. Dinham v. Bradford, 5 L. R., Ch. 519.

Where the fixing a value by arbitrators is not of the essence of an agreement, the court will carry the agreement into effect, and will itself, if necessary, ascertain the value. Id.

b. Proceedings before, &c.

Commencement of Jurisdiction.—When an umpire has once been summoned, the jurisdiction of the arbitrators is gone; and the court, in referring back the award, will send it to the umpire, and not to the arbitrators. Westminster and Brynbo Coal and Coke Company v. Clayton, 11 L. T. 366; 13 W. R. 134.

An umpire's appointment dates from the time when he is appointed by the arbitrators, and not from the time when the duty of determining devolves upon him by reason of the arbitrators disagreeing. Killett and Tranmere Board of Health, In re, 13 W. R. 207.

Duty as to hearing Evidence, &c.—Where an umpire refuses, on express request, either to rehear evidence already given before arbitrators, or to examine new witnesses, the court will set aside the award. Jenkins v. Leggo, 1 D., N. S. 277; 6 Jur. 397.

The not insisting on this objection at the time of making the award does not amount to a waiver of it. Id.

An umpire may make his award on the notes of the arbitrator if no objection is taken. Id.

Where matters are referred to arbitrators, and, if they disagree, to an umpire, and the arbitrators, after hearing witnesses, disagree, the umpire must rehear the witnesses. Salkeld, In re, 12 A. & E. 767; 4 P. & D. 732.

If he omits doing so, and makes his award on the evidence taken down by the arbitrators, the award will be set aside. Id.

Objecting to such proceedings by the umpire may be waived; but, to prevent the award being set aside, clear proof must be given of the waiver. Id.

A cause and all matters in difference were referred to the award of two persons, and such third person as they should appoint, or of a majority of them. A difference having arisen between the originally-named arbitrators, a statement was made by each to the third as to what he thought the award should be. An award having been made by an umpire and one of the arbitrators, without any further meeting, the court set aside the award. Templeman, In re, 9 D. P. C. 962; 6 Jur. 324.

An umpire, being furnished by the arbitrators with the evidence taken before them, and having himself viewed the premises, the condition of which was in question, made his award, without calling for further evidence, or giving any notice on that subject to the parties:—Held, that the award could not be objected to on that ground by a party who knew that the case had gone before the umpire, and made no application to him to hear further evidence. James, In re, 2 N. & M. 328; 5 B. & Ad. 488.

Parties to a written submission agreed by parol that notes of the evidence should be taken in writing by a clerk, and signed by the arbitrators, and that in case of their disagreeing the umpire should be at liberty to make his award on the notes so taken, without examining the witnesses. The notes were so taken, and the arbitrators disagreed. The umpire having refused to examine any witness, though required to do so by one of the parties, and having made his award on reading the notes, the court refused to set aside the award. Firth, In re, 1 L., M. & P. 63; 19 L. J., Q. B. 169.

An order was made in an action referring the question in dispute, which was the rent to be paid under a lease of a mill, to two persons, who had acted as agents of the parties, as arbitrators, and in case of their disagreement to a person therein named as umpire. The arbitrators, having disagreed, submitted the matter to the umpire. The latter, without giving any notice to the parties or to their solicitors, and without any witnesses being examined before him, but having merely heard the statement of the two arbitrators and inspected the premises, made his award in writing, in which he recited, that he had "heard, examined, and considered the allegations, witnesses, and evidence of all the parties."

—Held, that there was no ground for disturbing the award, as the arbitrators and the umpire were all experts, and it was evidently the intention of the parties that they should settle the value and not act as formal arbitrators. Bottomley v. Ambler, 38 L. T. 545; 26 W. R. 566—C. A.

Notice, when Necessary.—A reference was made to two arbitrators and an umpire to be chosen by them, who was to be present and decide each reference as it might arise, and either might make an award. The umpire, in the presence of the arbitrators, disallowed the plaintiff part of his claim, which made the balance in favour of the defendant, and afterwards, without notice to the arbitrators or defendant, made his award in favour of the plaintiff. The court set aside the award. Potter v. Newman, 4 D. P. C. 504; 2 C., M. & R. 742; 1 T. & G. 29.

Umpire and Arbitrators Sitting Together.]—A submission was to two, and a third, to be named by them; and the parties treated the third arbitrator so named as an umpire throughout the proceedings:—Held, that the non-attendance of the third arbitrator at the meetings, and the want of notice to him, formed no ground for setting aside the award. Marsh, In re, or Haywood v. Marsh, 16 L. J., Q. B. 390; 11 Jur. 657.

Where a matter in difference is referred to two, one to be named by each of the parties, with a proviso that if they disagree they shall name an umpire, and that he shall make the award, and the two disagree and appoint an umpire, it is no ground of objection to the award that all three have sat and heard the evidence together, and then the umpire has made the award. Flaglane Chapel v. Sunderland (Mayor, &c.), 5 Jur., N. S. 894.

Duty to Decide Whole Question—Arbitrators Disagreeing as to Part Only.]—If "all or any of the matters in difference between the parties" are referred to arbitrators, who disagree, but only as to the costs, yet the umpire must adjudicate on the whole question. Wicks v. Cox, 11 Jur. 542.

Where arbitrators determined on five points in dispute, and referred a sixth to an umpire, whom they were authorized to choose, the award made by the arbitrators and umpire was bad, the arbitrators not being authorized by the terms of the submission to make the award upon some points in dispute, and refer others to the umpire. Tollit v. Saunders, 9 Price, 612.

Communication with One Party.]—Pending a reference, the umpire held a communication with the agents of one of the parties; this fact being known to all the parties at the time, and not objected to by any of them, and the reference having proceeded, and the award having been subsequently made:—Held, that it was too late for either of the parties after the award was made to object to it, on the ground of such communication between the umpire and the agents of one of them. Mills v. Bouwyer Society, 3 Kay & J. 66.

Enlargement of Time.]—An umpire, immediately upon his appointment, may enlarge the time for making his award. Killett and Transmere Board of Health, In re, 13 W. R. 207.

Two arbitrators were to make an award by the 20th of August, or such other day as they should appoint; in case they disagreed an umpire was to decide by the 20th of September, or such other day as he should appoint. The arbitrators enlarged the time to the 1st of November, and in October gave the umpire notice of their being unable to agree. In September the umpire enlarged his time till December, in which month he made his award:—Held, that he had jurisdiction in September to enlarge the time. Doddington v. Bailward, 5 Bing. N. C. 591; 7 D. P. C. 640; 7 Scott, 733.

Held, also, that notice of the enlargement of the time in September by the umpire was sufficiently conveyed to the defendant by a verbal intimation from the plaintiff, when the award was served on him, and its performance demanded; and that the non-agreement of the arbitrators, so as to entitle the umpire to act, was sufficiently notified at the same time by its appearing on the face of the award. Ib.

The Award.]—Before an award is made, the arbitrators and umpire ought to meet to discuss the question submitted to them, and there should be a joint judgment. Where, therefore, an umpire and one arbitrator in the absence of the other, without any default on his part, met and discussed the matter, and ultimately made their award:—Held, that the award was bad. Morgan v. Bolt, 7 L. T. 671; 11 W. R. 265.

Arbitrators, not agreeing in their award, choose an umpire, who makes umpirage: the arbitrators joining with him does not vitiate it. Soulsby v. Hodgson, 3 Burr. 1474; 1 W. Bl. 463.

Even although the arbitrators were functi officio. Beck v. Sargent, 4 Taunt. 232.

Nor by a stranger joining. Ib.

An award, after reciting that A. and B. had been appointed arbitrators, and that they had appointed C. umpire, proceeded, "We, the said arbitrators, do award," and was signed by the two arbitrators and the umpire:—Held, that the latter, by signing the award, adopted the language as his. Bates v. Cooke, 9 B. & C. 407.

Where arbitrators were to make their award on or before a day certain, and an umpire, if they should differ, before a subsequent day; and the umpire made his award before the time given to the arbitrators had expired:—Held, that the umpirage need not state that the arbitrators had disagreed. Sprigens v. Nash, 5 M. & S. 193.

6. THE AWARD.

a. Form and Contents.

i. Form and Construction Generally.

What is an Award.]—After declaration, and before plea, a cause and all matters in difference between the parties were, by consent, referred, the costs to abide the event of the suit. The arbitrator awarded that a verdict should be entered for the plaintiff, with 55*l.* damages, and that in all the other matters in difference between the parties, there was not any sum of money due to either of the parties:—Held, that this was not equivalent to an award that the defendant should pay the plaintiff 55*l.* Donlan v. Brett, 4 N. & M. 854; 2 A. & E. 344.

More Suggestion.]—No precise form of words is necessary to constitute an award: it is sufficient if the arbitrator expresses by it a decision upon the matter submitted to him. But where an arbitrator, to whom a dispute between an architect and his clerk, respecting a claim by the latter to wages, was referred, stated in a letter that he had examined drawings made by the clerk, with an account of his time, which did not shew experience or ability to the extent to justify a demand for remuneration under the circumstances: but in consideration of the clerk's services out of the office on some occasions, and to meet the case in a liberal manner, he proposed that the architect should pay the clerk 10*l.*:—Held, that the latter part of the letter was a mere suggestion of the arbitrator, and not a decided opinion that the clerk was or was not entitled to recover 10*l.*, and therefore not a good award. Lock v. Vulliamy, 2 N. & M. 336; 5 B. & Ad. 600.

Opinion.—An award may be in the shape of an opinion. Matson v. Trouver, R. & M. 17.

In Words of Issue.—Where a cause is referred, it is not necessary that the arbitrator should find for the plaintiff or defendant in the very words of the issue. It is sufficient if he decides substantially the question in dispute. Wykes v. Shipton, 3 N. & M. 240.

Formalities.—Upon a bond for the performance of an award, "so as it be made in writing under the hands of the arbitrators," by such a day, the declaration averred that the arbitrators did, in due manner, and within the time limited, duly make their award in writing:—Held, insufficient, because it did not allege that it was under their hands. Everard v. Paterson (in error), 2 Marsh. 304; 6 Taunt. 625.

Two Certificates.—A verdict was taken for the plaintiff in an action on all the issues joined, subject to a reference of that and another cross-action between the same parties. In the latter action issue had not been joined. By an order of reference the arbitrator was empowered to make "an award or a certificate." He signed two separate certificates, and delivered them to the parties:—Held, that as the certificates purported to be made at one and the same time, they might be considered as one instrument, containing the decision in each cause. Smith, In re, 6 D. & L. 20; 14 Jur. 483.

Effect of Recitals.—A cause was referred to three, and, in case they should differ, to an umpire. The award contained no statement that the arbitrators had differed, but recited that they had "considered the decision of the umpire":—Held, that it was not void in consequence of the mistake, but that the words were surplusage. Harlow v. Read, 3 D. & L. 203; 1 C. B. 733; 14 L. J. C. P. 239; 9 Jur. 642.

The recital in an award of the original agreement to refer will not invalidate the award where the parties have by agreement submitted matters to the arbitrator which were not included in the original agreement to refer. Thames Iron Works and Shipbuilding Co. v. Reg., 10 B. & S. 33; 20 L. T. 318.

When an arbitrator appointed under the Lands Clauses Act, and having power to assess the amount of damage, but no power to decide the question of liability, made an award containing an order for payment, but the recitals shewed the extent of the arbitrator's authority:—Held, that this was an error of form only, and that the award could not be set aside on account of it. Harper and Great Eastern Railway Company, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 39; 44 L. J., Ch. 507; 33 L. T. 214; 23 W. R. 371.

An award made within enlarged time is good, though it does not recite that the arbitrators did enlarge the time. George v. Lonsley, 8 East, 13.

Publishing—Ready for Delivery.—An award is to be considered as published when the parties have notice that it is ready for delivery on payment of the reasonable charges. Musselbrook v. Dunkin, 9 Bing. 605; 2 M. & Scott, 740; 1 D. P. C. 722.

And so of the charges, whether reasonable or not. McArthur v. Campbell, 2 N. & M. 444; 5 B. & Ad. 518.

An award which is required to be made in writing, and ready to be delivered at such a time, is complete if made in writing, and ready to be delivered by the arbitrator within the time, though not actually delivered. Brown v. Vauver, 4 East, 584.

Where an order of reference required that the arbitrator should make and publish his award in writing, ready to be delivered to the parties, or such of them as should require the same, on or before a certain day:—Held, that the award was published and ready to be delivered within the meaning of the order, when it was executed by the arbitrator in the presence of and attested by witnesses; and that it could not be set aside, although the plaintiff died on the following day, and before he had notice that the award was ready. Brooke v. Mitchell, 6 M. & W. 473; 8 D. P. C. 392; 4 Jur. 656.

Where an award purports, and is attested by a subscribing witness, to have been published on a certain day, and the witness also makes an affidavit that he saw it published, but does not say when it was published, the court will presume it to have been published on the day in question. Doe d. Clarke v. Stillwell, 3 N. & P. 701; 1 W. W. & H. 532; 8 A. & E. 645; 2 Jur. 591.

Time, how Computed.—On a reference it was agreed that the award should be made by the umpire within the two calendar months next after the matters were referred to him; the umpire was appointed on the 29th of June, and the time for making his award was enlarged for three months:—Held, that, in computing this time, the 29th of June was to be excluded, and that consequently an award made on the 29th of November was within the time limited. Higham, In re, 1 W. P. C. 28; 9 D. P. C. 209.

The amount of damages sustained, and to be thereafter sustained, by reason of the working of a mine, was referred to an arbitrator, who was to make his award, as to the damages already sustained, on or before the 20th of December, 1830; and, as to the damages to be thereafter sustained, at the expiration of every two months from the 20th of December. The arbitrator made the first award, but the second was not made until the 13th of July, 1831, and it included damages sustained by the plaintiff from the 20th of December, 1830, to the 26th April, 1831:—Held, that this was not an award made in pursuance of the reference, and was therefore void. Stephens v. Lowe, 2 M. & Scott, 44; 9 Bing. 32.

Where, by deed of arbitration, dated 1st June, the arbitrators were to make their award on or before the 1st October, with power, in case they should not agree in making their award within the time, to appoint an umpire, and his award to be binding, so as it be made six months after the date of his appointment; and the arbitrators appointed an umpire within the time allowed to them, who made his umpirage within six calendar, but not within six lunar, months of his appointment:—Held, that the umpirage was ill made. Swinford, In re, 6 M. & S. 226.

By a deed of submission in the Scottish form, an award was to be made betwixt the and the day of next, or any other day to which the submission might be prorogated:—Held, that the absence of date was immaterial, as it was equivalent to a general authority to be executed within a reasonable time. Macdougall v. Robertson (in error), 1 M. & P. 147; 2 Y. & J. 11; 4 Bing. 435.

If a cause is referred at the assizes, and a verdict taken for the plaintiff, with power to the arbitrator to certify for which party the verdict is to be entered, he may certify after the assizes are over, although no order of nisi prius is obtained. Tomes v. Hawkes, 2 P. & D. 248; 10 A. & E. 32; 3 Jur. 315; S. P., Salter v. Yeates, 5 D. P. C. 291; 2 Gale, 224; 2 M. & W. 67.

By deed matters in difference were referred; and the parties covenanted to perform the award, so as the award was made in writing, under the hands of the arbitrators; but no time within which the award was to be made was limited by the deed. By a memorandum, not under seal, indorsed on the deed after its execution, and signed by the arbitrators, but not by the parties, the arbitrators agreed that the award should be delivered on or before the 3rd of November:—Held, that the arbitrators could not, in the absence of any power to that effect in the deed, limit the time for making their award, so as to render an award made after the 3rd of November invalid. Morphett, In re, 2 D. & L. 967; 14 L. J., Q. B. 259; 10 Jur. 546.

Jointly liable to pay sum awarded.—Two several tenants of a farm agreed with the succeeding tenant to refer certain matters in difference respecting the farm, and jointly and severally promised to perform the award; the arbitrator awarded each of the two to pay a certain sum to the third:—Held, that they were jointly responsible for the sum awarded to be paid by each. Manwell v. Burridge, 7 T. R. 352.

Award to assign to A.—Semble, that a person cannot be required to assign an interest in premises to A., his executors, administrators, and assigns, where the terms of the award were that he should assign to A. Russel v. Headington, 1 Stark. 13.

Directions as to Payment of Money awarded.—By an award, dated the 13th of October, 1840, it was ordered that a sum of money be paid on the "28th day of October next":—Held, that the money was payable on the 28th day of that present month of October. Brown v. Smith, 8 D. P. C. 867.

Where the arbitrators requested the defendant to pay:—Held, that it was equivalent to an order to pay. Smith v. Hartley, 2 L. M. & P. 340; 10 C. B. 800; 20 L. J., C. P. 169; 15 Jur. 755.

To an action on a builder's bill, the particulars of demand being 104l. 12s., the defendant pleaded payment of 30l. before action, and payment into court of 45l. more. The cause was referred at nisi prius to a surveyor, who was to measure and value the plaintiff's work, and to certify for whom and for what amount the verdict should be entered; no order of nisi prius being drawn up. He certified that he was of opinion that 74l. 7s. was a fair and proper sum to be paid to the plaintiff:—Held, that this amounted to a verdict for the defendant. Salter v. Yates, 2 M. & W. 67.

A direction to enter a verdict in favour of a plaintiff for a certain sum is equivalent to an order to pay that sum. Cartwright v. Blackworth, 1 D. P. C. 489.

On a submission not giving a power to raise questions of law for the opinion of the court, the arbitrators awarded 82l. as compensation for damages; and in a subsequent part of the award they stated, "for the purpose of raising the question for the determination of the court, in case it should be pleased to entertain the same," that they awarded the 82l. on a principle, which they explained; but if the court should think that the damage ought to be estimated on another principle, which they likewise stated, then they awarded a compensation of 102l. On an application to set aside the award as not final:—Held, that as the sum of 82l. was positively awarded, the hypothetical adjudication which followed might be rejected as surplusage, and the award sustained. Wright, In re, 4 P. & D. 730; 1 Q. B. 98.

A cause and all matters in difference having been referred, the arbitrator set out all the facts upon the face of his award, and then awarded that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the defendant, and stated that he determined the action in favour of the defendant. He then, after awarding by whom the costs of the reference should be paid, concluded as follows:—"But if the court should be of opinion, upon the facts hereinbefore stated, that the plaintiff is entitled to recover in the action, then I determine the action in favour of the plaintiff, and order and award that the defendant pay damages to the plaintiff to the amount of 1s., and also pay to the plaintiff the costs of the reference:"—Held, that the arbitrator having come to a positive finding, and expressly declared his own opinion, the award was sufficiently final, and the latter clause might be rejected. Barton v. Ranson, 3 M. & W. 322.

An ejectment (in the old form, upon a demise of A., and the joint demise of B. and C.) after issue joined, was referred to the award, final end, and determination of an arbitrator, the costs of the cause and reference to abide the event. The arbitrator, after reciting the order of reference, made his award thus:—"I award and determine that the verdict in the cause be entered for the lessors of the plaintiff:"—Held, in an action by the lessors of the plaintiff against the defendant for costs, that as the words used had no technical meaning, they might be taken as an informal expression of the arbitrator's determination of the cause in favour of the lessors of the plaintiff generally, and that the award was therefore valid. Law v. Blackburn, 14 C. B. 77; 2 C. L. R. 28; 23 L. J., C. P. 28; 18 Jur. 130.

Omission as to Mode of taking Evidence.—Where an arbitrator omitted to state in his award that the evidence he had heard was upon oath:—Held, that the award was good. Annan v. Job, 10 Jur. 926.

Plan and Contents Incorporated.—A plan was made part of an award. There were figures on the plan, which referred to written descriptions at the foot of the plan, delineating certain places. Without these descriptions the plan was unintelligible:—Held, that these written descriptions were part of the plan, and incorporated with the award. Johnson v. Latham, 2 L. M. & P. 205; 20 L. J., Q. B. 236.

Setting out Evidence.—An award, setting out a considerable portion of the evidence adduced before the arbitrator, and finding expressly the matters referred, is good, although that evidence does not seem to support the finding. Arthur or Archer v. Owen, 9 D. P. C. 341; 5 Jur. 340.

In pursuance of articles of co-partnership, the accounts of a coaching concern were referred, at the end of every month, to a person appointed by the partners, for the purpose of ascertaining the profits made by each partner, and of determining what sum should be paid and received by each, in order to a proportionate distribution of the profits of the concern. Such an account was adjusted, and an action thereupon brought by one of the parties:—Held, that the partners not having assented to the account after it was made out, the account was binding only by virtue of the power conferred on the party appointed to adjust it, and required to be stamped as an award. Carr v. Smith, 5 Q. B. 128; D. & M. 192; 7 Jur. 600.

But where a number of coach proprietors, who horsed a coach, were in the habit of having monthly accounts made out, containing the name of proprietors, the amount of the receipts and disbursements, the number of miles worked by each, and the proportion of the earnings to which each was entitled, and these accounts were made out by the clerk of one of the proprietors, partly from materials furnished by them, and partly from the way-bills; and the practice was for the clerk to send to each proprietor a copy of the monthly account, shewing the amount which each had to receive or pay, and the proprietor or proprietors from or to whom he was to receive or pay such amount:—Held, that this account was not an award, and was admissible without a stamp. Goodyear v. Simpson, 15 M. & W. 16; 15 L. J., Ex. 191.

The appointment of an umpire made in writing by two arbitrators requires no stamp. Routledge v. Thornton, 4 Taunt. 704.

A bond conditioned for the due discharge by M. of the duties of clerk, provided that such discharge should be ascertained by the inspection of M.'s accounts by S.; and that the amount so ascertained should be liquidated damages. A paper by which S. has ascertained such amount requires to be stamped as an award. Jebb v. McKiernan, M. & M. 340.

A. and B. having a dispute as to the liability of B. to pay money to A., agreed to submit the case to a barrister, and to be bound by his opinion. Semble, that in an action to enforce such payment, the opinion of a barrister upon a case so submitted is admissible in evidence without an award stamp. Boyd v. Emmerson, 4 N. & M. 99; 2 A. & E. 184.

On the fly-leaf of an arbitration bond was an indorsement, bearing date after the time limited by the bond for making the award, and stating the parties within named had met that day by consent, on the award:—Held, that this memorandum, being evidence of a new agreement to refer, was not admissible in evidence without a stamp. Stephens v. Lowe, 2 M. & Scott, 44; 9 Bing. 32.

Where it is sought to draw up a rule for an attachment, it is competent for the officer of the court to object to the absence of a stamp on the award, and therefore to refuse to draw up the rule. Hill v. Slocumbe, 9 D. P. C. 339.

If an award is made on an improper stamp, and no application is made to enforce the award, the court will not set it aside. Preston v. Eastwood, 7 T. R. 95.

ii. Including Matters arising after Submission or Award.

When can be Entertained by Arbitrator.—To an action brought June 27, the defendant pleaded by way of set-off, a claim against the plaintiff, which was not payable till August 1st, though the consideration had been received by the plaintiff before her action was commenced. Under a judge's order of July 27th, by consent of both sides, all matters in difference between the parties, including the claim of the defendant in her set-off in the said action, were referred; the arbitrator made his award in November following:—Held, that the claim made in the set-off was properly entertained by the arbitrator as a matter in difference, though not payable till after the date of the action and the judge's order. Petoh v. Fountain or Conlan, 5 Bing. N. C. 442; 7 Scott, 441; 7 D. P. C. 427; 3 Jur. 436.

A rent-charge was devised to B., wife of A., not saying for her separate use. In replevin an avowry was made in the names of A. and B. for arrears; and issue being joined upon the title to such rent-charge, the cause and all matters in relation to the rent-charge were referred to D., who awarded that the arrears, including as well those due when the action was brought, as arrears which accrued between the action and the date of the reference, should be paid to B. This is not an excess of authority, either by reason of the arrears accruing subsequently to the action being included in the sum awarded, or by reason of the payment being directed to be made to B. only. Wynne v. Wynne, 4 M. & G. 253; 9 D. P. C. 901; 3 Sc., N. R. 435.

Declaration on an award, that an action in the county court for breaches of covenant to repair a mill and premises having been referred to an arbitrator under an order of reference giving him power to "decide all matters and questions to do justice between the parties," and power to order and direct what should be done by either or both of the parties, "either immediately or prospectively whether relating to the action or to the other matters in difference," and directing that the costs of the action, reference and award should be in his discretion, he made his award, reciting that by a lease for seven years of the mills and premises, the defendant covenanted to repair and keep in repair the mill, weir and mill bank, and ordering that the defendant should pay a certain sum for damages claimed in the particulars of the action, and another sum for damages from the date of the summons to that of the award. Breach, non-payment:—Held, that the terms of the reference authorized the arbitrator to give damages accruing up to the date of the award, and that so much of the award was good. Lewis v. Rossiter, 44 L. J., Ex. 136; 33 L. T. 260; 23 W. R. 332.

Under the terms of a submission, the arbitrators may have power to dispose of a debt not due, but accruing between the parties. Brown v. Watson, 8 D. P. C. 22; 8 Scott, 386; 6 Bing. N. C. 118.

Interest after Date of Award.—On a submission to arbitration the parties agreed to abide by the award "of and concerning the premises or anything in anywise relating thereto." The arbitrators awarded that a certain sum should be paid with interest up to a day subsequent to the date of the award:—Held, that they had exceeded the powers of the submission in so awarding. Morphett, In re, 2 D. & L. 967; 14 L. J., Q. B. 259; 10 Jur. 546.

iii. Giving Directions and Ordering Execution of Deeds.

Express Power to give Directions.—An ejectment (in the old form) upon the several demises of T. M. and A. M. was referred after issue joined, the costs of the action and of the reference and award to abide the event. There was a clause in the order, "that the arbitrator should, in the event of his finding in favour of the lessors of the plaintiff, have power to order immediate possession to be given of the land and premises in question in the action to the lessors of the plaintiff T. M. and also how and in what manner such possession should be given, and if not given, how it should be taken." The arbitrator awarded thus:—"I award in favour of the lessors of the plaintiff, and order that immediate possession be given of the land and premises in question in this action to the lessors of the plaintiff, and that the defendant pull or take down the wall forming the gable end of a room, and which wall he has erected upon the land of the lessors, or so much of the wall which now stands four inches and a half, or thereabouts, upon the land of the lessors, and upon a wall which divides the property of the lessors from that of the defendant:—"Held, that the award in favour of the lessors of the plaintiff generally was sufficiently final; and that, in the absence of proof to the contrary, it must be taken that there was a state of facts in the locus in quo to which the direction as to the wall would reasonably apply, and that the award was therefore sufficiently certain. Mays v. Cannell, 15 C. B. 107; 3 C. L. R. 218; 24 L. J., C. P. 41; 1 Jur., N. S. 183.

Implied Power.—When a question of sufficiency of title is referred, an arbitrator exceeds his authority by awarding a conveyance accompanied with a bond stipulating for indemnity in case of eviction by reason of any defect in the title. Ross v. Boards, 3 N. & P. 382; 8 A. & E. 291; 1 W. W. & H. 876; 2 Jur. 567.

If a cause is referred, the costs to abide the event, and the arbitrator finds all the issues, some for the plaintiff and some for the defendant, this is an event to the cause, on which the costs can be taxed; but if the arbitrator goes on, and directs that no further proceedings shall be taken in the action, he exceeds his power, though the award is bad pro tanto only. Ward v. Hall, 9 D. P. C. 610; 5 Jur. 800. S. P., Hobson v. Stewart, 4 D. & L. 589; 1 B. C. Rep. 288; 16 L. J., Q. B. 145.

An arbitrator, having authority to decide on what terms a partnership agreement should be cancelled, directed that the agreement should be cancelled; that one of the partners should have all the debts due to the firm, and should, if necessary, sue for them in the name of his late partner:—Held, that in authorizing one of the parties to sue in the name of the other, the arbitrator had not exceeded his authority. Burton or Burt v. Wigley or Wigmore, 1 Scott, 610; 1 Bing. N. C. 665; 1 Hodges, 81.

An action for injury to houses and lands was referred to an arbitrator, who was to settle at what price and on what terms the defendant should purchase the plaintiff's property. He fixed the sum and awarded that the defendant might use the plaintiff's name to enforce certain rights and remedies:—Held, that the award was not bad on the ground of an excess of authority in respect to the use of the plaintiff's name. Round v. Hatton, 10 M. & W. 660; 2 D. N. S. 446; 12 L. J., Ex. 7.

A submission being of all matters in difference between the parties, an award of so much to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiffs on their banking account, and for which sum the plaintiffs were to give the defendant a release, is binding between them; for no other matter in difference between them shall be intended unless it is shewn. Ingram v. Milnes, 8 East, 445. But see 2 Moore, 723.

By a reference, all matters in difference were submitted between the parties. It appeared before the arbitrators that the plaintiff and defendant were proprietors of a ship, and that disputes had arisen as to their liability to pay the expenses, the vessel having been arrested by process out of the court of Admiralty on the 24th March, 1835; the arbitrators directed the plaintiff to pay all debts incurred subsequently to that period, and ordered that he should give the defendant a bond of indemnity against the payment of these debts:—Held, that the award was good. Brown v. Watson, 8 D. P. C. 22; 8 Scott, 386; 6 Bing. N. C. 118.

A submission authorized arbitrators to discontinue certain actions, and to make any orders as to the time and terms of the discontinuance. They directed all the actions to cease, and that the defendant in one should give up the premises sought to be recovered, and if not, that judgment should be entered up against him:—Held, that this direction, as to entering up the judgment, was not a ground for setting aside the award. James v. Powell, 1 W. W. & H. 60.

An action by a reversioner was referred. The arbitrator awarded that the action was brought to try a right, besides the mere right to recover damages:—Held, that he was not bound to state what was the right which the action was brought to try. Angus v. Redford, 11 M. & W. 69; 2 D., N. S. 735; 12 L. J., Ex. 180.

In an action for waste, a verdict was taken for the plaintiff for the damages in the declaration, subject to a reference: the arbitrator directed the verdict to stand for a reduced amount:—Held, that he was not bound to find expressly that the premises were out of repair. Bacon v. Smith, 5 Jur. 549.

Directions must be Certain.—An action for polluting the water of a watercourse was referred, with power to the arbitrator to regulate the enjoyment of the water:—Held, that an award directing a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff, and that the defendant should at all times take all proper and reasonable precautions for preventing the water from being rendered unfit for the plaintiff's use, and in particular, should use a process of filtering mentioned in the award, was bad for uncertainty. Stonehewer v. Farrar, 6 Q. B. 730; 14 L. J., Q. B. 122; 9 Jur. 203.

The direction as to the particular process was, that the water passing from the defendant's to the plaintiff's premises should be passed through filtering lodges made, or to be made, by the defendant, so as to be thereby purified and cleansed for the plaintiff's use, "so far as the same can be purified and cleansed by the ordinary and most approved process of filtering:—Held, that the description, by reference only to the "ordinary and most approved process," was uncertain, and the award bad in this respect. Ib.

On a submission of a cause and all matters in difference between lessor and lessee, the costs to abide the event, an award that certain fixtures have been wrongfully removed by lessor, to the value of 11l., and that the lessee shall set up others in their place, to be left for the lessor at the end of his term, and that the lessor shall pay the lessee 11l. on a specified day, is bad for want of authority, though the removal of such fixtures was, in fact, a matter in difference. Price v. Popkin, 10 A. & E. 139; 2 P. & D. 304; 3 Jur. 433.

Held, also, that such award was uncertain in not specifying the value, quality or description of fixtures to be set up by the lessee, and might be set aside by the lessor. Ib.

Award of Mutual Releases.—An arbitrator, by having awarded mutual and general releases; must be deemed to have adjudged and finally decided upon all matters, and the general release would be an answer to any action or claims founded upon them. Wharton v. King, 2 B. & Ad. 528.

Where all matters in difference are referred, an award directing the execution of general releases closes all accounts between the parties up to the time of the submission. Trimingham v. Trimingham, 4 N. & M. 786.

M. built a ship for G. and others, and purchased stores for the ship on his own credit. On a reference of all matters of difference between M. & G., G. took upon himself the payment of the bills, and requested the umpire to fix the liability in respect of them upon him. The umpire directed G. to pay to M. the balance which he found due to the latter after giving G. credit for the amount of the bills; he then awarded that G. should be solely liable in respect of the bills, and should execute a bond to indemnify M. against them; and ordered that, after G. had paid the balance and the bills, the parties should execute mutual releases of all claims and demands whatsoever, and that the form of the releases should be settled by P. in case of dispute. The court refused to set aside the award, holding that the umpire had authority to order G. to be liable for and to pay the bills, and to execute the bond of indemnity; and that, although the delegation to P. of authority to settle the releases was void, it did not affect the validity of the award, even if it vitiated the whole of the direction as to the giving releases. Goddard, In re, 1 L., M. & P. 25; 19 L. J., Q. B. 305.

Execution of Deeds.—Where an arbitrator directed A. to sign, seal and deliver a deed forthwith to B., though it appeared on the face of the award that the execution of that deed was to depend upon the prior execution of award:—Held, that the award was not bad, the word "forthwith" meaning as soon as B. should be in a condition to call upon A. to execute. Boyes v. Bluck, 13 C. B. 652; S. C., sub nom. Bluck, In re, 22 L. J., C. P. 173.

General words in a release are limited by the recitals; and therefore, where an arbitrator, having power to settle deeds of indemnity with respect to the purchase of a rectory and tithes, settled a deed reciting that A. was to indemnify B. in respect of that purchase, and the release contained general words of indemnity with respect to all acts to be done in respect of the premises:—Held, that the award was not bad for excess, on account of the largeness of the indemnity, but that the indemnity must be taken to be in respect of lawful acts done in carrying out the recited provisions. Ib.

When an award directs a lease to be made containing certain specific covenants, and it is alleged, on the part of the defendant, that the plaintiff has acted in contravention of the terms of the covenant since the date of the award, the Court of Chancery will, if the case is at all doubtful, order the leases to be antedated, so as to enable the defendant to rely on the alleged breaches at law. Blackett v. Bates, 2 Hem. & M. 610.

In an agreement for a lease for a term of years from the 1st May, 1801, the lessee was to be allowed three years from that date, for winning a colliery, without payment of any rent: an arbitrator, being authorized to give such directions for a lease, according to the agreement, as he should think fit, directed a lease for years from the 1st May, 1804:—Held, that he had thereby exceeded his authority. Bonner v. Liddell, 1 B. & B. 80.

Discretionary Power.—Where an arbitrator is "to determine what he shall think fit to be done by either of the parties," he is not bound to direct affirmatively that something shall be done, unless he shall so think fit. Angus v. Redford, 2 D., N. S. 735; 11 M. & W. 69; 12 L. J., Ex. 180.

Where a submission contains a clause empowering an arbitrator to direct what, if anything, shall be done by the parties, an invalid execution of such power does not vitiate the whole award. Semble, it is otherwise where the terms of the submission are obligatory. Nicholls v. Jones, 6 Ex. 373; 2 L. J., M. & P. 335; 20 L. J., Ex. 275.

iv. Must Extend to all Matters Referred.

In what cases.—Where one of the matters in difference between A. and B., parties to a submission, was, whether at the time of the submission, on a day therein named, a partnership existed between them; and if it ever did exist, whether it had been put an end to; and if so, at what time, and on what day; and the arbitrator found that if any partnership ever existed between them the same was dissolved and put an end to by mutual consent and agreement on a certain day (subsequently to that mentioned in the submission), and that nothing was due from A. to B. in respect of profits:—Held, that, as the arbitrator did not find whether the partnership did exist or not, the award was bad. Bhear v. Harradine, 7 Ex. 269; 21 L. J., Ex. 127.

A reference between the executors and A., the partner of a deceased person, recited that A. averred that partnership dealings had subsisted between the deceased and himself previously to 1837; that an agreement of partnership, to commence from January, 1837, was entered into; and that differences had ensued respecting the settlement of accounts. All matters and accounts were subsequently referred. The arbitrator found, that a partnership had existed from December, 1835, till the death of the testatrix, and that a balance was due to the estate:—Held, that the award was neither uncertain nor defective, in omitting to award specifically on the partnership mentioned under the agreement. Warner, In re, 2 D. & L. 148; 13 L. J., Q. B. 370; 8 Jur. 1097.

A cause and all matters in difference between the parties (there being no matters in difference except in the cause) were referred by order of nisi prius; the order providing, that the verdict should be entered for the plaintiff for the damages in the declaration, subject to be reduced or vacated, or instead thereof a verdict for the defendant or a nonsuit entered according to the award. The arbitrator directed that the verdict entered for the plaintiff should be vacated, and a nonsuit entered:—Held, that the award was bad, as not finally determining the matters in difference in the cause. Wild v. Holt, 9 M. & W. 161.

An award made upon a reference of a cause, and all matters in difference between the parties, is bad if it omits to assess damages upon a judgment of nil dicit upon a new assignment of excess. Wykes v. Shipton, 3 N. & M. 240; 8 A. & E. 246, n.

An action against a pawnbroker was referred, and his liability to damages depended on whether or not he had made sufficient inquiries when the goods were pledged. The arbitrator, in a case stated for the opinion of the court, having declared that he was unable to find whether or not the defendant had made sufficient inquiries, the court referred it back to him to find, affirmatively or negatively, whether or not sufficient inquiries had been made. Ferguson v. Norman, 4 Bing. N. C. 52; 5 Scott, 304; 1 Jur. 986.

Where an ejectment upon several demises of different lessors was referred, and the arbitrator awarded in favour of the plaintiff, it was not sufficient for him to set out, by metes and bounds, the lands which he intended to be recovered; but he must have awarded on which of the demises it was to be recovered; he ought also to make an express award as to the residue which he intended the plaintiff not to recover. Doe d. Madkins v. Horner, 3 N. & P. 344; W. W. & H. 348; 8 A. & E. 235; 2 Jur. 417.

Where two substantial matters are referred, and the arbitrator finds only upon one of them, the award is bad altogether, as not being conclusive. Hayward v. Phillips, 1 N. & P. 288; 6 A. & E. 119; 1 Jur. 985.

Upon a reference of all actions, controversies, &c., and also of two distinct matters of difference, if the arbitrator omits to decide one of such distinct matters, that vitiates the whole award. Randall v. Randall, 7 East, 81; 3 Smith, 90.

A submission empowered an arbitrator to settle and judge of alleged defects in a house, and to determine what was necessary to put it in a perfect condition, and to settle certain claims for extra work by one of the parties, and the costs of the arbitration were to abide the result of the award. The award ordered a sum to be paid by one party to and received by the other, in satisfaction of all the matters in difference referred:—Held, uncertain, and not final, for not deciding upon the various matters referred. Riders, In re, 3 Bing. N. C. 874; 5 Scott, 86; 3 Hodges, 222; 1 Jur. 406.

A question referred was whether W. or P. ought to be ultimately liable upon a note of which P. was maker, and W. indorser as surety for P., and whether P. was entitled to an indemnity from W. against the liability of P. to pay the note when it became due. The arbitrator found that the liability of P. on the note as between P. and W. should remain unaffected by the award:—Held, that the award was not final. Wilkinson v. Page, 1 Hare, 276; 6 Jur. 567.

Four actions between distinct parties, and all matters in difference, were referred. Among the matters in difference was a fifth action, relating to a part of the premises in dispute, of which fifth action the award took no notice, notwithstanding it had been mentioned to the arbitrator:—Held, that the omission rendered the award bad in toto. Stone v. Phillips, 4 Bing. N. C. 87; 5 Scott, 275; 6 D. P. C. 247; 3 Hodges, 302.

An award which leaves some of the questions undecided, or leaves it in doubt whether some of the questions have been decided, cannot be maintained. Wakefield v. Llanelly Railway and Dock Company, 11 Jur., N. S. 456; 12 L. T. 509; 13 W. R. 823—L. J.

An award, made upon submission of all disputes, reciting "that there had been a suit at law between the parties, which had run to great expense on both sides, and being left to the arbitrator to make an end of, he did determine that they should each of them pay their own charges at law, and that the defendant should pay the plaintiff 5s. for his making the first breach in law;" this is certain and final. Hawkins v. Colclough, 1 Burr. 274; 2 Ld. Ken. 553.

An action having been brought for the recovery of a sum of money, but which had only proceeded as far as the writ and appearance, and the defendant claiming a larger sum to be due to him, it was agreed that the action, and the disputes arising out of the accounts and other matters in difference, should be referred, the costs of the action, of the reference and of the award to abide the event of the award. The arbitrators awarded that the action should cease, and be no further prosecuted, and that on the balance of all accounts there was a sum of 661*l.* due to the defendant from the plaintiff, which they ordered him to pay on a particular day:—Held, that the award was sufficiently final, and decided the event of the action to prevent the plaintiff setting it aside. Eardley v. Seer, 4 D. P. C. 423; 1 C., M. & R. 327; 5 Tyr. 1071.

A. agreed to purchase land of B., the title to be made out to the satisfaction of B.'s attorney. The agreement being uncompleted, and disputes arising, all matters in difference between the parties, and the settlement of all questions on the agreement, were referred. The arbitrator awarded that B. should convey to A. the title to the land, contained in two abstracts given in evidence on the arbitration; he also prescribed the boundary of the land to be conveyed, and ordered that B. should execute an indemnity bond to A., to be forfeited if A. should be evicted by reason of defect in the title, and that, on execution of the premises, A. should pay the purchase-money; nothing further was awarded as to the validity of the title. The goodness of the title had been a matter of dispute before the arbitrator:—Held, that the award was bad, as not finally determining the questions referred. Ross v. Boards, 8 A. & E. 291.

Chancery Matters Referred.—By the terms of a submission, a chancery suit and all matters in difference between the parties were referred, and it was made an express matter of reference, whether an agreement between the parties should be rescinded or not. The arbitrator merely decided as to the chancery suit, that each party should pay his own costs; and gave no directions upon the subject of rescinding the agreement, but awarded specifically on every other subject-matter of the agreement:—Held, that the award was not sufficient. Upperton v. Tribe, 1 H. & W. 280; S. C. sub nom. Upperton and Tribe, In re, 3 A. & E. 295.

An arbitrator to whom all actions and causes of action and all matters in difference whatsoever, in two actions subsisting between the parties, have been referred, is not compelled to take matters of an equitable nature into consideration, but an award in reference to the two actions only is final. Craven v. Craven, 1 Moore, 403; 7 Taunt. 644.

A cause was referred to an arbitrator, who was to settle all matters in difference between the parties at law and in equity, so that he made his award by a certain day (with power of enlargement), to be delivered to the parties, or if either of them should be dead, to their personal representatives. The arbitrator was to be at liberty to make one or more awards at his discretion. At the time of the submission, two equity suits were pending, in which the parties to the action, and also certain infants, were concerned. Before any award was made, one of the parties to the equity suits died. The arbitrator ordered a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff, damages 500*l.*; and also that the defendants should pay to the plaintiff 350*l.*, for grievances not included in his declaration:—Held, first, that the award was sufficiently final, although it did not dispose of the equity suits; and, lastly, that the award of 350*l.* was sufficiently certain.

Wrightson v. Bywater, 6 D. P. C. 359; 3 M. & W. 199; 1 H. & H. 50.

As to Payment of Costs.—A replevin, and all matters in difference touching the distress, were referred, the costs of the suit to abide the event. The arbitrator awarded that the rent was 14*l.*, and that the sum of 6*l.* was due for rent at the time of the distress, that the plaintiff in replevin should pay the defendant 6*l.*, and that the action should be no further prosecuted. It did not appear for what rent the defendant had avowed:—Held, that the award did not shew who ought to pay the costs, which were to abide the event of the suit; and, consequently, that it was not final. Leeming, In re, 5 B. & Ad. 403; S. C. sub nom. Leeming v. Fearnley, 2 N. & M. 232.

A cause was referred, the costs to abide the event, and the arbitrators found two issues for the plaintiff and two for the defendant; and directed that the costs of the cause, and of the several issues found therein, should be paid to the plaintiff, or to the party entitled thereto:—Held, that the award was void as to the adjudication of the costs. Heatherington v. Robinson, 4 M. & W. 608; 7 D. P. C. 192; 8 L. J. Ex. 148.

Where a cause is referred (the costs of the suit, and of the reference and award, to abide the event), the arbitrator need not notice the costs in his award. Jupp v. Grayson, 1 C., M. & R. 523; 3 D. P. C. 199; 5 Tyr. 150.

An action and all matters in difference were referred, the costs of the suit and of the reference to abide the event of the award. The arbitrator directed the defendant to deliver certain goods to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff to pay a sum of money to the defendant; that all proceedings in the action should cease, and a general release given:—Held, that the award was not uncertain as to costs, as the effect of it was that each party should pay his own. Yates v. Knight, 2 Scott, 470; 2 Bing. N. C. 277; 1 Hodges, 368.

To an action on an award, the defendant set out the agreement of reference and the award, and averred that the award was not final:—Held, that upon a special verdict finding the agreement and award as set out, the award might be held void for not finally deciding as to the costs of making the submission a rule of court, which by the submission was left in the ordinary way in the discretion of the arbitrator. Williams v. Wilson, 9 Ex. 90; 1 C. L. R. 921; 23 L. J., Ex. 17.

Substantial Decision.—By a submission, it was left to an arbitrator to find, whether the plaintiff was liable to discharge a sum of money secured by a mortgage executed by him on or about the 29th of September, 1818. He found that the plaintiff was not liable to discharge a sum of money secured by mortgage, executed by him on the 26th of September, 1817, which was by the defendant produced to me as the mortgage in the indenture mentioned as and by the plaintiff admitted to be the mortgage executed by the plaintiff on or about the 26th of September, 1818. One deed only was mentioned in the submission:—Held, that the arbitrator had substantially decided the matter referred to him. Spooner v. Payne, 4 C. B. 328; 16 L. J., C. P. 225.

Where two agreed to be bound by the opinion of a professional man upon the construction of an act of parliament, and he gave his opinion in favour of one; such opinion was considered as final and conclusive, though it recommended the printed statute to be compared with the parliament roll before the matter was settled, under a doubt whether the statute was not misprinted. Price v. Hollis, 1 M. & S. 105.

A reference, under the Lands Clauses Act, to determine what sum should be paid on the value of land, and "what other, if any," sum for severance damage. An award was made, which, reciting the submission, and alleging that the arbitrator had considered the several matters, awarded a sum to be paid for purchase-money of the land, but did not say anything as to the severance damage.—Held, a good award. Beaufort (Duke) and Swansea Harbour (Trustees), In re, 8 C. B., N. S. 146; 29 L. J., C. P. 241; 6 Jur., N. S. 979; 1 L. T. 370; 8 W. R. 188.

Part of Claim admitted by Parties.—On a reference of all matters in difference, a demand on one side was laid before the arbitrators, and immediately admitted by the other party; no evidence was therefore given concerning it, or any adjudication upon it requested. The arbitrators made their award of and concerning the matters referred, directing payment of a sum of money (without saying on whose account) to the party against whom the above claim had been made, with costs, and it was proved that they left that claim out of consideration in making their award, as a matter not in dispute.—Held, that the award was bad, as the arbitrators ought to have taken notice of the admitted demand. Robson & Railton, In re, 1 B. & Ad. 723.

Where the parties covenanted to abide by the award of the arbitrator upon all points in difference between them, and eleven points were specifically referred, but the parties at the reference effected a settlement as to one of the eleven points, and withdrew it from the arbitrator's consideration:—Held, that the award was not bad for want of finality, because it did not find in favour of either party on this point, inasmuch as the conduct of the parties amounted to an admission that it was no longer a point in difference. Lawrence v. Bristol and North Somerset Railway Company, 16 L. T. 326.

Matters in Difference must be brought before Arbitrator.—An action of trespass in the Exchequer by a plaintiff against three, and all matters in difference between the parties, were referred, a verdict having been taken for the plaintiff. And by another order made at the same time, an action of replevin in the Queen's Bench by the same plaintiff against one only of the defendants, was also referred. The main question on both sides was, whether or not the plaintiff had become tenant to that party who was a defendant in both actions. No other tenancy was ever set up, or brought into question before the arbitrator. The reference of the replevin was first proceeded in, and the evidence taken in it was by consent read over as evidence in the action of trespass. The arbitrator awarded in the replevin that the plaintiff had good cause of action against the defendant, and was entitled to a verdict. In the action of trespass he awarded nothing as to the costs of the replevin, or whether at the date of the reference of either action a tenancy of the plaintiff to the party who was a defendant in both actions existed:—Held, that the award was good, these matters, if in difference, not having been brought before the arbitrator. Rees v. Waters, 16 M. & W. 263; 4 D. & L. 567.

To an action on an arbitration bond of all matters in difference, averring that the arbitrators took upon themselves the arbitration, and awarded, &c., the defendant pleaded that all matters were submitted; that there were disputes as to moneys claimed by him of the other party, and that the arbitrators took upon themselves to arbitrate of and concerning, &c.; and that they made no award of those sums; the plaintiff replied, that the arbitrators made their award of and concerning, &c., as in the declaration; to which there was a demurrer:—Held, that the plea was bad, for want of averring that the arbitrators had notice of the claims of the defendant, and refused to arbitrate concerning them. Elson v. Rolfe, 2 Smith, 459.

Where matters have been referred, it is a matter of evidence whether a particular matter of complaint has been subjected to the arbitrator's consideration. Martin v. Thornton, 4 Esp. 180; S. P., Race v. Farmer, 4 T. R. 146. And see Smith v. Johnson, 15 East, 213.

Where cross actions and all matters in difference are referred, and the award decides the actions only, it is no objection to the award that a claim not included in either action was brought before the arbitrator, upon which he has not adjudicated, unless it is also averred that he did not take such claim into his consideration. Re v. St. Katherine Dock Company, 1 N. & M. 121; 4 B. & Ad. 360.

v. Several Claims and Issues.

a. Reference of all Matters in Difference.

Whether Finding on each Matter Necessary.]

—A declaration on an agreement to supply timber and slates for the building of a house, alleged as a breach the non-supply of the timber only. The defendant pleaded that he did not agree; that he did supply timber; and part payment. The cause and all matters in difference were referred, and the arbitrator, after reciting that he had heard the evidence produced "touching the matters in difference," stated that he made his award "of and concerning the premises," and proceeded to find specially on each of the issues:—Held, that the award was sufficient, although it appeared that there was a matter in difference submitted to the arbitrator as to the non-supply of slates. Dunn v. Warristers, 9 M. & W. 293; 1 D., N. S. 626.

Action on a deed. Pleas, non est factum and payment. After issue, the cause and all matters in difference were referred, the costs of the cause, of the reference and award and all other costs to abide the event. The arbitrator awarded, "of and concerning the matters referred, that on a settlement of all matters in difference, accounts, claims and demands between the parties, up to the date hereof, there is due from the defendant to the plaintiff 300*l.*," and he ordered the same to be forthwith paid:—Held, that the award was good on the face of it, as the arbitrator had awarded upon every matter in difference. Bradley v. Phelps, 6 Ex. 897; 21 L. J., Ex. 310.

Where parties by mutual bonds submitted all matters in difference to arbitration, and the award, after reciting the submission, awarded (without stating it to be of and concerning the premises) that a certain sum was due and owing from one party to the other:—Held, that the award must be intended to be made on all the matters referred. In re Brown, 1 P. & D. 391; 9 A. & E. 522; 2 W. W. & H. 124.

Upon a reference of all matters in difference and a cause, the award was, that a gross sum should be paid, without distinguishing how much in respect of the matters in difference, and how much in respect of the cause:—Held sufficient. Taylor v. Skuttleworth, 8 Scott, 565; 6 Bing. N. C. 277; 8 D. P. C. 280.

By an order of nisi prius, an action and all matters between the parties at law and in equity, including a chancery suit, were referred to an arbitrator, who awarded that a sum of money should be paid to the plaintiff in the action, and that the bill in chancery should be dismissed, and that all proceedings therein should utterly cease and determine:—Held, that the suit in equity, and all matters in difference in that suit, and all matters in difference between the parties, were thereby finally determined, although one of the matters in dispute in the chancery suit was brought before the arbitrator as a matter of difference between the parties, and was not otherwise disposed of than by the ending of the chancery suit. Pearse v. Pearse, 9 B. & C. 484.

An award that certain actions be discontinued, and each party pay his own costs, is final and good, being in effect an award of a stet processus. Blanchard v. Lilly, 9 East, 497.

Where an action for a breach of covenant was pending, which, with all the matters in difference, was referred, the costs of the suit to abide the event:—Held, that an award, that the plaintiff had no demand on the defendant, on account of any alleged breaches of covenant, or on any other account whatsoever, was final, although the suit was not in terms concluded. Jackson v. Yabsley, 5 B. & A. 848. But see Winter v. White, 2 Moore, 723; 1 B. & B. 350.

An agreement recited that a chancery suit for a dissolution of partnership existed between the parties, and that, in order to put an end to it, they had agreed to refer all matters in dispute arising out of their accounts or otherwise; and power was given to the arbitrator to assess and apportion the costs of the suit, as well as the other costs. The arbitrator found a sum of money to be due from one of the parties to the other, and apportioned the costs of the suit and the other costs:—Held, that the award was final, and had sufficiently adjudicated on the chancery suit. Marsh, In re, or Haywood v. Marsh, 16 L. J., Q. B. 330; 11 Jur. 657.

In an action on an award, the declaration stated the award to be made "of and concerning the premises." The submission recited, that the parties were relatives, and entitled to a distributive share of an intestate's (M.) effects. That his estate consisted of debts, farm-stock, cattle, corn, implements of husbandry, household goods, furniture, and other effects; that differences of opinion had arisen as to the value of the farm-stock, cattle, &c. (not naming the debts); and that it was agreed to refer the disputes. The award, which was made "touching and concerning the matters in difference," found that the defendant, who was the administrator of M., had moneys, farm-stock, cattle, corn, &c. of M., to the value of 926*l*. (but did not mention the effects). It awarded that the defendant should retain a certain sum, for the purpose of paying the rent and taxes of tenements in the occupation of M.

at the time of his decease; and that the defendant should pay to the parties their distributive shares of the residue of the estate of M. It was objected to the award that it was bad, on the grounds, first, that the arbitrator had omitted to find the value of the "effects," or of the tenements mentioned; secondly, that it did not state the amount of the debts; and, thirdly, that it did not find the amount of the distributive shares:—Held, that, upon these pleadings, as the award was expressly made "of and concerning the premises," the court would intend that the arbitrator had adjudicated upon all matters referred to him; and that, if he had not done so, the omission should have been shewn by plea. Perry v. Mitchell, 2 D. & L. 452; 12 M. & W. 792; 14 L. J., Ex. 88.

Upon the trial of an action, a verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to a reference of all matters in difference. The defendant claimed before the arbitrator a sum of money due to him upon the balance of an account, which was admitted by the plaintiff to be due. The award, without stating that it was made of and concerning the premises, directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff with damages:—Held, sufficient. Gray v. Guennap, 1 B. & A. 106.

Upon a declaration for negligence, and for money paid, an arbitrator, under an order of nisi prius, found that the plaintiff had "good cause" (not causes) of action for a certain sum, and directed a verdict to be entered up for that sum:—Held, sufficiently certain, as he had in effect ordered a general verdict to be entered for the plaintiff on the whole of the declaration. Dicas v. Jay, 2 M. & P. 448; 5 Bing. 281.

A cause and all matters in dispute between the parties being referred, the arbitrators, "having heard the proofs and allegations of the parties touching the matters in difference between them," awarded, "concerning the same, that the defendant should pay the plaintiff 11*l*. 5*s*. in full of all demands in the cause:—Held, sufficiently final. Day v. Bonnin, 3 Bing. N. C. 219; 3 Scott, 397; 2 Hodges, 207.

Where all matters in difference between the plaintiff and defendant were referred, and the defendant made several claims against the plaintiff, which might be the subject of a cross action, and the arbitrator found that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the defendant:—Held, that the award was sufficient; all matters in difference between the parties having been referred. Hayllar v. Ellis, 3 M. & P. 553; 6 Bing. 225.

A cause and all matters in difference between parties were referred. A cross claim was urged on the part of the defendant before the arbitrator. He, professing to make his award "of and concerning the several premises so referred as aforesaid," after disposing of all the issues in favour of the plaintiff, directed the defendant to pay a gross sum to the plaintiff, apportioned the costs of the reference and award, and on payment directed that the plaintiff should execute and deliver to the defendant a general release, but nothing was said in respect of the cross claim:—Held, that the award was nevertheless final; for that it must be intended, from the silence of the arbitrator upon the subject, that he had negatived the cross claim. Harrison v. Cranwick (in error), 13 C. B. 399; 21 L. J., C. P. 113; 16 Jur. 315—Ex. Ch.; affirming, 10 C. B. 441; 1 L. M. & P. 721; 20 L. J., C. P. 56; 15 Jur. 108.

Where an arbitrator, to whom all matters in difference in a cause are referred, professes by his award to deal with the whole matters, it is no objection that he omits specifically to dispose of one of the matters in difference, if it necessarily appears from the whole of the award that that matter was substantially disposed of. Biggs v. Hansell, 16 C. B. 562.

An action of covenant and trover was referred by an order of nisi prius directing that "the jury do find a verdict for the plaintiff for the claim in the declaration, subject to a reference to a valuer, who is to decide whether there is any damage to the plaintiff by reason of the premises not being in a sufficient state of repair under the terms of the lease, in which case the valuer is to award the amount of damage to the reversion. It is also ordered that the valuer is to say what compensation (if any) the plaintiff is entitled to in consequence of the alterations which have taken place in the premises, and that the valuer shall be attended by two witnesses only on each side to explain the past and present state of the premises. It is also ordered that the question of certificates as to costs of this action and the costs of the reference shall be left to the master, when the amount of the verdict is ascertained." Upon this a verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to the reference. The arbitrator found as follows:—"I certify that beyond 17l. paid into court there is no damage to the plaintiff by reason of the premises not being in a sufficient state of repair under the terms of the lease; nor is he entitled to any compensation in consequence of the alterations which have taken place in the premises:—"Held, that the award was good as disposing of the only matters left to the arbitrator, though it did not dispose of all the issues upon the record, and that the plaintiff was thereupon entitled to nominal damages of 1s. Sowdon v. Mills, 30 L. J., Q. B. 175; 3 L. T. 754.

An award (entitled in the cause) recited a submission of "all claims, &c. in dispute in this action and of all matters in difference between the parties," and stated that the umpire, "having heard, examined and considered the allegations, witnesses, and evidence of the plaintiff and the defendant concerning the premises," made his award "of and concerning the premises," that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff the sum of 100l. in full of all demands in this case:—Held, that it sufficiently appeared on the face of the award that the umpire had disposed of all matters referred to him. Mannion v. Harrison, 11 Ir. R., C. L. 102.

B. When Extent of Cause or Issues must be Determined.

On Account of Costs, &c.]—A cause (the declaration containing eight counts) and all matters in difference between the plaintiff and defendant, were referred; the costs of the cause, and of the reference and award, to abide the event. The arbitrator found that the plaintiff had good cause of action in respect of the matters in five counts, and awarded damages, and directed that no further proceedings should be had in the cause, but made no specific award as to the three remaining counts:—Held, that the award was not final, there being no determination as to these counts, and consequently no legal event as to them to authorize taxation of costs thereon. Norris v. Daniel, 4 M. & Scott, 383; 10 Bing. 507; 2 D. P. C. 798.

Where the costs of the cause are to abide the event of the award, the arbitrator is bound to find specially upon each issue. Bourke v. Lloyd, 2 D., N. S. 452; 10 M. & W. 550; 12 L. J., Ex. 4.

But where the costs of the reference and the award only are to abide the event, he is not bound so to find, unless required by the reference. Id.

A cause in which there were several issues was referred, the costs to abide the event. The arbitrator awarded on each issue separately, and partly for each party, but gave no directions for entering a verdict or nolle prosequi:—Held, that the award was sufficiently final, so that the costs could be taxed. Clarke v. Owen, 2 H. & W. 324.

Where three actions were referred, the costs to abide the event, and the award directed that a certain sum should be paid to each plaintiff, without awarding on each issue, and that the action should be discontinued:—Held, that the award was bad. Hunt v. Hunt, W. W. & D. 62; 5 D. P. C. 442; 1 Jur. 135.

A declaration contained counts for goods sold, money had and received, money paid, and money due on account stated. The defendant pleaded non assumpsit, payment and set-off. After issue joined, it was agreed that all proceedings in the action should be stayed, and the action and all matters in difference referred to two arbitrators, the costs of the action to abide the event of the award. The arbitrators awarded that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in a certain sum, and directed final judgment to be entered for the plaintiff for that sum:—Held, that the award was bad, there being no specific finding upon the issues raised on each of the counts in the declaration by the plea of non assumpsit. Kilburn v. Kilburn, 2 D. & L. 633; 15 M. & W. 671.

Where a reference directed a general verdict to be entered for the plaintiff, in a cause where there were several issues, "the costs of the cause to abide the event," and the arbitrator orders that the verdict should stand, but the damages be reduced to a sum named, a specific finding on each issue is not necessary. Smith, In re, 6 D. & L. 20; 14 Jur. 483.

A cause and all matters in difference were referred. The submission contained a clause that the costs of the reference and award should be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator found that a specific sum was due to the plaintiff "in respect of all the matters in difference so referred to him":—Held, that the finding was sufficiently certain. Baker v. Cotterill, 7 D. & L. 20; 18 L. J., Q. B. 345; 14 Jur. 1120.

A cause, in which there were several issues, having been referred, the costs of the cause to abide the event, the arbitrator awarded that the plaintiff "had good cause of action" against the defendant, "as stated in the declaration," and assessed the damages at one sum:—Held, that it sufficiently appeared that all the issues were decided in the plaintiff's favour. Phillips v. Higgins, 2 L., M. & P. 355; 20 L. J., Q. B. 357.

In an action by an attorney on a bill of costs, a verdict was taken by consent, and the matter was referred together with all matters in difference. Another bill of costs was also disputed before the arbitrator. He merely awarded that the verdict should be entered for a certain sum and the defendant should pay the costs of the reference, without saying that that sum was for the first bill of costs, or making any mention of the second bill.—Held, that the award was bad. Gyde v. Boucher, 2 H. & W. 127; 5 D. P. C. 127.

Two causes between the same parties, one action for mesne profits, in which the plaintiff had declared, the other in assumpsit, in which he had only issued his writ, were referred; the costs of the causes, and of the reference and award, to abide the event of the award. The arbitrator, after reciting the order of reference, and that he had duly considered the proofs concerning the premises, awarded concerning the same, that all further proceedings in the causes should cease and be no further prosecuted; and that the defendant should, on a certain day, pay to the plaintiff a certain sum, in full of all demands in the causes.—Held, a determination of both causes in favour of the plaintiff. Wynne v. Edwards, 12 M. & W. 708; 1 D. & L. 976; 13 L. J., Ex. 222.

Where one of the parties admits the claim of the other, but seeks to reduce the balance by a set-off, it is sufficient for the award to state that a sum is owing to one side or the other, without further noticing the set-off. Brown, In re, 1 P. & D. 391; 9 A. & E. 522.

A cause, in which there was a plea of the general issue, and also a plea of set-off, was referred, the costs of the reference and award to abide the event of the award. The arbitrator awarded, that "the plaintiff had not at the commencement of the action, or at any time afterwards, any cause of action against the defendant:—Held, that the arbitrator had determined the action, and that he was not bound to decide upon each issue, unless he was requested so to do. Duckworth v. Harrison, 7 D. P. C. 71; 4 M. & W. 432; 1 H. & H. 349; 2 Jur. 1090.

On a reference of all matters in difference in a cause which involves several issues, the costs of the cause to abide the event, the award is good, although there is no specific finding upon each issue, if it appears by necessary intendment that the arbitrator has disposed of all the issues. Humphrey v. Pearce, 7 Ex. 696; 22 L. J., Ex. 120; S. P., Stonekewer v. Farrar, 6 Q. B. 730; 9 Jur. 203.

To a declaration containing three counts, the defendant pleaded non assumpsit, tender, set-off and payment, upon which issues were joined. The cause being referred, the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, the arbitrator found for plaintiff on the first, third and fourth issues; and on the second for defendant:—Held, that the finding was sufficient, and that it was not necessary there should be distinct findings on the issues raised by the plea of non assumpsit upon each separate count. Adam v. Rowe, 3 D. & L. 331; 15 L. J., Q. B. 223; 10 Jur. 840.

Where a cause in which there are several issues is referred, and the costs of the cause are to abide the event of the award, the arbitrator must award specifically on each issue; and an award, that the plaintiff had good cause of action against the defendant, and that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a certain sum, together with the costs of the action and of the reference, is bad. Bourke v. Lloyd, 10 M. & W. 550; 2 D., N. S. 452; 12 L. J., Ex. 4.

In an action the defendant pleaded non assumpsit, payment, and a set-off; and issues having been joined thereon, the cause and all matters in difference were by a judge's order referred to arbitration, the costs of the cause to abide the event, and the costs of the reference and award to be at the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator awarded, "that the plaintiff should pay to the defendant 16l. 10s. 2d., being the balance which I find to be due from plaintiff to the defendant;" and he further awarded that each party should pay his own costs of reference, and a moiety of the costs of the award:—Held, that the award was bad, on the ground of uncertainty as to the finding of the issues, and there being no adjudication at all upon the cause. Pearson v. Archbold, 11 M. & W. 477; 2 D., N. S. 1018; 12 L. J., Ex. 308; 7 Jur. 447.

An action of trover, with pleas not guilty and not possessed as to part, and payment into court as to the residue, was referred to an arbitrator, who adjudged that the verdict should stand, and that the damages should be reduced:—Held, that the award was good, the arbitrator having sufficiently decided on all the issues. Wilcox v. Wilcox, 4 Ex. 500; 19 L. J., Ex. 27.

A cause in which the defendant had pleaded never indebted, the Statute of Limitations, payment, set-off, and accord and satisfaction was referred to a county court judge; the costs of the cause to abide the event of the cause, and the costs of the reference to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The county court judge having certified that the defendant was not, at the time of the commencement of the action, indebted to the plaintiff, and having found a general verdict for the defendant, and directed that the plaintiff should pay the costs of the reference, the court sent back the certificate to be amended by stating the manner in which the several issues were found. Holland v. Judd, 3 C. B., N. S. 826.

Where a cause containing a count on a promissory note for 22l. 11s. 9d., and another on an account stated for 30l., was referred to a barrister, who found that the plaintiff had good cause of action for, and was legally entitled to recover from the defendant, the sum of 22l. 11s. 9d., being the amount of the promissory note mentioned in the pleading in the cause:—Held, that the award was bad, as not containing any adjudication on the account stated. Giaburne v. Hart, 5 M. & W. 50; 7 D. P. C. 402; 3 Jur. 536.

A count for non-performance of an award stated the pending of an action between the plaintiff and the defendant, wherein the plaintiff claimed damages from the defendant for work and labour, materials and goods sold and delivered, a reference by judge's order to an arbitrator, the award to be made on or before the 16th April next ensuing, with liberty to the arbitrator to enlarge the time, but not beyond the 1st of May; the costs of the cause to abide the event. The declaration alleged mutual promises to perform the award so to be made and published, and stated two enlargements by judge's order and consent, made on the 18th April and the 19th May, until the 29th May, and an award made on that day, whereby the arbitrator ordered and determined that there was due from the defendant to the plaintiff, after balancing the accounts between them, and giving credit for all sums paid by the defendant to the plaintiff, and every item of set-off, 220l. 8s., the clear balance, and ordered payment thereof, and also of the costs of the reference and award. It then stated the amount of the costs of the cause and award, and averred non-payment by the defendant:—Held, that even if it had appeared that there were pleas of payment and set-off in the action, the award was final. Armitage v. Coates, 4 Ex. 641; 19 L. J., Ex. 95.

Where the costs of a cause and of the special jury are distinctly and separately submitted to the discretion of arbitrators, they must distinctly adjudicate upon each, or the award is bad. George v. Lawsley, 8 East, 13.

In an agreement to refer an action and all matters in difference, the parties to abide by the award "of and concerning the action, and of and concerning the other matters in difference:—"—Held, that the arbitrator ought to have made an award concerning the action and the other matters separately. Rule v. Bryde, 1 Ex. 151; 16 L. J., Ex. 256.

An action by A. against B., and a cross action by B. against A., were referred by separate orders of reference under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 3. The action by B. against A. contained counts for not using a farm in a tenant-like manner, and for goods sold; and the defendant pleaded a denial of the tenancy and performance of the agreement; and never indebted, payment and set-off. The arbitrator made his award on one piece of paper, awarding for the plaintiff in the first action, and that in the second action there was nothing due or payable from the defendant to the plaintiff; and he ordered that the costs of the award should be paid by B. The court remitted the award to the arbitrator that he might make two awards and find the issues specifically. Hellaby v. Brown, 1 H. & N. 729; 26 L. J., Ex. 217.

Where several issues are referred, it is not indispensably necessary for an arbitrator to award on each issue, if his intention as to each of them is sufficiently clear from the general language of the award. Hunt v. Hunt, 5 D. P. C. 442; W. W. & D. 62; 1 Jur. 835.

Where the whole cause and all matters in difference are referred, the arbitrator is in the character of a jury, and shall find for the defendant on those issues only which are proved by him; even although it is directed that if the arbitrator shall find that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover any damages at all, a verdict shall be entered for the defendant. Woolfe v. Cooper, 6 D. P. C. 617; 4 Bing. N. C. 449; 1 Arn. 199; S. C., sub nom. Woolfe v. Hooper, 6 Scott, 281.

By a judge's order, a cause and all matters in difference were referred. The award, after reciting the order, professed to be made "of and concerning all the matters referred in the cause and under the order," and disposed of the issues in the action; and awarded that the defendants had no claim to certain bills accepted by the plaintiff, but was silent as to a claim by one of the defendants for money due to him for goods sold to the plaintiff, though such claim had been brought to the notice of the arbitrator:—Held, that the award sufficiently disposed of everything, as it amounted to an adjudication against the validity of such a claim. Jewell v. Christie, 2 L. R., C. P. 296; 36 L. J., C. P. 168; 15 L. T. 580.

Action on an agreement to build a house for the plaintiff, according to drawings, plans, and specifications, and to the satisfaction of the plaintiff. Pleas: first, non assumpsit; second, that the defendant did the work to the satisfaction of the plaintiff; third, that before the breach the contract was rescinded; fourth, leave and licence; and other pleas, alleging deviations from the contract, by agreement with, and direction of, the plaintiff. Issues having been joined, the cause was referred at nisi prius to an arbitrator, who awarded a general verdict for the defendant. Judgment having been entered up for the defendant on that verdict:—Held, that the record was not repugnant so as to afford ground of error. Cooper v. Langdon (in error), 2 D., N. S. 826; 10 M. & W. 785; 12 L. J., Ex. 485—Ex. Ch.

Where a cause and matters in dispute are referred, it is sufficient for the arbitrator to state that he finds the plaintiff "has no cause of action," without making any reference to matters in dispute, independently of the action, it not being shewn that any matters in dispute beyond the action are brought before him. Wyatt v. Curnell, 1 D., N. S. 327.

Clause in Submission allowing Arbitrator to find generally.—Where a cause, in which several issues are joined, is referred, a clause may be introduced into the order, that it shall be sufficient for the arbitrator to award in favour of the plaintiff, or defendant generally, unless either party requests him to find some particular issue. Morgan v. Thomas, 9 Jur. 92.

In an order of reference power was given to the arbitrator to find generally, or to find specific issues in favour of either party if required. The defendant succeeded in disproving the plaintiff's right to recover in respect of one of the matters in difference, but the arbitrator was not asked, either expressly or impliedly, to find the specific issues. He therefore found generally for the plaintiff, thus fixing the defendant with the whole of the costs, including his own costs of disproving one issue, and the costs incurred by the plaintiff in unsuccessfully endeavouring to establish it:—Held, that this was no ground for sending back the award. Wilson v. Hinckley, 18 L. T. 695.

Reference before Plea pleaded.—Where a declaration contains certain counts, and, before plea pleaded, the cause is referred, the arbitrator is not bound to find specifically upon each count. Bearup v. Peacock, 2 D. & L. 850; 14 M. & W. 149; 14 L. J., Ex. 232.

After writ issued (there being no pleadings), a cause and all matters in difference were referred; the costs of the cause were to abide the event, and the costs of the reference and award were to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. He ordered that all further proceedings in the cause should cease and be no further prosecuted, and that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 190*l.*, to be received by him in satisfaction and discharge of and for all claims and demands in the cause and matters in difference referred; and he further awarded with respect to the payment of the costs of the reference and award:—Held, that it was to be presumed from the terms of the award, that the arbitrator found something to be due in respect of the cause referred to him, and that although it did not appear how much was due, still as the directions to the masters for taxing, by which they are directed, where less than 20*l.* is recovered, to tax the costs on a lower scale do. not apply to awards, the award was good, as sufficiently disposing of the cause and as being final and certain. Nicholson v. Sykes, 9 Ex. 357; 2 C. L. R. 992; 23 L. J., Ex. 193.

A. commenced an action against B., and delivered a declaration, consisting of two counts. Before plea all matters in difference between the parties to the cause were referred, the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, and the costs of the reference and award to be in the arbitrator's discretion. The award, which did not purport to have been made "of and concerning the premises," directed that B. should pay to A. a certain sum of money, without saying upon what account:—Held, bad for uncertainty, as it did not shew in respect of what matters in difference the money was to be paid, and did not contain any finding upon which the master could tax costs. Crosbie v. Holmes, 3 D. & L. 566; 1 B. C. Rep. 20; 15 L. J., Q. B. 125; 10 Jur. 139.

When Amounts should be found separately.]

—A plaintiff declared in assumpsit, and the damages laid in the declaration amounted to 700*l.*; the defendant pleaded several pleas, and before issue joined, the cause, and all matters in difference were referred. The arbitrator made his award thus:—"I award that the plaintiff is entitled to judgment on the whole declaration, and that judgment be entered up accordingly for him; and I award that the defendant shall pay to the plaintiff 5*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*, which I find to be due and owing to the plaintiff on the balance of all accounts and transactions between them."—Held, that the award was bad for uncertainty, for not awarding to what amount the plaintiff was entitled to recover in respect of the action, so that it might be ascertained whether the costs should be taxed on the higher or lower scale. Lund v. Hudson, 1 D. & L. 236.

Where particular questions of value are submitted, the award should find those matters specifically, and not a sum in gross. Richards v. Browne, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 199.

A., having entered into distinct contracts for constructing as many distinct portions of a line of railway, brought an action for the amount of those contracts. Upon a reference at which distinct and separate defences were set up in respect of the claim upon each contract, the arbitrator awarded generally as to the whole action:—Held, that the award was good, and that it was unnecessary for him to find separately upon each contract. Crawshaw v. York and North Midland Railway Company, 1 B. C. C. 45; 21 L. J., Q. B. 274; 16 Jur. 668.

At a trial a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, subject to the award of a legal arbitrator, who was authorized to award the verdict to be entered for the plaintiff or defendant, or a non-suit, as he should think fit, and who was directed at the request of either party to state any point of law upon the face of his award for the opinion of the court:—Held, that it was not necessary for him to decide as to the amount of damages to be finally recovered, and to direct how judgment should be entered up, but that, having disposed of all the issues separately, and having assessed damages separately in respect of each subject-matter of complaint, and having at the request of both parties raised questions for the opinion of the court, his award was good. Bradbos v. Christ's Hospital, 2 D., N. S. 164; 4 M. & G. 714; 5 Scott, N. R. 79.

Action for money had and received: pleas, nunquam indebitatus, payment, and set-off. An award, that a verdict be entered for the defendant on all the issues, is insufficient, as not deciding the set-off. Maloney v. Stockley, 4 M. & G. 647; 2 D., N. S. 122; 12 L. J., C. P. 92.

But upon a reference, by order of nisi prius, of a cause and all matters in difference, one of the issues in the cause being joined on a plea of set-off, the arbitrator ordered the verdict to be (with an immaterial exception) entered for the plaintiff on all the issues, assessing the damages severally:—Held good. Hobdell v. Miller, 6 Bing. N. C. 292; 8 Scott, 165.

An award that the sum of 230*l.* is due from defendants to plaintiffs, and that out of that sum defendants should pay to the arbitrators 93*l.*, being the expenses of preparing the agreement of reference and their award, and for their charge, trouble, and attendance on the reference and arbitration, and certain costs which they award to be paid to the solicitors of plaintiffs, in respect of certain actions mentioned in the agreement of reference, leaving the sum of 136*l.* which they award to be paid to plaintiffs:—Held, that the award was void for uncertainty in directing a sum in gross to be paid to the arbitrators for the objects above mentioned, without specifying the particular sum to be appropriated to each object. Robinson v. Henderson, 6 M. & S. 276.

An award is not bad for not deciding several items separately, unless either they were referred separately in form, or it clearly appears from the reference that the parties intended that they should be separately decided. Whitworth v. Hulse, 1 L. R., Ex. 251; 35 L. J., Ex. 149; 12 Jur. N. S. 652; 14 L. T. 445; 14 W. R. 736.

A submission, after reciting that disputes had existed between W. and H., and that it had been agreed that W. should purchase H.'s shares in an incorporated company, and that an arbitrator should determine what sum he should pay to H. upon the balance of accounts between them for the transfer of the shares, and should decide and determine all matters in difference between them, submitted to the arbitrator "the claims of H. against W. in respect of the differences and matters aforesaid, and all other matters in dispute between them, and the amount to be paid for the shares." The arbitrator directed that a lump sum should be paid by W. to H. in respect of all the matters in difference, including the amount to be paid for the purchase of the shares:—Held, that the arbitrator was not bound to find the sum to be paid in respect of the shares separately from that to be paid in respect of other matters in difference. Id.

In an action on an award the fact, but not the validity of the award was traversed. The defendants' special act enacted that the times, conditions, and regulations to which they should be liable in respect of using certain premises belonging to the plaintiffs, and "the tolls and other consideration to be paid by them for the same" should, if not agreed upon, be determined by an arbitrator to be appointed by the Board of Trade. The defendants used the plaintiffs' premises for a long time, but the terms, &c., had not been agreed upon, and an arbitrator, duly appointed, having, in respect of the past user and enjoyment, specified in his award the time and nature of the defendants' user, awarded a lump sum to be paid by them:—Held, that the awarded the plaintiff damages:—Held, that as the arbitrator had no power to award judgment non obstante verdicto, and as no writ of error could be sued out, the final event of the award was for the defendant, and consequently he was entitled to the postea. Linegar v. Price, 9 Ex. 417; 2 C. L. R. 1251; 23 L. J., Ex. 225.

viii. Where Damages or Amount should be Awarded.

In what Cases.—A cause in which there were seven issues joined, was referred by an order of nisi prius, the costs of the award and reference to abide the event. The arbitrator found for the plaintiff on five of the issues, and for the defendant on the other two, neither of which latter covered the whole cause of action; but did not either award any damages, or say for whom the verdict generally should be entered up:—Held, that the award was insufficient. Wood v. Duncan, 1 H. & H. 338; 7 D. P. C. 91; 2 Jur. 969.

Where the costs are to abide the event, and the arbitrator finds in favour of the defendant upon a plea which covers the whole cause of action, it is no objection to the award that on other issues he has found for the plaintiff without damages. Surage v. Ashwin, 4 M. & W. 530.

An award is not necessarily bad for want of finality or inconsistency because the arbitrator has found for the plaintiff on one of the issues, in respect of which he has given no damages. It may be a ground for moving to set aside the award at the instance of the plaintiff, but not by the defendant, for he cannot be prejudiced by the omission to award damages. Cox v. Kerslake, 16 L. T. 396.

To an action on the common counts, the defendant pleaded, as to part, the general issue, and to the residue payment after action brought, together with a set-off to the whole. The cause and all matters in difference having been referred, the arbitrator awarded that a verdict be entered for the defendant on all the issues except the first; and on that issue for the plaintiff, without any damages, and that there were no other matters in difference:—Held, first, that, the plea of set-off covering the whole cause of action, the finding the general issue without any damages was good. Warwick v. Cox, 12 M. & W. 774; 1 D. & L. 986; 13 L. J., Ex. 314; 8 Jur. 713.

Held, secondly, that the finding a payment by the defendant, since action brought, of part of the sum claimed was not inconsistent with finding the set-off in his favour. Id.

An order referring an action on a money bond (where the issue was payment by a co-obligor), and all matters in difference, does not require the arbitrator to direct for what sum the verdict shall be entered. Cayme v. Watts, 3 D. & R. 224.

A verdict for 3,000*l.* damages, and 40*s.* costs, is taken by consent, subject to a reference of the cause and all matters in difference between the parties. An award directing the entering of a verdict for the plaintiff, and the payment of 260*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* from the defendant to the plaintiff, but not expressly stating for what amount the verdict is to be entered, is bad for uncertainty. Martin v. Burge, 6 N. & M. 201; 4 A. & E. 973.

ix. Limit to Amount awarded.

In what Cases.—Where a verdict is taken for a certain sum, subject to the award of an arbitrator, to whom all matters in difference are referred, he cannot award a greater sum than that for which the verdict was taken; and if he do, no assumption by implication will arise to pay even to the extent of the verdict so taken. Bonner v. Charlton, 5 East, 189; 1 Smith, 369.

If an arbitrator awards a greater sum than the amount of the verdict, and judgment is entered for the whole, and it appears that a part of the sum is covered by a countervailing demand which never was a subject of dispute, so that only a balance less than the amount of the verdict is ultimately to be paid over; the court will reduce the judgment to the amount of the verdict, and grant execution for the sum really due. Prentice v. Reed, 1 Taunt. 151.

In an action on a lease, in which the plaintiff assigned breaches for rent arrear, for non-repair, for not painting, and for not repairing after notice; and the defendant pleaded, that the lease was obtained by fraud, and performance of the several covenants; a verdict was taken for the plaintiff on the issue (fraud), and damages assessed on the breach (for rent), at 10*l.*, subject to the award of an arbitrator, to whom the cause and all matters in difference between the parties were referred, to order what he should think fit to be done by the parties, and with liberty to amend the record, the issue not having been perfected on the 4th plea. The arbitrator directed that the verdict entered on the first issue should stand, and assessed the damages on the several breaches at 249*l.*, in addition to the 10*l.* found on the first breach, for which sum he directed the verdict was to be for the plaintiff. No verdict was taken at the trial for the sum given by the arbitrator:—Held, that as the amount of damages was fixed by the order of reference, and as the arbitrator had no power given him to enter a verdict upon the other breaches, he had exceeded his authority, and therefore that the award was bad. Hayward v. Phillips, 1 N. & P. 288; 6 A. & E. 119; W. W. & D. 1; 1 Jur. 102.

A cause was referred at nisi prius, and a verdict entered for the plaintiff, by consent, for the damages in the declaration, which exceeded the amount claimed in the particulars of demand. The arbitrator awarded that the verdict should stand at the amount for which it was entered:—Semble, that the particulars were not necessarily before the arbitrator, and that if the defendant intended to limit the demand to the amount claimed by the particulars, he ought to have brought the particulars before the arbitrator. Kenrick v. Phillips, 7 M. & W. 415; 9 D. P. C. 308.

On a dissolution of partnership between A. and B., A. offered to sell his interest to B. for 20,000*l.*; B. refused, but offered to buy at 18,000*l.*, which A. refused. By a written agreement, reciting the offers and the refusals, it was left to C. to say what price should be paid by B. for A.'s interest:—Held, that C. had no authority to name a sum outside of the limits, 18,000*l.* and 20,000*l.* Thomson v. Anderson, 9 L. R., Eq. 523; 39 L. J., Ch. 468; 22 L. T. 570; 18 W. R. 445.

x. The Order to Pay.

To what Persons.—An award that one of the parties to the submission shall pay money to a stranger, for the benefit of the other party, is good. Wood v. Adcock, 7 Ex. 468; 21 L. J., Ex. 204; 16 Jur. 251—Ex. Ch.

The onus of shewing that payment awarded to be made to a stranger is for the benefit of a party to the submission, lies upon the party who seeks to enforce the award. Ib.

But an award directing payment of a sum of money to a stranger is not good, unless it appears on the face of the award that such payment is for the benefit of a party to the submission. Laing, In re, 13 C. B. 276.

In an action by H. and C. upon an award, the declaration stated that an action of trespass, and all matters in difference between H. & B. relating to certain premises, and all matters in difference between C. and B. relating to the same premises, C. consenting to be made a party thereto, were referred by a judge's order, which ordered that a verdict should be entered for H. for 50*l.* subject to the award of the arbitrator. The arbitrator awarded that H. was entitled to a verdict in the action, and assessed the damages at 40*l.*, to be paid by B. to H. and C.:—Held, that the award was not bad for directing the 40*l.* to be paid as damages by B. to H. and C. jointly. Hawkins v. Benton, 8 Q. B. 479; 15 L. J., Q. B. 139; 10 Jur. 95.

An award ordering the defendant to pay the sum awarded to the plaintiff or his attorney, S., is good, without any power of attorney to S. to demand the money. Hare v. Flay, 2 L. M. & P. 392; 11 C. B. 472; 20 L. J., C. P. 249; 15 Jur. 1038.

By a submission between W. and B. on the one side, and A. on the other, disputes and differences between the parties were referred. The award ordered a sum of money to be paid by W. to S. (one of the arbitrators), and directed him to pay over that sum immediately to A.:—Held, that the arbitrators were justified in awarding one of the two parties on the one side to pay money to the other. Wood v. Adcock (in error), 7 Ex. 468; 21 L. J., Ex. 204; 16 Jur. 251—Ex. Ch.

The direction of the arbitrators that the money should be paid to one of them, and by him paid over to the party in whose favour the award was made, did not vitiate the award, as it sufficiently appeared that such payment was for the benefit of one of the parties to the submission. Ib.

At what time to be paid.—An arbitrator to whom all matters in difference in a cause were referred, found that a sum of money was due from the defendant to the plaintiff, which he directed to be paid on or before a particular day, and that upon payment of that sum all proceedings should cease:—Held, that the award was final and not conditional; but that the arbitrator had exceeded his authority in giving a particular day of payment. Bennell v. Hurman, 1 C., M. & R. 935; 5 Tyr. 509; 3 D. P. C. 500.

Contingent Assessment.—An arbitrator directed two issues to be entered for the plaintiff, and all the other issues for the defendant, and then declared, "I assess the damages of the plaintiff upon the two several issues which I have ordered to be entered for him at 1*l.*, which sum, except for my finding upon the other issues, the plaintiff would be entitled to recover in the cause:—"—Held, that the award was not bad for such contingent assessment. Toby v. Lovibond,

5. C. B. 770; 5 D. & L. 769; 17 L. J., C. P. 201; 12 Jur. 436.

By whom paid.—An award is not void for uncertainty, which directs an executor to pay a sum of money out of assets, but which does not determine whether in point of fact he has assets. Love v. Honeybourne, 4 D. & R. 814.

Set-off contrary to Law not allowed.—An action to recover for work done by two attorneys was referred. It appeared before the arbitrator, that the work was done for the defendant, but that one of the attorneys had received various sums, previously to his entering into partnership with the other, which were more than sufficient to cover the demand; that the latter had been clerk to the former at the time of the receipt of such money, and that the former, since the partnership, had admitted that it remained in his hands. The defendant having pleaded a set-off of the money so received against the joint debt, the arbitrator directed a verdict to be entered for him:—Held, that the award was bad. France v. White, 8 D. P. C. 53; 8 Scott, 257; 6 Bing. N. C. 33.

xi. Other Points relating to.

Where parties intend to refer all disputes, the terms of the reference should be "of all matters in difference between the parties;" and when the reference is only intended to be of the matter in the particular cause, "of all matters in difference in the cause." Smith v. Muller, 3 T. R. 624.

Where a cause only was referred in which a plaintiff claimed, by his particulars, upon the balance of an account, 34*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.*, and the defendant paid into court 9*l.* 3*s.* 3*d.*; but the arbitrator, upon a supposition that he was entitled to settle all matters in difference between the parties, awarded to the plaintiff 33*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.*, the court set aside the award, upon the ground that the arbitrator had exceeded his authority. Atkinson v. Jones, 1 D. & L. 225; 7 Jur. 881.

An arbitrator does not exceed his jurisdiction when a cause and all matters in difference are referred to him, by making an award "in respect of matters in difference," which could not have been decided at the trial of the action, but might have arisen out of it. Cox v. Kerlake, 16 L. T. 398.

A submission to arbitration of all matters in difference between the parties in the cause is not confined to the subject-matter in the particular action then depending, but will extend to cross demands between the parties, though not pleaded by way of set-off; and the costs being to abide the event makes no difference. Malcolm v. Fullerton, 2 T. R. 645.

But a reference of all matters in dispute in the cause between the parties is confined solely to the matters in dispute in that trial. Ib.

In a reference it was agreed that the arbitrator "shall or may" award a certain matter, with a proviso, &c.:—Held, that the words "shall or may" were imperative on the arbitrator, and that he was bound to insert the proviso in his award, the context of the agreement, and the situation of the parties, requiring such a construction. Crump v. Adney, 1 C. & M. 355; 3 Tyr. 270.

An arbitrator, to whom the question of the right of two rectors to the tithe of certain lands was referred, had power to devise all means to prevent future litigation between the parties, and to settle all matters in difference between them, and to determine what he should think fit to be done by either of the parties touching the matters in dispute:—Held, that he did not exceed his power by awarding undivided moieties of the tithes to the two rectors. Prosser v. Gorringe, 3 Taunt. 426.

Pure Question of Law.]—A contract entered into between the plaintiffs and defendants for the purchase of some wheat contained the following clause: "Should any dispute arise, the same to be submitted for settlement to the arbitration of two London corn factors respectively chosen, whose decision shall be final and binding:—"—Held, that the clause in question formed part of the consideration for the contract, and was intended to include questions of law as well as of fact which might arise upon the construction of the contract. Forwood v. Watney, 49 L. J., Q. B. 447.

Construction of Contract.]—B. contracted to buy of A. certain cotton, to arrive in Liverpool, per ship or ships from Bombay, March or April shipment, on the terms of the rules of the Cotton Brokers' Association of Liverpool, by which it was stipulated that the name of the ship should be given to the buyer within two calendar months "after the date of shipment named in the contract," and that in default the buyer might cancel the contract; and also that in case of any dispute arising out of any contract, the matter should be referred to two members of the Cotton Brokers' Association for settlement. A. gave the name of the ship on which the cotton was shipped within two calendar months after April, but not within two calendar months after March, when the cotton was actually shipped. B. therefore disputed his liability to accept the cotton, and caused arbitrators to be appointed in the mode provided for by the rules, who, upon having the documents, but neither of the parties, before them, and without giving A. any opportunity of being heard, made an award in favour of B., on the ground that the shipment was not declared in time. A., however, sued B. for not accepting the cotton, and he pleaded the award in bar to such action:—Held, that the dispute, though involving the question as to the construction of the contract, was one which by the rules the parties agreed to refer. Thorburn v. Barnes, 2 L. R., C. P. 384; 36 L. J., C. P. 184; 16 L. T. 10; 15 W. R. 623.

Clause applying to Quality not Species.]—Upon a cotton contract to arrive, the seller guaranteed the cotton to be equal to sample, and it was agreed, that in case the quality proved inferior to the guarantee, a fair allowance should be made by arbitration. The bulk turned out to be composed of a different and an inferior kind of cotton from that in the sample, and required different machinery for working it. The seller offered to submit to an arbitrator the difference in value between the sample and bulk, in order to estimate the allowance to be made; the purchaser declined arbitration upon any point, unless the question as to whether he might refuse to accept the cotton should also be submitted. To this the seller refused to consent, and the purchaser then repudiated the contract:—Held, in an action by the seller against the purchaser for not accepting, that the latter was not answerable for the failure to arbitrate; that the guarantee related to the quality and not to the species of cotton, and that the repudiation of the contract was justifiable. Azemar v. Casella, 2 L. R., C. P. 431; 36 L. J., C. P. 124; 16 L. T. 14; affirmed on appeal, 2 L. R., C. P. 677; 36 L. J., C. P. 263; 16 L. T. 571; 15 W. R. 998—Ex. Ch.

Matters Submitted not within Submission.]—Where an arbitrator has, by agreement of the parties, jurisdiction to determine disputes which may arise as to certain matters specified in the agreement, and the parties submit to him for adjudication matters not within his jurisdiction, both the arbitrator and the parties being under the misapprehension that the matters so submitted are within his jurisdiction, the award of the arbitrator is good. Thames Iron Works and Shipbuilding Company v. Reg., 20 L. T. 318; 10 B. & S. 33.

Contrary to Submission.]—To an action for money lent, the defendant pleaded non assumption and the Statute of Limitations. The cause and all matters in difference were afterwards referred, upon the terms, that "the action should be decided according to the pleadings, but that, under the reference, so far as it related to matters in difference, the plea of the Statute of Limitations was not to be set up by either party." The arbitrator directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff for a sum, excluding items that were barred by the statute, and he allowed those items as matters in difference. The court refused to disturb the award. Stowman v. Wiggins, 6 C. B. 276.

Cases of Partnership.]—If an arbitrator is appointed to arbitrate a certain measure contemplated between two parties, as a dissolution of partnership, he is not necessarily bound to direct that the partnership shall be dissolved. Simmonds v. Swaine, 1 Taunt. 549.

If two enter into partnership, and covenant, in case of a dissolution, to submit all matters relating thereto to arbitration, the arbitrators are not thereby authorized to determine whether any part of the sum of money which was the consideration of the partnership should be refunded. Tattersall v. Groote, 2 B. & P. 131.

Upon a reference of partnership disputes, a direction in the award that some of the parties to the reference do pay a sum of money (which is one of the matters included in the submission) to the arbitrator, and that he apply the same to the payment of certain specified demands (also part of the matters submitted), is bad, and vitiates the award, although the payments appear, by the tenor of the award, to be for the benefit of the parties submitting, and not of the arbitrator. Machay, In re, 2 A. & E. 356.

By a submission, it was agreed between two partners to dissolve partnership, and that all matters in difference between them, and the terms and conditions on which the partnership should be dissolved, should be referred. The arbitrator awarded, that it should not be lawful for one, during the lifetime of the other, to carry on business at the place they had done, or within thirteen miles:—Held, no excess of his authority. Morley v. Newman, 5 D. & R. 317.

Six partners entered into two bonds of submission; in the one, three gave a joint and several bond to the other three, conditioned for the due performance of the award; and the latter gave a similar bond to the three former: the arbitrator awarded that one of the three former should pay a certain sum to one of his co-obligors. In an action on the award by the one against the other alone:—Held, that he might recover the sum awarded. Winter v. White, 3 Moore, 674; 1 B. & B. 350.

By a bond of submission dated the 19th of March, 1859, it was referred to an arbitrator to determine of and concerning all matters of account pending between A. and B. The arbitrator, after reciting the submission, awarded, "of and concerning the premises," that, "up to the 31st of October, 1857, the accounts between A. and B., in reference to the Wouldham Court Farm, were adjusted, and that the balance due from A. to B. amounted to 4,314*l.* 14*s.* 10*d.*; and that no partnership existed between A. and B. in respect of the Wouldham Court Farm;" and "that A. do pay to B. 781*l.* 5*s.* 3*d.*, the amount due from him in respect of the Wouldham Court Farm; and that A. do pay to B. 1,137*l.* 17*s.* due from him to B., in respect of shares in the Wouldham Cement Company, and that, on payment of such last-mentioned sum, B. do deliver to A. 118 shares in the Wouldham Cement Company, held by him as collateral security for the said sum." In an action by B. to enforce payment of the two sums so awarded:—Held, that the award was not uncertain, and that the arbitrator had not exceeded the authority given to him by the submission, in awarding that no partnership existed between A. & B., or that the shares held by B. as collateral security for the 1,137*l.* 17*s.* should be delivered up to A. on payment of that sum. Harrison v. Lay, 13 C. B., N. S. 528.

Character of Parties.]—By a submission between G. M., J. M., and W., as trustees and executors of G. M. deceased, and R. M., matters in difference were referred; and the parties agreed to abide by their award of and concerning the premises, or anything in anywise relating thereto. The arbitrators awarded that R. M. should pay a certain sum to G. M., J. M., and W., but they did not state whether it was payable to them in their character of trustees and executors, or of trustees. They awarded, that it should be payable with interest up to a day subsequent to the date of the award, and, if not paid by that day, G. M., J. M., and W. were empowered to withhold the payment of an annuity directed by the award to be paid by them to R. M., until, out of such annuity, the sum should be liquidated:—Held, that the award was bad for not distinguishing whether it was payable to them in the character of trustees and executors, or of trustees, nor the periods to which it was to be referred. Morphett, In re, 2 D. & L. 967; 14 L. J., Q. B. 259; 10 Jur. 546.

Matters in Difference between all Parties.]—By an order all matters in difference in a cause between A. & B. were referred, and, by a subsequent order, C. was made a party, and it was directed that all matters in difference between A., B. and C. should be referred to the same arbitrator, and that the costs of the suit should abide the event of the award. The arbitrator made two awards, in the one of which he awarded that A., at the date thereof, was indebted to B., without mentioning C., and in the other that A. was indebted to C., without mentioning B.:—Held that both awards were bad, as he had not decided all the matters in difference between all the parties. Winter v. White, 2 Moore, 723. But see Jackson v. Talsby, 5 B. & A. 848.

Where two parties of the one part, and one of the other, submit to arbitration all matters in difference between them, the arbitrator may award on matters in difference which the two parties, or either of them, have or has with the other, jointly or severally. Wood v. Adcock, 7 Ex. 468; 21 L. J., Ex. 204; 16 Jur. 251—Ex. Ch.

Award affecting Strangers to Reference.]—Arbitrators cannot cancel a deed of apprenticeship, where the apprentices are not parties to the submission. Wicks v. Cork, 11 Jur. 542.

Under a submission of all matters in difference between A. and B., an award on matters in difference between A. and B., and C. and D. jointly, directing A. to pay B. a certain sum as a compensation for coals gotten by A. belonging to B., or to B. and others, and directing B. to give A. a bond to indemnify him against the claims of C. and D., is bad. Fisher v. Pimbley, 11 East, 188.

By agreement between A. and B., certain matters in dispute between them were referred to an arbitrator, who should decide whether a note made by A. and M., and which was "in the hands of R., who had brought actions against A. and M. upon it, should be cancelled, and upon what conditions. The arbitrator directed that the note should be cancelled, upon condition that A. and M. should not, by judgment of non pros or other step, force R. or any other plaintiff to prosecute the actions or pay costs:—Held good, since the award did not require any act to be done by M., who was a stranger, but only made it a condition precedent to the delivery up of the note that A. and M. should incapacitate themselves from compelling R. to proceed with the action or pay costs. Kirk v. Unwin, 6 Ex. 908; 2 L., M. & P. 519; 20 L. J., Ex. 345.

Powers Incidental to Final Determination of Matters.]—Where an arbitrator, in regulating the future use of a stream of water, the right to which was divided between two parties, interfered with the customary enjoyment by one of them of another stream, which exclusively belonged to him, and was not a matter in difference, and which joined the first:—Held, that he was empowered so to do, as being incidental to, and resulting from, his former direct and larger power. Winter v. Lethbridge, 1 McClell. 253; 13 Price, 533.

Effect of Recital.]—A., in partnership with two others, carried on business as the owner of a colliery up to January, 1840, when the partnership was dissolved, and notice published in the Gazette. The firm having had dealings with C. & W., A., in April, 1840, wrote to them to furnish their account; and in answer they wrote, "We beg to annex account with owners of the colliery up to the period to which you were liable as a partner; balance due to us 201*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.* at that time, agreeably to account handed on the 6th of January, which we doubt not you will find correct." In January, 1840, after the dissolution, a bill for 120*l.* was drawn upon, and accepted by, C. & W., for payment of that sum to A. and his late partners, in their partnership name. Upon the 14th March, 1842, the balance of 201*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.* remaining unsatisfied, articles of reference were agreed to between C. and W. and A., which, after reciting that C. and W. claimed a balance of 201*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.* to be due to them from A., witnessed that all disputes and differences which existed between the parties should be referred. Upon the 30th of March, 1842, before the reference commenced, a second bill, including 120*l.*, as due to C. and W., was delivered:—Held, that the recital as to 201*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.*, in the articles of reference, did not confine the arbitrator to the consideration of that sum only, but that, under the words "all disputes and differences," he was at liberty also to award upon the bill for 120*l.* Charleton v. Spencer, 3 Q. B. 693; 12 L. J., Q. B. 23; 6 Jur. 1013.

Arbitrator holding that Dispute "a Claim in the Action."—A writ was issued in an action against an incorporated company, and their attorney consented to an order, referring "the claims of the plaintiff in the action." The plaintiff claimed a sum for extra work, occasioned by the company's breach of covenant in not giving the plaintiff possession of certain land at a stipulated time. The arbitrator entertained this claim though objected to, and awarded to the plaintiff in respect of it:—Held, that if the matter in dispute were not within the jurisdiction of the arbitrator, the company should have applied to the court to revoke the submission; but not having done so, and the plaintiff having set up this matter as "a claim in the action," and the arbitrator having so decided in respect of it, his award was binding, however erroneous. Faviell v. Eastern Counties Railway Company, 2 Ex. 344; 6 D. & L. 54; 17 L. J., Ex. 297.

Where Award may be rendered Certain.—Action against an attorney for negligent conduct of a cause. Pleas: non assumpsit and a traverse of the negligence. The cause was referred; the costs of the cause to abide the event and determination of the award. Award: that the defendant did promise; and that he was not negligent. A rule to set aside the award, on the ground that it did not finally determine the cause, inasmuch as the arbitrator, by finding in the terms of the issues, without stating the result of the cause, had merely performed the functions of a jury, and had not adjudicated as to the cause of action, was discharged. Lowe v. Allen, 3 G. & D. 395; 4 Q. B. 66; 12 L. J., Q. B. 115; 7 Jur. 416.

An award stated that the plaintiff was entitled to demand of the defendant 90*l.* in respect of the causes of action mentioned in the declaration, and that the defendant was entitled to set off 35*l.* in respect of certain matters mentioned in a set-off:—Held, that the award was sufficiently certain, and that it was not necessary to go through the process of deducting the less sum from the greater. Platt v. Hale, 2 M. & W. 391; M. & H. 191; 1 Jur. 358.

Where two issues were raised upon one breach, and an arbitrator directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff upon the first issue, with 1*s.* damages; and upon the second issue, with 13*s.* 4*d.* damages:—Held, that the award was good, and that the verdict might be considered as entered for 14*s.* 4*d.* Smith v. Festiniog Railway Company, 6 D. P. C. 190; 5 Scott, 255; 4 Bing. N. C. 23; 3 Hodges, 305; 1 Jur. 844.

A prima facie uncertainty, or want of conclusiveness in an award, does not vitiate, if capable of being rendered certain or conclusive; and the award may be good or bad according to the event. Aitcheson v. Cargey (in error), 9 Moore, 381; 2 Bing. 199; M'Clell. 367; 13 Price, 639.

An award that two persons shall pay a debt in proportion to the shares which they held in a certain ship, the ratio of their shares not being a subject of dispute, is sufficiently certain. Wohl-enberg v. Lageman, 6 Taunt. 254; 1 Marsh. 579.

An award for fixing the rule for calculating the amount of money to be paid, without stating the result of such calculation, is sufficiently certain. Higgins v. Willes, 3 M. & R. 382.

Doubt as to Matters Decided.—A company having given notice to take a leasehold hotel belonging to and occupied by the plaintiff, it was referred to arbitration to ascertain the value of the hotel and premises, and the damages sustained or to be sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the company's works, and the amount of compensation to be paid by the company to the plaintiff in respect thereof; the arbitrator awarded a sum to the plaintiff as the compensation to be paid by the company to him for all his interest of whatever nature in the leasehold:—Held, that it was impossible to say with certainty whether the arbitrator intended or not to include the damages in this award, and that the award was too uncertain for the court to act upon, and that the bill for specific performance of it had rightly been dismissed, though the plaintiff offered to waive all claims for damages beyond the award. Wakefield v. Llanelly Railway Dock Company, 3 De G., J. & S. 11.

After a dissolution of partnership between A. and B., they referred all matters in difference between them by a deed, which recited that B. had deposited with C. & Co. (bankers), securities for advances to B., as sureties for A., and that A. being indebted to C. & Co. in 4,000*l.*, B. had mortgaged to them securities for a sum not exceeding 3,000*l.*; there was a proviso that, if the arbitrators should award any money to be paid by B. to A., they should, if the mortgages were outstanding, authorize such payment to be made to C. & Co. in reduction of the mortgaged debts, and should further award that A. should, at the time to be named by the arbitrators, pay into C. & Co.'s such a sum as would be sufficient to entitle B. to have the mortgage discharged, and the securities deposited by him released. The arbitrators found that 3,221*l.* was due from B. to A., and that the mortgage was outstanding, and ordered B. to pay that sum on certain days, with liberty to pay it into C. & Co. It was also ordered, that, within one month from such payment, A. should pay into C. & Co.'s such a sum as would be sufficient to entitle B. to have the mortgage discharged, and the securities deposited by him released:—Held, bad, for want of finality. Hewitt v. Hewitt, 4 P. & D. 598; 1 Q. B. 110.

By a submission between A. and B., it was recited that all matters in difference between the parties had been amicably adjusted, except one relating to a transaction for a quantity of yarn,

"for which five bills of exchange for 1,000*l.* each were drawn," and as to the nature and circumstances of and attending such transactions and bills, and it was agreed that the same, and all matters in question touching and concerning or in anywise relating thereto, should be referred to an arbitrator. The arbitrator awarded that the bills and moneys thereby secured were the property of A., and that the bills and moneys should be forthwith delivered and paid to A.; and that, in case B. should have received the whole or any part of the money secured on the bills, B. should pay such money to A., with interest:—Held, that the award was not final and conclusive; the latter part not being immaterial, but within the authority given by the submission. Marshall, In re, 3 Q. B. 879; 3 G. & D. 253; 12 L. J., Q. B. 104.

Reasonable Precision Requisite.—An arbitrator had to decide upon the depth at which a defendant was entitled to keep a weir which penned back the water of a river, so as to interfere with the plaintiff's mill higher up the stream, and to determine all manner of rights of water between the parties: he awarded that the defendant was entitled to maintain his weir to the depth of fourteen inches and no more, and added that he had caused marks to be placed, which marks pointed out the depth the defendant was to keep his weir, and that a plan annexed to the award correctly defined and described the depth of the weir and the marks:—Held, that the award sufficiently pointed out the depth of the weir and was sufficiently precise, although it made no provision for floods, or for regulating the depth of the paddle in the defendant's weir, by which the water could be let off. Johnson v. Latham, 2 L. M. & P. 205; 20 L. J., Q. B. 236.

Upon a reference of a cause and all other matters in difference, the costs of the cause and of the reference and award were to abide the result of the award. The arbitrator found that the plaintiff had no cause of action in respect of the first count; but that, in respect of the other counts, the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 68*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*; and that, on the taking of all the accounts, including that sum, the plaintiff was indebted to the defendant in 17*l.* 7*s.* 5*d.*; which sum he ordered the plaintiff to pay, but said nothing about the costs:—Held, that this finding was sufficiently certain, the matter really referred being the state of the accounts between the parties, which was the result to be ascertained; and, consequently, that the defendant was entitled to his costs. Hemsworth v. Brian, 2 D. & L. 844; 1 C. B. 131; 14 L. J., C. P. 134.

A cause, and the rights of the parties in relation thereto, as well at law as in equity, were referred to an arbitrator, with power to order what he should think fit to be done by either of the parties respecting the matter in dispute. The arbitrator awarded that the plaintiffs would be entitled to receive from the defendants two specified sums of money so soon as they should have discharged the demands of certain local agents of a company, which the plaintiffs had undertaken to satisfy, and upon production by the plaintiffs to the defendants of the vouchers of the local agents, and upon proof that the demands had been discharged, the defendants were to pay the sums to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the award was final, for, that either the words

"upon proof" might be rejected as surplusage, or that it was a part of the matter itself which the parties had agreed should be done, and therefore was correctly stated in the award. Miller v. De Burgh, 4 Ex. 809; 1 L. M. & P. 177; 19 L. J., Ex. 127.

Where an award was, that "nothing was due to the plaintiff," it must be considered as intending that he had no right to recover in the action referred. Dickins v. Smith, 8 D. & R. 285; 8 C., nom. Dickins v. Jarvis, 5 B. & C. 528.

If an award directs one of two things to be done in the alternative, and either of the two is uncertain or impossible, it is incumbent on the party to perform the other of them which is capable of being performed. Simmonds v. Swaine, 1 Taunt. 549.

Although it might be impossible for a party to perform certain parts of an award, yet if the award in each instance gives an alternative which he could perform it is sufficient. Wharton v. King, 2 B. & Ad. 528.

An award that A. or B. shall do a certain act is bad for uncertainty. Laurence v. Hodgson, 1 Y. & J. 16.

An action for injury to houses and lands was referred to an arbitrator, who was to settle at what price and on what terms the defendant should purchase the plaintiff's property. The order of reference gave the arbitrator no power to determine what the property was, nor was there any dispute on the subject. He fixed a certain sum as the price at which the defendant should purchase the plaintiff's said property, and awarded that he might use the plaintiff's name to enforce certain rights and remedies:—Held, that the award was not bad, on the ground of its not specifying what the "property" was. Round v. Hatton, 10 M. & W. 660; 2 D., N. S. 446; 12 L. J., Ex. 7.

b. Altering an Award.

By Arbitrator.—After delivery of an award an arbitrator cannot, though within the time limited by the submission, correct a mistake in the calculation of figures, by making another award. Irvine v. Elton, 8 East, 54.

An alteration by an umpire of the sum awarded, though made on the same day, and after notice of making, but before delivery of the award, is void; but the award is good for the original sum awarded, which is still legible. Henfree v. Bromley, 6 East, 309; 2 Smith, 400.

When an arbitrator has executed an instrument as and for his award, he is functus officio and cannot of his own authority remedy any mistake that he may have made in executing it. Mordue v. Palmer, 6 L. R., Ch. 22; 40 L. J., Ch. 8; 23 L. T. 752; 19 W. R. 86.

Words were omitted in the engrossment, which were in the draft of an intended award. The arbitrator executed the erroneous engrossment. After service on one party, the arbitrator discovered the mistake and, before the time for making his award had expired, executed a fresh award:—Held, that the first instrument was the award of the arbitrator. Id.

An arbitrator awarded that a plaintiff had no cause of action, and that a verdict should be entered for the defendant; and, by mistake, directed that the costs of the reference and award should be paid by the defendant, meaning the plaintiff:—Held, that having executed his award in this form he could not rectify it. Ward v. Dean, 3 B. & Ad. 234.

By Court.—An arbitrator delivered with his award the following written statement:—"If either party should desire to have the grounds upon which I have proceeded in making my award, they are as follows." He then stated his grounds. The award directed a verdict for the plaintiff in an ejectment to recover two distinct closes, and the written statement shewed that he was entitled to one of them only. On an application to amend the postea, so as to confine it to the close to which the plaintiff was entitled, the court refused to correct the award by the collateral statement. Doe d. Osenden v. Cropper, 2 P. & D. 490; 10 A. & E. 197; 3 Jur. 578.

Referring Back by Court.—See infra.

c. Referring back an Award.

i. Jurisdiction of Court.

Statute.—By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 8, it is provided that in any case where reference shall be made to arbitration as aforesaid, the court or judge shall have power at any time, and from time to time, to remit the matters referred, or any or either of them, to the reconsideration and re-determination of the said arbitrator, upon such terms as to costs and otherwise, as to the said court or judge may seem proper.

In what Cases applicable.—Sect. 8 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, by which "in any case where reference shall be made to arbitration as aforesaid," the court or a judge shall have power to remit the matters to the arbitrator, applies not only to compulsory references provided for in sect. 6, but to all references previously provided for, and therefore to references by consent within sect. 5. Morris v. Morris, 2 Jur., N. S. 542; S. C., sub nom. Morris, In re, 6 El. & Bl. 383; 25 L. J., Q. B. 261.

A submission contained a clause, that, "in case of any motion to set aside the award," the court might remit the matters referred:—Held, that such clause did not exclude the general power of the court to remit the matters under sect. 8. Ib.

The object of that section was, where any error, formal or otherwise, had occurred which would vitiate the award, to enable the courts to send it back, if they thought fit, to the arbitrators to correct such error, instead of setting the award wholly aside. Mills v. Bowyers (Society), 3 Kay & J. 66.

The reference to arbitration of a question of disputed compensation, pursuant to section 180 of the Public Health Act, 1875, is a submission to arbitration by consent, within the meaning of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, and the court has a discretionary power, under section 8 of that act, "at any time" to remit the award back to the reconsideration of the arbitrator. Warburton v. Haslingden Local Board, 48 L. J. C. P. 451.

The arbitrators appointed under a submission (with no power of extending the time for making the award), which was made a rule of the court of Chancery, having made their award after the time specified, the court, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39, and the C. L. P. Act of 1854, s. 8, enlarged the time and remitted the matter back to the arbitrators. Warner, In re, 3 L. R. Eq. 261; 15 W. R. 303.

The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 8, does not authorize the court to send back an award for reconsideration by the arbitrators, on any ground except such as before that statute would have induced it to set aside the award, or to treat it as a nullity in an action brought upon it. Mills v. Bowyers (Society), 3 Kay & J. 66.

The rules of law as to setting aside awards under ordinary references, apply to compulsory references; and the 8th section of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, only enables the court to remit the matters referred to the arbitrator, in cases where they would otherwise set aside the award. Hogge or Hogg v. Burgess, 3 H. & N. 293; 27 L. J., Ex. 318; 4 Jur., N. S. 668.

Therefore where a defendant set up the Statute of Limitations, and the plaintiff relied on a running account, and the arbitrator certified that he was entitled to recover, the court refused to remit the matter to the arbitrator, on an affidavit that he was mistaken as to the law and fact. Ib.

Or where before the act the court might have remitted the matters referred if the submission had contained a clause empowering the court to do so. Hodgkinson v. Fernie, 3 C. B., N. S. 189; 27 L. J., C. P. 66.

A compulsory reference confers upon the master the same powers, and imposes upon the parties the same liabilities, as a reference under ordinary submission, rule, or order. Baggalay v. Borthwick, 10 C. B., N. S. 61; S. C., nom. Baguly v. Markwick, 30 L. J., C. P. 342; 9 W. R. 537.

Therefore the court will not remit the matter to the master for reconsideration, except where there is ground for setting aside his certificate. Ib.

ii. The Application.

Time.—When a cause was referred, with all matters in difference at nisi prius, and the order of reference empowered the court, in the event of any application being made on the subject of the award, to refer the matter back to the arbitrator for further consideration:—Held, that the application to refer back must be made within the same time as an application to set aside an award. Doe d. Bankes v. Holmes, 12 Q. B. 951.

The court will not refer matters back to an arbitrator where there has been a long delay (e.g. three years) since the last step was taken upon the award, and such delay is not satisfactorily explained; because the position of the parties may be altered, and they may be unable to produce their witnesses. Doe d. Maynes or Mays v. Cannew or Cannell, 1 B. C. C. 161; 22 L. J., Q. B. 321; 17 Jur. 347.

The court, in the exercise of its discretion, will take into consideration the lapse of time between the making of the award and the application to remit, and refuse the order to remit on the ground that it is too late. Warburton v. Haslingden Local Board, 48 L. J., C. P. 451.

The court has discretion to entertain an application to refer back an award if made within reasonable time or for good cause shewn, though made after the time fixed for such applications under the old system of terms. Leicester v. Grazebrook, 40 L. T. 883.

Must be a Motion.]—But the court will refuse to send back an award for a clerical error in the absence of a motion to impeach the award. Davies v. Pratt, 16 C. B. 162.

To what Court made.]—When a court of law has referred an action to arbitration, and the arbitrator makes a mistake in his award, any application to remedy the mistake must be made to the court of law in which the arbitration originated, and not to a court of equity. Graham v. Turnbull, 44 L. J., Ch. 538; 23 W. R. 645.

iii. In what Cases allowed.

To Re-consider Evidence.]—Where a letter-book, containing copies of letters which had been adduced in evidence before an arbitrator, and marked by him as read, was, at the close of the case, left in his hands in order that he might, before making his award, refer to the copies so adduced; and he referred to a copy of a letter contained in the book which had not been marked as having been adduced in evidence, the court directed that the case should be referred back to the arbitrator, in order that the party against whom the letter complained of had been used might have an opportunity of explaining its contents; but refused to set aside the award. Darvport v. Vickery, 9 W. R. 701.

Charges Excessive.]—The court will not send back an award to arbitrators merely because their charges for making the award are excessive, and are calculated on a principle differing from that which either of the parties believed they would adopt. Baker v. Sterens, 14 L. T. 448.

To find Separate Issues.]—Action for money payable for board and lodging, and for several other claims. Pleas: never indebted, and set-off for use and occupation and other debts. The cause being referred, with power to the court to remit it to the arbitrator in case of the award being objected to, the arbitrator directed a verdict for the plaintiff on the first issue, and for the defendant on the second. The defendant applied to the arbitrator to know how much he had allowed the plaintiff to deduct from the rent in arrear; the arbitrator in answer stated that he had made only a rough estimate, finding that the rent in arrear far exceeded the board and lodging, which he said was the only claim which the plaintiff had made out. On taxation, the master allowed all the plaintiff's costs incurred in support of any part of his claim as costs of the first issue. The court referred the case back to the arbitrator, in order that he might, if he thought fit, find separately as to the different items contained in the declaration. Gore v. Baker, 4 El. & Bl. 470; 24 L. J., Q. B. 94; 1 Jur., N. S. 425. S. P., Hellaby v. Brown, 1 H. & N. 729; 26 L. J. Ex. 217.

Statement of Facts inconsistent with Award.]

—An action against an attorney, for negligently preparing a conveyance of land to the plaintiff, was referred with all matters in difference. The plaintiff's case was, that many words in the deed were written on erasures, which were not noticed in the attestation; that the deed was in other respects incorrect and improperly prepared; and that, by reason thereof, the plaintiff was prevented from mortgaging. The arbitrator ordered a verdict to be entered for the defendant, and awarded that it was proved before him, that the erasures in the conveyance were made before the deed was executed. On motion to set aside the award, on the ground that the facts therein stated did not warrant a finding for the defendant:—Held, that the statement of facts by the arbitrator did not shew that his decision proceeded on that fact, and therefore that no ground appeared for reviewing his award. Lancaster v. Hemington, 4 A. & E. 345; 5 N. & M. 538.

Clerical Error.]—Where an arbitrator made an award describing the plaintiff by a wrong Christian name, the court sent it back to him for correction. Ilwett v. Clements, 7 M. & G. 1045; 8 Scott, N. R. 851; 2 D. & L. 549; 14 L. J., Q. B. 75; 9 Jur. 10, 17.

Where an arbitrator, in making his award, described the defendant by a wrong Christian name, the court sent the award back to be amended. Davies v. Pratt, 16 C. B. 586.

Rule for Payment of Money.]—A reference contained a clause, that in the event of any application being made to the court on the subject of the award, the court should have power to remit the matter to the arbitrator for reconsideration:—Held, that a rule for payment of money under the award was "an application on the subject of the award" within the clause, and empowered the court to remit the matters to the arbitrator. Johnson v. Latham, 1 L., M. & P. 848; 19 L. J., Q. B. 329.

Matter not Brought before Arbitrator.]—An application to remit an award upon a reference of all matters in difference upon the ground that the arbitrator had omitted to decide upon a cross-claim was refused, upon the ground that it did not appear that the matter had been brought before the arbitrator. Erskin v. Wal-lace, 12 W. R. 134.

To Certify for Costs.]—Where an arbitrator had awarded a plaintiff less than 20*l.* in an action of contract, but by inadvertence had omitted to certify that the cause was fit to be tried before a judge of a superior court, the court allowed the matter to go back to the arbitrator for amendment at the expense of the plaintiff. Cross v. Cross, 13 C. B., N. S. 253.

A cause was referred at nisi prius, and the order contained a clause enabling the court to refer it back to the arbitrator. The arbitrator certified that less than 20*l.* was due, and expressed an opinion that the cause was a proper one to be tried in the superior court:—Held, that the court had no power to refer it back to the arbitrator to certify as to the propriety of its being tried in the superior court, but that the proper course was to lay the arbitrator's certificate before the judge at nisi prius, who would then exercise his discretion. Webber v. Lee, 1 D. & L. 585.

Where an action for injury to a mill-stream, to which the defendant pleaded, denying the rights set up in the declaration, was referred, and the arbitrator found for the plaintiff on every issue, but awarded only a farthing damages, and refused, after the award was made, to grant a certificate for costs, the court declined to send back the award to the arbitrator, under a clause in the reference, that, in the event of any dispute arising upon the award, it might be sent back to be reconsidered and amended. Bury v. Dunn, 1 D. & L. 141; 12 L. J., Q. B. 351; 7 Jur. 703.

An action of trespass was referred, the arbitrator found for the plaintiff for 2l. 14s. and gave no certificate. After some time the plaintiff obtained ex parte from the arbitrator a document stating that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action:—Held, that the court would not act on the document merely, and remitted the award to the arbitrator. Harland v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Mayor), 39 L. J., Q. B. 67.

On ground of Mistake.—If a mistake has been made in an award, not apparent on the face of it, and such mistake is admitted in an affidavit by the arbitrators, such an admission is sufficient to authorize the court to set aside the award under the former practice, or to refer it back under the statute. Mills v. Bowyers (Society), 3 Kay & J. 66.

So also if the arbitrators insist that they have made no mistake, but state the principle upon which they made the award, and the court is of opinion that such principle is not consistent with the reference. Id.

The court will admit evidence of an arbitrator in explanation of his award; and when it appears from such evidence that there has been a mistake on his part, either as to the subject-matter referred to him, or in point of legal principle affecting the basis on which the award is made, the award will be set aside or referred back to the arbitrator. Dare Valley Railway Company, In re, 6 L. R., Eq. 429; 37 L. J., Ch. 719.

Where a submission contains a clause which gives power to an arbitrator to state a special case, and he is not desired by either party before the award is made to exercise that power, the court will not, on a letter of his written after the award, disclosing the legal principle on which he made his award, set it aside or send it to him for revision, although the letter was written with a view of raising the question whether the principle on which it was based was sound. London Dock Company, In re, 32 L. J., Q. B. 30; 7 L. T. 581; 11 W. R. 89.

An arbitrator, to whom an action for a claim above 20l. had been referred as a matter of account, awarded to the plaintiff a sum less than 20l., and certified that the action was fit to be brought in a superior court, but gave no other certificate. The master having taxed the costs on the lower scale, the arbitrator on being applied to on behalf of the plaintiff, stated in effect that he intended by his certificate to give the plaintiff his costs. The court gave the plaintiff leave, at his own expense, to refer the matter back to the arbitrator. Caswell v. Groucott, 31 L. J., Ex. 361; 6 L. T. 290.

Words were omitted in the engrossment of an award which were in the draft. The arbitrator executed the erroneous engrossment. After service on one party, the arbitrator discovered the mistake, and before the time for making his award had expired, executed a fresh award:—Held, that the first instrument was the award of the arbitrator, but that it must be referred back to him to reconsider and redetermine the matter with regard to the mistake made therein. Mordue v. Palmer, 6 L. R., Ch. 22; 40 L. J., Ch. 8; 23 L. T. 752; 19 W. R. 36.

After an award in favour of B. against W. on a submission between them, which contained a clause empowering the court to remit the matters to the reconsideration of the arbitrators, W. moved to send back the award to the arbitrators, on the ground that since the award he had discovered a letter in the handwriting of B., which contained material evidence in his favour. The arbitrators deposed, that had such a letter in the handwriting of B. been produced at the reference, their decision would have been materially affected. B., in answer, swore that the letter was not in his handwriting, but was an absolute forgery. The court remitted the case to the arbitrators for them to say if the letter was in B.'s handwriting, and if they found that it was, then for them to reconsider the matters in difference. Burnard v. Wainwright, 1 L. M. & P. 455; 19 L. J., Q. B. 423.

An award will not be sent back to the arbitrator on the ground that he has made a mistake in the legal principle upon which his award is based, except where the arbitrator himself admits the mistake. Dinn v. Blake, 10 L. R., C. P. 388; 44 L. J., C. P. 276; 32 L. T. 489.

An action for the balance of an account was referred to two local engineers. The arbitrators, believing that they had power over costs, awarded the plaintiff the full amount claimed, and adjudged that each party should pay his own costs. When they discovered that costs followed the event, they concurred in an affidavit to the effect that they would have awarded the plaintiff a less sum if they had thought that the whole costs would fall upon the defendant:—Held, that the mistake of the arbitrators was no ground for sending back the award. Allen v. Greenslade, 33 L. T. 567.

A cause was referred to a master. At the arbitration it was admitted that something was due to the plaintiff. The master certified that nothing was due. It was admitted on all hands and stated by the master that he had made a mistake. The defendant, however, objected to the matter going back to the arbitrator:—Held, that the court had power, and ought to send it back. Flynn v. Robertson, 4 L. R., C. P. 324; 32 L. J., C. P. 240; 17 W. R. 767.

When an award is good upon the face of it the court will not send it back to the arbitrator upon affidavits shewing that the arbitrator has wrongly decided a point of law. Fuller v. Fenwick, 3 C. B. 705; 16 L. J., C. P. 79; 10 Jur. 1057.

Nor for an alleged mistake, not manifest or apparent on the face of it, or admitted by any affidavit or statement of the arbitrator. Lockwood v. Smith, 10 W. R. 628.

The court will not send an award back to an arbitrator to correct an alleged mistake, which, when applied to, he does not admit, although in a matter not within the original submission, but included in the award by virtue of some new agreement between the parties pending the reference. Walton v. Swanage Pier Company, 10 W. R. 629.

For Re-execution by Arbitrators.—When an award has been executed by one of several arbitrators at a different time and place from the others, or when any similar error has occurred, involving no misconduct in the arbitrators or substantial injustice to the parties, the award will not be set aside, but will be sent back to the same arbitrators to be re-executed or corrected. Anning v. Hartley, 27 L. J., Ex. 145.

This course was taken even when a third arbitrator, called in by two others, had not only heard the whole of the evidence already taken read over to him, but had asked questions of the witnesses without notice to and in the absence of the parties and their attorneys. Id.

To state Case.]—The court will not, where the master has declined to state a case, remit the matter to him, in order to give one of the parties an opportunity of applying to the court to direct a case to be stated. Baggalay v. Borthwick, 10 C. B., N. S. 61; S. C., nom. Baguly v. Markwick, 30 L. J., C. P. 342; 9 W. R. 537. S. P., Holloyay v. Francis, 9 C. B., N. S. 559; Giblon v. Parker, 6 L. T. 584.

Form of Deed settled by Court instead of reference back.]—Cross petitions for divorce by husband and wife were withdrawn at the hearing, upon terms which included the execution of a separation deed to be settled by a counsel agreed upon in case of difference, and to contain "all usual terms as to access to children, &c." The parties could not agree, and the counsel settled a deed, providing that the wife should have the sole custody of the children, two boys of thirteen and fourteen, for half their vacations:—Held, in an action by the wife for specific performance of the agreement, that these provisions related to custody and not access, and it was beyond the powers of the counsel to insert them. That the court had power to settle the proper form of deed instead of referring it back. Evershed v. Evershed, 46 L. T. 690; 30 W. R. 732.

iv. Duty of Arbitrator when Award sent back.

Notice to Attend.]—When an award is sent back the arbitrator is not bound to give the parties notice to attend him thereon. Howett v. Clements, 1 C. B. 128.

By a reference the court had power, on the validity of an award being disputed, to remit the matters referred to the reconsideration of the arbitrator. An award having been made, and containing a defect, the attorneys agreed verbally that the arbitrator should amend it; subsequently to which the attorney of one party obtained a judge's order that the matters referred should be remitted to the arbitrator for his reconsideration. The arbitrator altered the award without giving notice to either party of his intention so to do; neither party having requested him to hear fresh evidence, and he did not recite the judge's order:—Held, that the arbitrator was not bound to give notice to the parties, or to recite the judge's order. Baker v. Hunter, 4 D. & L. 696; 16 M. & W. 672; 16 L. J., Ex. 203; S. P., Johnson v. Latham, 2 L. M. & P. 205; 20 L. J., Q. B. 238.

Fresh Evidence.]—Where an order of reference has a clause empowering the court, if the award is disputed, to remit the matters for the reconsideration of the arbitrator, and the case is remitted, the arbitrator must hear fresh evidence, if tendered, as on the original reference. Nicholls v. Warren, 6 Q. B. 615; 2 D. & L. 549.

But where a case had been once so remitted, and the arbitrator had declined to hear more evidence, but amended his award, deciding in favour of the same party as before, and on motion to set aside such award the other party opposed a further reference to the same arbitrator, the court set aside the award. Id.

An award, uncertain in respect of a direction as to the payment of costs, was sent back to the arbitrator to set it right on the face of it: he made a supplemental award for that purpose, and ordered that the costs occasioned by sending it back should be paid by the party who resisted the award:—Held, that the supplemental award might be made without hearing the parties. Morris, In re, 6 El. & Bl. 383; 25 L. J., Q. B. 261; 2 Jur., N. S. 542.

Where an award is referred back for the purpose of a specific alteration in or addition to such award (as the determination of the amount of costs awarded by the arbitrator to be paid by one of the parties), he is not bound to hear further evidence on the general merits discovered and tendered after the making of the original award. Huntley, In re, 1 El. & Bl. 787; 22 L. J., Q. B. 277; 17 Jur. 571.

Award sent back on One Point.]—An arbitrator had to decide upon the depth at which a defendant was entitled to keep a weir, which penned back the water of a river so as to interfere with the plaintiffs' mill higher up the stream, and to determine all manner of rights of water between the parties. The costs of the reference and award were in the arbitrator's discretion, and in the event of any application being made the court might send the matters referred, or any of them, back for reconsideration. The award, after deciding all matters in difference, added: that for the better defining the height of the weir such permanent marks should be placed as B. should direct. This direction being held bad as a delegation of authority, the court remitted the award to the arbitrator for the purpose of reconsidering the prospective directions that should be given for defining the depth at which the defendant might maintain his weir. The arbitrator, without calling the parties before him, made a new award, repeating verbatim the terms of the old award, that the plaintiff should pay the costs "of this my reference and of this my award," and as to all other matters except as to the prospective directions, on which he awarded as above stated:—Held, that the arbitrator had adopted a proper course in making a new award, repeating the old adjudication as to the matters not sent back to him, and the adjudication on the matters remitted for consideration. Johnson v. Latham, 2 L. M. & P. 205; 20 L. J., Q. B. 236.

What Amendment sufficient.]—An arbitrator in making his award in favour of a party, by mistake called him David instead of Daniel. The award having been sent back to him for amendment, he wrote at the bottom of it the following certificate: "In pursuance of a rule of court, I do hereby certify that this my award ought to be amended by substituting the name of Daniel P. for the name of David P., the name David P. having been inserted therein by mistake, instead of Daniel P."—Held a sufficient amendment. Davies v. Pratt, 17 C. B. 183; 25 L. J., C. P. 71.

To whom Remitted.]—By an order an action was referred to the award of twelve persons, six to be named by each party, and in the event of either of the parties disputing the validity of the award, the court should have power to remit the matters referred, or any of them, to the reconsideration of the twelve persons; and in the event of either of the parties declining to act, or dying before they or he should have made their or his award, the parties might, or if they could not agree, one of the barons of the court might, appoint fresh arbitrators. After the arbitrators had made an award one of the twelve died:—Held, that the court had power to remit the matters referred to the surviving eleven, and a fresh arbitrator to be appointed in pursuance of the power of the submission. Lord v. Hawkins, 2 H. & N. 55.

d. Setting aside Award.

i. On what Grounds.

Mistake must be Apparent on Award.—An award made by a barrister cannot be questioned, on the ground of any statement not appearing on the face of the award, or annexed to it. Williams v. Jones, 5 M. & R. 3; S. P., Wade v. Malpas, 2 D. P. C. 638.

It is final between the parties, unless the objection is apparent on the face of it. Sharman v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 504.

No objection can be taken on the ground of a mistake in point of law, unless the grounds of the objection appear upon the award, or in some authentic shape before the court. Price v. Jones, 2 Y. & J. 114.

A mistake of the arbitrator is no ground for setting aside an award good on the face of it. Phillips v. Evans or Edwards, 12 M. & W. 309; 1 D. & L. 463; 13 L. J., Ex. 80; S. P., Delter v. Barnes, 1 Taunt. 48.

The court will not set aside an award for an objection in point of law not apparent on the face of it, as upon a suggestion that the arbitrator improperly treated as a penalty that which was by the express contract of the parties stipulated as ascertained damages. Fuller v. Penwick, 3 C. B. 705; 16 L. J., C. P. 78; 10 Jur. 1057.

So, whether it is the award of a professional or of a lay arbitrator. Id.

Or by Contemporaneous Document.—A mistake by the arbitrator as to the legal effect of his finding is no ground for setting aside an award. An action was referred, the costs of the cause to abide the event. The award gave damages to the plaintiffs, but directed that the defendants should retain certain goods; as to the defendant's counter-claim the finding was for the plaintiffs. The defendants applied to refer back the award on an affidavit by the arbitrator that it did not carry out his instructions or effect his intentions, that when he signed it he thought the effect of the defendant's retaining the goods would be to give them the costs of their counter-claim, and that he wished the award referred back to him:—Held, that no grounds were disclosed for disturbing the award. Greenwood v. Brownhill, 44 L. T. 47—C. A.

By an order under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 3, a cause was referred, nothing being said about costs. The umpire "adjudged that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 159*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.* in full of all demands in the action." The award was accompanied by a note from the umpire to the plaintiff, on a separate piece of paper, but not annexed to the award, in which the umpire expressed an opinion that the costs of the action, and of the reference and award, should be paid by the defendant, and that he would have so ordered, but that he could not do so, inasmuch as the order of reference was silent as to costs:—Held, that the parties were bound by the award, and that the accompanying note could not be looked at. Leggo v. Young, 16 C. B. 626; 24 L. J., C. P. 200.

Upon a compulsory reference to the master, he made his award, and wrote a letter (without referring to his letter in the award) of the same date to the parties, expressing his opinion upon the matter generally. Upon motion to set aside the award or refer it back to the master for reconsideration, on the ground that his letter, contemporaneous with the award, clearly shewed the award to be bad:—Held, that the letter formed no part of the award, and unless it substantially formed part of the award and was intended to do so, there was no ground for the rule. Holdgate v. Killick, 7 H. & N. 418; 31 L. J., Ex. 7; 5 L. T. 358; 10 W. R. 19.

If an arbitrator professes to decide upon the law, and he mistakes it, the court will set aside the award, although his reasons do not appear upon the face of the award, but only upon another paper delivered therewith. Aent v. Elstob, 3 East, 18.

An arbitrator, with a view of enabling one of the parties to make an application to the court, after the publication of his award, stated matters which shewed he had put a mistaken construction on the rule of reference, and had misdecided accordingly; the court received affidavits of these facts, and set aside the award, notwithstanding on the face of it there was no objection. Jones v. Curry, 5 Bing. N. C. 187; 7 D. P. C. 299; 7 Scott, 106; 3 Jur. 149.

The court will not set aside an award on the ground that the arbitrator has made a mistake in law or fact, unless, perhaps, the mistake is either apparent on the face of the award, or appears in some document delivered by the arbitrator contemporaneously with it, or perhaps by the affidavit of the arbitrator. Hogge or Hogg v. Burgess, 3 H. & N. 293; 27 L. J., Ex. 318; 4 Jur., N. S. 668.

If a mistake has been made in an award, not apparent on the face of it, and such mistake is admitted in an affidavit by the arbitrators, such an admission is sufficient to authorize the court to set aside the award. Mills v. Bowyers (Society), 3 Kay & J. 66.

The decision of an arbitrator, whether a lawyer or a layman, is binding on the parties both in matters of law and in matters of fact, unless there has been fraud or corruption on his part, or there is some mistake of law apparent on the face of the award, or of some paper accompanying and forming part of the award. Hodgkinson v. Fernie, 3 C. B., N. S. 189; 27 L. J., C. P. 66. S. P., London Dock Company, In re, 32 L. J. Q. B. 30; 7 L. T. 381; 11 W. R. 89.

Compare cases ante, cols. 347, 348.

Mistake as to Effect of Evidence.—The court will not set aside the certificate of an arbitrator, any more than an award, on the ground of a mistake as to the effect of evidence. Price v. Price, 9 D. P. C. 334; 5 Jur. 6; S. P., Wilson v. King, 2 C. & M. 689; 4 Tyr. 997.

Matters of Law.—The court will not open an award on a suggestion that the arbitrator is mistaken in the law; facts as well as law having been referred to him, and his award being silent as to the grounds of his decision. Boutillier v. Thick, 1 D. & R. 366.

In such case the award is final and conclusive; and the court will not open it or set it aside, unless the principles upon which he has decided are apparent on the face of the award. Payne v. Massey, 9 Moore, 666.

An award made by a barrister cannot be impeached on the ground of his having decided contrary to law. Wade v. Malpas, 2 D. P. C. 638. See Symes v. Goodfellow, 1 Hodges, 400; 2 Bing., N. C. 532; 4 D. P. C. 642; 2 Scott, 769.

The law recognizes no distinction between professional and non-professional arbitrators; so that, if a case is referred to one of the latter, and he makes a mistake in law, the parties to the reference are as much bound by it as if he had belonged to the former class. Huntig v. Ralling, or Henty v. Rally, 2 H. & W. 2; 8 D. P. C. 879; 4 Jur. 1091; S. P. Jupp v. Grayson, 1 C. M. & R. 523; 3 D. P. C. 199; 5 Tyr. 150; Haydock v. Beard, 2 Jur. 1069; Ashton v. Pointer, 2 D. P. C. 651; 3 D. P. C. 201.

Where a cause involving a question of law was referred to a barrister and the question did not appear on his award, the court refused to open the award again on a suggestion of the barrister's mistake on a point of law, considering it the intention of the parties to refer questions of fact as well as of law. Chace v. Westmore, 13 East, 357; And see Price v. Hollis, 1 M. & S. 105.

Where a cause is referred to a layman, and he assumes to decide upon a point of law, and errs, the court will set aside his award; but, where the arbitrator is a barrister, both the law and the fact are left to his discretion; even though a question of law arises incidentally on the hearing, which could not have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time of referring. Perryman v. Steggall, 3 M. & Scott, 93; 9 Bing. 679.

The mistake of an arbitrator on a point of law is no ground for setting aside an award. Allen v. Greenslade, 33 L. T. 567.

A plaintiff agreed with a railway company by deed to execute a portion of the railway for them at certain prices stipulated therein, and the company covenanted to give the plaintiff possession of certain land for the above purpose within a specified time. The plaintiff having brought an action against the company to recover a sum of money for extra work rendered necessary, as he alleged, by the omission to give him possession of the land within a specified time, an order was made for referring "the claims made in the action." It was objected before the arbitrator, that the plaintiff could not in the present form of action, recover for the extra work, his remedy being by an action for damages for a breach of covenant. The arbitrator received the evidence, and awarded a sum to the plaintiff in respect of extra work:—Held, that, as the arbitrator had not been guilty of misconduct, and had acted within his jurisdiction, his mistake in point of law was no ground for setting aside the award. Parcell v. Eastern Counties Railway Company, 2 Ex. 344; 17 L. J., Ex. 223.

Matter of fact.—It is not an invariable rule that the courts will not set aside an award on the ground that the arbitrator has, by mistake, VQL. I.

adjudicated wrongly on a matter in difference. Hutchinson v. Shepperton, 13 Q. B. 955; 13 Jur. 1098.

Where, on a question of account, both parties to an action agreed before an arbitrator that a given sum was due to the plaintiff on a particular item, and it appeared by the arbitrator's affidavit that he, conceiving this to be no longer a matter in difference, omitted the sum in the amount which he awarded to the plaintiff, the court, on motion by the plaintiff (who had objected to the adjudication without loss of time after the delivery of the award) set aside the award. Ib.

The courts will not interfere with the decision of lay arbitrators on a point of law, dependent upon a question of fact, when such fact has been left for their determination. Simpson, In re, 17 L. T. 617.

A defendant having brought several actions against the plaintiff, he filed a bill for an account, and to restrain the actions. The court made an order referring the matters, which involved questions of foreign law, to arbitration. An award was made in the defendant's favour, and the plaintiff objected to it on the ground that the arbitrator had made a mistake as to foreign law, and that, on certain affidavits being tendered to him on behalf of the plaintiff, he had said that he would take and look at them, but that they would not weigh on his mind as evidence:—Held, that the mistake as to the foreign law was a mistake of fact, and was, therefore, no ground for setting aside the award; and that the arbitrator's statement that the affidavits would not weigh on his mind as evidence was no ground for setting the award aside, there being no evidence of misconduct on the part of the arbitrator. Imperial Royal Chartered Azienda Assicuratrice of Trieste v. Funder, 27 L. T. 637; 21 W. R. 116—L. J. Affirming 27 L. T. 438; 21 W. R. 67.

Gross Mistake.—Where a gross mistake is made by arbitrators, though not apparent on the face of the award, the court will sometimes set aside the award, as for misconduct of the arbitrators. Hall, In re, 3 Scott, N. R. 250; 2 M. & G. 847.

As where A., claiming two sums to be due to him from B., the contention before the arbitrators is merely whether A. is entitled to both or to one only of those sums, and the arbitrators, meaning to give A. both sums, instead of adding them together, deduct the smaller from the larger, and instead of directing the payment to be made by B. to A., award that the payment shall be made by A. to B. Ib.

Misconduct.—Neither a court of law nor of equity will interfere to set aside an award, unless corruption, partiality, misconduct or irregularity is distinctly proved against the arbitrator. Mere suspicion is not sufficient. Moseley v. Simpson, 16 L. R., Eq. 226; 42 L. J., Ch. 739; 28 L. T. 727; 21 W. R. 694.

An arbitrator does not necessarily misconduct himself by expressing an opinion on the subject-matter of a reference before formally entering upon it, even though such expression is made in writing, and is identical in terms with the award finally made. Hutchinson v. Hayward, 15 L. T. 291.

False Evidence.—The court refused to set aside an award, or to stay the proceedings, on the ground that the arbitrator had been imposed upon by false evidence of a witness who might have been cross-examined before the arbitrator, especially when the award had been made two terms before the application. Pilmore v. Hood, 8 Scott, 182; 8 D. P. C. 21; 3 Jur. 1153. See Blagrove v. Bristol Waterworks Company, 1 H. & N. 369; 26 L. J., Ex. 57.

Surprise.]—It is no ground for setting aside an award that the unsuccessful party suffered a surprise, as an arbitrator would have power to postpone the proceedings upon any reasonable application for that purpose. Solomon v. Solomon, 28 L. J., Ex. 129.

Claim of Party to be heard after Assessment—Refusal to re-open before Publication.]—By the lease of a farm the lessor undertook to pay the lessee at the end of the term whatever is usually valued between an incoming and outgoing tenant at a valuation, the amount to be ascertained by two indifferent persons or their umpire, pursuant to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854. The lessor and lessee duly appointed each an arbitrator, the lessor at the time of his appointment stating that he would leave the matter in his arbitrator's hands, and that the amount of the valuation would be paid. The two arbitrators, together with the umpire whom they nominated, proceeded to inspect the farm under the guidance of the lessee, and to examine the lessee, in the absence of the lessor, and without notice to him of the meeting. On the same day the umpire, arbitrators, and lessee dined together at a village inn; and after the lessee left them the umpire fixed all matters in dispute between the arbitrators except two, upon which he afterwards took the opinion of his solicitor. When the lessor was informed by his arbitrator of the approximate amount fixed at the valuation, and the points of law reserved, he immediately applied to the umpire to be heard in person, but the umpire refused to reopen the arbitration, and about ten days afterwards signed and published his award:—Held, upon a rule to set aside the award, that during the reservation of the points of law the arbitration was not practically nor legally concluded, so that upon his application the lessor was entitled to be heard personally by the umpire, and therefore the refusal to hear the lessor rendered the arbitration invalid. Maunder, In re, 49 L. T. 535. S. P., Nicholls v. Warren, 6 Q. B. 615; 2 D. & L. 549.

Award void.]—Where an award is void, and nothing can be done upon it without suit, the court will not interfere to set it aside, because such suit must fail. But, where a cause is referred by order of nisi prius, and the arbitrator has power to order a verdict to be entered for either party, and he makes an award, ordering a verdict to be entered; notwithstanding such award is void, the court will set it aside, for otherwise the party in whose favour the award is made will have judgment upon the verdict, without any new proceeding to enforce the award. Doe d. Turnbull v. Brown, 5 B. & C. 384; 8 D. & R. 100.

Umpire not a disinterested Person—Waiver of Objection.]—In an arbitration under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, Y., the arbitrator, on behalf of the claimants, selected W. to act as umpire from the names of three persons submitted to him by R., the arbitrator on behalf of the respondents. On the 11th October, 1881, the parties went before the umpire. The award was made on the 22nd November, taken up by the respondents, and served upon the claimants on the 10th December. W. had given evidence on behalf of the respondents on the 3rd and 30th November with respect to the value of other property in the same neighbourhood, on claims against the respondents. Y. saw in the newspapers that W. was giving evidence in the other cases, and on the 11th October, when the arbitrators and umpire went to view the premises, he had noticed that R. shewed W. other property in the same neighbourhood, but he did not know at the time he selected W. to act as umpire that he was about to be retained by the respondents to give evidence in other and similar cases. No objection was made by the claimants, nor any one on their behalf, that W. was not a disinterested person until the 20th December:—Held, that the claimant had sufficient knowledge of the position of W. before the award was made, and having given no notice of objection until the 20th December, he must be taken to have consented to W. acting as umpire. Clout and Metropolitan and District Railway Companies, In re, 46 L. T. 141.

By Stephen J., that the objection was a proper one had it been taken in time. Ib.

Submission obtained by Fraud.]—The court on motion refused a rule to set aside an award, on the ground that the submission had been obtained by fraud; as the application should have been made to set aside the order. Sackett v. Owen, 2 Chit. 39.

Suggestion that erroneous Principle adopted.]—Upon a reference to arbitrators, or an umpire, to ascertain the amount due for fire damage upon a policy of assurance, the court will not interfere to set aside or to send back the award on a mere suggestion that the arbitrators have, or the umpire has, adopted an erroneous principle of valuation. Oldfield v. Price, 6 C. B., N. S. 539.

ii. Practice thereon.

To what Courts Application made.]—The courts at Westminster have no authority to set aside an award made in an action depending in the Common Pleas at Lancaster, and referred by order of nisi prius. Plumley v. Inkerwood, 12 M. & W. 190; S. C. nom. Smethurst v. Taylor, 13 L. J., Ex. 38.

A motion to set aside an award made in the Common Pleas at Lancaster, under an order of nisi prius, cannot be made in banco, under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 26, though a verdict was taken subject to the award, but must be made before a single judge. Byrne v. Fitzhugh, 5 Tyr. 221.

Semble, where an action is referred by an order at nisi prius, the Court of Chancery has no jurisdiction to interfere with the certificate of the referee or the judgment entered up pursuant thereto, on any ground on which it would not have such jurisdiction, if the judgment had been obtained in the ordinary course upon the verdict of a jury. Chuck v. Cremer, 2 Ph. 477; 17 L. J., Ch. 287.

The Court of Chancery has no jurisdiction to set aside an award made under a reference of an action whether the same is or is not under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15. Harding v. Wickham, 2 Johns. & H. 676; 4 L. T. 738; 9 W. R. 652.

Award made under an act of parliament for an inclosure; whether it can be set aside in the Court of Chancery.—Quære. Doncaster (Incorporation) v. Milbourn, Romilly's Notes of Cases, 106.

Where, in a reference under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, an award has been made, the jurisdiction in the matters of the award of every superior court, except that before which the reference is pending, is excluded. Choke v. Cooke, 4 L. R., Eq. 77; 30 L. J., Ch. 480; 15 W. R. 981.

To what Division to be made.—Where it was agreed to make a submission to arbitration a rule of court of any divisional court of the High Court of Justice, and the submission was made a rule of the Queen's Bench Division:—Held, on an application to the Chancery Division, that under the Judicature Acts the matter was one which the parties might attach to any division they thought fit, but that as they had attached it to the Queen's Bench Division any motion concerning it must be made there. Lomas's Arbitration, In re, 42 L. T. 391; 28 W. R. 485.

Who may move to set aside Award.—Where, by the terms of an order of nisi prius, referring matters in dispute to the award of an arbitrator, on the terms of the defendant paying the costs of the cause, and of the reference and award, the plaintiff, after having accepted the costs of the reference and of the award, was dissatisfied with the award:—Held, that he was precluded from moving to set it aside. Kennard v. Harris, 4 D. & R. 272; 2 B. & C. 801.

An award, published nine days before the end of Hilary Term, directed the defendant to pay the plaintiff a certain sum of money, and the plaintiff to lay out a certain sum of money on the premises, which the defendant held as lessee of the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant had not waived any objections that might be taken to the award, by not giving notice to the plaintiff of his intention to apply to the court after he had heard that the plaintiff had commenced the repairs, nor by the defendant's attorney requesting a week's time to pay the money, which the plaintiff granted, on conditions to which the defendant appeared to have assented. Hayward v. Phillips, 1 N. & P. 288; 6 A. & E. 119.

A clause in a deed of submission "that no action or suit at law or in equity shall be commenced or prosecuted against the arbitrators concerning their award when made, nor to impeach the award, unless some collusion or other fraud be discovered or appear therein," does not prevent a party to the deed from moving to set aside the award (for illegality upon the face of it), though no fraud or collusion appears. Mackay, In re, 2 A. & E. 356.

A verdict was taken for the plaintiff for the damages in the declaration, subject to a reference. At the first meeting before the arbitrator, the defendant objected that the order of reference was not drawn according to the terms agreed upon, inasmuch as it did not authorize the arbitrator to direct a verdict to be entered for him on an issue of payment, but only to reduce the damages, and he applied to have the hearing postponed till an application could be made to amend the order. The plaintiff contended, that the arbitrator had authority to direct a verdict for the defendant upon that issue, as it stood, and the arbitrator himself was of that opinion. The arbitration was accordingly proceeded with upon that view, and an award was made, directing a verdict to be entered for the defendant on the issue of payment:—Held, that it was not competent for the plaintiff to object to the misconstruction (if any) of the order of reference. Gracutt v. Attwood, 1 L. M. & P. 392; 19 L. J., Q. B. 474.

Hearing, on what Days.—The court will not allow cause to be shewn against a rule for setting aside an award on the last day of term. Bignall or Bignold v. Gale, 2 Scott, N. R. 582; 9 D. P. O. 393; 2 M. & G. 364.

No motion involving an award can be heard on the last day of term. Brooke v. Parsons, 7 Jur. 1016.

Notice of Application to set aside.—An application to set aside an award may be made without notice to the other side; for it is a motion for an order to shew cause within Ord. XL. rr. 5, 6. Robinson v. Robinson, 35 L. T. 337; 24 W. R. 675.

Notice of motion to set aside an award ought not to be served upon the arbitrators. Moalely v. Simpson, 16 L. R. Eq. 226; 42 L. J. Ch. 739; 28 L. T. 727; 21 W. R. 694.

Not set aside unless clearly Bad.—The court will not set aside an award on motion, unless it is clear that it is bad. Cook v. Gent, 14 M. & W. 680; 3 D. & L. 271; 15 L. J., Ex. 33.

Where there is a doubt about the validity of an award, the court will neither set it aside, nor grant an attachment, but leave the party to bring an action: secus, when a verdict has been taken. Burley v. Stevens, 4 D. P. C. 770; 1 M. & W. 156. See Doe d. Turnbull v. Brown 5 B. & C. 384; 8 D. & R. 100.

Order for Security for Costs—Effect of.—In a cause which had been referred by an order nisi prius, the arbitrator made an award in favour of the defendant, who thereupon signed judgment. The plaintiff obtained a rule to set aside the award, notice of which was served upon the defendant. The defendant afterwards, and before the argument of the rule, obtained an order to stay all further proceedings until the plaintiff should have given security for costs:—Held, that the court could not entertain the application for setting aside the award whilst this order remained in force. Badham v. Badham, 1 Ex. 824.

Affidavits, Form and Contents of.—Affidavits in support of or in answer to a rule for setting aside an award made a rule of court under the statute, need not be intitled. Bainbridge v. Hamilton, 5 East, 21.

On motions to set aside awards where there is no cause pending, it is not necessary that the affidavits, on shewing cause, should be intitled with the Christian and surnames of the parties, although the rule is generally drawn up with the names of the parties as if there was a cause pending. Anon., 1 Smith, 358.

If affidavits used on a rule with respect to a matter of arbitration, where there is no cause in court, improperly introduced the words "plaintiff" and "defendant," after the names of the parties, in the title of the affidavits, those words may be treated as surplusage. Imeson and Horner, In re, 8 D. P. C. 651.

On motion to set aside an award as not final, in respect of the pleadings in the action, the pleadings should be brought before the court by affidavit. Louce v. Allen, 4 Q. B. 66; 12 L. J. Q. B. 115; 7 Jur. 417.

A rule to set aside an award was drawn up on reading a copy of the award, verified by affidavit as a true copy, but not identified as the copy before the court; the only reference to it being "the paper writing hereunto annexed was delivered by T. W. R., as a copy of the award made by him."—Held sufficient. Lund v. Hodson, 1 D. & L. 236; 12 L. J. Q. B. 365; 7 Jur. 992.

An affidavit, verifying a copy of an award to be a true copy, need not state that the copy has been compared with the original award. Hawks or Hawkyard v. Stocks, 2 D. & L. 936; 14 L. J. Q. B. 236; 9 Jur. 451.

An affidavit of the managing clerk of the plaintiff's town agent, which states "that the paper writing annexed is a true copy of the award of G. T. L., to whom all matters in difference were referred, as this deponent has been informed and believes, and that this deponent has received the said paper from G. H., of B., in the county of York," sufficiently verifies the copy of the award. Id.

A motion to set aside an award founded upon a judge's order, made under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 3, may be made on an affidavit setting out the order without making the order a rule of court. Watson v. Bennett, 5 H. & W. 831.

On a motion to set aside an award on the ground that it is not final because there were other matters in difference than those dealt with by the arbitrator, the applicant must shew affirmatively by his affidavit that there were such other matters in difference, and the court will not allow the affidavit to be amended. Bennett v. Brighton (Mayor &c.), 17 L. T. 509; 16 W. R. 361.

Where a cause and all matters in dispute are referred, a recital in the award that the action was referred, without mentioning other matters in difference, does not constitute an objection to the award on the face of it. Paull v. Paull, 2 D. P. C. 340; 2 C. & M. 235; 4 Tyr. 72.

Such an objection should be made the ground of a separate application to set aside the award, supported by affidavits shewing what were the other matters in difference. Id.

Rule to shew Cause—Stating Objections.—Rule 169 of Hilary Term, 1853, applies to the certificate as well as to an award of an arbitrator empowered to ascertain the amount due from the defendant to the plaintiff, and to certify the same to the associate, by whom a verdict is to be entered accordingly. Carmichael v. Houchen, 3 N. & M. 203.

It is sufficient to state the grounds of objection in general terms, as, that the award is not final; that the arbitrator has exceeded his authority; that the award is uncertain, or that the arbitrator has not awarded on all matters referred to him. Gray v. Leaf, 8 D. P. C. 654.

In a rule nisi for setting aside an award, an objection, "that the arbitrator has not awarded on a matter in difference submitted to him," is sufficiently specific. Dunn v. Walters, 1 D., N. S. 626; 9 M. & W. 293.

But where a rule is obtained to set aside an award, on the ground "that the arbitrator has exceeded his authority," this general statement of objection is insufficient; for the affidavits should specifically state in what points the excess consists. Staple or Staples v. Hey, 1 D. & L. 711; 13 L. J. Q. B. 60; 8 Jur. 315; S. P. Rauothorn v. Arnold, 6 B. & C. 629; 9 D. & R. 556.

A notice of motion in the Chancery Division to set aside the award of an arbitrator should specify the grounds of objection, by analogy to the practice under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852; Reg. Gen. Hil. Term, 1853, r. 169: an objection on "good grounds" being insufficient. Mercier v. Pepperell, 19 Ch. D. 58; 51 L. J., Ch. 63; 45 L. T. 609; 30 W. R. 228.

What Court may look at.—The original agreement of reference may be looked at on a motion to set aside an award, though the rule nisi is not drawn up on reading it; for the rule nisi is drawn up on reading the rule making the agreement of reference a rule of court, and the agreement of reference is in law part of the rule embodying it. Onwald v. Grey (Earl), 24 L. J., Q. B. 69.

The court will not look at the notes of an arbitrator, nor at a copy of them verified by affidavit. Doe d. Hazby v. Preston, 1 B. C. Rep. 77.

The Rule—Contents of.—Where it is sought to set aside and not to enforce an award, it is not necessary for the party applying to make the enlargement of the time for making the award part of the rule. Walsh, In re, 1 D., N. S. 331.

A rule to set aside an award must appear to be drawn up on reading the award itself. Barton v. Ransom, 5 D. P. C. 597.

Or a copy of it; and the court will not allow it to be amended. Sherry v. Oke, 3 D. P. C. 349; 1 H. & W. 119.

A rule to set aside an award made after action commenced, on account of objections to the declaration, need not refer to the declaration, as it is sufficiently before the court. Id.

A rule to set aside an award was drawn up—on reading "the affidavit of the defendant, and the paper writing thereto annexed;" and an affidavit, in support of the rule, stated facts to shew that the paper writing was a copy of the award:—Held, sufficient. Hayward v. Phillips, 6 A. & E. 119.

A rule to set aside a void award, may be drawn up without reading the award, the party seeking to set aside the award not being bound to incur the expense of taking up a void award. Hinton v. Meade, 3 C. L. R. 325; 24 L. J., Ex. 140; 1 Jur., N. S. 46.

Setting aside Judgments on Award.—When judgment has been entered up under an award:—Held, upon an application to set aside the judgment and restrain execution, that the defendants must be confined to objections appearing on the face of the award, as if they were shewing cause in a rule for an attachment. Doe d. Madkins v. Horner, 3 N. & P. 344; 8 A. & E. 235; W. W. & H. 348; 2 Jur. 417.

The court is not, however, precluded by the omission from entering into any valid objection that may be raised to the award. Dicas v. Jay, 2 M. & P. 448; 5 Bing. 281.

Partial Validity of Award.]—An award may be good in part, and bad in part, where the subject is clearly capable of being separated. Addiam v. Gray, 2 Wils. 293; S. P., Armitage v. Walker, 2 Kay & J. 211; 2 Jur. N. S. 13; Winter v. Lethbridge, 1 M'Clel. 253; 13 Price, 533.

Where an arbitrator has exceeded his power by awarding costs to be taxed as between attorney and client, if that part of the award is separable from the rest, it may be rejected, and the award stand; but if it is so connected with the rest as not to be separable, the whole is vitiated. Seckham v. Babb, 8 D. P. C. 167; 6 M. & W. 129; 4 Jur. 90.

Certain matters being referred to an umpire, in some of which the defendant was absolute possessor of the property in respect of which the dispute arose, while in others he held a share of it only, an award directing him to do certain works in respect of all, but providing that the directions of the award should only affect the latter so far as his interest in it extended:—Held, good as to all but that part in respect of which the defendant might shew his inability to proceed. Dodding v. Bailward, 7 D. P. C. 640; 5 Bing. 591.

If an arbitrator exceeds his authority in going beyond the terms of the submission, to direct the mode in which any of the matters ordered by the award is to be done, that direction may be rejected as a nullity, forming no part of, and consequently not affecting, the award. Aitchison v. Cargy (in error), 13 Price, 639; 2 Bing. 199; 9 Moore, 381; 1 M'Clel. 367.

An arbitrator, to whom a cause and all matters in difference were referred, directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff, and certain works to be done by the defendant. He added, that, as disputes might arise respecting the performance, the plaintiff, if dissatisfied with it, might (on giving notice to the defendant) bring evidence before the arbitrator of the insufficiency of the work, and the defendant might also give evidence on his part, in order that a final award might be made concerning the matters in difference; but, if no proceeding were taken by the plaintiff within two months after the work was done, the award then made should be final, and he enlarged the time for making his further and final award, if requested, to six months:—Held, that the latter part of this award was bad, as it assumed to reserve a power over future differences; but that it might be rejected, and the former part was final, and might stand. Manser v. Hecker, 3 B. & Ad. 295.

An arbitrator, to whom a cause in which several issues were joined was referred, the costs to abide the event, disposed of such issues, and, although no power for that purpose was given to him, awarded a stet processus:—Held, that although this was an excess of authority, the award was only bad as to that part, and good as to the rest. Ward v. Hall, 9 D. P. C. 610; 5 Jur. 800.

On a rule to set aside an award, if any part of the award is bad, but can be clearly separated from the rest, and treated as surplusage, the rule will be discharged generally. Goddard, In re, 1 L., M. & P. 25; 19 L. J., Q. B. 305.

If an arbitrator directs mutual releases on payment of a sum of money, over which he has jurisdiction, as well as of a sum over which he has none, the award is good as to the former. Kendrick v. Davis, 5 D. P. C. 693; W. W. & D. 376; S. P., Doe d. Williams v. Richardson, 8 Taunt. 697; Pickering v. Watson, 2 W. Bl. 1117.

An arbitrator reserved to himself power to appoint counsel or a solicitor to settle any disputes which might arise as to the proper form of the conveyances which he had ordered to be executed:—Held, that he had exceeded his authority, and that, as this part of the award could not be separated from the rest, the whole was bad. Tandy, In re, 9 D. P. C. 1044; 5 Jur. 726.

An arbitrator had the power of a judge ad nisi prius; he did not award execution, but ordered the damages and costs in actions referred to be paid at a stated time and place: that part of the award was held void pro tanto, as surplusage. Rees v. Waters, 16 M. & W. 263; 4 D. & L. 567.

A cause after issue joined having been referred, but no power given to award a verdict, the arbitrator directed a verdict to be entered for the defendant, and the plaintiff and defendant to execute mutual releases:—Held, that the award was bad for excess of authority, and that the portion of it ordering a verdict to be entered could not be rejected as redundant; since, if struck out, the meaning of the award would be altered. Hayward or Hawks v. Stocks, 2 D. & L. 937; 14 L. J., Q. B. 236; 9 Jur. 451; 10 Jur. 14.

On demurrer to a declaration on an award generally and to a plea of want of finality:—Held, that the good part of the award was separable from the bad, which therefore did not vitiate the rest, and that it was sufficiently final. Lewis v. Rosniter, 44 L. J., Ex. 136; 33 L. T. 260; 23 W. R. 832.

Matters at issue in an ejectment, with all claims in respect of mesne profits and all matters in difference between the parties, and of the costs of the action and of the reference, were referred after issue joined. The award directed judgment to be entered for the plaintiff with 1*s.* damages, and that he should recover under the same judgment a plot of land, describing it by metes and bounds, and that the defendant should pay 12*s.* mesne profits and the plaintiff's costs in the action, to be taxed by the proper officer, and part of the costs of the reference and award:—Held, that the arbitrator had no authority to direct judgment to be entered up, and final judgment which had been signed was set aside, but that, rejecting all that related to the judgment, the award, nevertheless, sufficiently decided the matters referred. Doe d. Body v. Cor, 4 D. & L. 75; 15 L. J., Q. B. 317; 10 Jur. 982.

iii. Time within which Application made.

Before Last Day of Next Term.]—By 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, awards procured by corruption, or undue means, are void, and may be set aside by any court or law of equity, if complaint be made in the court where the rule is made before the last day of the next term after such award published.

The motion under this statute must be made before the last day of the next term after such award is published, or it is too late, and an attachment for the non-performance of it may issue. Fream v. Pinneger, Cowp. 23.

And so also, although the submission is not made a rule of court until a subsequent term, it is too late to disturb the award. Reynolds v. Askew, 5 D. P. C. 682; W. W. & D. 366.

In a submission, made in a pending cause, by consent of parties, under which an award has been made and published, the 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, prevents the application to set the award aside being effectual, unless made before the last day of the term next following such publication. Dodd v. Platt, 6 Jur., N. S. 631; 1 L. T. 135.

A rule nisi to set aside an award need not be moved for within the first four days of the term next after the publication of the award. Martin v. Burge, 6 N. & M. 201.

An application to set aside an award for objections apparent on the face of it, must be brought within the time limited by the statute. Lowndes v. Lowndes, 1 East, 276; S. P., Anon., 1 Ld. Ken. 118; Anon., Lofft, 437.

Where an arbitrator, to whom a cause was referred by order of nisi prius, directed that a verdict should be entered for the plaintiff for 254*l.*, and then set forth certain facts raising a question for the opinion of the court, and awarded that if, upon such facts, the court should be of opinion that the verdict should be for 125*l.* only, then the damages should be reduced to that sum:—Held, that a motion to enter the verdict for the latter sum upon the facts so stated by the arbitrator, was in effect a motion to set aside the award, and must be made within the term next following that in which the award was made. Anderson v. Fuller, 7 D. P. C. 51; 4 M. & W. 470; 1 H. & H. 352.

Applications to set aside awards made under a judge's order of reference are put on the same footing as to time as if the awards were made under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15; but if the party affected has not had notice of the award sufficiently early to enable him to move within the time allowed by the act, he may move to set it aside in the term next after the notice. Potter v. Newman, 4 D. P. C. 504; 2 C., M. & R. 742; 1 Tyr. & G. 29.

Where a submission does not contain an express agreement enabling the parties to make it a rule of court, the award is not brought within 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, by force of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 17, nor has the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 32, this effect. Smith v. Whitmore, 1 H. & M. 576; 32 L. J., Ch. 218; 10 Jur., N. S. 65; 10 L. T., 128. Affirmed on appeal, 2 De G., J. & S. 297; 33 L. J., Ch. 713; 10 Jur., N. S. 1190; 11 L. T. 169; 13 W. R. 2.

But in such a case the court of chancery will follow the course taken by the courts of common law, and adopt a rule of its own in analogy to the limitations of the statute. Ib.

Therefore, where a plaintiff had suffered the next term after the publication of the award to elapse without taking any steps to set it aside, and had afterwards unsuccessfully pleaded null tiel agard in an action on the award:—Held, that although the award could not have stood if the matter had been fresh, it was too late for the court to interfere. Ib.

Although it has been held that an arbitration under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act is not a submission by consent within the meaning of the Common Law Procedure Act, nevertheless, when an award is made a rule of court under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, s. 36, the court has the same jurisdiction with respect to setting it aside and enforcing it as in other cases; that is to say, the jurisdiction conferred by 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, is let in. It follows, therefore, that a motion to set aside the award must be made before the end of the term next after the publication of the award. Harper and Great Eastern Railway Company, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 39; 44 L. J., Ch. 507; 33 L. T. 214; 23 W. R. 371.

By 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, s. 2, a motion to set aside an award on a reference by consent must be made before the last day of the next term after publication of the award, and such a motion must still be made before the last day of the next term according to the division of the legal year existing before the Judicature Acts. Christ's College (Governors), Brecknock v. Martin, 3 Q. B. D. 16; 46 L. J., Q. B. 591; 36 L. T. 537; 25 W. R. 637—C. A.

Where a submission was made in a cause by agreement, and not by a judge's order, and after the award was published, the submission was made a rule of court; the court considered itself bound by analogy to the 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, and refused to set aside the award after the period of limitation had expired. Rushworth v. Barron, 3 D. P. C. 317; 1 H. & W. 122.

But it is competent to the parties to object to an award, for any illegality apparent upon the face of it, though the time limited by 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, for applying to set it aside is expired. Pedley v. Goddard, 7 T. R. 73.

When two terms have elapsed after the publication of an award, it is too late to move to set aside the award, notwithstanding that both parties to the reference may have agreed to the motion being then made. North British Railway Company and Trowsdale, In re, L. R., C. P. 401; 35 L. J., C. P. 262; 12 Jur., N. S. 786.

Setting aside award in equity. Smith v. Whitmore, 2 De G., J. & S. 297.

Cause and all Matters in Difference.—Where a cause and all matters in difference are referred, it would seem to be within the statute, and a motion may be made to set aside the award at any time before the end of the term next after the publication of the award. Hayward v. Phillips, 1 N. & P. 288; 6 A. & E. 119.

So, an award made in pursuance of an order of nisi prius, referring a cause and other matters in difference, may be objected to within the same time. Allenby v. Proudlock, 4 D. P. C. 54; 1 H. & W. 357.

The motion in such a case is not too late, although made more than four days in the term after its publication. Moore v. Bullin, 2 N. & P. 436; W. W. & D. 638; 7 A. & E. 595.

Cause Referred.—But where a cause, and all matters of difference in the cause only, are referred by order of nisi prius, the verdict being ordered to stand for a sum named, subject to the award, and the award is, that the verdict shall stand for a certain sum: an application to set the award aside must be made within four days of notice being given that the award is made, unless some excuse for delay be shewn, such as would, in the case of a verdict, induce the court to allow a motion for a new trial after the expiration of four days. Paxton v. Great North of England Railway Company, 8 Q. B. 938; 15 L. J., Q. B. 270; 10 Jur. 430.

Reference by Order of Nisi Prius.—A motion to set aside an award made under an order of nisi prius, not under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, must be made within the time allowed for moving for a new trial, unless sufficient reason for delay is shewn. Rawsthorn v. Arnold, 6 B. & C. 629; 9 D. & R. 556; S. P., Hayward v. Phillips, 1 N. & P. 288; 6 A. & E. 119.

A motion to set aside an award, made under an order of nisi prius, must be made within the first four days of the next term, though it is for objections apparent on the face of the award. Sell v. Carter, 2 D. P. C. 245.

Motion to set aside an award under a reference at nisi prius, allowed to be made after the first four days of term, where the award was published too late in the vacation to take the necessary proceedings before. Bennett v. Skardon, 5 M. & R. 10.

The time limited by the statute for setting aside awards, made under submissions by virtue of that statute, does not attach on awards made under orders of nisi prius. Synge v. Jerroise, 8 East, 466.

Where a cause is referred and a verdict entered, a motion to impeach the award must be made within the first four days of the following term. Lung v. Sutton, 3 Scott, 187; 5 D. P. C. 39; 2 Hodges, 106.

A cause only was referred: a motion to set aside the award, after the fourth day of the term following its publication, was too late, and the court refused to allow affidavits to be filed accounting for the delay. Riccard v. Kingdon, 3 D. & L. 773; 1 B. C. Rep. 122; 15 L. J., Q. B. 269.

In order to set aside an award at common law, very strong reasons must be shewn for not applying within the first four days of the term next after the making of the award. Reynolds v. Askew, 5 D. P. C. 682; W. W. & D. 366.

Extension of Time.—The court has no discretionary power under 9 & 10 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 2, to extend the time for making a motion to set aside an award. Smith v. Blake, 1 W. W. & H. 406; 8 D. P. C. 133; 2 Jur. 1015.

An application on the last day but one of the term for leave to move on the last day of the term to set aside an award, on the ground that the affidavit on which the motion was to be founded had not arrived from the country, was refused. Erans, In re, 4 M. & G. 767; 5 Scott, N. R. 240.

An award was made on the 23rd of March: the plaintiff moved to set it aside on the last day but one of the following Michaelmas Term, for an objection of which he had knowledge on the 8th of May:—Held, that the application was too late, notwithstanding a fiat had issued against the plaintiff before the date of the award, and he did not receive a copy of it until the 8th of November. Hemsworth v. Brian, 8 Scott, N. R. 842; 7 M. & G. 1009; 14 L. J., C. P. 36.

It is no excuse for not applying within the proper time to set aside an award, that the party had been prevented from obtaining a knowledge of its contents by the arbitrator's improperly demanding an extortionate sum for his fees. Moore v. Darby, 1 C. B. 445.

Where, from the misconduct of one of the parties, the submission cannot be made a rule of court, so as to enable the opposite party to make it a rule of court before the last day but one of the first term after the award, the time for a motion to set it aside will be enlarged until the following term. Perring, In re, 3 D. P. C. 98.

A rule nisi to set aside an award under an order of nisi prius having been discharged on a mere technical objection:—Held, not too late to move for a second rule after the first four days of the term next after the award was made. Sherry v. Oke, 3 D. P. C. 349; 1 H. & W. 119.

An award made under a reference by order of nisi prius was published on the 31st July, and within the first four days of the following Hilary Term the unsuccessful party applied to set it aside. During the months of August, September, October and November preceding he was in bad health, and passed the October on the continent for that reason; and an affidavit of his physician stated that during the whole of November he was unfit to attend to any business:—Held, no sufficient excuse to take the case out of the rule which requires that application to set aside an award must be made during the term subsequent to the publication of an award. Guadinao v. Broun, 2 Jur., N. S. 358.

Where a rule nisi to set aside an award had been granted on the last day but one of term, but was stayed in the office, because the reference had not been made a rule of court, of which it appeared that the parties were aware at the time of making the motion, the court refused in the following term (the agreement of reference having, in the meantime, been made a rule of court), to antedate the latter rule as of the day when the motion to set aside the award was made, and to draw up the rule to set aside the award on reading the rule making the agreement of reference a rule of court, although it appeared that the party moving had no copy of the agreement, which was in the hands of the opposite party, who had refused to make it a rule of court in time. Ross v. Ross, 4 D. & L. 648; 16 L. J., Q. B. 138.

Defendant gave plaintiff to understand he intended to move to set aside an award between them. Plaintiff, who intended to make the same motion, allowed a term to elapse, and then moved, the defendant having omitted to do so:—Held, no sufficient reason for the delay. Emet v. Ogden, 7 Bing. 258.

Where a cause is referred by a judge's order, an application to set aside the award must, in general, be made within two terms; but under special circumstances, the court will entertain the application after the time. Hobbs v. Ferrars, 8 D. P. C. 779; 4 Jur. 825; S. P., Brooke v. Mitchell, 8 D. P. C. 392.

A motion to set aside an award under a judge's order must be made within the term ensuing the making of the award, although the arbitrator demands an excessive fee, and a copy is not, in consequence, obtained by either party until a few days before the time when the application is made. McArthur v. Campbell, 2 N. & M. 444; 5 B. & Ad. 518.

"Complaint," what is.—When a submission has been made a rule of the Court of Chancery, service of a notice of motion to set aside the award is a complaint within the meaning of 9 & 10 Will., 3, c. 15, s. 2, and is in time, although the motion will not be heard until after the time limited by the act. Muddersfield Corporation and Jacomb, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 92; 44 L. J., Ch. 96; 31 L. T. 466; 23 W. R. 100.

An ex parte application to set aside or vary an award published on July 14, was made in court on November 24, but not entertained, because no notice of motion had been given. On the same day notice was given that the court would be moved on the 27th. On the motion being made accordingly, it was objected that the motion was out of time:—Held, that the motion could be heard, as the notice of motion given on the 24th of November was a complaint in court within 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, s. 2. Smith v. Parkside Company, 6 Q. B. D. 67; 50 L. J., Q. B. 144; 29 W. R. 154.

Rule, Enlargement of.—When a rule had been granted to set aside an award involving certain accounts, and before it came on for argument cross bills had been filed in chancery by each party for the taking of the accounts, the court, with the consent of the parties, enlarged the rule generally until the first term after the chief clerk's certificate had become final. Stafford v. Stafford, 25 L. T. 572.

Application to set aside Judgment.—A defendant having omitted to apply to set aside an award in the next term after it was made, and the plaintiff having afterwards signed judgment:—Held, that the defendant was at liberty to move to set aside the judgment in the next term after it had been signed. Brooks v. Parson, 1 D. & L. 691; 13 L. J., Q. B. 50; 8 Jur. 81.

A defendant may move to set aside a judgment entered up on an irregular award, though the time of setting aside the award itself has elapsed, if the defect insisted on is apparent on the face of it; and an objection grounded on such defect need not be stated in the rule nisi. Manser v. Heaver, 3 B. & Ad. 295.

Compulsory References.—By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 9, "All applications to set aside any award made on a compulsory reference under this act shall and may be made within the first seven days of the term next following the publication of the award to the parties, whether made in vacation or term; and if no such application is made, or if no rule is granted thereon, or if any rule granted thereon is afterwards discharged, such award shall be final between the parties."

This section only requires that the rule should be moved for within the seven days, not that it should be granted within that time. Bennett v. Watson, or Watson v. Bennett, 5 H. & N. 831; 29 L. J. Ex. 357; 6 Jur. N. S. 637; 8 W. R. 612.

e. Enforcing Award.

i. By Attachment.

a. When Granted.

Duty must be clear.—An attachment will not be granted for disobedience of an award unless the duty to be performed or the money to be paid is distinctly ascertained therein. Graham v. Darcey, 6 C. B. 337; 6 D. & L. 385; 18 L. J., C. P. 61.

Where an award finds a certain sum to be due, but does not order that sum to be paid, an attachment cannot be obtained for the non-payment of that sum. Seward v. Houcey, 7 D. P. C. 318; 1 W. W. & H. 410; 3 Jur. 9; S. P., Edgell v. Dalimore, 3 Bing. 634; 11 Moore, 541.

An award having directed the delivery up of a particular box which was a matter not specifically referred, but which had been parted with before the date of the submission, an attachment could not be granted for non-performance of that part of the award. Smith v. Reeves, 2 H. & W. 306.

Counter Claim arising afterwards.—If after an award directing payment of money to the plaintiff matter arises which gives the defendant a counter claim against the plaintiff for an equal amount, the court will not grant an attachment on the application of the plaintiff to enforce payment of the money to him. Rees v. Rees, 25 L. J., Q. B. 352.

Offer to pay after Taxation.—An attachment cannot be granted for non-payment of a sum pursuant to an award, if, on a demand made, the party offers to pay on the costs, which were to follow the result of the award, being taxed. Kendrick v. Davis, W. W. & D. 587.

For Non-payment of Costs.—Where one only of two defendants who attended an arbitrator under a reference by order of nisi prius made the order a rule of court, and demanded costs from the plaintiff under a taxation to him only:—Held, that an attachment would not lie for the non-payment of the costs to the one defendant only. Dickins v. Smith, 8 D. & R. 285; S. C. nom. Dickins v. Jarvis, 5 B. & C. 528.

If an arbitrator awards that each party shall pay a moiety of the costs of the arbitration, and of making the submission a rule of court; and one party, in order to get the award out of the hands of the arbitrator, pays the whole, he may have an attachment against the other party, if he refuses to pay his moiety. Hicks v. Richardson, 1 B. & P. 93.

An attachment may be obtained to enforce the repayment of the moiety of the costs of an award, where it is part of the submission itself, and not of the award, that each party should pay the moiety. Powell, In re, 1 Wol. P. C. 23.

So, where an arbitrator awarded a sum together with the costs of the award, the party to whom the money was awarded was allowed, upon taking up the award, and paying the whole costs, to have an attachment against the defendant for the sum awarded, and his share of the costs. Stokes v. Lewis, 2 Smith, 12.

When Action commenced and discontinued.]—

The court will grant an attachment for the non-payment on demand of money awarded, after an action on the award commenced, and discontinued, where the action was not pending at the time of the demand. Higgins v. Willes, 3 M. & R. 382.

When Action pending.—The court will not grant an attachment pending an action on the award, nor allow the plaintiff to waive the action in order to apply for the attachment. Badly v. Loveday, 1 B. & P. 31; S. P., Paul v. Paul, 2 C. & M. 235; 2 D. P. C. 340; 4 Tyr. 72.

Denial by Defendant that acts done contrary to Award.—Two actions of trespass, and all matters in difference between the parties, touching a disputed right of way, were referred. The arbitrator directed that the defendant should give an undertaking to discontinue the user of the way. On a motion for an attachment for non-performance of the award, the defendant swore that he had not himself used the way, nor had it been used by any of his servants with his consent or knowledge. The court refused to grant the attachment. Russell v. York, 4 Scott, 422.

Price of Land.]—Where, in articles of agreement for the sale of land by A. to B., it is stipulated that the price shall be fixed by an arbitrator, and the agreement is made a rule of court, the award being published, and the agreement made a rule of court, A. cannot have an attachment against B. for non-payment of the price awarded. A.'s remedy is by action on the articles. Lec, In re, 3 N. & M. 860.

Clerical Error.]—An arbitrator having made a mistake in his award, in the Christian name of the defendant, the court refused to enforce it by attachment. Lec v. Hartley, 8 D. P. C. 883.

Reciprocal Duties.]—Where an award directed that the defendant, in consideration of a certain sum, should forthwith, at the costs and charges of the plaintiff, surrender to him an estate, and defendant was afterwards informed that upon such surrender being made, she should thereupon be paid the said sum and the costs of the surrender:—Held, that she was in contempt for not making a surrender, although such sum and costs had not been paid. Doe d. Clarke v. Stillwell, 3 N. & P. 701; 8 A. & E. 645; 2 Jur. 691.

H. and L. agreed, by deed, that H. should purchase property of L., at a price to be ascertained by arbitration, the conveyance to be made on payment of the money. The agreement was made a rule of court. The arbitrator having awarded the sum, L. tendered a conveyance to H., and demanded the money of him, but he would not pay. The court refused to grant an attachment against H., as for non-performance of an award, under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15. Hemingway, In re, 3 N. & M. 860; 15 Q. B. 305, n.

Payment to Wrong Person.]—Where in replevin against a defendant and his wife, they avowed for an annuity charged upon an estate in which the plaintiff had a life interest, and the court at various stages of the proceedings interfered to enable the wife to continue the suit, in opposition to the wishes of the husband, and the cause and all matters in difference were referred, and the arbitrator directed a verdict to be entered for the defendant in the action, and ordered a further sum to be paid to the wife by the plaintiff in respect of arrears which had accrued due since the commencement of the suit, the court granted an attachment for the non-payment of those arrears to the wife, even though it was sworn that the arrears had been paid to the husband upon demand made by him. Wynne v. Wynne, 1 D., N. S. 723; 3 Scott, N. B. 442; 4 M. & G. 253.

Error in Title of Actions.]—Two actions of A. r. B. and B. r. A., and all matters in difference between the parties, were referred, the costs of the reference and award as to the actions to be within the discretion of the arbitrator. The award found that there was due from B. to A. the sum of 52l. 18s., and directed that B. should bear his own costs in the action by him against A., and also A.'s costs of that action; that A. was entitled to recover 52l. 18s. in the action by him against B., and that B. should pay that sum on demand to A., together with A.'s costs of the action; and that each party should bear his own costs of the reference and half the expenses of the award. The action of B. r. A. had not proceeded beyond the writ, and consequently there were no costs due therein to A. The agreement of reference having been made a rule of court, —the rule being intitled "In the matter of the arbitration between A. and B.: A. r. B."—and the 52l. 18s., and taxed costs of the action of A. v. B. having been duly demanded, the court granted an attachment against B. for the non-payment of those two sums. Pike and Newman, In re, 14 C. B. 425.

In respect of some Matters.]—An award ordered H. to pay, on a day and at a place named, to the attorney of C. for C.'s use, one sum for debt and another for C.'s costs of the reference, and then directed that C. should pay to the arbitrator's attorney, at or before the delivery of the award, 62l. 10s. for the costs of the arbitrator and of the award; and that H. should, on a day and at a place named, repay the sum of 62l. 10s. to the attorney of C. for C.'s use. H. not complying with the award, a demand was duly made on him on C.'s behalf for payment of the specific sums, but H. did not pay any of them. On an application by C. against H. for an attachment for not paying the three sums:—Held, that assuming the direction to pay the 62l. 10s. to be valid, no attachment could issue in respect of that sum, as it was not shewn that C. had paid it in the first instance for the arbitrator's use; but the court could mould the rule, and that the attachment might issue in respect of the other two sums. Cardigan (Earl), In re, 1 B. C. C. 98; 22 L. J., Q. B. 83.

Compulsory Reference.]—Quære, whether an award made upon a compulsory reference is enforceable by attachment. Tulbot v. Fisher, 2 C. B., N. S. 471.

Arbitrator exceeding Powers.]—Where a cause was referred by an order, which gave no express power to direct a verdict to be entered, but the arbitrator awarded a verdict to be entered with damages and costs, the court discharged a rule which had been obtained to enforce the award by attachment, leaving the plaintiff to his remedy by action. Cock v. Gent, 14 M. & W. 680; 3 D. & L. 271; 15 L. J., Ex. 33.

B. By and Against whom Granted.

In whose favour Order made.]—An executor may have, without scire facias, or other process of revivor, an attachment for non-performance of an award made in favour of his testator in a cause referred and decided in his lifetime, though the suit abated by his decease. Rogers v. Stanton, 7 Taunt. 575.

So, if a stranger to a cause becomes, by rule of court, a party to a reference made in the cause before any jury are sworn, and if, after the award made, but before judgment, one of the parties to the cause dies, though the cause abates, the rule of court is not vacated as to the stranger, but an attachment will go thereon for non-performance of the award. Id.

The court will not grant an attachment for the non-payment of costs payable under an award, at the instance of the personal representative of a deceased party, to which party they were to have been paid. Alex v. Maffey, 1 D. P. C. 538.

An arbitrator having ordered the defendant to pay to the plaintiff a sum of money, the plaintiff filed an affidavit of debt in the Court of Bankruptcy, and the defendant gave a bond, with sureties, conditioned for payment of the money, but omitting the alternative in the statute, of rendering himself to custody:—Held, that the plaintiff's having adopted this proceeding did not preclude him from applying for an attachment for non-performance of the award and rule of court thereon. Mendell v. Tyrrell, 9 M. & W. 217; 1 D., N. S. 453; 6 Jur. 18; 12 L. J., Ex. 121.

An attachment for non-payment of a sum of money cannot be obtained on the part of a person who is not a party to the submission, to whom the money is directed to be paid. Skeete, In re, 2 W., W. & H. 49; 7 D. P. C. 618; 3 Jur. 870.

Against whom Granted.—The court will not grant an attachment against a peer for not paying a sum of money awarded, though he consents on condition that the attachment shall lie in the office for a certain time. Walker v. Grosvenor (Earl), 7 T. R. 171.

Nor against a member of parliament. Cutmur v. Knatchbull, 7 T. R. 448.

The court will not grant an attachment nor make absolute a rule for payment of money found due by a party to an action, which was referred without his consent, and who did not authorize the action which was referred, nor the reference, and had no notice of it until after the award; and although he might be liable on an implied authority by reason of the action and reference relating to partnership transactions in a firm of which he was a member, yet, if it appears that he had retired from the firm, the applicant will be left to enforce the award in an action, and the court will not enforce it by the exercise of a summary jurisdiction. Robertson v. Hutton, 26 L. J., Ex. 293.

An attachment was issued against a party for non-performance of an award, which had been made a rule of court, although such party resided out of the jurisdiction of the court, as it was in the nature of a civil process; and the court was not bound to inquire whether it could be served with effect or not. Hopcroft v. Fernor, 8 Moore, 424; 1 Bing. 378.

Where a submission between A. & B., the parties on the record, had been made a rule of court, and the award not having been made in time, the dispute had been referred to a second arbitrator, by B. and C., who were the real parties in the suit:—Held, that no attachment could issue against B. for not obeying the award made by the second arbitrator, because the reference should have been made by the parties on the record; and even if it had, there should have been another rule to make the second submission a rule of court. Owen v. Hurd, 2 T. R. 643.

An attachment does not lie against a corporation (e. g. an incorporated railway company), for non-performance of an award. Mackenzie v. Sligo and Shannon Railway Company, 9 C. B. 250.

γ. Previous Demand.

Demand must be Personal.—An attachment for not paying a sum of money pursuant to an award cannot issue before a personal demand has been made, even though the time and place for payment of the money are specified in the award. Brandon v. Brandon, 1 B. & P. 394.

When to be made.—If a demand is not made for a sum of money, pursuant to an award, until some months after the day on which it is directed to be paid, an attachment for non-payment may nevertheless be granted. Craik, In re, 2 W., W. & H. 52; 7 D. P. C. 603.

An award made in an action, in which A. and B. were plaintiffs, and C. defendant, ordered that the defendant should pay the plaintiffs a certain sum of money, and directed that the defendant should pay the costs of the reference and award (not saying to whom the costs were to be paid). After more than two years from the making of the award, one of the plaintiffs demanded payment of the amount awarded from the defendant. The defendant did not pay:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an attachment to compel payment, although the plaintiffs had given no explanation of the delay in coming to the court. Baily v. Curling, 2 L., M. & P. 161; 20 L. J., Q. B. 235.

An action having by an order of nisi prius been referred to an arbitrator, who was to settle all matters in difference between the parties, and to order and direct as to the proper distribution of certain property, as to him should seem fit, he accordingly made his award, and awarded that the plaintiff do, on or before the 23rd of March next, duly execute an indenture, to be prepared by the defendant in the words and figures following (setting it out). No demand of the execution of the instrument was made upon the plaintiff before or on the day mentioned in the award:—Held, that the plaintiff was not liable to an attachment for refusing to execute the deed on demand, made after the 23rd of March. Durd. Williams v. Howell, 5 Ex. 299; 19 L. J. Ex. 232.

Sufficiency of.—Where an award between A. and B. directed that the costs of the arbitrator should, in the first instance, be paid by A., and afterwards reimbursed and paid by B. to A., and by the master's allocatur, after giving A. credit for having paid the arbitrator's costs, a certain sum was specified as the "balance to be paid by B. to A.:"—Held, that it was not sufficient, in order to support an attachment against B., for non-payment of such sum, to shew a demand of it, as due by virtue of the allocatur, without also shewing by affidavit that A. had first paid the arbitrator's costs. Masters v. Butler, 6 Q. B. 341; 18 L. J., Q. B. 328; 13 Jur. 869.

An award ordered a defendant to pay to the arbitrator the costs of the award, and if the plaintiff paid them, it ordered the defendant to repay them. On making a demand for these costs, in order to entitle the plaintiff to move for an attachment, notice should be given to the defendant that the plaintiff had paid them. Kendrick v. Davis, W., W. & D. 587.

When Part of Demand Good.—An award directed that the plaintiff should deliver to the defendant a warrant for a hoghead of wine marked 2260. The defendant having demanded the delivery of the wine:—Held, that the demand ought to have been made of the warrant, but that an attachment might issue for the non-performance of the other parts of the award. Hemsworth v. Brian, 2 D. & L. 844; 1 C. B. 131; 14 L. J., C. P. 134.

If three separate demands are made for three sums ordered to be paid by an award, one of which is improperly awarded, the party may yet have an attachment for the other two. Kendrick v. Davis, W., W. & D., 587.

For Larger Amount.—If the party in whose favour an award is made demand more than is due to him, he cannot have an attachment for the non-payment on that occasion of the sum which is due. Strutt v. Rogers, 7 Taunt. 213; 2 Marsh. 524.

Amount Reduced—Fresh Demand.—Though a party is at one time in contempt for not paying costs which have been duly demanded; yet if, before an attachment is moved for, the sum due become reduced in amount, a fresh demand of the reduced sum must be made to ground a motion for an attachment. Spiry v. Webster, 1 D. P. C. 696.

By one Party on behalf of several.—An award made in an action, in which A. & B. were plaintiffs, ordered that the defendant should pay them a sum of money; a demand by one is sufficient whereon to found an attachment for non-payment of the sum. Baily v. Curling, 2 L., M. & P. 161; 20 L. J., Q. B. 235.

An award directed that a bond should be delivered up to the plaintiffs upon demand:—Held, that a demand made by one plaintiff without a power of attorney from the others, was insufficient to obtain an attachment. Sykes v. Haque or Haigh, 2 Scott, 193; 4 D. P. C. 114; 1 Hodges, 197.

By Third Person or Agent.—The court will not grant an attachment for the non-performance of an award, the performance of which is demanded by a third person acting under a power of attorney, unless the subscribing witness makes an affidavit of its execution, and a copy of the power of attorney is left with the party upon whom the demand is made. Laugher v. Laugher, 1 D. P. C. 284; 1 C. & J. 398; 1 Tyr. 352.

On a motion for an attachment for non-payment of money pursuant to an award, where the demand is made under a power of attorney, it must appear that the power of attorney was produced to the party at the time the demand was made. Boyes v. Hewetson, 2 Scott, 837.

Where a demand is made under a power of attorney, for payment of money, pursuant to an award, it is sufficient to found a rule for an attachment, if the attorney swears to the demand and refusal, and that the sum remains unpaid; and it is not necessary that the party himself should swear that the money was not paid. Reg. v. Paget, 9 D. P. C. 946; 5 Jur. 872.

Although a demand of money payable under an award by a stranger, not a party to the arbitration, must be made under the authority of a power of attorney given by the party to whom the money is to be paid, yet this rule does not apply where a demand of the execution of deeds under an award is to be made; therefore where an arbitrator directed the plaintiff to execute deeds of release and assignment, and the demand of such execution was made by an agent to the defendant's attorney, who was not authorized by a power of attorney, but the plaintiff refused to comply with the award:—Held, that he was liable to an attachment for such non-compliance. Tebbutt v. Ambler, 2 D., N. S. 677; 12 L. J., Q. B. 220; 7 Jur. 304.

On demanding the execution of a deed, directed by an arbitrator, where such demand is made by a third person, it is not necessary that such person should be empowered by deed or power of attorney, in order to enable the party to have an attachment. Kenyon v. Grayson, 2 Smith, 61.

3. Practice relating to.

Nature of the Proceeding.—All attachments for non-performance of awards are only in the nature of civil executions. Rea v. Meyers, 1 T. R. 266.

When it may Issue.—An attachment may issue if a motion to set aside an award is not made before the last day of the next term after the award is published. Preame v. Pinneger, Cowp. 23.

The court will not grant an attachment for non-performance of an award after a delay of four years, unless such delay is satisfactorily accounted for. Storrey v. Galley, 8 D. P. C. 299; 4 Jur. 73.

Personal Service.—The court will not infer personal service of an award to bring a party into contempt. Brander v. Penleaze, 5 Taunt. 813.

But personal knowledge of an award and rule of court makes the party liable to an attachment for not performing the award, although he has not been personally served with such award and rule. Boucev, In re, 1 B. & C. 264.

To constitute a proper service of an award, a copy must be delivered to the party, and the original must at the same time be shewn to him. Lloyd v. Harris, 8 C. B. 63.

Where a defendant refused to take the copy of an award, rule and allocatur, which were tendered him, the court granted a rule for an attachment. Ellis v. Giles, 2 H. & W. 329.

Verification of Enlargement of Time.—The court refused an attachment for non-performance of an award, where the award was made out of the time originally allowed, but authority had been reserved to the arbitrator to enlarge the time, and though the award stated upon the face of it that the arbitrator had enlarged the time; because there was no affidavit of that fact, and it did not appear to them judicially, that the arbitrator had any authority to make the award, without which the court had no jurisdiction. Moule v. Stowell, 15 East, 99, n.

Where an award appears to have been made out of the time originally given to the arbitrator by a rule of court, but which rule reserved to him the power of enlarging the time, it is not enough, for obtaining an attachment for non-performance of the award, that the arbitrator states in his award that he had enlarged the time, without verifying the fact by affidavit; and it should also appear that the defendant had notice of such enlargement of the time within which the award was made, when served with the rule for an attachment. Davis v. Vass, 15 East, 97.

By the terms of a submission, an arbitrator had power to enlarge the time for making his award; the order of reference, on which there was an indorsement enlarging the time, dated previously to the expiration of the time for making the award, was made a rule of court:—Held, that an attachment for non-performance of the award might be moved for without an affidavit that the enlargement was duly made. Barton v. Ranson, 3 M. & W. 322; 6 D. P. C. 384; H. & H. 11; N. P., Smith, In re, 5 D. P. C. 513; 2 H. & W. 306.

Where arbitrators have power to enlarge the time for making their award, and have enlarged it, and make their award in the additional time, in order to bring the defendant into contempt for non-performance of the award, there must be an affidavit that the time has been enlarged, that the award was made within the enlarged time, and that the defendant has been personally served with notice of those facts. Wohlenberg v. Lagerman, 6 Taunt. 254; 1 Marsh. 579.

Enlargement of Time by Consent.—Where the time for making an award is enlarged by agreement, there being no authority for such an enlargement in the original submission, the new agreement must be made a rule of court before an attachment can issue for non-performance of an award made during the enlarged period. McArthur v. Campbell, 2 N. & M. 444; 5 B. & Ad. 518.

Affidavits.—The court granted an attachment for not performing an award, the submission having been made a rule of court, notwithstanding it did not appear that the award and rule of court were annexed to the affidavit of service, or exhibited to the plaintiff on being sworn to his affidavit of service and demand. Butler, In re, 13 Q. B. 841; 18 L. J., Q. B. 328; 13 Jur. 869.

An affidavit of the execution of a power of attorney to demand the performance of an award, must be intitled in the cause. Doe d. Clarke v. Stilwell, 6 D. P. C. 305; 1 W. W. & H. 44; 2 Jur. 418.

A cause having been referred, the arbitrator awarded that the action should cease, and that the plaintiff should pay to the defendant a certain sum. On motion for an attachment, an affidavit stated that the defendant demanded the sum awarded, and also 30% for costs, but that the plaintiff did not pay the same sums, or any part thereof, omitting the words "or either of them." The court discharged the rule for an attachment. Poyner v. Hatton, 7 M. & W. 211; 8 D. P. C. 891.

If to an affidavit for an attachment for non-performance of an award there be annexed a copy of the award, from which, and from the submission which has been made a rule of court, it appears that the award was within the time limited by the submission, it is not necessary that the affidavit should state the execution of the award within that time. Higgins v. Street, 25 L. J., Ex. 285.

Where an arbitrator awarded that A. should fulfil an agreement for the purchase of land of B., and should pay the purchase-money on B. conveying the land with a good title, the court refused to grant an attachment against A. for non-performance on an affidavit that B. had required A. to pay the money, assuring him of his readiness to convey with a good title, without further stating that B. had tendered a conveyance executed. Stanley v. Hemington, 2 Marsh. 276; 6 Taunt. 561.

Submission made Rule of Court.—To warrant a motion for an attachment against a party for non-performance of an award, the order of nisi prius, or the submission, must appear to have been previously made a rule of court. Bath (Mayor, &c.) v. Pinch, 4 Scott, 299.

The Rule.—A rule absolute for an attachment for non-payment of the costs of a cause, and of an award made in that cause, will not be granted in the first instance, though the reference is of the cause only. Daniell v. Beadle, 2 Scott, N. R. 155; 1 M. & G. 960.

A rule for an attachment for non-performance of an award is only a rule to shew cause, even though the award only directs the payment of costs. Dickenson v. Allsop, 8 Jur. 1033.

A cause was referred to an arbitrator, the costs of the suit being directed to abide the event of the award. The award was in favour of the defendant, who taxed the costs of the cause, which the plaintiff had neglected to pay. The court granted a rule for an attachment absolute in the first instance. Daniels v. Wealds, 9 D. P. C. 44.

Where an award directs that three defendants should each pay one-third of certain costs, it is necessary to have separate rules for attachments for non-payment. Doe d. Hodgson v. Summerfield, 2 H. & W. 291.

Where an affidavit verifying an award could not be obtained, in consequence of the barrister's clerk having left him, and his residence being unknown, the court granted a rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment of the award, but directed that the rule should not be drawn up till an affidavit had been obtained and filed by some person acquainted with the clerk's handwriting. Belton v. Jarrett, 8 Jur. 83.

Drawing up Rule.—Where a rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment of costs, pursuant to an award, has been obtained in one term, and dropped in consequence of negotiations between the parties, and part of the costs is paid, it is sought to obtain an attachment for the non-payment of the residue, the rule for that purpose cannot be drawn up on merely reading the dropped rule, and an affidavit of a fresh demand. Baker v. Wells, 9 D. P. C. 323; 5 Jur. 41.

Where it is sought to draw up a rule for an attachment for non-performance of an award, it is competent for the officer of the court to object to the absence of a stamp on the award, and, therefore, to refuse to draw up the rule. Hill v. Slocomb, 9 D. P. C. 339; 5 Jur. 120.

Costs of Rule.—When, on shewing cause against a rule for an attachment, the court discharges the rule without costs, on a preliminary objection to the insufficiency of the affidavit demanding the performance of the award, the objecting party has a right to enter into the merits in order to have the rule discharged with costs, and does not therefore waive his right to the discharge of the rule without costs. Chamberlain, In re, 8 D. P. C. 686.

The costs of an attachment include all such as are fairly incidental to the attachment, and those of proceedings to clear the defendant of his contempt. Tyler v. Campbell, 7 Scott, 116; 5 Bing. N. C. 192; 1 Arn. 465.

Objections.—What may be raised.—On a rule nisi for an attachment, no objection can be taken to it that does not appear on the face of the award. Paul v. Paul, 2 C. & M. 235; 2 D. P. C. 340; 4 Tyr. 72; N. P., Macey v. Macey. W. W. & D. 371.

An omission to adjudicate upon a matter or dispute brought before the arbitrator cannot be shown for cause against a rule for an attachment for non-performance of an award. M'Arthur v. Campbell, 4 N. & M. 208; 2 A. & E. 52.

A party cannot, in showing cause against an attachment for not performing an award, impeach the award for defects not appearing on it. Holland v. Brooks, 6 T. R. 161.

And affidavits cannot be used to shew that the award is impracticable, uncertain or not final, nor can the award be impeached except for defects apparent on the face of it. Butler, In re, 13 Q. B. 341; 18 L. J., Q. B. 328; 13 Jur. 869.

Where an award directed that A. should pay the arbitrator's costs, and should be reimbursed by B., a rule for an attachment against B. for not reimbursing A. was discharged, because the affidavits did not shew that A. had paid them to the arbitrator. A. had not paid them, but had given his note for the amount, which he afterwards paid. On a second motion, an attachment was granted, on the ground that the payment by A. was a new fact, which took the case out of the ordinary rule, it appearing also that there had been contumacy in the party against whom the rule was directed, and hardship on the applicant. Id.

A reference directed, that the costs of the award should be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator awarded, that the costs of the award should be borne by the defendant, "which costs I do assess at 39l. 17s. 4d." Part of that sum was the amount of charges of an attorney, whom the arbitrator, who was a layman, had employed to assist him in taking the evidence and drawing up the award. The plaintiff took up the award, and afterwards demanded payment of the 39l. 17s. 4d. of the defendant, who refused to pay it. On motion for an attachment against the defendant:—Held, that the arbitrator had power in the first instance to name the sum to be paid for the costs of the award, and that if the defendant did not proceed with due diligence to procure a taxation, and insist on the necessity of it, he could not set up the want of taxation as a ground for opposing an attachment for non-payment. Threlfall v. Fanshawe, 1 L., M. & P. 140; 19 L. J., Q. B. 334.

Partiality and improper conduct in an arbitrator is no answer to a motion for an attachment for non-performance of an award, although good reason for setting it aside. Brazier v. Bryant, 3 Bing. 167; 10 Moore. 587.

It is no objection, in answer to a motion for an attachment for disobedience to an award, which directs the execution of certain deeds, that it was the duty of the arbitrator to have prepared such deeds. Tebbutt v. Ambler, 2 D., N. S. 677; 12 L. J., Q. B. 220; 7 Jur. 304.

ii. By Execution under 1 § 2 Vict. c. 110.

Statute.—By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, all rules of courts of common law, whereby any sum of money or any costs shall be payable to any person, shall have the effect of judgments in the superior courts of common law, and the persons to whom any such moneys or costs shall be payable shall be deemed judgment creditors.

When granted.—Quære, whether an award made upon a compulsory reference is enforceable by order under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18. Tulbot v. Fisher, 2 C. B., N. S. 471.

The court refused a rule for payment of money under an award, where it appeared that the costs (unascertained) of proceedings in Chancery were payable to the other party under the same award. Lambe v. Jones, 9 C. B., N. S. 471; 9 W. R. 202.

If a person ordered to pay money under an award satisfies the court that he has a bona fide claim for a cross demand, larger than the sum awarded, which he might reasonably hope to support by way of set-off in an action on the award, the court will not grant a rule ordering him to pay the sum awarded. Swayne v. White, 31 L. J., Q. B. 260; 10 W. R. 759.

Where an award found that the plaintiff was "entitled to recover" a sum of money from the defendant, but contained no direction to the latter to pay that sum:—Held, that although the defendant was not liable to an attachment for non-payment of the amount, yet the plaintiff was entitled to a rule ordering the payment. Bower v. Bower, or Bowen v. Bowen, 31 L. J., Q. B. 193; 8 Jur., N. S. 193; 5 L. T. 684.

If there is doubt as to the validity of an award the court will not grant a rule to pay the sum awarded. Diekenham v. Allsop, 2 D. & L. 657; 13 M. & W. 722; 14 L. J., Ex. 136; S. P., Tattersall v. Parkinson, 2 Ex. 342; 17 L. J., Ex. 208; Shorner v. Payne, 11 Jur. 242.

The court will not make an order for payment of money directed by an award to be paid, except where the case is clear and free from doubt. Mackenzie v. Sligo Railway Company, 9 C. B. 250; 19 L. J., C. P. 142.

Or except where an attachment would have been granted. Laing, In re, 13 C. B. 276.

The court refused to make an order for the payment of a sum alleged to have become payable under an award, where the money was not ascertained to be due and payable at the time of the making of the award. Graham v. Darcy, 6 C. B. 337; 6 D. & L. 385; 18 L. J., C. P. 61.

It is not necessary, in order to obtain a rule for payment of a sum awarded, that the award should contain an order to pay the money. Baker v. Cotterill, 7 D. & L. 20.

Service of Rule or Order.—The court, in general, requires the same formalities to be observed as to personal service, where the application is with a view to issue execution under an award, as in cases of attachment. Hawkins v. Benton, 2 D. & L. 465; 14 L. J., Q. B. 9; 9 Jur. 110.

Where, however, it clearly appeared, from the admission of the party, that he was aware of the award and its contents, the court, under special circumstances, granted a rule calling upon him to shew cause why he should not pay the sum awarded. Ib.

A defendant, who was abroad, was directed by an award to pay a sum of money, and it did not appear that he had been served with the award, though a letter from him shewed he was aware of its effect; the court refused to grant a rule calling upon him to pay the money, and ordering and directing that service thereof, by sticking it up in the master's office, should be sufficient. Wilson v. Foster, 6 M. & G. 149; 6 Scott, N. R. 936; 1 D. & L. 496; 12 L. J., C. P. 330.

Where a party applying at the house of the person ordered to pay the money was told that the latter had assigned his effects to his daughter-in-law and gone abroad, the court granted the rule nisi to be served on the daughter-in-law. Doe v. Amey, 1 D., N. S. 23; 8 M. & W. 565.

Where a party had said that he would not pay under an award, a rule nisi to pay the money was made absolute, upon proof that it had been served by leaving it at his house, in the hands of his sister-in-law, who said that his wife was upstairs in bed, and that he had gone to America. Styring v. Lloyd, 12 W. R. 384.

Personal service of the rule nisi cannot be dispensed with, unless it appears that the party is evading service. Service on his attorney is not sufficient. Beans v. Prosser, 34 L. J., Q. B. 256; 11 Jur., N. S. 182; 11 L. T. 718; 13 W. R. 351.

Previous Demand of Money.—An award, made upon a reference of an action by two to recover a debt from a defendant, ordered the defendant to pay a sum of money to the plaintiffs. One plaintiff alone demanded the money, and swore that the defendant had not paid him, and, to the best of his belief, had not paid his co-plaintiff or the attorney, and that the money was still unpaid. On an application on the part of the plaintiffs for a rule calling on the defendant to pay the money pursuant to the award:—Held, that the demand by one was sufficient to warrant the granting of the rule. Drew v. Woodcock, 3 C. L. R. 78; 24 L. J., Q. B. 22.

A personal demand of money payable under an award, with a view to a proceeding on a rule of court, may be dispensed with where the party is evidently keeping out of the way to avoid the demand. Smith v. Troupe, 7 C. B. 757; 6 D. & L. 679; 18 L. J., C. P. 209.

Who may apply for Order.—A cause and all matters in difference between A. and B. were referred, C. consenting to be made a party to the reference. The arbitrator directed a verdict to be entered for B., but that C. should pay to A. 52l. 10s., and the costs of the reference and award. A. having become bankrupt, C. declined to pay without authority from A.'s assignee:—Held, that A.'s attorney, who had a lien upon the award for his costs, was not entitled to an order upon C. Halcroft v. Manby, 7 M. & G. 843; 2 D. & L. 319; 8 Scott, N. R. 473; 13 L. J., C. P. 208.

Where an arbitrator has awarded a sum to be paid to A., in respect of matters in difference between him and B., and the costs of an action [a smaller sum] to be paid to B. at the same time and place, the court has no jurisdiction to order B. to pay the whole sum awarded to A. to A.'s attorney, on account of his lien for A.'s costs. Dunn v. West, 10 C. B. 420; 20 L. J., C. P. 1; 15 Jur. 88.

At what time granted.—The courts have power to call upon a party to an award (the submission to which has been made a rule of court) to shew cause why he should not pay the amount awarded, and such rule may be moved before the time limited for applying to set aside the award has expired, and upon its being made absolute execution may issue. Doe v. Amey, 1 D., N. S. 23; 8 M. & W. 565; 5 Jur. 898.

Where all matters in difference in a cause between the parties are referred by an order, the court will enforce the award by a rule before the time for moving to set it aside has expired. Hare v. Fleay, 17 C. B. 472; 2 L., M. & P. 392; 20 L. J., C. P. 249; 15 Jur. 1038.

Execution, by whom issued.—Upon a rule ordering the defendant so to pay, execution can be issued by the plaintiff only, and not by his attorney. Ib.

Affidavit—Enlargement of Time.—An affidavit of the due enlargement of the time for making the award is not necessary. Doe v. Amey, 1 D., N. S. 23; 8 M. & W. 565; 5 Jur. 891. S. P., Prebles v. Hay, 8 Jur. 338.

Whether Order carries Interest.—An arbitrator made his award on the 1st of September, 1841, directing payment on the 25th of January, 1842, of a certain sum with interest:—Held, that under that award, upon a rule under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, the plaintiff could recover no interest accruing subsequently to the 25th of January. Doe d. Moody v. Squire, 2 D., N. S. 327; 7 Jur. 236.

Service of Copy of Award.—In order to obtain a rule for payment of money pursuant to an award, a copy of the award should be served, and the original shewn to the party at the same time that the demand is made, and it is not sufficient that a copy of the award has been served on a previous occasion, when a demand was made of another sum of money due under the same award. Lloyd v. Harris, 7 D. & L. 118; 18 L. J., C. P. 346.

The motion should be made upon affidavit of service of a copy of the award and allocatur, or the court will not grant the application. Pearson v. Archbold, 2 D., N. S. 769; 11 M. & W. 108; 12 L. J., Ex. 230; 7 Jur. 402.

Lodging Award with Master.—When the rule is granted the original award must be produced to and deposited with the master at the time of drawing up the rule. Davis v. Potter, 1 B. C. C. 11; 21 L. J., Q. B. 134.

Rule.—A rule to issue execution for money due upon an award and the master's allocatur, is a rule nisi only in the first instance. Winnwood v. Holt, 14 M. & W. 197; 3 D. & L. 85; 9 Jur. 451.

According to the practice of the Queen's Bench, a rule nisi may be granted to shew cause at chambers. Drew v. Woodcock, 24 L. J., Q. B. 22.

It may be moved for on the last day of term. Leblé v. Carroll, 24 L. J., Q. B. 96.

It is a six-day rule; and the court will not, in the absence of any special reasons, make it returnable at a shorter date to save the term, nor will the court make it returnable at chambers. Arthur v. Marshall, 13 M. & W. 465; 2 D. & L. 376; 14 L. J., Ex. 46; 8 Jur. 1011.

On a motion for the rule the parties cannot go into any matter debors the award itself. Davies v. Pratt, 17 C. B. 183; 25 L. J., C. P. 71.

The court will only look to what appears upon the face of the award, and will not depart from this rule, although the party in whose favour the award has been made has, subsequently to the award, been committed to take his trial for perjury committed during the proceedings on the reference. Bradford v. Wollam, 33 L. J., Q. B. 129; 10 Jur., N. S. 206; 9 L. T. 371; 12 W. R. 384.

In moving for a rule nisi it is not necessary to make it part of the rule that the applicant should be at liberty to issue execution, or that he forgoes his remedy by attachment. Burton v. Mendizabel, 1 D., N. S. 336.

Where a cause was agreed to be referred, but the agreement was not made a rule of court, the court refused to compel the payment of a sum awarded against the party who proposed the reference. Clarke v. Baker, 1 H. & W. 215.

Effect of Judicature Act.—Where an action has been referred to an arbitrator by the Chancery Division it is not necessary to make the award a rule of court before an order can be made founded on the award. Jones v. Wedgewood, 19 Ch. D. 56; 51 L. J., Ch. 206; 30 W. R. 228. S. P. Forrest, In re, Forrest v. Burrows, 19 Ch. D. 57, n.

A rule to pay money awarded under an agreement of reference (which has been made a rule of court) is a rule to shew cause, and no notice of application for such rule need be given. Phillips and Gill, In re, 1 Q. B. D. 78; 45 L. J., Q. B. 136; 24 W. R. 158.

Where a reference to arbitration had been directed by the Judge of the Chancery Division at the trial, and afterwards the award had been made an order of court, and that order was not appealed from, it was held by the Court of Appeal that the award could not be disputed even though it was bad on the face of it. Jones v. Jones, 14 Ch. D. 593; 43 L. T. 76; 29 W. R. 65—C. A.

iii. By Judgment and Execution in pursuance of Verdict.

No Leave necessary.—Where a verdict is taken pro forma at the trial for a certain sum, subject to the award of an arbitrator, the sum afterwards awarded is to be taken as if it had been originally found by the jury; and the plaintiff is entitled to enter up judgment for the amount without applying to the court for leave so to do. Lee v. Lingard, 1 East, 401; S. P., Grimes v. Naish, 1 B. & P. 480.

If a verdict is taken at nisi prius, subject to the award of an arbitrator, and the rule of reference is made a rule of court, the verdict may be entered according to his award, without any application to the court. Borrowdale v. Mitchever, 3 B. & P. 244.

An order of reference directed that the party in whose favour the award should be made, should be at liberty to sign final judgment for the amount payable thereunder, and tax his costs, and issue execution:—Held, that the award being in favour of the defendant, he might sign judgment for his costs. Magg v. Yorton, 6 D. P. C. 481; 1 W. W. & H. 185; 2 Jur. 744.

Judgment must be first Signed.—But execution cannot issue upon an award made under a compulsory reference without first signing judgment. Kendil v. Merrett, 18 C. B. 173; 25 L. J., C. P. 251; 2 Jur., N. S. 523.

When Judgment may be Signed.—When a verdict is taken for the plaintiff in an action, subject to a reference of the cause and all matters in difference by order of nisi prius, and an award is made directing the verdict in the action to stand for the plaintiff for a certain sum, and finding another sum to be due to the defendant in respect of the matters in difference, the plaintiff is entitled to sign judgment for the sum awarded to him in the action in fourteen days after the making of the award. O'Toole v. Pott, 7 El. & Bl. 102; 3 Jur., N. S. 361; 26 L. J., Q. B. 88.

Where a verdict has been found subject to a reference, and the award has not been made until some terms afterwards, judgment cannot be entered up as of the term next after the verdict, without a special application to the court. Brooke v. Fearns, 2 D. P. C. 144.

Where a cause and all matters in difference are referred by an order of nisi prius, which directs that the costs of the cause shall abide the event, and the costs of the reference and award to be taxed shall be in the discretion of the arbitrator, judgment cannot be signed, or the master's allocatur for the costs obtained, until the end of the term next after the making of the award. Jones v. Ives, 10 C. B. 429; 20 L. J., C. P. 69; 1 L., M. & P. 689.

When a verdict is taken at nisi prius by consent, subject to the certificate of an arbitrator, the certificate relates back to the time when the verdict was pronounced by the jury. Cramer v. Churt, 3 D. & L. 672; 15 M. & W. 310; 15 L. J., Ex. 263; 10 Jur. 671.

Therefore, where such a certificate was given in vacation after more than four days had elapsed from the return-day of the distringas jurors:—Held, that the successful party was entitled to sign judgment immediately, and was not bound to wait until the expiration of the first four days of the next term. Ib.

Clause in Agreement—Construction.—A reference contained a clause restraining either party from bringing or prosecuting any action or suit in any court concerning the premises referred:—Held, that the finding of the arbitrator was conclusive, and that the plaintiff could not afterwards move for judgment non obstante veredicto. Britt v. Pashley, 5 D. & L. 97; 1 Ex. 64; 16 L. J., Ex. 240.

So where a reference contains a clause restraining the parties from bringing error, they are precluded from moving in arrest of judgment. Chownes v. Brown, 2 D. & L. 706; 14 L. J., Ex. 219.

Effect of Judicature Acts.—The old law and practice in connexion with arbitration still exist as to references made under the old system, and such references are not governed by the Judicature Act or the rules of court made under that Act. Lloyd v. Lewis, 2 Ex. D. 7; 46 L. J., Ex. 81; 35 L. T. 539; 25 W. R. 102—C. A.

An order of reference was made prior to, but the award after, the passing of the Judicature Act:—Held, that the successful party was entitled to sign judgment on the award, and that as the rules of court did not apply to such a case, he was not bound to set down the case on motion for judgment. Ib.

Execution and Judgment set Aside.]—A cause and all matters in difference between a plaintiff and a defendant were by an order of nisi prius and a subsequent rule of court referred, the costs of the cause to abide the event, and those of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator, who was to be at liberty to make two several awards, at different times, by the first of which he was to raise questions of law for the court; and it was by the rule of court ordered, that neither party should enforce payment of anything which might be found to be due under the first award until the arbitrator should have made his final award. The arbitrator stated a case for the opinion of the court, and in the result the plaintiff became entitled to damages to a large amount. The defendants afterwards obtained an act of parliament for regulating their affairs, and under that act the plaintiff received an allotment of shares in lieu of the damages so awarded to him. It having become unnecessary and impracticable to proceed further with the reference, no second award was ever made. The plaintiff, however, signed judgment, and issued an execution against the defendants thereon for the costs of the action. The court set aside the judgment with costs, holding that in the absence of a final award the plaintiff was, by the rule of court, precluded from enforcing his remedy for such costs. Wood v. Copper Miners in England, 15 C. B. 464; 24 L. J., C. P. 34.

Lost Award.]—If an award is lost, the court will, nevertheless, permit judgment to be entered accordingly, upon an affidavit of its contents. Hill v. Townsend, 3 Taunt. 45.

Service of Award.]—Personal service of the award is not necessary to warrant the issuing of execution, if the attorney of the defendant has been served with the award. Borrowdale v. Hitchenor, 3 B. & P. 244.

Rule.]—On shewing cause against a rule, it was agreed by indorsements on the counsel's brief, that the matters should be referred to a barrister, who should be at liberty to certify what rule, if any, should be drawn up. The arbitrator certified that a rule should be drawn up in certain terms. The court thereupon permitted a rule of reference to be drawn up in the terms of the indorsements, and then a second rule pursuant to the certificate of the barrister. Brandon v. Smith, 1 B. C. C. 181; 22 L. J., Q. B. 321.

A rule for delivering the postea to the plaintiff, that he may enter the verdict pursuant to an award of an arbitrator, may be drawn up on reading the affidavit "and the paper writing thereunto annexed," provided the affidavit verifies the paper writing as being a copy of the award. Platt v. Hall, 2 M. & W. 391; 5 D. P. C. 583.

Entry of Verdict where no Award.]—Where a plaintiff recovered a verdict for 5*l.*, subject to a reference at nisi prius whether such verdict should stand, or be reduced to 20*s.*, and the arbitrator refused to make an award, the court would not allow a verdict to be entered for the lesser sum, until such order was made a rule of court. Kirkus v. Hodgson, 3 Moore, 64.

iv. Specific Performance.

Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery.]—The court of Chancery is one of the courts of record to which 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, gives summary jurisdiction for the enforcement of awards. The statute excludes every jurisdiction to interfere with the execution of awards made under it, except the summary jurisdiction expressly given by it. And a bill will not lie to impeach an award made under the statute, whether the submission under which it was made has or has not been made a rule or order of court before bill filed. Heming v. Swinnerton, 2 Ph. 79; 14 Sim. 588; 1 Coop. 386; 16 L. J., Ch. 90; 10 Jur. 907.

When Granted.]—An award was enforced in equity, although the submission was to be made a rule of a court of common law. Hawksworth v. Brammall, 5 Myl. & C. 281.

The specific performance of an award may be compelled in equity, on the principle that the award only ascertains the terms of a previous engagement between the parties; and although the illegality of the acts, of which it directs the execution, will afford a ground for refusing to decree the performance. Wood v. Griffith, 1 Swans. 43; Wils. C. C. 34.

The court of Chancery has jurisdiction to entertain a suit for specific performance of an award, although the submission has been made a rule of a court of law. It is no defence that the plaintiff has ineffectually endeavoured to set aside the award on motion. Blackett v. Bates, 2 H. M. 610; 11 Jur., N. S. 500; see 12 Jur., N. S. 874, n., and S. C. on appeal, 1 L. R., Ch. 117; 35 L. J., Ch. 324; 12 Jur., N. S. 151; 13 L. T., 656.

v. By Action.

When Maintainable.]—An action may be maintained on an award made under a submission by a judge's order, the parties having attended at the reference. Wharton v. King, 1 M. & Rob. 96.

Two persons assigned to B. all debts due to them, and gave him a power of attorney to receive and compound for the same; under which B. submitted to arbitration the matters in difference subsisting between his principals and the defendant:—Held, that B. might maintain an action on the award in his own name. Banfill v. Leigh, 8 T. R. 571.

By a judge's order, made by consent of both plaintiff and defendant, an action of trespass and other matters in difference were referred, and, by the like consent, the parties were ordered to perform the award of the arbitrator. Afterwards an indorsement was made on the order by both parties agreeing that the arbitrator should have power to order what the parties, or either of them, should do to prevent a repetition of the trespass complained of. The arbitrator ordered a wall to be built by the defendant:—Held, that the judge's order embodied an agreement by the parties to do what the arbitrator should so order, and that an action lay for its breach in not building the wall as ordered. Lierlesley v. Gilmore, 1 L. R., C. P. 570; 35 L. J., C. P. 351; 12 Jur., N. S. 874; 15 L. T. 386; 1 H. & R. 849.

Pleadings—Declarations.—Counts on an award may be joined with counts for a breach of an agreement to stand by, perform, and not revoke an award to be made. Brown v. Tanner, 1 C. & P. 651; McCl. & Y. 464.

In an action for non-performance of an award, the declaration alleged mutual promises to perform the award, and stated two enlargements of time by judge's order and consent:—Held, that the promise was well laid, the enlargement of time not affecting the original promise. Armistage v. Coates, 4 Ex. 641; 19 L. J. Ex. 95.

A declaration stated that a difference had arisen between the plaintiff and the defendant concerning twenty shares purchased by the plaintiff for the defendant at his request, and for which the plaintiff had paid 122*l.*; that they had submitted themselves to the award of W. and P.; that the arbitrators made their award of and concerning the differences, and did thereby award "that they decided in favour of the plaintiff, and that 50*l.*, which had been deposited by the defendant with the plaintiff, was in part payment of the twenty shares;" and the arbitrators, "by their award, did then request the defendant to pay the balance of the account forthwith." The declaration averred a request to pay the plaintiff the balance of the account, amounting to 72*l.*, and assigned for breach the non-payment thereof:—Held, that it was sufficiently shewn that the arbitrators had authority to determine the payment of a sum of money. Smith v. Hartley, 2 L., M. & P. 340; 10 C. B. 800; 20 L. J., C. P. 169; 15 Jur. 755.

In an action on an award, the declaration stated that the arbitrator awarded that the costs of the arbitration and award should be paid as follows, that is to say, two-third parts by the defendants, and one-third part by the plaintiff. Breach, that two-third parts of the costs attending the arbitration amounted to a certain sum, and that the defendant had not paid two-third parts of the costs:—Held, that the breach was bad, since it left it uncertain in what way the costs were to be computed. Kirk v. Unwin, 6 Ex. 908; 2 L. M. & P. 519; 20 L. J., Ex. 345.

—Plea.—In an action upon an award, the declaration alleged that differences between the plaintiff and defendant had been referred, and that the arbitrator had awarded that certain sums should be paid at certain times by the defendant to the plaintiff, and assigned for breach non-payment of an instalment. The defendant pleaded, setting out the award verbatim, and concluding in the form of a demurrer, that the declaration was not sufficient in law, and the plaintiff joined in demurrer:—Held, that the demurrer was informal; the instrument as set out forming part of the plea, and consequently there being nothing to shew the declaration bad. Sims v. Edmonds, 15 C. B. 240; 2 C. L. R. 749; 23 L. J., C. P. 229; 18 Jur. 1024.

The plea of no award, means no valid award. Dresser v. Stansfield, 14 M. & W. 822; 15 L. J., Ex. 274.

Where an award is made upon all the matters in difference, and is in the required form, and intended by the arbitrators to express their decision, an objection that they adopted the opinion of a third person, by which they agreed to be bound, cannot be raised under a plea of nul tiel agard, to an action on the award. Whitmore v. Smith, 7 H. & N. 509; 31 L. J., Ex. 107; 8 Jur., N. S. 514; 6 L. T., 618; 10 W. R. 253—Ex. Ch.

A declaration, after stating that differences had arisen between the plaintiff on the one part and the defendant and A. on the other, alleged that it was agreed between the plaintiff, the defendant and A., mutually and reciprocally, to refer the same differences to S. and J., who made their award concerning the said matters in difference, and awarded that the defendant should pay 150*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* to S., who should immediately pay it to the plaintiff. Plea, that S. and J. did not make their award concerning the matters in difference referred to them:—Held, that the fact of the award having been made of and concerning the matters in difference, and not its validity, was alone put in issue. Adcock v. Wood, 2 L., M. & P. 501; 6 Ex. 814; 20 L. J., Ex. 435. Affirmed in error, 7 Ex. 468; 21 L. J., Ex. 204—Ex. Ch.

To a declaration containing the ordinary money counts, a plea, except as to 145*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*, parcel of the money claimed, that the plaintiff ought not to be admitted to allege that at the commencement of the suit more than the sum of 145*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.* was due in respect of the causes of action, because after the accruing of the causes of action, and before action, a dispute arose between the plaintiff and the defendant as to how much was due from the defendant to the plaintiff in respect of the causes of action, and thereupon by agreement between them before action they referred the question of how much was due to the award of W., and agreed to be bound by his award as to such amount, and that he made his award in writing of and concerning the premises so referred to him, and thereby awarded that the amount due in respect of the causes of action was 145*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*, is good, though pleaded by way of estoppel. Commings v. Heard, 4 L. R., Q. B. 669; 20 L. T. 975; 18 W. R. 16; 10 B. & S. 606.

By an award made under the Lands Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, the arbitrator awarded one entire sum as the amount of damage sustained by a party by reason of his messuage being injuriously affected by the execution of the works of a railway company, to wit, by the erection of an embankment, and by the narrowing of the road in front of the messuage. To a declaration on the award for not paying the sum awarded, a plea by the company, that the messuage was not injuriously affected by the narrowing of the road, is a good plea. Beckett v. Midland Railway Company, 35 L. J., C. P. 163; 14 W. R. 393; 1 H. & R. 189; 1 L. R., C. P. 241.

Where lessees of land and of coal-mines covenanted forthwith to proceed to sink for coal as far as could and ought to be accomplished, or in default to pay so much to the lessor as arbitrators should award, and the lessees gave a bond to the lessor, conditioned to perform the award which was made:—Held, that to an action on the bond, it was a sufficient answer, that they had proceeded to sink as far, &c. (in the words of the covenant), but that none could be found. Hanson v. Boothman, 13 East. 22.

In an action by A. against B. for not accepting goods, B. pleaded an award made in respect of that Act. Lloyd v. Lewis, 2 Ex. D. 7; 46 L. J., Ex. 81; 35 L. T. 539; 25 W. R. 102—C. A.

An order of reference was made prior to, but the award after, the passing of the Judicature Act:—Held, that the successful party was entitled to sign judgment on the award, and that as the rules of court did not apply to such a case, he was not bound to set down the case on motion for judgment. Ib.

Execution and Judgment set Aside.]—A cause and all matters in difference between a plaintiff and a defendant were by an order of nisi prius and a subsequent rule of court referred, the costs of the cause to abide the event, and those of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator, who was to be at liberty to make two several awards, at different times, by the first of which he was to raise questions of law for the court; and it was by the rule of court ordered, that neither party should enforce payment of anything which might be found to be due under the first award until the arbitrator should have made his final award. It having become unnecessary and impracticable to proceed further with the reference, no second award was ever made. The plaintiff, however, signed judgment, and issued an execution against the defendants thereon for the costs of the action. The court set aside the judgment with costs, holding that in the absence of a final award the plaintiff was, by the rule of court, precluded from enforcing his remedy for such costs. Wood v. Copper Miners in England, 15 C. B. 464; 24 L. J., C. P. 34.

Lost Award.]—If an award is lost, the court will, nevertheless, permit judgment to be entered accordingly, upon an affidavit of its contents. Hill v. Townsend, 3 Taunt. 45.

Service of Award.]—Personal service of the award is not necessary to warrant the issuing of execution, if the attorney of the defendant has been served with the award. Borrowdale v. Hitchenner, 3 B. & P. 244.

Rule.]—On shewing cause against a rule, it was agreed by indorsements on the counsel's brief, that the matters should be referred to a barrister, who should be at liberty to certify what rule, if any, should be drawn up. The arbitrator certified that a rule should be drawn up in certain terms. The court thereupon permitted a rule of reference to be drawn up in the terms of the indorsements, and then a second rule pursuant to the certificate of the barrister. Brandon v. Smith, 1 B. C. C. 181; 22 L. J., Q. B. 321.

A rule for delivering the postea to the plaintiff, that he may enter the verdict pursuant to an award of an arbitrator, may be drawn up on reading the affidavit "and the paper writing thereunto annexed," provided the affidavit verifies the paper writing as being a copy of the award. Platt v. Hall, 2 M. & W. 391; 5 D. P. C. 583.

The arbitrator ordered a wall to be built by the defendant:—Held, that the judge's order embodied an agreement by the parties to do what the arbitrator should so order, and that an action lay for its breach in not building the wall as ordered. Liccesley v. Gilmore, 1 L. R., C. P. 570; 35 L. J., C. P. 351; 12 Jur., N. S. 874; 15 L. T. 386; 1 H. & R. 849.

Pleadings—Declarations.]—Counts on an award may be joined with counts for a breach of an agreement to stand by, perform, and not revoke an award to be made. Brown v. Tunner, 1 C. & P. 651; M'Clel. & Y. 464.

In an action for non-performance of an award, the declaration alleged mutual promises to perform the award, and stated two enlargements of time by judge's order and consent:—Held, that the promise was well laid, the enlargement of time not affecting the original promise. Armistage v. Coates, 4 Ex. 641; 19 L. J. Ex. 95.

A declaration stated that a difference had arisen between the plaintiff and the defendant concerning twenty shares purchased by the plaintiff for the defendant at his request, and for which the plaintiff had paid 122l.; that they had submitted themselves to the award of W. and P.; that the arbitrators made their award of and concerning the differences, and did thereby award "that they decided in favour of the plaintiff, and that 50l., which had been deposited by the defendant with the plaintiff, was in part payment of the twenty shares;" and the arbitrators, "by their award, did then request the defendant to pay the balance of the account forthwith." The declaration averred a request to pay the plaintiff the balance of the account, amounting to 72l., and assigned for breach the non-payment thereof:—Held, that it was sufficiently shewn that the arbitrators had authority to determine the payment of a sum of money. Smith v. Hartley, 2 L., M. & P. 340; 10 C. B. 800; 20 L. J., C. P. 169; 15 Jur. 755.

In an action on an award, the declaration stated that the arbitrator awarded that the costs of the arbitration and award should be paid as follows, that is to say, two-third parts by the defendants, and one-third part by the plaintiff. Breach, that two-third parts of the costs attending the arbitration amounted to a certain sum, and that the defendant had not paid two-third parts of the costs:—Held, that the breach was bad, since it left it uncertain in what way the costs were to be computed. Kirk v. Unwin, 6 Ex. 908; 2 L. M. & P. 519; 20 L. J., Ex. 345.

—Plea.]—In an action upon an award, the declaration alleged that differences between the plaintiff and defendant had been referred, and that the arbitrator had awarded that certain sums should be paid at certain times by the defendant to the plaintiff, and assigned for breach non-payment of an instalment. The defendant pleaded, setting out the award verbatim, and concluding in the form of a demurrer, that the declaration was not sufficient in law, and the plaintiff joined in demurrer:—Held, that the demurrer was informal; the instrument as set out forming part of the plea, and consequently there being nothing to shew the declaration bad. Sims v. Edmonds, 15 C. B. 240; 2 C. L. R. 749; 23 L. J., C. P. 229; 18 Jur. 1024.

The plea of no award, means no valid award. Dresser v. Stansfield, 14 M. & W. 822; 15 L. J., Ex. 274.

Where an award is made upon all the matters in difference, and is in the required form, and intended by the arbitrators to express their decision, an objection that they adopted the opinion of a third person, by which they agreed to be bound, cannot be raised under a plea of nul tiel agard, to an action on the award. Whitmore v. Smith, 7 H. & N. 509; 31 L. J., Ex. 107; 8 Jur., N. S. 514; 6 L. T., 618; 10 W. R. 253—Ex. Ch.

A declaration, after stating that differences had arisen between the plaintiff on the one part and the defendant and A. on the other, alleged that it was agreed between the plaintiff, the defendant and A., mutually and reciprocally, to refer the same differences to S. and J., who made their award concerning the said matters in difference, and awarded that the defendant should pay 150l. 18s. 6d. to S., who should immediately pay it to the plaintiff. Plea, that S. and J. did not make their award concerning the matters in difference referred to them:—Held, that the fact of the award having been made of and concerning the matters in difference, and not its validity, was alone put in issue. Adcock v. Wood, 2 L., M. & P. 501; 6 Ex. 814; 20 L. J., Ex. 435. Affirmed in error, 7 Ex. 468; 21 L. J., Ex. 204—Ex. Ch.

To a declaration containing the ordinary money counts, a plea, except as to 145l. 3s. 1d., parcel of the money claimed, that the plaintiff ought not to be admitted to allege that at the commencement of the suit more than the sum of 145l. 3s. 1d. was due in respect of the causes of action, because after the accruing of the causes of action, and before action, a dispute arose between the plaintiff and the defendant as to how much was due from the defendant to the plaintiff in respect of the causes of action, and thereupon by agreement between them before action they referred the question of how much was due to the award of W., and agreed to be bound by his award as to such amount, and that he made his award in writing of and concerning the premises so referred to him, and thereby awarded that the amount due in respect of the causes of action was 145l. 3s. 1d., is good, though pleaded by way of estoppel. Commings v. Heard, 4 L. R., Q. B. 669; 20 L. T. 975; 18 W. R. 16; 10 B. & S. 606.

By an award made under the Lands Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, the arbitrator awarded one entire sum as the amount of damage sustained by a party by reason of his message being injuriously affected by the execution of the works of a railway company, to wit, by the erection of an embankment, and by the narrowing of the road in front of the message. To a declaration on the award for not paying the sum awarded, a plea by the company, that the message was not injuriously affected by the narrowing of the road, is a good plea. Beckett v. Midland Railway Company, 35 L. J., C. P. 163; 14 W. R. 393; 1 H. & R. 189; 1 L. R., C. P. 241.

Where lessees of land and of coal-mines covenanted forthwith to proceed to sink for coal as far as could and ought to be accomplished, or in default to pay so much to the lessor as arbitrators should award, and the lessees gave a bond to the lessor, conditioned to perform the award which was made:—Held, that to an action on the bond, it was a sufficient answer, that they had proceeded to sink as far, &c. (in the words of the covenant), but that none could be found. Hanson v. Boothman, 13 East, 22.

In an action by A. against B. for not accepting goods, B. pleaded an award made in respect of the matters for which the action was brought:—Held, that the fact of A. not having had any opportunity of being heard before the arbitrators, was no answer to the plea of the award, but was only a ground for applying to the equitable jurisdiction of the court to have the award set aside. Thorburn v. Barnes, 2 L. R., C. P. 384; 36 L. J., C. P. 184; 16 L. T. 10; 15 W. R. 623.

Partiality and improper conduct in an arbitrator in making his award without hearing the defendant and his witnesses, cannot be pleaded in bar to an action on a bond conditioned for the performance of the award, but is only matter for application to the equitable jurisdiction of the court to set aside the award; neither can a parol agreement between the parties to waive and abandon the award be pleaded to such action. Braddick v. Thompson, 8 East, 344.

By an agreement, after reciting that divers disputes and differences had arisen and were depending between the plaintiff and the defendant as executrix respecting certain unsettled accounts between them, it was agreed that, for finally settling such differences, the matters in dispute should be referred to the final award of two arbitrators. Plea by the executrix, that no evidence was offered of assets before the arbitrators, nor did she admit that she had any:—Held, ill on general demurrer, as it imputed misconduct to the arbitrators, which is not the subject of a plea, but only a ground to apply to the court to set aside the award. Riddell v. Sutton, 2 M. & P. 345.

The objection to an award, that the arbitrator had left undetermined any of the matters submitted to him (though fatal), cannot be taken advantage of upon demurrer to a declaration in an action on the award, unless it appears on the face of the submission and award. Aitcheson v. Cargay (in error), 13 Price, 639; 9 Moore, 381; 2 Bing. 199; M'Clel. 367; affirming S. C., nom. Cargay v. Aitcheson, 3 D. & R. 433; 2 B. & C. 170.

But it may be raised by plea, with proper averments. Ib.

To an action on a bond conditioned to perform an award, under a reference of all matters in difference between the parties, it is a good plea, that, at the time of submission, certain negotiable bills of exchange, drawn by the defendant and accepted by the plaintiff, were outstanding, and that an indemnity of the defendant against such bills was a matter in difference between the parties, which was notified to the arbitrators, and that they made no award concerning it, and that some of the bills had not been paid by the plaintiff, and the defendant was liable to the holders; though it appeared by the award, that the arbitrators had heard the allegations of the parties, and examined all the accounts, bills of exchange, and all other evidence and proofs produced to them, touching the matters in difference, and awarded of and concerning the same, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a sum of money in full of all claims and demands upon him; and so proceeded to award concerning other specific matters; but without mentioning such outstanding bills, or any indemnity concerning the same. Mitchell v. Staveley, 16 East, 58.

—Replications.—Where there was a plea of no award to an action on an arbitration bond, to which the replication showed an award, and assigned a breach, and the rejoinder averred that there were other matters pending, of which the arbitrators took no notice; this was a departure in the rejoinder from the plea. Harding v. Holmes, 1 Wils. 122.

Action on a bond, which was conditioned to perform an award: plea, no award: replication setting out an award: rejoinder stating the whole award, (in which were recited the bonds of submission, whereby it appeared that the award was not warranted by the submission), and then demurring:—Held, that the rejoinder was not inconsistent with, nor a departure from, the plea. Fisher v. Pimbley, 11 East, 188.

A replication shewing an award to pay 16l. 10s. and costs, and assigning as breach the non-payment of the 16l. 10s. only:—Held, good on demurrer to a plea of no award to an action upon an arbitration bond. Fox v. Smith, 2 Wils. 267.

To an action for goods sold, the defendant pleaded that an action having been brought in a county court in respect of the same causes of action, the plaintiff and defendant mutually submitted themselves to refer the action; that the umpire awarded that the defendant should pay into the county court to the plaintiff 4l. 10s. 6<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>d., in satisfaction of all matters referred; and that the plaintiff refused to receive the sum, and discharged the defendant from paying it into court. Replication, nul tiel agard:—Held, that under these pleadings the plaintiff was not at liberty to shew that the award had been set aside. Roper v. Levi, 7 Ex. 55; 21 L. J., Ex. 29; 2 L. M. & P. 621.

Evidence, Proof of.—In an action upon an award, a declaration stated that the original action was referred by a rule of court to A., who duly made his award of and concerning the premises so referred to him; and did thereby find, &c. The defendant pleaded that A. did not duly make and publish his award of and concerning the premises referred:—Held, that the production of the award and the rule of court was sufficient prima facie evidence to support the issue on the part of the plaintiff without producing the record of the cause until the validity of the award was impeached by evidence dehors on the part of the defendant. Gisbourne v. Hart, 5 M. & W. 50; 7 D. P. C. 402; 3 Jur. 536.

In an action on an award made under a judge's order, to prove the order it is enough to put in the office copy of the rule making it a rule of court. Still v. Halford, 4 Camp. 17.

Where a submission is to A. and B., and such third person as they shall appoint, to satisfy an allegation that A. and B. appointed C., it is not enough to put in an award executed by all three, reciting that A. and B. did appoint C., and to prove that C. acted along with them. Ib.

By an award, a defendant was directed to pay a certain sum to the plaintiff, and to sign a memorandum, containing an engagement on the part of the defendants to abstain for a time from pirating the plaintiff's patterns:—Held, that the signature of this memorandum by both defendants was a sufficient recognition of the arbitrator's authority to dispense with proof of a formal submission by both. Stuart v. Nicholson, 3 Scott, 536; 2 Hodges, 191; 3 Bing. N. C. 113.

An agreement of reference, to which the plaintiff was a party, was attested by two subscribing witnesses, upon an issue joined, in which the plaintiff denied the agreement of reference:—Held, that the rule of court, by which, pursuant to the agreement, it was made a rule of court, and which recited and incorporated it, was not the proper evidence of it, but that it should have been proved by one of the subscribing witnesses. Bernie or Berney v. Reid or Read, 7 Q. B. 79; 14 L. J., Q. B. 247; 9 Jur. 620. [This decision was before the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 26, which dispenses with the necessity of proving by the attesting witness any instrument to the validity of which attestation is not requisite, and such instrument may be proved by admission or otherwise, as if there had been no attesting witness thereto.]

A plea that the plaintiff sued the defendant in a county court, and that they mutually referred the action and all matters in difference therein, is proved by an order of reference made by the judge of the county court by consent of the plaintiff and the defendant. Roper v. Leti, 2 L. M. & P. 621; 7 Ex. 55; 21 L. J., Ex. 28.

In an action on an award, the execution of the submission by all the parties on both sides must be proved, if traversed. Ferrer v. Ozen, 7 B. & C. 427; 1 M. & R. 222; Brazier v. Jones, 8 B. & C. 124.

7. EFFECT OF SUBMISSION OR AWARD.

Finality of Decision.—When differences arose in a winding-up between persons claiming a charge upon the company's estate, and the official liquidator and the parties agreed that their rights should be determined in a summary way by the judge acting in the matter of the winding-up:—Held, that this was a submission to arbitration by the judge personally, and there was no appeal from his decision as an arbitrator. Durham County Permanent Benefit Building Society, In re, Wilson, Ex parte, 7 L. R., Ch. 45; 41 L. J. Ch. 164.

The decision of a county court judge refusing to set aside an award under the County Courts Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 95), s. 77, is final. Mayer v. Farmer, 3 Ex. D. 235; 47 L. J., Ex. 760; 26 W. R. 760.

Injunction, when entitled to.—An award of an arbitrator finding a damage done by a nuisance is to be treated as a verdict, establishing a legal right, so as to entitle the party in whose favour it is made to an injunction. Imperial Gas Light and Coke Company v. Broadbent, 7 H. L. Cas. 600; 29 L. J., Ch. 377; 5 Jur. N. S. 1319—H. L.

Conveyance of Lands.—An award cannot, per se, operate as a conveyance of lands. Henry v. Kirwan, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 459. See 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 16.

Therefore, where two persons were desirous of effecting an exchange of portions of their estates, and submitted to arbitration what amount of land should be given to each, and the award found accordingly:—Held, that the award did not operate as an actual conveyance of the legal estate, although it might be decisive upon the question of right, so as to enable either party to enforce specific performance of the agreement contained in the submission. Id.

Passing Property in Goods.—Under a submission of all matters in difference between a landlord and a tenant, the arbitrator awarded that a stack of hay, left upon the premises by the tenant, should be delivered up by him to the landlord within a certain day, upon the tenant being paid or allowed a certain sum in satisfaction for it:—Held, that the property in the hay did not pass to the landlord on his tender of the money, so that the landlord could not maintain trover for it, but his remedy was upon the award. Hunter v. Rice, 15 East, 100.

In an action between A., tenant of Whiteacre, and B. his landlord, all matters in dispute were referred to C., who was to determine what should be done with respect to the land. C. awarded, with respect to the land, that from the date of his award the tenancy should cease, and that A. should, within a month, deliver up possession to B. Possession was taken accordingly. D., a creditor of A., afterwards issued execution against A., and took the crops growing on Whiteacre:—Held, that the award was admissible in evidence upon the trial of an issue between B. and D., upon the question, whether, at the time of the execution, the crops were the property of A. or B. Thorpe v. Eyre, 3 N. & M. 214.

Between what Parties conclusive.—In an action for injuring a reversionary interest, in a several fishery in an estuary of the sea, and in the soil of the bottom of the sea, both in the possession of A., as tenant, issues were taken on the plaintiff's right to the fishery and ownership of the soil. The controversy was whether the soil belonged to the plaintiff or to B. The plaintiff gave in evidence proceedings in an action by A. against B. One count was for injuring A.'s fishery, by tearing up the soil, described as being the soil of the plaintiff, and thereby destroying fish. To this there was a plea of not guilty. The amount of damages was referred, and the arbitrator awarded nominal damages. The act complained of in that action was committed in a part of the same estuary, and the soil there was claimed by the same title as the soil the subject of the present action, and the defendant in the present action became tenant to B. subsequently to the award. The proceedings were admitted:—Held, that they were improperly admitted, the award not being evidence of reputation, and the proceedings not being admissible for the plaintiff, who was not a party, or shewn to be privy to A., though the defendant was privy to B. Wenman (Lady) v. Mackenzie, 5 El. & Bl. 447; 25 L. J., Q. B. 44.

By an agreement between master printers and journeymen, fixing the amount and mode of calculating work done, and the price to be paid for it according to a certain rule, arbitrators were appointed to decide disputes. On a dispute between A., a journeyman, and B., a master printer, on the construction of the rule, the arbitrator decided in favour of the master. A journeyman printer, after this decision, came into the employ of a master printer, and raised the same question:—Held, that he was not bound by the award between A. and B. Hill v. Levey, 3 H. & N. 7; 28 L. J., Ex. 80; 4 Jur. N. S. 286,—Ex. Ch.

Effect as an Admission.—Agreeing to refer the quantum of damages to arbitration, after a question of law has been reserved by the judge at the trial, does not waive an objection to the defendant's liability in the action, after the arbitrator has made his award. Oxenham v. Lemon, 2 D. & R. 461.

of a cause involving an inquiry into a mass of accounts, an order was made by a judge, on the application of the plaintiff, that an accountant, to be named by the arbitrator, should inspect the defendant's books and take copies or extracts from them relating to the matters in question in them. This was done, and the charges of the accountant were paid by the plaintiff. The result of the investigation and report of the accountant to the arbitrator was that much expense in the inquiry was saved:—Held, that the plaintiff, in whose favour the award was made, was not entitled to have the costs of the accountant taxed against the defendant. Nolan v. Copeman, 8 L. R., Q. B. 84; 42 L. J., Q. B. 44; 27 L. T. 789; 21 W. R. 263.

Waiver of Objection.—A cause and all matters in difference having been referred to arbitration, an award was made directing the payment of a sum by the defendant, together with the costs of the cause and of the award; at the taxation of costs, the allocatur was made by the master, without objection by the defendant, for the aggregate amount of both classes of costs, for which sum, the same day, 4th June, judgment was entered up. The plaintiff having died on the 18th November, a scire facias was sued out on the 12th January following, to which the defendant pleaded on the 19th. On an application made on the 24th, to set aside the judgment, on the ground of its falsity, by reason of its including the costs of the award which were not properly recoverable in the cause:—Held, that the objection resolved itself into a point of irregularity upon the allocatur, which was answered, first, by the consent of the defendant to the master's taxation; and, secondly, by a waiver arising upon the lapse of time permitted to intervene between the period of the allocatur being made and the application. Signall v. Gale, 1 D., N. S. 497; 4 Scott, N. R. 570; 3 M. & G. 858.

On what Scale Taxed.—An action in contract for 50*l.* 3*s.* having been referred to nisi prius to an arbitrator, he awarded the plaintiff 15*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, and certified "that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action." On taxation, the master held the case to be within the 7th of the directions to taxing masters of Hilary Term, 1853, and taxed on the lower scale:—Held, that such practice was good, for the case was within the enacting words of the direction, not within its exception, and unaffected by its proviso. Smith v. Hailey, 27 L. T. 426; 21 W. R. 76.

An action of trespass was referred, by consent, to nisi prius, and by an order of nisi prius, drawn up in the usual form, the verdict was, by consent, entered for the plaintiffs, with damages 40*s.*, costs 40*s.*; and, by the like consent, it was also ordered that the costs of the reference and award should be paid by the defendants. The award having been made, the master taxed the costs of the action as between party and party on the ordinary scale; and then proceeded to tax the costs of the reference and award on the same scale, but the plaintiffs objected that the proceedings on the reference were virtually under the Lands Clauses Act, and that the costs ought to be taxed on the scale usually allowed in proceedings under that act:—Held, that the costs which the defendants had stipulated to pay, and which they were bound to pay under the order of nisi prius, were ordinary costs as between party and party, and ought to be taxed on such, and on no other scale. Eccles v. Blackburn (Mayor), 30 L. J., Ex. 358.

Proportion of Costs.—The plaintiff instituted a suit to take the accounts of a partnership between himself and the defendant, the terms of the partnership being that the plaintiff was to receive one-twelfth of the profits and to bear one-twelfth of the losses, and that the defendant was to receive and bear the remaining eleven-twelfths. The partnership articles contained an arbitration clause; and an order was made in the suit, under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11, that the matters in difference between the parties be referred to arbitration and the proceedings in the suit stayed, the costs being reserved. Under this order an award was made finding a considerable sum due to the plaintiff:—Held, that the costs of both parties of the suit, reference, and award ought to be taxed and paid as to one-twelfth by the plaintiff and as to eleven-twelfths by the defendant. Newton v. Taylor, 19 L. R., Eq. 14; 23 W. R. 330.

When Taxation Unnecessary.—Where an arbitrator finds the amount of the costs of an award, it is not necessary that they should be taxed previously to the court ordering them to be paid. Dirie v. Alexander, 1 L. M. & P. 338.

Taxing by Arbitrator.—An arbitrator, authorized to tax costs in a cause, allowed an item which it was insisted ought not to have been charged; the court would not refer the matter to the master. Anon. 1 Chit. 38.

When Taxation by Officer may be Ordered.—Upon a reference with a clause, that the submission may be made a rule of court, the arbitrator, under a power to award the costs of the reference and award, may direct such costs to be taxed by the officer of the court, although no cause was pending at the time of the reference. Bhear v. Harradine, 7 Ex. 269; 21 L. J., Ex. 127.

Award sent back—Fresh Taxation.—The costs of a reference had been taxed before the award was sent back to the arbitrator by the court. After the second award the defendant demanded the same costs without any new taxation:—Held, that by the reference back the allocatur became null, and that there ought to have been a fresh taxation after the new award before any demand for costs could be enforced. Johanson v. Latham, 2 L. M. & P. 205; 20 L. J., Q. B. 236.

Practice—Separate Taxations.—Where the costs of the cause are to abide the event, the costs of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator, the practice is for the master to tax each set of costs separately, and give two allocaturs, unless the parties agree that the taxation shall be in one sum. Bower v. Bower, 8 Jur., N. S. 193; 5 L. T. 684.

Order to Review Taxation.—An action upon money counts and for trover was referred to the master, "costs of the cause, reference, and award to abide the event." It was awarded that the defendant had proved his set-off of an equal amount to the plaintiff's claim in the money counts, 37*l.* 10*s.*; and that he owed the defendant

21. 10s. Upon the trover count the plaintiff was awarded 43*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.* The master gave to the plaintiff the costs of the action, to the defendant the costs of proving the plea of set-off, but to neither party the costs of the reference and award. The court refused to review the taxation. Woodhams v. Woodhams, 25 L. T. 460.

A plaintiff declared upon a special contract for the delivery of goods to the defendant, of which he alleged breaches, which were, that the defendant did not pay for goods delivered according to agreement, that he refused to accept goods which were tendered, and as to the remainder, that he did not accept them. There was a count for goods sold. The cause was referred, and the arbitrator ordered the defendant to pay 75*l.* less 39*l.* paid into court on the second count; and he also found that certain timber mentioned in the special count was the property of the plaintiff:—Held, that a finding on both counts was involved in this award; and the master having taxed the costs on both issues for the plaintiff, the court refused to send the taxation to be reviewed. Rennie v. Mills, 7 D. P. C. 295; 5 Bing. N. C. 249; 7 Scott, 276; 1 Arn. 534.

Where the master has taxed costs as between attorney and client pursuant to the directions of an award, which directions, it is suggested, are an excess of authority on the part of an arbitrator, the court will not direct the taxation to be reviewed, the proper preliminary step being to move to set aside the award. Bartle v. Musgrave, 1 D., N. S. 235; 5 Jur. 1661.

Suing for, before Taxation.—Where an umpire appointed under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 125, awarded the amount of compensation and that the costs of the reference should be paid by the local board of health:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action for the costs before taxation. Holdsworth v. Wilson, 4 B. & S. 1; 32 L. J., Q. B. 289; 10 Jur., N. S. 171; 8 L. T. 434; 11 W. R. 733—Ex. Ch.

The right to costs is entirely independent of the taxation of them, and an action can be maintained for the costs of a reference though the amount of such costs has not been previously settled or ascertained by taxation. Metropolitan District Railway Company v. Sharpe, 5 App. Cas. 425; 44 J. P. 716; 50 L. J., Q. B. 14; 43 L. T. 130; 29 W. R. 617—H. L. (E.).

A declaration on an award alleged a direction that the costs of the action, reference and award should be paid by the defendant. Breach, non-payment. Plea, that they were not before action ascertained or taxed:—Held, the award was good and the plea bad. Lewis v. Rossiter, 44 L. J., Ex. 136; 33 L. T. 260; 23 W. R. 832.

II. REFERENCE TO REFEREE UNDER JUDICATURE ACT, 1873, ss. 56, 57.

(See Rules of Supreme Court, Order XXXVI., Rules 45–55.)

1. IN WHAT CASES.

Questions of Account.—Semble, that the "prolonged examination of documents," intended by sect. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873, is an examination required to enable the judge to leave questions of fact to the jury; and not an examination to enable him to determine a question of legal right. Ormerod v. Todmorden Mill Co., 8 Q. B. D. 664; 51 L. J., Q. B. 348; 46 L. T. 669; 30 W. R. 805.

The expression "questions of account" in the 57th section of the Judicature Act, 1873, will receive a large construction. Leigh, In re, Rowcliffe v. Leigh, 3 Ch. D. 292; 24 W. R. 782.

A claim made in an administration suit by a dealer in works of art against the estate of the testator for 19,000*l.*, the aggregate prices of twenty-four items, consisting of pictures and of articles of vertu supplied to the testator in his lifetime, and specified in an account delivered to his executor, was, on the application of the executor under that section, ordered to be tried before the official referee. Ib.

Any question of account which may be referred compulsorily to a master under s. 3 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, may also be referred compulsorily to an official referee under s. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Ward v. Pilley, 5 Q. B. D. 427; 49 L. J., Q. B. 705; 43 L. T. 301; 28 W. R. 937—C. A.

Reference of all Issues in the Action to Official Referee.—In any case in which the court has jurisdiction to refer compulsorily a question of account, to an official referee, it has also jurisdiction so to refer all the other issues in the action. Ib.

To an action for money had and received, the defendant pleaded, amongst other matters, that "the plaintiff and defendant still are partners, or co-adventurers in holding certain horse races and race meetings, which said partnership still subsists, and the alleged causes of action arose out of such partnership and not otherwise." An order having been made by a judge at chambers, referring all the issues in the action to an official referee:—Held, that the order was right. Goodwin v. Budden, 42 L. T. 536.

Issues—Not whole Action.—The court or a judge has no power under the Judicature Act, 1873, ss. 56 and 57, to refer the whole action for trial to an official or special referee. Under s. 57 the court may, by consent, refer any question or issue of fact in an action to an official or special referee for trial, but the power of compulsory reference for trial under that section is confined to questions or issues in an action requiring prolonged examination of documents or local investigation, or questions of account, and any other matters so involved with such issues as to be incapable of being tried separately. Longman v. East—Pontifer v. Severn—Mellin v. Monico, 3 C. P. D. 142; 47 L. J., C. P. 211; 38 L. T. 1; 26 W. R. 183—C. A.

Action for Wrongful Dismissal and Matters of Account—Charges of Misconduct.—The plaintiff brought an action against the defendants for damages for wrongful dismissal, for balance of account for money paid to defendants' use, and for an account of profits on sales on which the plaintiff claimed commission. The defendants justified the dismissal, on the ground that the plaintiff had misconducted himself by wilfully disobeying the reasonable orders of defendants, and by habitually neglecting his duties, and by converting to his own use money which he had received to the use of the defendant. By order of a judge at chambers the issues in the action were referred to an official referee pursuant to costs of the reference and not in the cause. Brown v. Nelson, 13 M. & W. 397; 2 D. & L. 405; 14 L. J., Ex. 62.

Costs of Reference or of Umpirage.]—By an agreement matters were referred to two arbitrators, and if they failed to make an award within a limited time, to an umpire. The costs of the reference and award and umpirage were to be in the discretion of the arbitrators and umpire respectively. The parties agreed that the umpire should sit with the arbitrators, so that if they did not make an award it would not be necessary for him to re-hear the evidence. The arbitrators did not conclude the reference within the time limited. The parties then further agreed that the arbitrators should sit with the umpire, and assist him in taking the evidence, which they did. The award ordered the losing party to pay the other the costs "of the umpirage, and of this my award;" and that each party should "pay their own costs of the reference other than the costs of my umpirage, and of this my award." The umpire included the charges of the two arbitrators in his costs of umpirage and award, and the same were paid by the successful party on taking up the award:—Held, that the charges of the arbitrators were costs of the umpirage, and not costs of the reference; and that the successful party was entitled to have such amount as was duly charged by the arbitrators, and paid by him on taking up the award, allowed on the taxation of costs, and to have the same repaid to him by his opponent. Ellison v. Ackroyd, 1 L. M. & P. 806; 20 L. J., Q. B. 193.

No Amount named.]—There was a partnership as traders, and also as solicitors, between A. and B. C. was appointed by deed by A. and the executrix of B., who died, to act as attorney in completing the dissolution of the partnership, and as receiver in respect of the law partnership estate, and as arbitrator in respect of all differences arising as to both partnerships. C. was empowered "to dispose of the estate, money, and effects of the law partnership, in such manner as he should think best for the interests of A. and of the executrix." He was authorized to make one or more awards, and the costs of the reference and awards were left in his discretion. In the award he stated that he had received the estate and effects of the law partnership, and had disposed of them in such manner as he thought best for the interests of A. and of the executrix, and awarded that a certain sum was due to A. from the executrix, and ordered the latter to pay it. The only statement in the award, as to the costs, was this: "I certify that I have deducted and retained to myself the costs of my award out of the moneys which have been received by me as receiver. I award and determine that each of the parties shall bear and pay his and her own costs of the reference respectively."—Held, that the award was good, although the arbitrator had stated that he had deducted the costs of his award out of the money in his hands as receiver, and had not stated what the amount of those costs was, or which party he charged with them. Roberts v. Eberhardt, 3 C. B., N. S. 482; 28 L. J., C. P. 74; 4 Jur., N. S. 898—Ex. Ch.

When referred back to Arbitrator.]—A cause was referred to an arbitrator, to ascertain what verdict ought to be given, and his certificate was to be entered as the verdict of a jury, and he certified that a verdict should be entered for the plaintiff for a certain sum; and told the parties that each should pay his own costs of reference, which was acceded to; and upon a motion to set aside the certificate, the cause was referred back to him, when he certified to the same effect, but omitted to give any directions as to the costs of the second reference:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to such costs, as, in the absence of any specific direction, the costs must follow the verdict. Mackintosh v. Blyth, 8 Moore, 211; 1 Bing. 269.

Where an award, being defective, is referred back to the arbitrator, who hears fresh evidence and makes a second award the arbitrator's charges for the first award are to be borne equally by each party. Blair v. Jones, 6 Ex. 701; 20 L. J., Ex. 295.

An order of reference gave the arbitrator a discretion as to the costs of the reference and award, and contained a clause giving the court power to refer the award back to the arbitrator, in case of an application to set aside the award. The arbitrator made his award, directing each party to bear his own costs. On the application by the defendant, it was referred back to the arbitrator to find as to a specific matter not disposed of by the award. The arbitrator directed the defendant to pay the costs of the amended award:—Held, that, by virtue of the order of reference, the arbitrator had power to award as to the costs of the amended award. McRae v. McLean, 2 El. & Bl. 946; 2 C. L. R. 391; 18 Jur. 244.

An action for an illegal arrest was referred, the costs of the reference being in the arbitrator's discretion. The award directed that final judgment should be entered for the plaintiff, with damages, and gave him the costs of the reference and award. The arbitrator had no authority to direct judgment to be entered, and for this excess the award was remitted to the arbitrator, who in a second award recited that he had made a former award, that it had been referred back, and gave the plaintiff the same damages and costs of the reference and award, and also the costs of the amended award:—Held, that the arbitrator had a discretionary power over the costs of the second reference. Breary v. Kemp, 24 L. J., Q. B. 310.

Where a submission gives an arbitrator power over costs, the court, on sending the award back to him, may direct that the costs of the rule shall be in his discretion. Pearson v. Overell, 12 W. R. 709.

b. Costs of Cause.

Who Entitled to—Part of Award Surplusage.]

—A cause was referred to an arbitrator under an order of nisi prius, the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award. The arbitrator directed a verdict to be entered for the defendant on the first and sixth issues, one of which went to the whole cause of action, and for the plaintiff on all the other issues, with 7s. damages:—Held, that, notwithstanding the finding of such damages for the plaintiff, the defendant was entitled to the general costs of the cause, for that the assessment of damages must be treated as surplusage. Ross v. Clifton, 2 D., N. S. 983; 12 L. J., Q. B. 265; 7 Jur. 601.

What are.]—Where a cause was referred before trial, and an arbitration bond entered into, but which could not be made a rule of court, and the reference proving abortive the cause was afterwards tried:—Held, that the successful party was not entitled to the costs of the abortive reference as costs in the cause. Doe d. Davies v. Morgan, 4 M. & W. 171; 2 Jur. 684.

The costs in the cause are those which are incurred up to the time of the reference. Brown v. Nelson, 13 M. & W. 397; 2 D. & L. 405; 14 L. J., Ex. 62.

Where a verdict is taken subject to a reference of the action to an arbitrator, who is to certify for whom and for what amount the verdict shall be entered, and the costs of the cause and reference are to abide the event, the costs of the reference are costs in the cause, and follow the legal event of the verdict. Deere v. Kirkhouse, 1 L. M. & P. 783; 20 L. J., Q. B. 195.

In an action by a carrier against a railway company, to recover back expensive and unequal charges made upon him for the conveyance of his goods, a verdict was entered for the plaintiff for 10,000*l.*, subject to a special case to be settled by a barrister, who, in the event of the court deciding in favour of the plaintiff, was by the order of reference empowered to direct for what amount the verdict should be entered, and to whom the cause and all matters in difference between the parties were referred, and subject to the special case, the costs of the action to abide the event of the award, and the costs of and incident to the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The special case as settled by the referee divided the plaintiff's claim into six several heads, and the court having decided in the plaintiff's favour upon four of them, and for the defendant on the rest of the case, the matter went back to the arbitrator, who ultimately directed that the verdict should be entered for the plaintiff for 3,115*l.*, and that so much of the issue as related to that sum should be found for the plaintiff, and the residue thereof for the defendant; and he further directed that all the costs of and incident to the reference and award should be paid by the defendants:—Held, that the costs of the attendances before the referee, to settle the special case, were costs in the cause, and therefore that the master was justified in apportioning them, according to the decision of the court, upon the several heads of claim in the special case. Edwards v. Great Western Railway Company, 12 C. B. 419.

Costs of an arbitration under an order of nisi prius are not costs in the cause. Taylor v. Gordon, 9 Bing. 570; 2 M. & Scott, 725; 1 D. P. C. 720.

Costs of a reference are costs in the cause, where the reference is for the benefit of the unsuccessful party. Tregoning v. Attenborough, 1 D. P. C. 225; 5 M. & P. 453; 7 Bing. 733.

An award of costs sustained in the action does not include the costs of the reference. Brown v. Maraden, 1 H. Bl. 223.

An order was obtained by a plaintiff for a reference to the master, but he declining to take it, the plaintiff obtained an order to rescind the reference and to proceed to trial:—Held, that he was not entitled to these costs as costs in the cause. Gribble v. Buchanan, 18 C. B. 691; 26 L. J., C. P. 24.

Where a verdict is taken for the plaintiff for a given sum, subject to a reference to an arbitrator, who is to reduce it to such amount as he may think proper, and he directs the verdict to be reduced by a nominal sum, his determination, though in form an award, is in substance a certificate, and consequently the plaintiff is entitled to the expenses incurred before him as costs in the cause. Sim v. Edwards, 17 C. B. 527; 25 L. J., C. P. 175.

In an action on the case, it was referred to an arbitrator to find the facts and state a case, the costs of the reference and arbitration to be costs in the cause, and abide the event thereof. The judgment of the court was for the plaintiff, but was ultimately arrested by the court of error:—Held, that under the order of reference, coupled with s. 145 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the arbitration, as if they had been costs of a trial at nisi prius, and also to the costs in the court below. Whaley v. Laing, 5 H. & N. 480; 29 L. J., Ex. 313.

Power to vary Terms of Submission.—An order stayed proceedings in an action on a contract containing an agreement to refer disputes arising thereunder. The order made no provision as to the costs of the action. The matter in dispute being afterwards referred, an award was made in favour of the plaintiff:—Held, that there was jurisdiction under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11, after the award had been made, to make an order varying the terms of the original order by directing that the defendant should pay the costs of the action. Bustros v. Lenders, 6 L. R., C. P. 259; 40 L. J., C. P. 193; 24 L. T. 472; 19 W. R. 757.

A cause having been referred to a master, under the provisions of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, as a matter of account, and the order of reference being silent as to the costs, the court refused an application for an order for costs on behalf of the party in whose favour the award of the master was made. Wimshurst v. Barrow Shipbuilding Company, 2 Q. B. D. 335; 46 L. J., Q. B. 477; 25 W. R. 557.

c. Effect of County Courts Act.

Costs of Cause but not of Reference affected.—A cause having been referred, together with all matters in difference between the parties, the costs of the cause to abide the event of the reference, the arbitrator awarded—first, as to the cause, that there was due to the plaintiff from the defendant the sum of 259*l.* 1*s.*; and secondly, as to the matters in difference other than the cause, that there was due from the plaintiff to the defendant the sum of 242*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.*, and the arbitrator directed the latter sum to be allowed out of and deducted from the damages and costs recoverable by the plaintiff in the action, and the balance to be paid to the plaintiff:—Held, that the event of the reference was in favour of the plaintiff, and that he was not precluded from recovering his costs of the action by the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5. Stevens v. Chapman, 6 L. R., Ex. 213; 40 L. J., Ex. 123; 24 L. T. 478; 19 W. R. 958.

In an action of trover and of debt a verdict was taken for the plaintiff for the damages claimed, subject to a reference, "the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, and the costs of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator." The arbitrator awarded that the verdict should be entered for 2*l.* 10*s.* as to the claim in trover, and for 7*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* as to the claim in debt, and directed the defendant to pay the costs of the reference and award. He had the power of certifying for costs, but gave no certificate. The master declined to tax on behalf of the plaintiff either his costs of the cause or of the reference and award:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of the cause, but that he was entitled to those of the reference and award, although he had recovered in the cause sums not exceeding 10*l.* in tort and 20*l.* in contract. Forshaw v. De Wette, 6 L. R., Ex. 200; 40 L. J., Ex. 153; 24 L. T. 397; 19 W. R. 777.

When an action is referred by consent to arbitration upon the terms that the costs of the cause shall abide the event, and the costs of the award shall be in the discretion of the arbitrator, if the arbitrator decides in favour of the plaintiff he may lawfully direct the defendant to pay the costs of the reference and award, although the plaintiff may be deprived of the costs of the cause under the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5:—Quære, whether Moore v. Watson (2 L. R., C. P. 314) was correctly decided. Gallati v. Wakefield, 4 Ex. D. 249; 48 L. J., Ex. 70; 40 L. T. 30.—C. A.

If a judge, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 3, refers a cause compulsorily, "costs of the cause to abide the event, costs of the reference to be in the discretion of the master," and the master certifies for not more than 20*l.*, and directs the costs of reference to be paid by the defendant, the plaintiff is prevented by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, from recovering such costs. Moore v. Watson, 2 L. R., C. P. 314; 36 L. J., C. P. 122; 15 L. T. 662; 15 W. R. 429.

By an order made by consent of the parties, an action on a building contract was referred to an arbitrator to ascertain the amount, if any, due from the defendant to the plaintiff, "the costs of the action, reference, and award, to abide the event." The arbitrator found the sum due to the plaintiff was 19*l.* 2*s.* 7*d.* upon which an order was made for judgment for the plaintiff for that sum without costs:—Held, that the plaintiff had recovered in the action by judgment a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, and that he was therefore deprived of his costs of the action by the County Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), s. 5, unless he got a certificate or order for costs under that section. Jones v. Jones (7 C. B., N. S. 832) overruled. Fergusson v. Davison, 8 Q. B. D. 470; 51 L. J., Q. B. 266; 46 L. T. 191; 30 W. R. 462.—C. A.

The act does not apply to the case of a reference without any action. Ib.

A cause was referred before verdict, the costs of the cause, and of the reference and award, to abide the event. The arbitrator found for the plaintiff upon certain issues, damages 12*l.* 12*s.*, and that there was due to the defendant, on a plea of set-off, 9*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.*; and he awarded that the defendant should forthwith pay to the plaintiff the balance of 3*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.*:—Held, that, the event of the cause being in favour of the plaintiff, he was entitled to the costs. Jones v. Jones, 7 C. B., N. S. 832; 29 L. J., C. P. 151; 6 Jur., N. S. 826.

An action having been referred by consent, after verdict had been entered for the plaintiff, the amount to be corrected by the award, with power to the arbitrator to certify for costs:—Held, the arbitrator having found that less than 20*l.* was due, and not having certified, that the plaintiff was not entitled to his costs. Smith v. Edge, 2 H. & C. 659; 33 L. J., Ex. 9; 9 Jur., N. S. 1300; 9 L. T. 445, Issue having been joined in an action, by order of a judge, and by consent of the parties the cause was referred; the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, and the costs of the reference to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator found that the plaintiff had sustained damages to an amount under 20*l.*; whereupon the master taxed the plaintiff's costs of suit:—Held, that the plaintiff, not having recovered 20*l.*, was deprived of his costs by virtue of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11. Crowell v. Amman Aberdare Colliery Company, 6 B. & S. 333; 34 L. J., Q. B. 161; 11 Jur., N. S. 687; 12 L. T. 418.

A compulsory order of reference made by a judge, and containing a term that the costs of the cause should abide the event, does not prevent the operation of the London Small Debts Act, which disentitles a plaintiff in such case to costs; for the plaintiff having had, in an action of contract, awarded to him, upon a compulsory reference, a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, is held to be a plaintiff who "recovers a sum not exceeding 20*l.*," within the meaning of the London Small Debts Act, and thereby becomes liable to be deprived of his costs by virtue of it. Robertson v. Sterne, 13 C. B., N. S. 248; 31 L. J., C. P. 362; 9 Jur., N. S. 332; 7 L. T. 462.

The plaintiff and defendant residing more than twenty miles apart, an action was brought in the superior court for a sum less than 20*l.* It was referred to the master, the costs to abide the event. The master awarded 9*s.* 6*d.* to the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff had recovered that sum and was entitled to his costs. Webb v. Saunderson, 8 L. T. 464.

An action of defamation was by consent referred to two arbitrators, and the costs of the cause were to abide the event, and the costs of the reference were to be in the discretion of the arbitrators. The arbitrators found one of the issues in favour of the plaintiff with 20*s.* damages, and the other issues in favour of the defendant, and directed the defendant to pay all the costs of the reference, and the costs were taxed. On a motion to review the taxation, the court refused a rule. Frean v. Sargent, 32 L. J., Ex. 281; 8 L. T. 467; 11 W. R. 808.

A declaration contained several counts, one in trover for converting two separate articles, and to this the defendant pleaded not guilty, and not possessed, and to the other counts other pleas. At the trial the record was withdrawn, and by order of nisi prius, by consent, the cause and all matters in difference were referred to an arbitrator, who was to have all the powers of certifying of a judge at nisi prius; the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, the costs of the reference to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator found all the issues in favour of the defendant, except as to the conversion of one of the articles mentioned in the count in trover, and as to that he found for the plaintiff, with one farthing damages. He gave the defendant the costs of the reference, and did not certify:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the cause. Wigens v. Cook, 6 C. B., N. S. 784; 28 L. J., C. P. 312; 6 Jur., N. S. 72.

In an action of trespass, a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, subject to the award of an arbitrator, who was to have the powers of a judge at nisi prius, and to enter the verdict as he thought fit. He entered it for the plaintiff, with less damages than 40*s.*, and did not certify:—Held, that this was a recovery, by the verdict of a jury. within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 24, s. 2; and the plaintiff was therefore entitled to no costs. Cooper v. Pegg, 16 C. B. 264, 454; 24 L. J., C. P. 167.

Certificate for Costs.—An action of trespass was referred by consent to an arbitrator, who was to have all the powers of a judge at nisi prius as to certifying, and the costs of the cause were to abide the event. The arbitrator awarded to the plaintiff 2*l.* 14*s.*, and gave no certificate for costs. After a considerable lapse of time the plaintiff obtained ex parte from the arbitrator a document in which he stated that it appeared to him at the reference that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action:—Held, that the court or a judge had power under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5, to order that the plaintiff be allowed his costs, but that the court would not act upon the document merely, and that under those circumstances the award ought to be remitted to the arbitrator. Harland v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Mayor, &c.), 39 L. J., Q. B. 67.

An action of trespass was referred, and the arbitrator was to have the same power to certify as a judge at nisi prius. The arbitrator found for the defendant, with 1*s.* damages, and certified in his award, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 24, that the action was brought to try a right, besides the mere right to recover damages:—Held, that the certificate was valid, and that it need not be indorsed on the back of the record. Spain v. Cadell, 8 M. & W. 129; 9 D. P. C. 745; 5 Jur. 322.

Held, also, that in such case the certificate must be given at the time of making the award. Ib.

Addition of Parties.—A plaintiff sued L. for 365*l.* for goods sold and delivered. On the day after the writ was issued L. paid to the plaintiff 319*l.*, which he accepted on account of his claim. After declaration L. pleaded in abatement the non-joinder of H., whereupon the plaintiff amended the writ and declaration under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 38, by adding the name of H. as joint contractor. Both defendants pleaded never indebted, and also a plea that after the writ in the action had been issued against the defendant L. and before the action was commenced against the other defendant by amendment pursuant to s. 38, the defendants satisfied the plaintiff's claim by payment. The cause having been referred to an arbitrator, costs to abide the event, with power to the arbitrator to certify as a judge at nisi prius, the arbitrator by his award found that the defendants were indebted to the plaintiff in 322*l.*, and that the defendants did, as in their plea alleged, satisfy 319*l.*, part of such debt, by payment, and the arbitrator directed that the verdict should therefore be entered for the plaintiff for 3*l.*, being the difference between the two sums of 322*l.* and 319*l.*, and he gave no certificate as to costs:—Held, that the only action in which the plaintiff recovered, being the action against both defendants, he was deprived of his costs by the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, inasmuch as he recovered in that action less than 20*l.*, and he was not allowed to tax his costs of the cause against L. alone. Balmain v. Lickfold, 10 L. R., C. P. 203; 44 L. J., C. P. 94; 32 L. T. 67; 23 W. R. 310.

d. To abide Event.

Claim and Counter-claim.—An action was brought, claiming first 10*l.* for rent; secondly—100*l.* as damages for breach of covenant in a lease of premises; and, thirdly, 30*l.* for conversion of the plaintiff's goods. The defendant pleaded, admitting that the rent was due, but denying the breach of covenant and conversion, and setting up a counter-claim for 100*l.* damages for breach of covenant by the plaintiff, and 15*l.* for money due for the use and occupation of other premises. The action was referred to an arbitrator by an order made by consent upon the terms that "the costs of the action should abide the event of the award, and that the costs of the reference and award should be in the discretion of the arbitrator." The arbitrator found that the plaintiff was entitled to 10*l.* for rent; that the defendant had broken his covenant in the lease, and had been guilty of the conversion charged, and he awarded that the plaintiff was entitled to recover in respect of such breach of covenant and conversion the sum of 25*l.*, making together 35*l.* awarded to the plaintiff; that the plaintiff had broken his covenant, and that the defendant was entitled to recover in respect of that breach 20*l.*; and upon the whole matter he found that the plaintiff was entitled to recover in the action 15*l.* and no more:—Held, by the majority of the court (Cockburn, C. J., and Manisty, J.), Field, J., dissenting, that the provision in the order of reference as to costs did not alter the rights of the parties, and that upon the true construction of s. 67 of the Judicature Act, 1873, the plaintiff was entitled to the costs on his claim, and the defendant to his costs on the counter-claim.—By Field, J., that the case was governed by the provision as to costs in the order of reference, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the action, and that the defendant was not entitled to any. Staples v. Young (2 Ex. D. 324) questioned. Chatfield v. Sedgwick, 4 C. P. D. 459) discussed. Stooke v. Taylor, 5 Q. B. D. 569; 49 L. J., Q. B. 857; 43 L. T. 200; 29 W. R. 49; 44 J. P. 748.

The plaintiff claimed on a balance of account a sum of money exceeding 50*l.* The defendant pleaded a set-off, and also made a counter-claim for goods supplied to the amount of about 24*l.* The action was referred, the costs of the action to abide the event. It was found that 16*l.* was due on the claim, and 23*l.* on the counter-claim, leaving a balance of 7*l.* due from the plaintiff to the defendant:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to his costs. Chatfield v. Sedgwick, 4 C. P. D. 459; 27 W. R. 790—C. A.

The plaintiffs claimed on a balance of account a sum exceeding 50*l.* The defendants denied their indebtedness, and set up a counter-claim for more than 50*l.* on the balance of account. The cause was referred, costs to abide the event. The arbitrator found that more than 50*l.* was due on the claim, and more than 50*l.* on the counter-claim, but that a balance was due to the plaintiffs of 11*l.* odd:—Held by Kelly, C. B., that the plaintiffs were each entitled to the costs of the issues on which they succeeded, on the ground that the relief sought could not be given in a county court; and by Hawkins, J., contrary to his own opinion, but on the authority of Potter v. Chambers (4 C. P. D. 457), that the plaintiffs were entitled to their general costs of action. Neale v. Clarke, 4 Ex. D. 286; 41 L. T. 438.

The plaintiffs sued for 40*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.* and interest for goods sold and delivered, for work, labour, and materials, and for making and delivering a steam engine for the defendants. The defendants paid 8*l.* 11*s.* into court, pleaded that the work had been improperly done, and counter-claimed for loss of trade profits through defects in the engine supplied by the plaintiffs. The action and counter-claim were referred to a district registrar, the costs of cause and counter-claim to follow the event, the party in whose favour the award was made to be at liberty, ten days after its service on the other party, to sign judgment for the sum found due and the costs to which he should be entitled under the order of reference and award, with costs of judgment. The arbitrator awarded a balance of 4*l.* in favour of the defendants, and the district registrar ordered judgment to be signed for the defendants for 5*l.* and the taxed costs of the action, counter-claim, and reference:—Held, that the district registrar had no authority to give the defendants the costs of the action, but that the defendants must pay the costs of proving the claim, and the plaintiffs must pay the costs of proving the counter-claim. Cole v. Firth, 40 L. T. 851.

— General Award in favour of Defendant on Counter-claim — Reference back to find Specific Issues.—The plaintiff, who had built two houses for the defendant at a contract price of 1,135*l.*, sued for 169*l.* 16*s.*, the balance of the price, and for other small items. The defendant raised various defences, and also counter-claimed 1,200*l.* for penalties for delay and for damages arising from bad work. The pleadings went as far as surrejoinder, after which the cause with all matters in difference, was referred to an architect as arbitrator, upon the terms, inter alia, that the costs of action, reference, and award, should follow the event, unless the arbitrator should otherwise order. The arbitrator by an award, silent as to costs, awarded 3*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* to the defendant in respect of the action and matters in difference:—Held, that the word "event" ought to be construed distributively, and the award was remitted to the arbitrator to find specific issues. Ellis v. Deslira, 6 Q. B. D. 521; 50 L. J., Q. B. 328; 44 L. T. 209; 29 W. R. 493—C. A.

Compare cases post, sub tit. COSTS.

"Event," what is.]—A declaration in an action of M. v. W. contained two counts, the first, on an agreement by W. to sell a surgeon's business to M., alleging three breaches; and the second for fraud by W. in inducing M. to enter into the agreement. By the pleas, W. denied the first two breaches in the first count, paid money into court as to the third breach, and pleaded not guilty as to the second count. After issue joined, the parties referred all disputes, differences and accounts between them to an arbitrator; the costs of the reference and award, including such costs of the cause as might be taxed, to abide the event of the award. The disputes, differences and accounts referred, all arose out of the agreement sued on. The arbitrator awarded in favour of W. in respect of the charges of fraud, in favour of M. on the accounts; awarding that W. should pay M. a certain sum in respect of the latter, and that, except as to the matters decided, neither party had any claim against the other:—Held, that, upon this finding, neither party was entitled to any costs; Wightman, Crompton and Hill, JJ., holding that where two parties agree to refer several disputes to arbitration, and use the words "the costs of the reference and award are to abide the event of the award," the costs are not distributable, but there must be a general event of the award altogether in favour of one party, to entitle him to costs; Cockburn, C. J., agreeing in the decision, on the ground that all the matters referred had arisen out of one dispute with respect to one original subject matter; but declining to decide whether or not, where the matters referred are clearly distinct and separate, the event of the award may be construed as events, so as to make the costs distributable according to the finding. Marsack and Webber, In re, 2 El. & El. 637; 29 L. J., Q. B. 109; 6 Jur., N. S. 507; 2 L. T. 54; 8 W. R. 306.

A cause having been referred, together with all matters in difference between the parties, the costs of the cause to abide the event, the arbitrator awarded as to the cause that there was due from the defendant to the plaintiff 259*l.* 1*s.*; and as to the matters in difference that there was due to the defendant from the plaintiff the sum of 242*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.*; the arbitrator directed the latter sum to be deducted from the former, and the balance to be paid to the plaintiff:—Held, that the event of the reference was in the plaintiff's favour. Stevens v. Chapman, 6 L. R., Ex. 213; 40 L. J., Ex. 123; 24 L. T. 478; 19 W. R. 958.

A cause and all matters in difference were referred by an order at nisi prius, which provided that the costs of the reference and award should abide the event of the award. The arbitrator decided the cause in favour of the defendant, and with respect to the matters in difference, awarded that the plaintiff had a valid claim against the defendant, and that the defendant had a valid claim against the plaintiff of larger amount, and directed the plaintiff to pay the difference to the defendant. The claims were unliquidated, and could not have been set off against one another:—Held, that the event of the award was wholly in the defendant's favour, and the defendant therefore entitled to the costs of the reference and award. Dunhill v. Ford, 3 L. R., C. P. 36; 37 L. J., C. P. 32; 17 L. T. 148.

An action, and a suit in equity by the defendants in the action for an injunction to restrain the plaintiffs from proceeding in it, were referred, the costs of the action and of the suit to abide the event of the award. There were several issues in the action. As to some of them the arbitrator found for the defendants, and as to so much of the suit as regarded them, against the defendants, on the ground that they had a defence at law. As to the other issues, he found for the plaintiffs, with damages, but as to so much of the suit as regarded them, he awarded that the plaintiffs should not proceed to recover damages or costs:—Held, that the arbitrator had not exercised such a discretion over the costs as the reference meant to exclude; but that he had merely exercised a power over them necessarily resulting from the reference, and without which he could not properly have adjudicated upon the suit in equity. Reeves v. Mc Gregor, 1 P. & D. 372; 2 W. W. & H. 127; 9 A. & E. 576.

Upon reference of an action for several breaches of a farming agreement, after plea, and before issue joined, it was ordered that the costs of the reference should abide the event. The arbitrator found, as to one breach, that the plaintiff had sustained damages to the extent of 16s., and on all other breaches substantially in the defendant's favour:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to any costs of the reference, as the event was not in his favour; and there being no issues, the costs were not apportionable. Kelcey v. Stupples, 1 H. & C. 576; 32 L. J., Ex. 6; 9 Jur., N. S. 256; 7 L. T. 338; 11 W. R. 121.

A verdict was entered for a plaintiff, subject to a reference of the cause and all matters in difference, with power to the arbitrator to direct for whom the verdict should be entered, the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, and the costs of the reference and award to be in his discretion. He awarded that the verdict should stand, with damages, which he ordered to be paid to the plaintiff, and he directed that certain lamps in respect of which the plaintiff claimed damages should be delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the action. Matlock Gaslight and Coke Company v. Peters, 6 El. & Bl. 215; 25 L. J., Q. B. 273; 2 Jur. N. S. 377.

But where the costs of the reference and award are to abide the event of the award, and the event is partly in favour of the plaintiff and partly in favour of the defendant, no costs are payable on either side. Gribble v. Buchanan, 18 C. B. 691; 26 L. J., C. P. 24.

An order of reference "of all matters in difference in the cause, the costs of the cause, and also of the order and of the reference and award, to abide the event of the award, the arbitrator to have the power to direct how the verdict in the cause should be entered," implies that the costs of the cause should abide the event of the award with reference to the cause. Reynolds v. Harris, 3 C. B., N. S. 267; 28 L. J., C. P. 26; 5 Jur., N. S. 365.

Where the order makes the costs of the award to abide the event of the award, and the event is divided between the parties, neither of them can claim the costs; the event of the award, meaning ordinarily the general event of the award. Id.

A cause (in which money had been paid into court) was referred, with all matters in difference, the costs to abide the event. The arbitrator found that the plaintiff had no cause of action, but that there was a sum due from the defendant for money lent to his wife, which was paid into court:—Held, that the plaintiff was liable to pay the costs. Dawson v. Garrett, 2 D. P. C. 624.

Where a cause is referred to an arbitrator, and the costs are to abide the event, and the arbitrator awards a specific performance of something to be done, which proves that the event in fact is in favour of the plaintiff, he is entitled to costs, although the arbitrator does not award a verdict to be entered in form. Anon., 1 Smith, 426.

Where, by an order of reference, the costs of the causes referred were to abide the event of them, and in one, which was not at issue, the arbitrator found that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the defendant:—Held, that the costs of the pleadings followed the event of the cause, as in case of a nonsuit. Dibben v.

Anglesea (Marquis), 2 C. & M. 722; 4 Tyr. 927; 10 Bing. 568.

Parties in a cause referred all matters in difference to an arbitrator, with power to him to direct a verdict or nonsuit, and to order the defendant, although there should be a nonsuit or a verdict for him, to pay any money, or do any other act which should be just and equitable; the costs of the suit, and the costs of the reference to abide and follow the event of the award. The arbitrator directed a nonsuit; but awarded that the defendant ought to pay the plaintiff 25*l.*, and ordered him to do so:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to his costs of the suit, and the plaintiff to those of the reference. Chittenden v. Walker, 3 A. & E. 691.

e. Power of Arbitrator over Costs.

Reference "on Usual Terms."—When the issues in an action are tried and found for the plaintiff, and thereupon it is agreed that the question of the amount of damages shall be referred to an arbitrator on the "usual terms," the arbitrator will have discretion over the costs of the reference; and it does not matter that, if the plaintiff had gone on at the trial to prove his damages, he would have been entitled to his whole costs as of right. Morel v. Byrne, 28 L. T. 627; 21 W. R. 673.

Order silent as to.]—When an order of reference drawn up by consent provides that the costs of the action and of the application to refer, made at chambers, are to abide the event of the award as if it were a verdict, but is silent as to the costs of the reference, the arbitrator has no power over the costs of the reference, but each party must pay his own costs. Bullen v. King, 36 L. T. 732.

An arbitrator under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 3, has no power over the costs either of the cause, reference, or award, unless the rule or order appointing him gives it to him, and, where the rule is silent, the successful party is not entitled to costs. Bell v. Postlethwaite, 5 El. & Bl. 695; 25 L. J., Q. B. 63; 1 Jur., N. S. 1167; S. P., Leggo v. Young, 16 C. B. 626; 24 L. J., C. P. 200.

Where an order of nisi prius is silent upon the subject of the costs of the reference and award, the arbitrator has no authority to adjudicate upon them, but each party must bear his own expenses of the reference, and the half of the award. Taylor v. Gordon, 2 M. & Scott, 725; 9 Bing. 570; S. P., Grove v. Cox, 1 Taunt. 165.

A cause and all matters in difference were referred, but nothing was said about costs:—Held, that the arbitrator had power over the costs of the cause, but not those of the reference. Firth v. Robinson, 1 B. & C. 277.

Where all matters in difference are referred, except the costs of the action, and no notice is taken of the costs of reference, the latter are not in the discretion of the arbitrator. Strutt v. Rogers, 2 Marsh. 524; 7 Taunt. 213.

An arbitrator may award costs of the action without any express authority for that purpose. Roe d. Wood v. Doe, 2 T. R. 644.

All Costs to abide Event.]—Where by a reference after action, but before declaration, "all the costs are to abide the event of the award," the arbitrator has no power over the costs. Boodle v. Davies, 4 N. & M. 788; 3 A. & E. 200; 1 H. & W. 420.

If the costs of an arbitration are to abide the event, it is an excess of jurisdiction for the arbitrator to determine their amount. Kendrick v. Davies, 5 D. P. C. 693; W. W. & D. 366.

Discretion, how Exercised.]—A special jury having been obtained by the defendant, the cause was referred, the costs of the cause were to abide the event, and the costs of the reference and of the special jury were left in the discretion of the arbitrator:—Held, that he could not, after directing a verdict for the plaintiff, award that the latter should pay the costs of the special jury. Finlayson v. McLeod, 1 B. & A. 663.

By reference the costs of the cause were ordered to abide the event of the award; the arbitrator decided the cause in favour of the defendant, and directed the plaintiff, on a certain day, to pay him those costs:—Held, no objection to the award for that the defendant was not deprived of any right which he possessed to recover the costs at an earlier date. Cockburn v. Newton, 9 D. P. C. 671; 2 M. & G. 899; 3 Scott, N. R. 261.

Party causing Delay.]—Where there is a clause, that if either party, by affected delay or otherwise, shall prevent the arbitrator from making his award, he shall be liable to costs; the party will be liable to costs where the arbitrator is prevented from making his award in consequence of the party not being prepared with proper evidence, though he is ready to be examined in support of his own case. Morgan v. Williams, 2 D. P. C. 123.

A submission contained a clause that "if either party by affected delay or otherwise should wilfully delay, or otherwise wilfully prevent the arbitrator from making an award, he should pay costs:—"Semble, that this clause is confined to cases where the completion of the award is prevented, and does not apply where an award has been in fact made. Bradley v. Phelps, 6 Ex. 897; 21 L. J., Ex. 310.

Amount to be named by Arbitrator.]—By the terms of an order of reference ad nisi prius, the costs of the cause were to abide the event, "the costs of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator, who shall ascertain the same:—"Held, that he was bound to ascertain and determine the amount of the costs of the reference and award. Morgan v. Smith, 9 M. & W. 427; 1 D., N. S. 617.

A reference was, "that the costs of the agreement and of the reference and award should be in the discretion of the arbitrator, and be defrayed as he should direct." The arbitrator awarded that the defendant should pay a certain sum to the plaintiff, but made no mention of costs:—Held, that the award was therefore bad. Richardson v. Worsley, 5 Ex. 613; 19 L. J., Ex. 317.

Person to pay Costs must be named.]—A submission was entered into between A. and others, partners, of the first part, and B. of the second part. By a written agreement disputes were referred, "the costs of the submission, reference, award, and of making the submission a rule of court, to be in the discretion of the arbitrators." The arbitrators awarded that the costs of the submission, reference and award should be borne by the parties in equal proportions; and that the costs of making the submission a rule of court should be paid by such of the parties through whose default, in performance of the award, it should become necessary:—Held, that the award was not final or certain as to the costs of making the submission a rule of court, and therefore bad. Smith v. Wilson, 2 Ex. 327; 18 L. J., Ex. 320.

A submission to which the plaintiff and defendants, who were executors, and two other persons were parties, provided that the costs of the agreement, and of the reference, and of the arbitration, and of the award, and of making the submission a rule of court, should be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The award, after directing certain things to be done by each party, provided that the costs of the agreement, and of the reference, and of the award, should be paid equally by the plaintiff and the defendants, and that the costs of making the submission a rule of court should be paid by the party disobeying the award and obliging the same to be made such rule of court:—Held, that the award was not void for not finally ascertaining who was to pay the last-mentioned costs. Williams v. Wilson, 9 Ex. 90; 1 C. L. R. 921; 23 L. J., Ex. 17.

By an agreement between A., B., and C., it was provided that "the costs of the reference and of the award to be made in pursuance thereof, including a reasonable compensation to the arbitrators for their trouble, shall be in the discretion of the arbitrators, or any two of them, who shall by their award order and direct by whom, to whom, and in what proportions and manner the same shall be paid." The arbitrators having disposed of the matters in difference, awarded the costs as follows: "That A., B., and C. respectively pay for the attendance of his and her own witnesses, and that the other costs of the reference, and this our award, and also the compensation of the arbitrators, be paid by B. and C. in equal proportions:—"Held, that the costs were sufficiently disposed of by this direction, as it sufficiently indicated that each of the three parties was to pay one-third of them to the arbitrator. Young, In re, 22 L. J., C. P. 160; 13 C. B. 623.

Powers exceeded—Effect on Award.]—Although the arbitrators may have exceeded their authority as to costs, it does not necessarily invalidate the whole of the award. Aitchison v. Cargay, 9 Moore, 381; 2 Bing. 199; M'Clel. 376; 13 Price, 639.

Power to Order Third Party to Pay.]—An action was brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for pulling down a wall. Upon the cause coming on for trial it was agreed between the parties that it should be referred, and as one Burton had authorized the defendant to pull down the wall, and he was subpoenaed at the trial, it was further agreed, with his consent, that he should be a party to the reference, he signing a memorandum as follows:—"Record withdrawn and stet processus entered. Cause and all matters in difference referred to Mr. R. E. Turner, with power to say what shall be done by the parties, on all the usual terms. Messrs. Cutbush and Burton to be parties to the reference." The order of reference directed that the costs of the cause should abide the event, and that the costs of the reference and award should be in the discretion of the arbitrator, and that Messrs. Cutbush and Burton should be parties to the reference. The arbitrator awarded that the plaintiff was entitled to 40s. damages from the defendant, and that the defendant should bear and pay one moiety of the plaintiff's costs of the reference and award, and that Burton should pay the other moiety; and also that Burton should pay to the defendant one moiety of his, the defendant's, costs of the action, and one moiety of the defendant's costs of the reference:—Held, upon an objection that the arbitrator had no jurisdiction to require Burton to pay any portion of the costs of the action, that he had such jurisdiction. Stockley v. Shopland, 26 L. T. 586.

Collateral Writing.—By an order made under the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 3, a cause was referred, nothing being said about the costs. The umpire, by his award, "adjudged that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a certain (named) sum in full of all demands in the action." The award was accompanied by a note from the umpire to the plaintiff on a separate piece of paper, but not annexed to the award, in which he expressed an opinion that the costs of the action, and of the reference and award, should be paid by the defendant, and that he would have so ordered but that he could not do so, inasmuch as the order of reference was silent as to costs:—Held, that the parties were to be bound by the award, and that the accompanying note could not be looked at. Leggo v. Young, 16 C. B. 626; 24 L. J., C. P. 200.

As between Solicitor and Client.—Upon a submission of all matters in difference between the parties in a cause, without making any mention of costs, the arbitrator has no authority to award costs as between solicitor and client. Whitehead v. Firth, 12 East, 165; S. P., Seckham v. Babb, 8 D. P. C. 167; 6 M. & W. 129; 4 Jur. 90.

An arbitrator, to whom the matters at issue in a suit, including the costs of the cause, have been referred by the Court of Chancery, has power to award costs as between solicitor and client. Mordue v. Palmer, 8 L. R., Ch. 22; 40 L. J., Ch. 8; 23 L. T. 752; 19 W. R. 86.

Setting off.—An arbitrator, under a reference, which directs that the costs of the cause shall abide the event, has no power to direct those costs to be set off against costs in a prior cause, although all matters in difference are referred. Hunsted v. Kidd, 1 Chit. 526.

After Payment of Money into Court.—After a payment of money into court, the parties agreed to refer the settlement of the accounts between them:—Held, that the arbitrator had no power over the costs in the cause up to the payment into court. Stratton v. Green, 1 M. & Scott, 668; 8 Bing. 437.

f. Taxation.

At what Time allowed.—Where upon a reference of a cause and all matters in difference, by articles of agreement, an award is made, under which the costs of the cause and of the award are to be paid by the defendant, the plaintiff is entitled to have the costs taxed without waiting for the period during which the defendant would be at liberty to move to set the award aside. Little v. Newton, 2 Scott, N. R. 159; 1 M. & G. 976.

A cause and all matters in difference between the parties were referred by an order of nisi prius, by which a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, subject to an award; the costs of the cause to abide the event, and the costs of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator ordered that the verdict entered for the plaintiff should stand, and directed that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff the costs of the reference and award:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to have an allocatur for the costs or to sign judgment, until the expiration of the proper time for moving to set aside the award. Jones v. Lees, 10 C. B. 429; 20 L. J., C. P. 69; 15 Jur. 107; S. P., Hobdell v. Miller, 2 Scott, N. R. 163.

In what Cases.—Upon the reference of a cause and all matters in difference, though the arbitrator finds no damages, and orders no damages to be entered, the costs may be taxed upon the award. Taylor v. Marling, 2 M. & G. 55.

What allowed on Taxation.—Where a plaintiff, who did not give distinct notice of attending an arbitrator by counsel, attended by counsel, and refused to consent to an adjournment, except on the defendant's paying the costs of the meeting: the court held the plaintiff not entitled to such costs. Whitley v. Morland, 2 C. & M. 347; 4 Tyr. 255; 2 D. P. C. 249.

Number of Counsel.—It is the practice on taxation of the costs of a reference to allow one counsel only on each side; but this is not an inflexible rule, and each case must depend upon its own particular circumstances. Sinclair v. Great Eastern Railway Company, 5 L. R., C. P. 135; 39 L. J., C. P. 165; 21 L. T. 752; 18 W. R. 491.

The master, on the taxation of the costs of a reference which involved a large sum of money and a long and complicated inquiry, allowed the fees of one only of two counsel retained by the plaintiff, assuming that there was an inflexible rule that only one counsel should be allowed:—Held, that he should review his taxation in order that he might have an opportunity of exercising his discretion in the matter. Id.

Fees.—When a Queen's counsel acts as an arbitrator, the ordinary scale of fees applies as in other cases. Id.

But it is competent to the master, in his discretion, to increase the usual allowance where he thinks that allowance is insufficient. Id.

Several Actions—Same Plaintiff.—Three actions by the same plaintiff were referred, the costs of the reference to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator awarded that each party should pay half the costs of the reference. One attorney attended for all defendants, and the master allowed him one-third of his travelling expenses:—Held, that the taxation was wrong, and that the master should have calculated the costs on both sides, and then have divided them. Day v. Harris, 1 D., N. S. 353.

Costs of Accountant.—On a reference of a cause involving an inquiry into a mass of accounts, an order was made by a judge, on the application of the plaintiff, that an accountant, to be named by the arbitrator, should inspect the defendant's books and take copies or extracts from them relating to the matters in question in them. This was done, and the charges of the accountant were paid by the plaintiff. The result of the investigation and report of the accountant to the arbitrator was that much expense in the inquiry was saved:—Held, that the plaintiff, in whose favour the award was made, was not entitled to have the costs of the accountant taxed against the defendant. Nolan v. Copeman, 8 L. R., Q. B. 84; 42 L. J., Q. B. 44; 27 L. T. 789; 21 W. R. 263.

Waiver of Objection.—A cause and all matters in difference having been referred to arbitration, an award was made directing the payment of a sum by the defendant, together with the costs of the cause and of the award; at the taxation of costs, the allocatur was made by the master, without objection by the defendant, for the aggregate amount of both classes of costs, for which sum, the same day, 4th June, judgment was entered up. The plaintiff having died on the 18th November, a scire facias was sued out on the 12th January following, to which the defendant pleaded on the 19th. On an application made on the 24th, to set aside the judgment, on the ground of its falsity, by reason of its including the costs of the award which were not properly recoverable in the cause:—Held, that the objection resolved itself into a point of irregularity upon the allocatur, which was answered, first, by the consent of the defendant to the master's taxation; and, secondly, by a waiver arising upon the lapse of time permitted to intervene between the period of the allocatur being made and the application. Bignall v. Gale, 1 D., N. S. 497; 4 Scott, N. R. 570; 3 M. & G. 858.

On what Scale Taxed.—An action in contract for 50l. 3s. having been referred to an arbitrator, he awarded the plaintiff 15l. 12s. 6d., and certified "that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action." On taxation, the master held the case to be within the 7th of the directions to taxing masters of Hilary Term, 1853, and taxed on the lower scale:—Held, that such practice was good, for the case was within the enacting words of the direction, not within its exception, and unaffected by its proviso. Smith v. Hailey, 27 L. T. 426; 21 W. R. 76.

An action of trespass was referred, by consent, at nisi prius, and by an order of nisi prius, drawn up in the usual form, the verdict was, by consent, entered for the plaintiffs, with damages 40s., costs 40s.; and, by the like consent, it was also ordered that the costs of the reference and award should be paid by the defendants. The award having been made, the master taxed the costs of the action as between party and party on the ordinary scale; and then proceeded to tax the costs of the reference and award on the same scale, but the plaintiffs objected that the proceedings on the reference were virtually under the Lands Clauses Act, and that the costs ought to be taxed on the scale usually allowed in proceedings under that act:—Held, that the costs which the defendants had stipulated to pay, and which they were bound to pay under the order of nisi prius, were ordinary costs as between party and party, and ought to be taxed on such, and on no other scale. Eccles v. Blackburn (Mayor), 5 C., 30 L. J., Ex. 358.

Proportion of Costs.—The plaintiff instituted a suit to take the accounts of a partnership between himself and the defendant, the terms of the partnership being that the plaintiff was to receive one-twelfth of the profits and to bear one-twelfth of the losses, and that the defendant was to receive and bear the remaining eleven-twelfths. The partnership articles contained an arbitration clause; and an order was made in the suit, under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11, that the matters in difference between the parties be referred to arbitration and the proceedings in the suit stayed, the costs being reserved. Under this order an award was made finding a considerable sum due to the plaintiff:—Held, that the costs of both parties of the suit, reference, and award ought to be taxed and paid as to one-twelfth by the plaintiff and as to eleven-twelfths by the defendant. Newton v. Taylor, 19 L. R., Eq. 14; 23 W. R. 330.

When Taxation Unnecessary.—Where an arbitrator finds the amount of the costs of an award, it is not necessary that they should be taxed previously to the court ordering them to be paid. Dirie v. Alexander, 1 L. M. & P. 338.

Taxing by Arbitrator.—An arbitrator, authorized to tax costs in a cause, allowed an item which it was insisted ought not to have been charged; the court would not refer the matter to the master. Anon. 1 Chit. 38.

When Taxation by Officer may be Ordered.—Upon a reference with a clause, that the submission may be made a rule of court, the arbitrator, under a power to award the costs of the reference and award, may direct such costs to be taxed by the officer of the court, although no cause was pending at the time of the reference. Bhear v. Harradine, 7 Ex. 269; 21 L. J., Ex. 127.

Award sent back—Fresh Taxation.—The costs of a reference had been taxed before the award was sent back to the arbitrator by the court. After the second award the defendant demanded the same costs without any new taxation:—Held, that by the reference back the allocatur became null, and that there ought to have been a fresh taxation after the new award before any demand for costs could be enforced. Johanson v. Latham, 2 L. M. & P. 205; 20 L. J., Q. B. 236.

Practice—Separate Taxations.—Where the costs of the cause are to abide the event, the costs of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator, the practice is for the master to tax each set of costs separately, and give two allocaturs, unless the parties agree that the taxation shall be in one sum. Bower v. Bower, 8 Jur., N. S. 193; 5 L. T. 684.

Order to Review Taxation.—An action upon money counts and for trover was referred to the master, "costs of the cause, reference, and award to abide the event." It was awarded that the defendant had proved his set-off of an equal amount to the plaintiff's claim in the money counts, 37l. 10s.; and that he owed the defendant

2l. 10s. Upon the trover count the plaintiff was awarded 43l. 7s. 7d. The master gave to the plaintiff the costs of the action, to the defendant the costs of proving the plea of set-off, but to neither party the costs of the reference and award. The court refused to review the taxation. Woodhams v. Woodhams, 25 L. T. 460.

A plaintiff declared upon a special contract for the delivery of goods to the defendant, of which he alleged breaches, which were, that the defendant did not pay for goods delivered according to agreement, that he refused to accept goods which were tendered, and as to the remainder, that he did not accept them. There was a count for goods sold. The cause was referred, and the arbitrator ordered the defendant to pay 75l. less 39l. paid into court on the second count; and he also found that certain timber mentioned in the special count was the property of the plaintiff:—Held, that a finding on both counts was involved in this award; and the master having taxed the costs on both issues for the plaintiff, the court refused to send the taxation to be reviewed. Rennie v. Mills, 7 D. P. C. 295; 5 Bing. N. C. 249; 7 Scott, 276; 1 Arn. 534.

Where the master has taxed costs as between attorney and client pursuant to the directions of an award, which directions, it is suggested, are an excess of authority on the part of an arbitrator, the court will not direct the taxation to be reviewed, the proper preliminary step being to move to set aside the award. Bartle v. Muirgrave, 1 D., N. S. 235; 5 Jur. 1661.

Suing for, before Taxation.—Where an umpire appointed under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 125, awarded the amount of compensation and that the costs of the reference should be paid by the local board of health:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action for the costs before taxation. Holdsworth v. Wilson, 4 B. & S. 1; 32 L. J., Q. B. 289; 10 Jur., N. S. 171; 8 L. T. 434; 11 W. R. 733—Ex. Ch.

The right to costs is entirely independent of the taxation of them, and an action can be maintained for the costs of a reference though the amount of such costs has not been previously settled or ascertained by taxation. Metropolitan District Railway Company v. Sharpe, 5 App. Cas. 425; 44 J. P. 716; 50 L. J., Q. B. 14; 43 L. T. 130; 29 W. R. 617—H. L. (E.).

A declaration on an award alleged a direction that the costs of the action, reference and award should be paid by the defendant. Breach, non-payment. Plea, that they were not before action ascertained or taxed:—Held, the award was good and the plea bad. Lewis v. Rossiter, 44 L. J., Ex. 136; 33 L. T. 260; 23 W. R. 832.

II. REFERENCE TO REFEREE UNDER JUDICATURE ACT, 1873, ss. 56, 57.

(See Rules of Supreme Court, Order XXXVI, Rules 45—55.)

1. IN WHAT CASES.

Questions of Account.—Semble, that the "prolonged examination of documents," intended by sect. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873, is an examination required to enable the judge to leave questions of fact to the jury; and not an examination to enable him to determine a question of legal right. Ormerod v. Todmorden Mill Co., 8 Q. B. D. 664; 51 L. J., Q. B. 348; 46 L. T. 669; 30 W. R. 805.

The expression "questions of account" in the 57th section of the Judicature Act, 1873, will receive a large construction. Leigh, In re, Rowcliffe v. Leigh, 3 Ch. D. 292; 24 W. R. 782.

A claim made in an administration suit by a dealer in works of art against the estate of the testator for 19,000l., the aggregate prices of twenty-four items, consisting of pictures and of articles of vertu supplied to the testator in his lifetime, and specified in an account delivered to his executor, was, on the application of the executor under that section, ordered to be tried before the official referee. Ib.

Any question of account which may be referred compulsorily to a master under s. 3 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, may also be referred compulsorily to an official referee under s. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Ward v. Pilley, 5 Q. B. D. 427; 49 L. J., Q. B. 705; 43 L. T. 301; 28 W. R. 937—C. A.

Reference of all Issues in the Action to Official Referee.—In any case in which the court has jurisdiction to refer compulsorily a question of account to an official referee, it has also jurisdiction so to refer all the other issues in the action. Ib.

To an action for money had and received, the defendant pleaded, amongst other matters, that "the plaintiff and defendant still are partners, or co-adventurers in holding certain horse races and race meetings, which said partnership still subsists, and the alleged causes of action arose out of such partnership and not otherwise." An order having been made by a judge at chambers, referring all the issues in the action to an official referee:—Held, that the order was right. Goodwin v. Budden, 42 L. T. 536.

Issues—Not whole Action.—The court or a judge has no power under the Judicature Act, 1873, ss. 56 and 57, to refer the whole action for trial to an official or special referee. Under s. 57 the court may, by consent, refer any question or issue of fact in an action to an official or special referee for trial, but the power of compulsory reference for trial under that section is confined to questions or issues in an action requiring prolonged examination of documents or local investigation, or questions of account, and any other matters so involved with such issues as to be incapable of being tried separately. Longman v. East—Pontifex v. Severn—Mellin v. Monico, 3 C. P. D. 142; 47 L. J., C. P. 211; 38 L. T. 1; 26 W. R. 183—C. A.

Action for Wrongful Dismissal and Matters of Account—Charges of Misconduct.—The plaintiff brought an action against the defendants for damages for wrongful dismissal, for balance of account for money paid to defendants' use, and for an account of profits on sales on which the plaintiff claimed commission. The defendants justified the dismissal, on the ground that the plaintiff had misconducted himself by wilfully disobeying the reasonable orders of defendants, and by habitually neglecting his duties, and by converting to his own use money which he had received to the use of the defendant. By order of a judge at chambers the issues in the action were referred to an official referee pursuant to

s. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873, the statement of defence being amended by omitting the allegations that the plaintiff converted money to his own use:—Held, that the order of the learned judge at chambers was right. Sacker v. Ilagazine, 44 L. T. 308.

Issues involving Charges of Fraud.—A judge has jurisdiction, under s. 57, to refer compulsorily issues which involve questions of fraud affecting the character and reputation of the parties, though, as a general rule, such issues ought not to be referred. Hoch v. Boor, 49 L. J., C. P. 665; 43 L. T. 425—C. A.

An executrix brought an action to set aside for fraud the sale by the defendant to her testator of about 130 pictures for prices amounting in the whole to 50,000*l*. The defence denied the fraud. The plaintiff moved to have the questions referred to a special referee under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 57, on the ground that the examination of the pictures required a scientific investigation, which could not conveniently be had before a jury. The defendant opposed, and stated his wish for a trial by a jury:—Held, that the case was not within the purview of s. 57, so as to give jurisdiction, without the consent of all parties, to send it to a referee; and that if there had been jurisdiction, still as the case involved questions of fraud seriously affecting the character and fortune of the defendant, it ought not, against his will, to be tried otherwise than in open court. Leigh v. Brooks, 5 Ch. D. 592; 46 L. J., Ch. 344; 25 W. R. 401—C. A.

To find Materials on which Court to act.—Any question arising in a cause may be referred by the court or a judge for inquiry or report to an official or special referee, whose duty is not to determine any question in issue, whether of fact or of law, but to find the materials upon which the court is to act. Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik v. Levinstein, 52 L. J., Ch. 704; 48 L. T. 822; 31 W. R. 913.

Preliminary Question of Law to be decided.—A plaintiff, in a suit to ascertain the boundaries between his land and the adjacent land of the defendant, after the commencement of the Judicature Act, gave notice of trial before a judge. At that time no official referees had been appointed as provided by the act; but upon their appointment shortly afterwards, the plaintiff applied by summons for an order that the cause might be tried before one of such referees. Bacon, V.-C., dismissed the summons on the ground that, besides the matters of fact in dispute, a preliminary question of law had been raised upon the pleadings as to the jurisdiction of the court to entertain the suit. Lascelles v. Butt, 2 Ch. D. 588; 35 L. T. 122. Affirmed, (24 W. R. 659—C. A.), on the ground that it was a matter within the judge's discretion.

Damages in Action for Specific Performance.—In an action for specific performance, where, on an inquiry as to damages, it was necessary to examine witnesses, the inquiry was referred to an official referee. Stafford v. Coxon, 25 W. R. 788.

2. THE APPLICATION AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON.

Time for Application.—In a suit to ascertain boundaries the plaintiff gave notice of trial before a judge and obtained an order that the evidence should be taken viva voce at the trial. Five weeks afterwards he applied that the suit might be referred to an official referee, on the ground of saving expense, and that a local investigation was necessary:—Held, that the application was out of time. Lascelles v. Butt, 2 Ch. D. 588; 35 L. T. 122.

This decision was affirmed on appeal, the court holding that it was a matter within the judge's discretion. S. C.; 24 W. R. 659—C. A.

Appeal from Order, to what Court made.—An appeal from a compulsory order of reference, made under s. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873, by a judge, sitting at nisi prius or assizes, must be brought direct to the Court of Appeal. Hoch v. Boor, 49 L. J., C. P. 665; 43 L. T. 425—C. A.

Appeal from Judicial Discretion.—The Court of Appeal has power to review the order made by a judge under sect. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873, who, having jurisdiction to make such order, has in the exercise of his discretion ordered the issues of fact in an action to be tried by an official referee, on the ground that they required prolonged examination of documents and also scientific and local investigation; but the Court of Appeal, whose discretion in such cases is to be substituted for that of the judge, will not exercise such discretion except in a strong case where it clearly thinks the judge has wrongly exercised his discretion, and that an injustice has been done by the order he has so made.—So held by Brett and Holker, L.J.J. (Lord Coleridge, C. J., doubting if the court had jurisdiction to review the discretion of the judge). Ormerod v. Todd-morden Mill Company, 8 Q. B. D. 664; 51 L. J., Q. B. 348; 46 L. T. 669; 30 W. R. 805—C. A.

3. POWERS AND DUTIES OF REFEREE.

Findings—Entering Judgment.—A referee under the Judicature Acts to whom the issues in an action are referred for trial has no power to order judgment to be entered. His findings should be separate on each of the issues submitted to him. Longman v. East, 3 C. P. D. 142; 47 L. J., C. P. 211; 38 L. T. 1; 26 W. R. 183—C. A.

Where Arbitrator by Consent.—When a reference had been ordered to an official referee, and the order of reference was drawn up in the form known as the "Long Order," under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125), and the parties with knowledge of the terms of the order appeared before the referee, who gave his award:—Held, that the referee must be taken to have sat as arbitrator by consent, and that his award was binding on the parties, neither of whom could obtain a new trial. Longman v. East, 3 C. P. D. 142; 47 L. J., C. P. 211; 38 L. T. 1; 26 W. R. 183—C. A.

Jurisdiction of Official Referee to order Production of Documents.—The official referees have no jurisdiction to make an order for the production of documents, the proper course being to take out a summons for the purpose in the chambers of the judge to whom the action is attached. Danvillier v. Myers, 17 Ch. D. 346; 29 W. R. 535.

Discovery.]—The court does not, by directing a reference, deprive itself of the power of making any order which may facilitate the reference, and the judge, not the referee, is the proper person to make an order for discovery of documents which may be necessary for the purposes of the reference. Roucliffe v. Leigh, 4 Ch. D. 661; 46 L. J., Ch. 60; 25 W. R. 56.

Sittings of Referee.]—The words of Ord. XXXVI. r. 30, requiring a referee to sit de die in diem, are directory only, and though a neglect to comply with such requirement would be misconduct in the referee, a party who has at the time acquiesced in such non-compliance cannot move to set aside the award on that ground merely. Robinson v. Robinson, 35 L. T. 337; 24 W. R. 675.

4. THE REPORT AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON.

Form of Report—Reasons.]—A referee under the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, s. 57, is not bound to give his reasons for his findings; he may simply find the affirmative or the negative of the issues, and the issues in an action cannot be sent back to him for re-trial or further consideration merely on the ground that his report does not set out the reasons for his findings. Miller v. Pilling, 9 Q. B. D. 736; 51 L. J., Q. B. 481; 47 L. T. 536—C. A.

An official referee is not required to state reasons for his findings. Walker v. Bunkell, 31 W. R. 138.

— In case of Accounts.]—Where at the trial a certain account arising in the action is ordered to be taken before the official referee, and further consideration is adjourned; the report must not simply state the result of the account, but must set it out, stating what items have been allowed, and what items have been disallowed. Burrard v. Callisher (No. 1), 51 L. J., Ch. 223; 45 L. T. 793; 30 W. R. 321.

Report—Summons to Confirm.]—At the trial of an action it was ordered that certain accounts be taken by the official referee, and that the rest of the trial do stand over until the official referee shall have made his report. The report having been made and filed:—Held, that no "summons to confirm" the report was required before the action was restored to the paper for hearing. Deacon v. Dolby, 51 L. J., Ch. 248; 30 W. R. 317.

Report—Motion for Judgment.]—In an action for an account an order was made under Ord. XXXIII. to take an account, without prejudice to the proceedings in the action generally being carried on. By a subsequent order it was directed that the accounts should be taken by the official referee. The referee made a report finding a sum due from the plaintiff. The plaintiff moved that the report might be set aside and the accounts remitted to the referee, and that he might be directed to state his reasons. The defendant at the same time moved that the report might be confirmed and the plaintiff ordered to pay the sum found due. Kay, J., refused both motions, holding that a motion to confirm the report was unnecessary, that the action ought to be set down for trial, and that the plaintiff could object to the report at the hearing. The defendant appealed:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that the proper course was not to set down the action for trial, but for the defendant to move for judgment on the report, and for the plaintiff to move to set the report aside. Both the orders of Kay, J., were discharged, and the two motions remitted to him to be disposed of on the merits. Walker v. Bunkell, 22 Ch. D. 722; 52 L. J., Ch. 596; 48 L. T. 618; 31 W. R. 661—C. A. Reversing, 31 W. R. 138.

Held, also, that the proviso as to the order to take the accounts being without prejudice to the proceedings in the action generally being carried on ought not to have been inserted. Id.

Application to set aside—Where made—Within what Time made.]—Application to set aside the findings of a referee appointed under s. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873, to try the issues of fact in an action and report to the judge making the order of reference, must be made to a divisional court and not to the judge, as such findings are by s. 58 equivalent to the verdict of a jury, and can only be set aside by the court:—Quære, whether the time for making the application runs from the time when the report is made to the judge. Cooke v. Newcastle and Gateshead Water Company, 10 Q. B. D. 332; 52 L. J., Q. B. 337.

Where on a reference under s. 57 of the Judicature Act the unsuccessful party desires to question the findings of the referee, the proper course is to move the court on notice under Ord. LIII. to the other party, and such a motion need not be made within the time limited by Ord. XXXIX. r. 1A, for moving for a new trial in an action tried by a jury. Dyke v. Cunnell, 11 Q. B. D. 180; 47 L. T. 174; 31 W. R. 747.

Power of Court to alter or vary Decision.]—When a judge has referred the amount of damages in an action to a special referee, he may accept the decision wholly or partially, or, if dissatisfied with it, he may wholly disregard it, or remit to the referee for amendment, but he has no power to alter or vary it. The Master of the Rolls referred the amount of damages to a special referee, and on the report being made, being dissatisfied with the principle on which the referee had proceeded, assessed the damages himself, using for the purpose the shorthand notes of the evidence heard before the referee. The Court of Appeal reversed his decision, and remitted the case to the referee to rehear the matter, with liberty to report specially on any facts. Dunkirk Colliery Company v. Lezer, 9 Ch. D. 20; 39 L. T. 239; 26 W. R. 841—C. A.

Court may send back Report.]—The court on the trial of any action may require an explanation from the official referee or remit, or otherwise deal with his report. Walker v. Bunkell, 31 W. R. 138.

Remitting Report—Within what time Application made.]—Where an official referee has made his report, any application under Ord. XXXVI. r. 34, must be made within the time limited for moving against the verdict of a jury. Sullivan v. Rivington, 28 W. R. 372.

There is no time limited by the Judicature Acts, nor will any time be laid down by the court, within which a motion must be made to remit for further consideration the report of an official referee on an account referred to him. Walker v. Bunkell, 31 W. R. 138.

Length of Notice of Application to vary Report.—Though no time is fixed for giving notice of an application to vary a referee's report, on the analogy of the rule with regard to motions, two clear days' notice should be given. Brook, In re, Sykes v. Brook, 50 L. J., Ch. 744; 45 L. T. 172; 29 W. R. 821.

Application, how made.—Where a referee under the Judicature Act, 1873, has made his report, an application to send the case back to him should be made on notice of motion and not ex parte in the first instance. Graves v. Taylor, 27 W. R. 412.

Where, in an action which has by the judgment been referred to the official referee and in which further consideration has been adjourned, either party desires to vary the referee's report, he should serve the opposite party with a notice of motion to vary, such notice to be given for the usual motion day. The motion will then be adjourned, as a matter of course, to come on with the further consideration. Where further consideration has not been adjourned, the proceedings to vary may be either by motion or summons. Burrard v. Callisher (No. 2), 19 Ch. D. 644; 51 L. J., Ch. 510; 46 L. T. 341; 30 W. R. 540.

Seemingly, the findings of a referee in his report to the court cannot be questioned upon motion for judgment upon the report, but are matter for appeal in the ordinary course. Mansfield Union v. Wright, 46 J. P. 200.

At the trial of an administration action, certain inquiries were by consent ordered to be made before an official referee, and further consideration was adjourned. When the action came on for further consideration, the plaintiff applied to have the referee's report varied, though he had given no notice to the defendant of the application:—Held, that the application must be heard; but that, if the defendant desired, the further consideration must be adjourned for him to have time to meet the application. Brook, In re, Sykes v. Brook, 50 L. J., Ch. 744; 45 L. T. 172; 29 W. R. 821.

Affidavits.—Upon a motion to set aside or vary the judgment in a case tried before an official referee, an affidavit, or some evidence of what took place at the trial, must be furnished to the court. Stubbs v. Boyle, 2 Q. B. D. 124; 46 L. J., C. P. 136; 35 L. T. 906; 25 W. R. 184.

At the trial of an action certain inquiries were by consent ordered to be made before an official referee. When the action came on for further consideration, an application was made to have the referee's report varied:—Held, that no evidence of what took place before the referee need be produced. Brook, In re, Sykes v. Brook, 50 L. J., Ch. 744; 45 L. T. 172; 29 W. R. 821.

Order is Interlocutory.—An order to alter a special referee's report is interlocutory. Dunkirk Hall Colliery Company v. Lever, 9 Ch. D. 20; 39 L. T. 239; 26 W. R. 841—C. A.

Setting aside—Grounds.—The words of Ord. XXXVI., r. 30, requiring a referee to sit de die in diem, are directory only, and though a neglect to comply with such requirement would be misconduct in the referee, a party who has at the time acquiesced in such non-compliance cannot move to set aside the award on that ground merely. Robinson v. Robinson, 35 L. T. 337; 24 W. R. 675.

Costs.—An action was brought against the executor and trustee of a will by the beneficiaries, in which they alleged he had committed certain breaches of trust, and claimed the administration of the estate, the appointment of a new trustee, and of a receiver. At the trial an order was made by consent, by which certain inquiries, consisting of the common administration inquiries, and others with reference to the alleged breaches of trust, were referred to an official referee. The referee reported altogether in favour of the defendant, and the cause came on for further consideration:—Held, that the plaintiffs must pay all the costs of the action up to and including the hearing on further consideration, except such costs as would have been incurred in obtaining a simple administration judgment. Brook, In re, Sykes v. Brook, 50 L. J., Ch. 744; 45 L. T. 172; 29 W. R. 821.

A referee in his report on a claim comprising many items, some of which were decided for and the rest against the claimant, made no mention of the costs of the reference. The judge made an order adopting the report, and leaving the costs of the reference to be dealt with by the master:—Held, that the judge was not bound to give any direction to the master as to the principle on which he should deal with the costs. Leigh, In re, Rowcliffe v. Leigh, 26 W. R. 729—C. A.

The costs of referring a question arising in an action to a special referee, are usually costs in the cause. Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik v. Levinstein, 52 L. J., Ch. 704; 48 L. T. 822; 31 W. R. 913.

ARCHES, COURT OF.

ARCHITECT.

Action to recover Fees in respect of Plans.—The owner of a house desiring to make alterations, employed an architect to prepare plans. The architect having done so, employed the plaintiff, a surveyor, to take out the quantities, which were lithographed, and sent to various builders—including the defendant and his son, who were in partnership—to invite tenders, the circular informing them that the builder whose contract was accepted should pay the plaintiff's fees. The defendant and his son had themselves, previously to the employment of an architect, prepared a plan for the owner, but one with which he was not satisfied. The tender of the defendant and his son was the lowest; but, it being greatly in excess of the expenditure contemplated by the owner, the plaintiff prepared a bill of reduction, but this reduced plan the owner also considered too expensive, and then employed the defendant (whose son had since died) to execute a modification of the original plan prepared in his office. The works were eventually executed by the defendant under a contract, in which it was agreed between the owner and the defendant that the defendant should not be liable for the plaintiff's fees. The plaintiff brought an action for his fees against the defendant, relying on a custom of the building trade, by which the builder whose tender is accepted, or who is employed to carry out the plans, or any modification of them, is directly liable for the surveyor's fees, the owner being liable, if the work is abandoned altogether, or he adopts an entirely independent plan. Evidence to support this custom was given, but one of the plaintiff's witnesses stated that, in his opinion, the liability depended on the agreement between the owner and the builder. The defendant's foreman stated that the works were carried out according to the defendant's own original plan, and that the plaintiff's calculations were not used at all for them. The plaintiff's witnesses stated that there was the strongest similarity between the work as carried out and the plaintiff's reduced plan:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Taylor v. Hall, 4 Ir. R., C. L. 467.

Mistake of Contractor.—A builder made a tender undertaking to sign a contract to execute for a sum works described in the rough sketches and verbal explanations of an architect. The architect subsequently sent by special messenger to the builder a contract to perform for the sum named the works delineated and described in the plans and specifications thereto annexed. These differed materially from the works described in the rough sketches and verbal explanations on which the builder had made his tender. The builder, however, signed the contract without any examination, and completed the works according to the plans annexed to it. He afterwards filed a bill in equity claiming to have an account taken of the works executed by him on the basis on which he had made his tender:—Held, that as the mistake under which he had signed the contract was due to his own negligence, and he had not taken proceedings for rectifying the contract as soon as he had discovered it, he was not entitled to any relief in this respect. Kimberley v. Dick, 13 L. R., Eq. 1; 41 L. J., Ch. 38; 25 L. T. 476; 20 W. R. 49.

Non-disclosure of Contract or that price limited.—A building contract contained a clause, appointing the architect arbitrator in respect of extra works; the architect had guaranteed to his employer that the total cost should not exceed a specific sum, but that fact had not been disclosed to the builder at the time when he signed the contract:—Held, that the guarantee was a material fact tending to influence the architect's decision, and as it was not disclosed to the builder, he was not bound by the submission to the architect's arbitration, and the court would perform the part of arbitrator in the matter. Id.

Plans and Specifications no Warranty.—A person asking for tenders for the execution of a certain work prepares plans and a specification for the information of intending contractors; he does not thereby enter into any implied warranty that the work can be successfully executed according to such plans and specification. Thorn v. London (Mayor, &c.), 1 App. Cas. 120; 45 L. J., Ex. 487; 34 L. T. 545; 24 W. R. 932—H. L.

Semble, that the remedy (if any) of the contractor, in the event of his not being able to execute the work according to the plans and specifications, will be for compensation as upon a quantum meruit. Id.

The mere employment of an architect to prepare plans and a specification for a house, and to procure a builder to erect it, does not render the employer responsible for the accuracy of the bill of quantities by such architect to the builder. Scrivenor v. Pask, 18 C. B., N. S. 785.

Action against, for Collusion.—An action will lie by a builder against an architect who, fraudulently and in collusion with the builder's employer, refuses to certify that he is satisfied with the work done, whereby the builder is unable to obtain payment, if the architect has an interest in the contract between the builder and his employer. Ludbrook v. Barrett, 46 L. J., C. P. 798; 36 L. T. 616; 25 W. R. 649.

Semble, that such an action would lie without proof of special damage. Id.

Certificate when Conclusive.—An English company, who owned a railway in Russia, entered into a contract for the manufacture and delivery to them of rails for their railway. The contract provided that a sample should be sent to the company's engineer for approval before the commencement of the work. It was, however, "to be expressly understood that such approval is not in any way to relieve the contractor from any of the conditions or stipulations contained in this specification." During the progress of the work tests were to be applied by the engineer at his discretion, and the entire contract was to be executed in every respect to the satisfaction of the engineer, "who shall have the power of rejecting any rails or fishing plates he may disapprove on any ground whatever, and whose decision on any points of doubt or dispute that may arise in reference to this contract shall be final and binding on all parties. . . . The engineer will inspect, either personally or by deputy, every stage of the process of the manufacture at the works. . . . This examination at the works is not in any way to commit the company to the approval and acceptance of any rails or fishing plates, which, when delivered, shall not be strictly in accordance with the drawings and specifications." After the rails had been delivered to the company and paid for by them, and more than half of them laid down in Russia, it was discovered that they were defective. An action being brought by the company for breach of contract :—Held, that it could not be maintained, as the contract shewed that the parties intended the final expression of the engineer's satisfaction with the entire contract to be conclusive. Dunaberg and Witepsk Railway Company v. Hopkins, Gilkes and Company, 36 L. T. 733.

In an action on a builder's contract, which provided that all the works should be left complete and clear, to the satisfaction of the architect, and did not contain any provision for payment by instalments :—Held, 1st. That the completion of the works to the satisfaction of the architect was a condition precedent to the builder's right to recover on foot of the contract. 2ndly. That he was not entitled to recover for the value of work done, as to which while incomplete, the architect had expressed approval so far as then partially executed, but which was not subsequently completed to the architect's satisfaction. Richardson v. Mahon, 4 L. R. Ir. C. P. 486. See other cases, sub tit. WORK AND LABOUR.

Recovery of Claim.]—See WORK AND LABOUR.

ARMORIAL BEARINGS.

Grant of.]—A. obtained from the Heralds' College a grant of arms, to be borne by him and the descendants of his brother. His brother had two sons, the elder of whom was heir-at-law of A., and the younger his executor with another person. A. bequeathed all his household goods and effects to his wife, and she took possession of the grant of arms :—Held, that the two nephews of A. had not such an exclusive interest in the grant of arms as to enable them to maintain it against the wife of A. Stubbs v. Stubbs, 1 H. & C. 257; 31 L. J., Ex. 510.

Seemingly, that even if the executors were entitled to the grant of arms, the court could not amend the writ of summons so as to give judgment for the one plaintiff who was executor, since the other executor ought to have been joined. Ib.

1. REGULAR OFFICERS.

a. Rights and Duties.

Navy—Carrying Treasure.]—The flag officers of a fleet have no right to any share in the gratuity of one-half per cent. which is given to the captains of ships of war for carrying public treasure on board their ships. Montague v. Janczerin, 3 Taunt. 442.

It is illegal for the commander of one of his Majesty's ships of war to carry on board her, on freight, the bullion of private merchants, without an order from an authority competent to command him to perform that service. Brisbane v. Daeres, 5 Taunt. 143.

A flag officer commanding on a foreign station is not entitled to any share of the freight paid by private merchants to the captain of a ship of war for the conveyance of private treasure on board the ship to this country, in pursuance of orders issued to the captain by the flag officer, under the authority of the Admiralty. Warren v. Shirreff, 5 M. & S. 32.

The captain of a ship in the king's service received at Gibraltar bullion to be brought to this country for freight, giving a bill of lading for it; the ship arrived, but the bullion was lost :—Held, that whether it was illegal or not under 22 Geo. 2, c. 33, s. 24, for the captain to receive the bullion on board, at all events he was answerable for the loss of it. Hatchwell v. Cooke, 2 Marsh. 293; 6 Taunt. 577.

An action lies against the commander of a ship of war who takes the bullion of a private merchant on board, for not safely keeping and delivering it. Hodgson v. Fullarton, 4 Taunt. 787.

Officer's Right to Vote.]—An officer was in the habit of always living with his mother when on leave from his regiment, and had actually resided three months previously to the 31st July with her :—Held, that as he could not return at his own option, but only with the permission of his commanding officer, he was not entitled to vote. Ford v. Hart, 9 L. R., C. P. 273; 43 L. J., C. P. 24; 29 L. T. 685; 22 W. R. 159; 2 Hopw. & C. 167.

Indian Officers.]—An officer in her Majesty's Indian army, permanently residing and in active service in India, will not be compelled to find security for costs. Whittall v. Campbell, 5 H. & N. 601; 29 L. J. Ex. 326; 6 Jur., N. S. 485; 2 L. T. 251.

Before the transfer of the government of the Indian possessions to the crown, military officers in the service of the East India Company were objects of their military laws so long as they remained on pay and in service. Vertue v. Clive (Lord), 4 Burr. 2472. See Douglas, In re, 3 G. & D. 509; 3 Q. B. 825.

And they had not a right to resign whenever they pleased. Parker v. Clive (Lord), 4 Burr. 2419.

An officer, commanding forces of her Majesty and of the East India Company in India, has no such legal right, by statute or otherwise, to his pay as entitles him (in the absence of any specific undertaking or acknowledgment) to a mandamus calling upon the company to discharge arrears, though he has always received his pay from the company, and their practice has been to discharge it monthly. Napier, Ex parte, 18 Q. B. 692; 21 L. J., Q. B. 332.

On Disbandment of Regiment.]—A colonel of a regiment, on full pay, was appointed civil superintendent of a colony, and "to command such of his majesty's subjects as are now armed, or may hereafter arm, for the defence of the settlers." After acting both as military commander and civil superintendent some years, his regiment was disbanded, and he was reduced to half-pay; but still was recognized in both capacities by the authorities at home and in the colony:—Held, that his appointment to command all persons armed for the defence of the colony gave him a right to command all the king's troops there, and that he did not lose that right by the disbandment of his regiment, and his reduction to half-pay; and, therefore, he was justified in putting under arrest, for disobedience to orders, a commissioned officer on full-pay, holding equal regimental rank with himself. Bradley v. Arthur, 6 D. & R. 413; 4 B. & C. 292.

Dismissal of Officers.]—Every officer in the army holds his office subject to the will of the crown, and is liable to be dismissed at any moment without cause assigned; and there is no such thing as a military appointment permanent in the sense of being tenable for life, or until the holder is disqualified by misconduct or incapacity from fulfilling the duties attached to it. Tufnell, In re, 3 Ch. D. 164; 45 L. J., Ch. 731; 34 L. T. 838; 24 W. R. 915.

Therefore, when a medical officer in the army was, at his request, and on condition of waiving his right to promotion, appointed to the permanent medical charge of the military prison at Dublin:—Held, first, that as a military officer he was subject to the rules and regulations of the service, and the court had no jurisdiction on a petition of right or any other proceeding to inquire into the circumstances under which he ceased to hold the office. Id.

Held, secondly, that the office, like all others in the army, was only tenable durante bene placito. Id.

The East India Company, before 21 & 22 Vict. c. 106, when the government of India was transferred to the crown, had the absolute power to dismiss or compel the retirement of an officer in the Indian army at the will and pleasure of the company, and such power being in the nature of a crown prerogative could not be waived by contract between the company and its officers. Grant v. Secretary of State for India, 2 C. P. D. 445; 46 L. J., C. P. 681; 37 L. T. 188; 25 W. R. 848.

An action for removing an officer does not lie against the secretary of state for India, as the act of removal was not within the cognizance of a court of law, the East India Company and afterwards the crown having an absolute power to remove the officer at will and pleasure. Id.

Held, also, that the defendant was not liable for libel by reason of the publication of the order of removal in the Gazette, at all events when not alleged to have been published by him maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause. Id.

An action against a secretary of state for war, a lord lieutenant (commandant of the militia of the district), and a colonel of a regiment of militia, for causing, by means of false charges, the removal of the plaintiff from the office of lieutenant-colonel of the regiment, cannot be maintained unless they acted dishonestly, or without any belief in the truth of the charges, and from bad and improper motives. Dickson v. Combermere (Viscount), 3 F. & F. 527. And see Freer v. Marshall, 4 F. & F. 485.

Grant of Booty by Royal Warrant to Secretary of State "in Trust" to distribute.]—Her Majesty by royal warrant "granted" booty of war to the secretary of state for India in council "in trust" to distribute amongst the persons found entitled to share it by the decree of the judge of the Court of Admiralty, to whom the matter had been referred by the sovereign for that purpose, with a direction that doubts should be finally determined by the secretary of state unless her Majesty should otherwise order. An action having been brought against the secretary of state for India in council by K., on behalf of himself and all the other parties entitled, alleging that a portion only of the fund had been distributed, and claiming an account and the distribution of the residue:—Held (reversing the decision of Hall, V.-C.), that the warrant did not operate as a transfer of property or create a trust; and that the defendant, being merely the agent of the sovereign to distribute the fund, was not liable to account to any of the parties found entitled. Kinlock v. Secretary of State for India in Council, 15 Ch. D. 1; 49 L. J., Ch. 571; 42 L. T. 667; 28 W. R. 619—C. A.

Carriage—Exemption from Toll.]—By s. 86 of the Mutiny Act, 39 Vict. c. 8, a toll collector is made liable to a penalty if he shall demand and receive toll "for any carriages or horses belonging to her Majesty, or employed in her service, under the provisions of this act." By s. 68, for the regular provision of carriages for her Majesty's forces and their baggage in their marches, power is given to constables, upon warrants issued by justices within their several jurisdictions, to provide carriages and horses, for employment in her Majesty's service; and the section proceeds to enact how and under what circumstances this can be done. An officer in her Majesty's service, in pursuance of an order to proceed from his official residence at one place to another in the Isle of Wight, made a part of the journey in uniform in his own dogcart, drawn by his own horse, and upon arrival at a toll bar he was charged a toll in respect of his carriage, which he paid under protest. It was necessary that he should have a carriage to take several official books and things he was directed by order to take to his destination, and if he had hired a carriage the cost of hiring would have been allowed to him. Having been convicted by justices under s. 86 for taking this toll:—Held, that s. 86 only exempted carriages employed under and by virtue of s. 68, and that the carriage in question was therefore not employed in her Majesty's service under the provisions of the act, and that the conviction was accordingly wrong. Hinds v. Thring, 36 L. T. 216.

Sect. 72 of the Mutiny Act of 1864, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 3, which exempted from liability to toll her Majesty's officers and soldiers on duty, and on their march, from the payment of any duties and tolls while passing along or over any road or bridge, did not apply to a floating bridge kept in its proper place by parallel chains laid across the bed of the river and propelled from one side of the river to the other side by means of steam power. Ward v. Gray, 34 L. J., M. C. 146; 11 Jur., N. S. 738; 12 L. T. 305; 13 W. R. 653.

b. Actions against.

Superior Officer.—An inferior officer cannot maintain an action against his superior officer in respect of any matter done by such superior officer in the discharge of his duty, but he must pursue the mode of redress prescribed by the articles of war. Dawkins v. Paulet (Lord), 5 L. R., Q. B. 94; 39 L. J., Q. B. 53; 21 L. T. 584; 18 W. R. 336.

A military person cannot maintain an action against his officer for acts done by or under orders from his superiors, which they would have a right to give, and which he would be bound by military law to obey, unless, at all events, he has himself caused and procured such orders by means of reports or representations maliciously, or for some sinister and improper motive, and also without any reasonable or probable ground. And it is not enough, in order to shew malice, that the report is in some respects untrue in point of fact, unless it also appears to have been wilfully untrue, and without any reasonable ground. Keighly v. Bell, 4 F. & F. 763.

The circumstances that a person, having been arrested under such orders with a view to his trial, was detained in custody by the defendant for a considerable period without being brought to trial (orders to bring him to trial not having been received), and that during his confinement the nature of his custody was changed from open to close arrest, on representations from the superior civil authorities, and that his release was so arranged with them as to facilitate his arrest on civil process for a large debt due to the crown, are not sufficient evidence of any bad or sinister motive, such as would sustain an action, either by way of false imprisonment or malicious prosecution. Id.

An action lies by an inferior military officer against his superior officer (both being under martial law), who imprisons him for disobedience to an order made under colour, but not within the scope of military authority; although the imprisonment is followed by a trial by a court-martial. Warden v. Bailey, 4 Taunt. 67; and see S. C. (in error), nom. Bailey v. Warden, 4 M. & S. 400; and Dawkins v. Rokeby (Lord), infra.

A, being a captain in the navy, is accused by his commander-in-chief of neglect of duty, disobedience to orders, &c.; and being tried by a court-martial is honourably acquitted. A. then brings an action against his commander for a malicious prosecution:—Quere, will such an action lie? Sutton v. Johnstone, (in error), 1 Bro. P. C. 76; 1 T. R. 493, 784. See Warden v. Bailey, 4 Taunt. 88, 89.

In an action against a commanding officer of the guards, for maliciously procuring the discharge of the plaintiff, a private soldier, it appearing that the commanding officer had absolute power to discharge private soldiers, and had so discharged the plaintiff, an amendment was directed, so stating the fact; and held that, there being reasonable ground for suspecting the plaintiff of felony, which had been committed, and the defendant having acted bonâ fide, he was entitled to the verdict. Freer v. Marshall, 4 F. & F. 485; and see Dickson v. Combermere, 3 F. & F. 527.

Reducing.—An action will not lie for reducing a sergeant of the guards to a common soldier in Germany, the event having taken place out of the king's dominions. Barwis v. Keppel, 2 Wils. 314.

Evidence before Military Court is privileged.]

—An action will not lie against a witness for what he says when giving evidence before a court of justice. The same principle applies where a military man is bound to appear and give evidence before a military court of inquiry. Dawkins v. Rokeby (Lord), 7 L. R., H. L. 744; 45 L. J., Q. B. 8; 33 L. T. 196; 23 W. R. 931.

A military court of inquiry may not be strictly a judicial tribunal; but where such court has been assembled under the orders of the general commanding in chief in conformity with the Queen's regulations for the government of the army, a witness who gives evidence thereat stands in the same position as a witness giving evidence before a judicial tribunal. Id.

Where the commander-in-chief directed a military inquiry to be held, to investigate the conduct of a commissioned officer in the army, who afterwards sued the president of such court of inquiry for a libel stated to be contained in his report, and transmitted by him to the commander-in-chief:—Held, that such a report was a privileged communication, and properly rejected as evidence at the trial, and that an office copy thereof was also inadmissible. Home v. Bentinck (Lord), 4 Moore, 563; 2 B. & B. 130—Ex. Ch.

Kidnapping Act—Seizure of Vessel.—By the Kidnapping Act, 1872, s. 3, vessels carrying native labourers of the South Sea Islands, not being part of the crew, must have a licence; by s. 6, vessels carrying native labourers without a licence are subject to the provisions of s. 16; by s. 9, to detain or confine a native for the purpose of removing him from one place to another is declared to be felony; by s. 16, any vessel suspected upon reasonable grounds of committing an offence against the 9th section may be detained; by s. 20, no damages shall be payable and no officer shall be responsible for the detention or seizure of a vessel in pursuance of the act. Before the passing of the Kidnapping Act, 1872, the plaintiff's vessel sailed on a voyage to the South Sea Islands for the purpose of fishing; her master hired native labourers, and after the fishing was over the vessel was engaged in carrying the natives home when she was seized by a man-of-war, of which the defendant was commander. At the time of the seizure the defendant bonâ fide believed that there was reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence had been committed against the act:—Held, no action would lie against the defendant. Burns v. Nowell, 5 Q. B. D. 444; 49 L. J., Q. B. 468; 43 L. T. 342; 29 W. R. 39; 44 J. P. 828—C. A.

Subsistence of Troop.—A captain of a troop during the time of his absence, and while another officer is in the actual command of it, and by whom the orders for subsistence are issued, and the subsistence money is received from government, is not liable to pay for subsistence furnished to the men, though he was entitled to a profit upon the sum issued on that account, and the troop still continued under his military orders. Myrtle v. Beaver, 1 East, 135.

Nor is the captain of a troop for which forage is furnished by the orders of a clerk appointed by such captain, liable for such forage, though present with the troop at the time, if it does not appear that he had received money for this purpose from the paymaster, to whom it is issued by government, and upon whom the captain is entitled to draw for a certain sum, regulated by the returns of the preceding month. Rice v. Chute, 1 East, 579.

Otherwise, if at the time he had received the money from the paymaster. Rice v. Eeritt, 1 East, 583, n. And see Davis v. Edgar, 4 Taunt. 63.

Knapsacks.—The liability of the colonel of a regiment for knapsacks furnished to the regiment by his order, depends upon the question whether they were supplied upon his personal credit. Where the tradesman who furnishes necessaries to a regiment, looks to the regimental fund as the medium through which he is to obtain payment, though by the assistance of the colonel, the latter is not personally responsible. Prosser v. Allen, Gow, 117. And a new trial was granted after a verdict on a contrary supposition.

Share of Mess.—The officers of a regimental mess are only separately liable, each for his own share. Brown v. Doyle, 3 Camp. 51, n.

Regimental School.—The colonel of a regiment has no authority to order his sergeant to pay money towards lighting and warming a regimental school, and schoolmaster's salary. Warden v. Bailey, 4 Taunt. 67; and see S. C. (in error), nom. Bailey v. Warden, 4 M. & S. 400.

User of Rifle Ranges.—Action against a lieutenant-general in command of troops to restrain an alleged nuisance to a neighbouring proprietor by the noise and vibration caused by the rifle practice of the troops under his command. The land on which the practice took place was vested in the secretary of state for war, and by various acts of parliament authority was given to use the land for military purposes. There was no allegation in the statement of claim that the defendant threatened to continue the nuisance, or that the military use of the land was unreasonable. It appeared also by the statement of claim that the defendant was not the owner of the land:—Held, that a threat to continue the nuisance was necessary in order to obtain an injunction; that the secretary of state for war was a necessary party; and that, as the land was vested in the secretary of state for war for military purposes by act of parliament, the court had no authority to interfere with his discretion, unless it could be proved that the use to which the land was put was, even for military purposes, unreasonable. Hawley v. Steele, 6 Ch. D. 521; 46 L. J., Ch. 782; 37 L. T. 625.

c. Pay, Commission, &c.

Pay, Stopping.—The king may at any time stop the half-pay of an officer in the army, by signifying his pleasure that it shall no longer be paid. Macdonald v. Steele, Peake, 175.

— Assignment.—The future half-pay of an officer is not assignable. Lidderdale v. Montrose (Duke), 4 T. R. 248; and see Flarty v. Odium, 3 T. R. 681.

Neither is the full pay of a military officer. Barwick v. Reade, 1 H. Bl. 627.

An assignment of the half-pay of an officer in the army is bad in law and in equity. Stone v. Lidderdale, 2 Anst. 533.

Though an officer's half-pay is not assignable at law, yet the use of it may be assigned in equity; and, when so assigned, the assignor cannot maintain an action, as money had and received to his use. Stuart v. Tucker, 2 W. Bl. 1137.

Acknowledging Receipt.—A plaintiff being representative of a deceased officer of artillery, of which corps the defendants were paymasters, they delivered to him an account current, in which they acknowledged themselves to have received, from 1806 to 1820, pay according to an increased rate allowed by an order of the Board of Ordnance, dated August 28th, 1806:—Held, that they could not, in 1821, be permitted to say that this admission was by mistake, as, in 1816, the Board of Ordnance had announced, that, by the true construction of the order of 1806, persons in the situation of the deceased were not entitled to the benefit of it, this announcement of the board never having been communicated to the deceased by the defendants till 1821. Skyring v. Greenwood, 6 D. & R. 401; 4 B. & C. 281; 1 C. & P. 517.

Mortgaging Commission.—An officer in the army cannot pledge or mortgage his commission. Collyer v. Fallon, 1 Turn. & Russ. 459.

The proceeds of the future sale of a commission can be assigned. Suffolk (Earl) v. Cox, 36 L. J., Ch. 591; 16 L. T. 374; 15 W. R. 732.

A lieutenant applied for permission to sell his commission. The purchase-money was paid by the intending purchasers to the regimental agent:—Held, that notice to the agent of an assignment of the purchase-money before it was received was of no avail. Ib.

A commission cannot itself be charged, but only its proceeds when realized; therefore incumbrances take priority according to the order of their notices to the army agent given after the proceeds are in the agent's hands. Boss v. Hopkinson, 18 W. R. 725.

— Priorities.—Several incumbrancers, giving notice to the agents on the morning when the proceeds were first payable, at the opening of their office, take according to the order of the dates of their incumbrances being effected. Ib.

An officer covenanted to assign to trustees for his creditors the proceeds of the future sale of his commission. Before the sale the trustees gave notice of this assignment to the army agents of the officer. Afterwards the officer was adjudicated a bankrupt, and subsequently to his bankruptcy his commission was sold, and the proceeds received by his agents, and handed over by them to his assignee in bankruptcy. Upon a bill filed by the trustees of the deed of assignment against the assignee:—Held, that since they had done all they could do to perfect the assignment to them, they were entitled to the proceeds of the commission in priority to the assignee. Glover v. Moore, 39 L. J., Ch. 98; 21 L. T. 815.

— Notices, when Given.—When an officer retires from her Majesty's service, the amount in respect of his commission to which he is entitled under 34 & 35 Vict. c. 86, s. 3, "upon his retirement," though it has been previously lodged by the Army Purchase Commissioners with the army agents, and by them entered in their books under the officer's name, is not the money of the officer so as to be capable of being affected by notice from an incumbrancer to the army agents until the retirement is gazetted. So, where a first incumbrancer gave notice after the money was transferred by the Army Purchase Commissioners to the agents, and again gave notice five days after the Gazette. Second and third incumbrancers gave simultaneous notices on the day after the Gazette:—Held, that the order of priorities was: 1. Second incumbrancer; 2. Third incumbrancer; 3. First incumbrancer. Johnstone v. Cox, 19 Ch. D. 17; 45 L. T. 657; 30 W. R. 114—C. A. Affirming 16 Ch. D. 571; 50 L. J., Ch. 216; 43 L. T. 690; 29 W. R. 351.

The costs of all parties were ordered to be paid out of the fund. Id.

A lieutenant in 1870 assigned to the plaintiff the money to arise from the sale of his commission, and made other incumbrances upon it. The full purchase-money was 700*l.*, 250*l.* of which was paid by the succeeding lieutenant, and 450*l.* by the crown, who absorbed the ensigncy. The sum of 250*l.* was paid to the army agents before the 9th May, 1871. On the 9th May, 1871, notice of the retirement was given in the Gazette to date from the 10th. The plaintiff and D., another incumbrancer, gave notice to the army agents of their claims on the 10th. On the 13th May the army agents received an order from the Horse Guards directing them to transfer from the reserve fund 450*l.* to the retiring officer's account as the price of the ensigncy absorbed by the crown. D. then gave a second notice of his charge:—Held, that, previously to the 13th May, the army agents were not in a position to receive notice affecting the 450*l.*, and that as to this sum D.'s claims had priority to that of the plaintiff. Addison v. Cox, 8 L. R., Ch. 76; 42 L. J., Ch. 291; 23 L. T. 45; 21 W. R. 180.

An officer in the army, who had created several charges on the proceeds of the sale of his commission, was gazetted on the 7th December as having retired from his regiment by sale of his commission. The proceeds of the sale were lodged with the army agents on the same day, but the amount, after deducting regimental debts, did not become payable to the officer till the following morning. At half-past five p.m. on the 7th of December, after business hours, one of the incumbrancers left at the office of the army agents a written notice of his charge. On the opening of the office at nine o'clock on the following morning, several other incumbrancers served the army agents with notices of their charges:—Held, that the notice left on the evening of the 7th December must be taken to have been served simultaneously with the other notices, as it was not really received by the army agents until the following morning. Calisher v. Forbes, 7 L. R., Ch. 109; 41 L. J., Ch. 56; 25 L. T. 772; 20 W. R. 853.

Held, also, that, as all the notices must be taken to have been served simultaneously, the incumbrancers were entitled to rank according to the dates of their charges. Id.

One of the charges extended to further advances:—Held, that the incumbrancer holding that charge was entitled to tack on to it all further advances made by him without notice of any prior charges, but that he was not entitled to tack on a charge bought up from another incumbrancer. Id.

An officer in the army covenanted to assign to the trustees of a settlement any moneys which he might receive from the sale of his commission, and subsequently executed a second covenant to assign the proceeds to another person who had no notice of the settlement. The second assignee gave the first notice to the army agent of the regiment, but the trustees also gave notice before the fund reached the army agent's hands:—Held, that the trustees had priority. Buller v. Plunkett, 1 Johns. & H. 441; 30 L. J., Ch. 641; 4 L. T. 737.

— Over Marriage Settlement.—An officer, by his marriage settlement, covenanted that any moneys to be received from the sale of his commission should be paid over to the trustees. Afterwards, and before he obtained leave to sell out, he charged the proceeds of the sale with the payment of moneys due to the agents of his regiment, who had no notice of the settlement. Notice of the settlement was subsequently given to the agents. The officer afterwards sold out, and the agents received the regulation price of the commission from the purchasing officer:—Held, that their charge upon the proceeds of the commission had priority over that of the trustees. Somers v. Cox, 33 Beav. 634; 33 L. J., Ch. 490; 10 Jur., N. S. 351; 10 L. T. 181; 12 W. R. 590.

Advance by Army Agents—Power to set off Balance due from Amount received as Value of Commission.—K., an officer in the army, mortgaged to R., to secure 5,000*l.*, all moneys which should be realized by sale of his commission. In December, 1877, K. obtained leave to retire from the army, and his commission was valued at 3,000*l.*, which on the 6th of December, 1877, was paid by the Paymaster-General to C. & Co., the army agents of the regiment, and was carried to the deposit account kept by C. & Co. with the Army Purchase Commissioners, there to remain till K.'s retirement was gazetted. K. kept an account current with C. & Co. as his bankers, which was overdrawn to the amount of 647*l.* K.'s retirement was gazetted on the evening of the 18th of December, and as soon as C. & Co.'s office opened on the 19th, R. gave them notice of his security. R. having claimed payment of the 3,000*l.*, C. & Co. claimed to retain out of it the 647*l.*:—Held, by Bacon, V.-C., that C. & Co. received the 3,000*l.* as K.'s bankers, and had a banker's lien upon it for the balance due to them, and were, therefore, entitled to retain the 647*l.*:—Held, on appeal, that as soon as K.'s retirement was gazetted the 3,000*l.* became money had and received by C. & Co. for his use, and for which he could have brought an action at law; that they had a right to set off the balance due to them against this demand; that this set-off was equally available against R., of whose security C. & Co. had no notice until after their right to set-off had arisen; and that, therefore, independently of any question of banker's lien, C. & Co. v. Co. were entitled to retain the 647*l.* Roxburghe v. Co., 17 Ch. D. 520; 50 L. J., Ch. 772; 45 L. T. 225; 30 W. R. 74—C.A.

— To Infant—Lien.—An infant obtained an advancement out of a fund in settlement for purchase of a commission in the army, which was accordingly actually bought; the infant was gazetted, and reported himself at headquarters, but never entered on his duties. Having procured leave of absence, he sold his commission, being very much embarrassed and threatened with arrest. Previously to the sale he had obtained from the army agent of the regiment advances for an outfit, which he never bought, and also for regimental dues and stoppages. The infant had never intended to join, but had merely taken up his commission for the sake of the advancement:—Held, first, that army agents had a lien on the proceeds of the sale of the commission remaining in their hands, for such advances. Lawrie v. Banks, 4 Kay & J. 142; 27 L. J., Ch. 265; 4 Jur., N. S. 299.

Held, secondly, that in the absence of fraud, the money, having been once actually advanced for the benefit of the infant, became his money and could not be restored to the trust fund. Ib.

— Regulation Price.—Where a plaintiff, who was not an authorised army agent, negotiated the sale and purchase of a commission between G. and the defendant, at a price above that allowed by the regulations, and the defendant, who was the purchaser of the commission, after having paid a sum exceeding the regulation price to G., retained 38*l.*, the remainder of the price agreed upon, with directions from G. to pay it over to the army agent for his agency, which he promised the plaintiff to do:—Held, that he could not recover against the defendant the 38*l.* as money had and received to his use, for he could not be in a better situation than G.; and by 48 Geo. 3, c. 15, s. 100, G. could not have recovered beyond the regulation price. Davis v. Edgar, 4 Taunt. 63.

Purchase of Commission—Settlement of Fund for Purchase of Promotion.—By a settlement a fund was directed to be held upon trust to pay the income to an officer in the army until an opportunity should occur for applying it for or towards his promotion in the army, and then to sell out the same and apply the proceeds for or towards such promotion; but if the officer should happen to die before such promotion, leaving his wife him surviving, then to hold the fund in trust for her, but if she should be then dead, then in trust for her father. The wife having died, and promotion by purchase having been abolished:—Held, that the officer was not entitled to the fund, except for his life. Cator v. Drew, 22 W. R. 248.

— Bequest for—Performance Impossible.—A testator, after giving a life annuity, from and after the death or marriage of his sister-in-law, in trust for his nephew, her son, bequeathed the residue of his mixed real and personal estate specifically in favour of his nieces, their husbands, and children. He then declared that for making a further provision for the maintenance of his nephew, it should be lawful for his trustees, during the life of his sister-in-law upon her request in writing, to expend any sums not exceeding 6,500*l.* in the purchase of a commission for, or in obtaining the promotion of, his nephew in the army. After the testator's death the nephew, being in the army, exchanged from one regiment into another, and in so doing paid 600*l.* for the exchange and 550*l.* for horses and outfit; after which, in May, 1868, his mother signed and sent a formal request to the trustees, desiring that the whole of the 6,500*l.* with interest from the day of the date of the request, should be raised out of the residuary estate, and paid to her son. From the 1st of November, 1871, purchase of commissions in the army was by royal warrant abolished:—Held, that the nephew was entitled to the full sum of 6,500*l.*, with interest at 4 per cent. from the date of the request, subject to the payment of legacy duty. Palmer v. Flower, 13 L. R., Eq. 250; 41 L. J., Ch. 193; 25 L. T. 816; 20 W. R. 174. Distinguished next case.

But when by a separation deed a sum of money was directed to be held by trustees for the wife for life, and after her death, as to four sixth parts, for W., one of the children of the marriage, who was then an officer in the army, during his life, and after his death for his children, and it was declared that it should be lawful for the trustees, if in their discretion they should think fit, to apply any portion of the fund, not exceeding 2,000*l.*, in or towards effecting the promotion of W. in the army, and the trustees applied 850*l.* in the way pointed out by the deed, but in consequence of the abolition of purchase of commissions in the army, no further sum could be applied for the same purpose:—Held, that the purpose for which the power was given to the trustees having failed, the residue of the 2,000*l.* could not be raised and applied in any manner for the benefit of W. Ward, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 727; 20 W. R. 1024.

— Advance for.—A sum of money was paid by A. to B. for purchasing C.'s promotion in the army, and it remained unapplied in the hands of B. at the death of A. C. having been compelled, from the bad state of his health, to quit the army, and having no prospect of being able to enter into the service again, filed a bill for the money, and it was decreed to be paid to him. Leche v. Kilmory (Lord), 1 Turn. & Russ. 207.

A sum paid for the purchase of a commission for a son is an advance within the meaning of the Statute of Distributions. Boyd v. Boyd, 4 L. R., Eq. 305; 36 L. J., Ch. 877.

Trafficking in Commissions.—A resignation for a pecuniary consideration, of the position of major in a regiment in the East India Company's service is illegal, by 49 Geo. 3, c. 126, s. 4, and security for payment of the money is void. Greene v. Wroughton, 11 Ex. 146; 24 L. J., Ex. 265; S. P., Eyre v. Forbes, 12 C. B., N. S. 191.

To an action for the price of a volunteer's uniform, the defendant pleaded that the contract was corruptly entered into in violation of 49 Geo. 3, c. 126, with intent that he might have a military commission:—Held, that the plea disclosed no illegality. Eticke v. Jones, 11 C. B., N. S. 631; 8 Jur., N. S. 843.

Proof of Commission.—At the trial of an officer on an information for defrauding government by false returns of musters, it was held sufficient to prove that he acted in the character mentioned in the information without proving his commission from the king. Rez v. Gardner, 2 Camp. 513.

Assigning Pensions.—By sect. 4 of 47 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 25, an assignment of a pension granted by the crown to a military officer, on his retirement from service, is void. Lloyd v. Cheetham, 3 Giff. 171; 30 L. J., Ch. 640; 7 Jur., N. S. 1272; 4 L. T. 576; 9 W. R. 924.

But this statute does not apply to a pension granted by the East India Company. Heald v. Hay, 3 Giff. 467; 31 L. J., Ch. 311; 8 Jur., N. S. 379; 5 L. T. 740; 10 W. R. 264; S. P., Carew v. Cooper, 4 Giff. 619; 33 L. J., Ch. 289; 10 Jur., N. S. 11; 9 L. T. 641; 12 W. R. 198, 767; but on appeal the case was compromised; see 10 Jur., N. S. 429; 13 W. R. 586.

2. PRIVATES.

Authority over.—A member of the Army Works Corps, who served as such in the Crimean war, under an agreement with the Government, although subject to the Mutiny Act, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 10, was not a soldier so as to enable him to claim a discharge according to the articles of war. Cook v. Paxton, 4 H. & N. 368; 5 Jur., N. S. 390.

The Mutiny Act and the articles of war apply only to her Majesty's forces. Wolton v. Gavin, 16 Q. B. 48; 20 L. J., Q. B. 73; 15 Jur. 329.

An enlistment on a Sunday is not void under 29 Car. 2, c. 7. Ib.

A person, receiving enlisting money, knowing it to be such, from a soldier who had been enlisted three weeks before, and had been employed in the recruiting service by a non-commissioned officer, and had belonged to a recruiting party for three weeks, the time within which he ought to have been attested, in pursuance of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 12, s. 55, being four days:—Held, that such soldier must be presumed to have been attested, and that the fact that he intended to have taken the recruit to be attested before a borough justice, instead of a county justice, the former not having authority to attest the recruit, afforded no counter presumption. Ib.

The receiving pay as a soldier subjects the receiver to military jurisdiction. Grant v. Gould, 2 H. Bl. 69.

Duty as Citizens.—A soldier is gifted with all the rights of other citizens, and is bound to all their duties, and he is therefore as much bound to prevent a breach of the peace or a felony as any other person. If it is necessary for the purpose of preventing mischief, or for the execution of the law, it is not only the right of soldiers, but it is their duty, to exert themselves in assisting the execution of a legal process, or to prevent any crime or mischief being committed. Burdett v. Abbott, 4 Taunt. 449. And see S. C., 5 Dow, 165; 14 East, 1, 154.

Enlistment.—A volunteer in a militia regiment was brought before a deputy-lieutenant to be attested. A form of questions supplied from the War Office for the attestation of militia volunteers was used, and answered by the volunteer. One of the questions was, "Have you ever served in the army?" To which he answered "No."

He was then sworn, and received the bounty money. But it was afterwards discovered that he had previously been enrolled in and discharged from another militia regiment. The questions in the schedule to the Mutiny Act which are to be put to recruits for the line by justices of the peace on attestation differ from those in the form used in the case of a volunteer; but the question, "Have you ever served in the army?" occurs in both:—Held, that he could not be convicted, upon an indictment framed under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 11, s. 57, of making a false representation of a particular contained in the oaths and certificates in the schedule to the act annexed before the justice at the time of his attestation, and of obtaining enlisting money or bounty for entering into her Majesty's service. Reg. v. Jessup, Dears. C. 619; 25 L. J., M. C. 54; 2 Jur., N. S. 215.

Where A. applied to two soldiers, a drummer and a private, to enlist him, which they at first refused, but afterwards the drummer gave him a shilling for that purpose, and on A.'s wanting to go away they detained him:—Held, that the drummer had no authority to enlist A., and therefore no right to detain him. Rez v. Longden, R. & R. C. C. 228; 1 Russ. C. & M. 439.

Deserters—Rule for Discharge.—Where, in a return to a habeas corpus, it is alleged that the prisoner is detained as a deserter by virtue of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 12, s. 22, it must also be alleged that "he is a soldier, and ought to be with his corps." Douglas, In re, 3 G. & D. 509; 3 Q. B. 825; 12 L. J., Q. B. 49; 7 Jur. 39.

It is necessary to serve a rule nisi for the discharge of a prisoner, who is in custody under a warrant for assisting to conceal a deserter, contrary to the Mutiny Act, on the secretary at war. Gale, Ex parte, 3 D. & L. 114; 14 L. J., Q. B. 316; 10 Jur. 334.

Detention of.—By the 20th Article of War, no officer commanding a guard shall refuse to receive or keep any prisoner committed to his charge by any officer or non-commissioned officer, who shall at the same time deliver an account in writing, signed by himself, of the crime with which the prisoner is charged:—Held, that a commanding officer receiving a soldier charged with desertion by a non-commissioned officer, who at the same time delivered a written charge of the crime, signed by himself, was justified under that article in detaining the prisoner, although he had not been taken before a magistrate, and a warrant had not been obtained for his detention. Wolton v. Gavin, 16 Q. B. 48; 20 L. J., Q. B. 73; 15 Jur. 329.

Expenses of Commitment.—A justice, before whom a deserter is brought, and by whom committed to the county gaol, may, if the deserter is unable to bear the charges himself, direct the expenses of conveying him thither to be paid by the treasurer of the county to the constable of the parish who found and apprehended him in the parish and conveyed him to the gaol. Rez v. Pierce, 3 M. & S. 62.

Carriage of Baggage by Railway Companies.—Public baggage, stores, arms, &c., sent by railway, in charge of any of her Majesty's forces specified in 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, s. 12, is their baggage, no matter what may be the disproportion between the amount of baggage and the number of the force in charge of it, and must be carried by a railway company at the rates imposed by that section. Att.-Gen. v. Great Southern and Western Railway Company, 14 Ir. C. L. R. 447.

Bastard Children.—A soldier was indictable for disobeying an order of justices requiring him to support his bastard child; Reg. v. Ferrall, 2 Den. C. C. 51; T. & M. 390; 20 L. J., M. C. 39; 15 Jur. 42: but since the decision the Annual Mutiny Act has expressly absolved him from this liability, and a similar exemption exists with respect to the marines, see 44 & 45 Vict. c. 58, s. 145.

A soldier having been committed under a magistrate's warrant for deserting his children, and leaving them chargeable to the parish, the court, on the application of the crown, ordered his discharge. Reilly, In re, 4 Ir. C. L. R. 250.

3. MILITIA.

Ballot.—Under the Militia Acts, 42 Geo. 3, c. 20, and 47 Geo. 3, c. 71, if a person balloted was found at the time of enrolment to be unqualified for the service, and another was balloted in his place out of the same list, this was a continuance of the same ballot, and was a legal ballot. Astley v. Ray, 2 Taunt. 214.

Privilege.—An attorney is not privileged from serving in the militia, or paying for a substitute in his stead. Gerrard's case, 2 W. Bl. 1123.

Insurance against Drawing.—If A., in consideration of a premium, undertakes to insure B. against being drawn for the militia under a particular statute, until a certain day; and represents that, on that day, all balloting under the statute will be completely secured by the insurance against the operations of the statute, A. is not thereby bound to indemnify B. in consequence of his being drawn for the militia under the statute, after the above-mentioned day; but, on account of the misrepresentation, the contract is void, and B. may recover back the premium. Duffell v. Wilson, 1 Camp. 401.

Qualification of Officer.—A captain in the militia, receiving his pay and contingent allowances before his qualification was properly authenticated, was not executing any power directed by 42 Geo. 3, c. 90, to be executed by captains, so as to bring him within the penalty of the fourteenth clause; the receipt of such pay and allowances not being provided for by that statute, even if any other than acts of military discipline were intended to be so prohibited. Robinson v. Garthwaite, 9 East, 296.

In an action for a penalty, under 2 Geo. 3, c. 20, s. 16, for acting as a major of militia without being duly qualified, it was sufficient to aver that the defendant acted as such major, "not being in any manner qualified by the laws and statutes of the realm." Roberts v. Irvine, 3 Dougl. 194.

Substitutes.—A substitute must be considered as a militiaman. Rea v. Aston, 2 Burr. 1149.

The parish to which the principal militiaman belongs is liable to reimburse the parish of the substitute the expenses of maintaining the substitute's family; though the substitute had more than one child when he was approved by the deputy-lieutenants, and inrolled. Rea v. Willis, 6 T. R. 179.

A substitute in the militia fraudulently and falsely declaring at the time of his enrolment, that he had no wife or family, when in fact he had a wife and one child, was not entitled to any parochial allowance for their relief under 43 Geo. 3, c. 47, ss. 2, 5. Rea v. Preston, 13 East. 313.

Under 43 Geo. 3, c. 47, it was the duty of the county treasurer who reimbursed payments made by overseers to the families of militiamen, to transmit an account of such reimbursements to the treasurer of the county for which such militiamen were serving. But it was not his duty to demand the amount or to take legal proceedings for obtaining payment, or to notify to the justices of the sessions the transmission of such account, and neglect of payment, or to transmit to the justices of the sessions an account of similar payments made by himself to the treasurer of another county, that they might make orders for repayment upon the overseers of the parishes for which such militiamen were serving. Farr v. Hollis, 4 M. & R. 230; 9 B. & C. 315.

Liability of Officers to Poor Rates.—See RATES.

4. VOLUNTEERS.

Power of Commanding Officer to dismiss Member.—Under the Volunteer Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 65), s. 21, subss. 1, 2, the ordinary commanding officer of a volunteer corps which forms part of an administrative battalion is authorized to dismiss a member from the corps for breach of discipline, although the corps is at the time assembled in camp with the rest of the administrative battalion under the general command of the battalion commander. Tombs v. Magrath, 5 Q. B. D. 548; 49 L. J., M. C. 75; 41 L. T. 533; 28 W. R. 814; 44 J. P. 552.

Resignation.—Members of volunteer corps inrolled under the regulations of 42 Geo. 3, c. 66, are entitled to resign on due notification of such their intention; not being restrained from such liberty of resignation by the rules of the corps, or its conditions of service; and this liberty was not taken away by 43 Geo. 3, c. 95, which distinguished between volunteer corps and volunteers under that act; that is, such as offered themselves voluntarily to serve in lieu of the compulsory levy. And 43 Geo. 3, c. 121, attached only on corps of volunteers at the time of an actual invasion. Rea v. Dowley, 4 East, 512; 1 Smith, 153.

Liability of Rifle Corps for Uniforms.—A promoter of a volunteer rifle corps may be liable to a tailor for uniforms supplied to the corps on the orders of the committee, although in the tailor's books the corps is debited, the question of liability being for the jury on the whole of the evidence, supposing there is any evidence of the defendant's concurrence in the orders given. Cross v. Williams, 7 H. & N. 675; 31 L. J., Ex. 145; 6 L. T. 675; 10 W. R. 302.

Inrolment.—It was not necessary, in order to make a man inrolled as a volunteer an effective member of his corps, that he should have taken the oath of allegiance required by 44 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 20. Rea v. Witnesham, 4 N. & M. 447; 2 A. & E. 648; 1 H. & W. 43.

Position.—A commission of captain of volunteers, signed by the lord-lieutenant of a county, does not confer the degree of an esquire. Talbot v. Eagle, 1 Taunt. 510.

Exemption from Turnpike Tolls.—Volunteers in uniform, going to attend a mere voluntary rifle match, at a duly appointed place of rifle practice, but open to all the world, are not entitled to exemption from toll under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 126. Teather v. Turner, 7 L. T. 785; 11 W. R. 425.

A yeomanry non-commissioned officer is not a volunteer, within 26 & 27 Vict. c. 65. Humphrey v. Bethell, 1 L. R., C. P. 215; 12 Jur., N. S. 212; 13 L. T. 797; 14 W. R. 457; 1 H. & R. 221.

He is not, therefore, entitled to the exemption from toll granted to volunteers driving to their place of exercise. Ib.

Nature of Carriage.—See REGULAR OFFICERS, supra.

Toll at Floating Bridge.—Ib.

5. BILLETING.

In what Cases.—A deputy high constable, appointed by parol only, may billet soldiers, under the Annual Mutiny Act. Midhurst v. Waite, 3 Burr. 1259; 1 W. Bl. 350.

The foot guards may be billeted all over the kingdom, as well as the other troops. Rea v. Calcart, 7 T. R. 724.

Horses employed in drawing artillery are billeteable, whether they belong to the ordnance or are furnished for the service by contract. Read v. Willan, 2 Doug. 422.

6. COURTS-MARTIAL.

Who may Act.—It is not incident to the duty of the office of a commander-in-chief of a squadron to hold a court-martial on an inferior officer. Johnstone v. Sutton (in error), 1 T. R. 493. Affirmed in Dom. Proc. 1 T. R. 784; 1 Bro. P. C. 76.

Prohibition to.—The court will not direct a writ of prohibition to a court-martial merely because the facts which establish the military offence disclose at the same time a greater offence (ex gratia, high treason) cognizable by the civil courts, provided a military offence is clear upon the evidence. Reg. v. M'Carthy, 14 W. R. 918.

Courts-martial in this country have jurisdiction over all persons receiving pay as soldiers, but are liable to the controlling authority which the courts of Westminster shall from time to time exercise for the purpose of preventing them from exceeding their jurisdiction. Grant v. Gould, 2 H. Bl. 69.

The court will not grant a prohibition to prevent the execution of the sentence of a court-martial passed against A., who has received pay as a soldier (but assumed the military character merely for the purpose of recruiting in the usual course of that service), though the proceedings of the court-martial appeared to be in some instances erroneous. Ib.

A writ of prohibition cannot issue to a court-martial after sentence pronounced by the court and ratified by his Majesty, and execution by dismissal from the army, in pursuance of such sentence. Poe, In re, 2 N. & M. 636; 5 B. & Ad. 681.

Certiorari.—An officer was tried by court-martial, and sentenced to be dismissed from the army. He applied for a certiorari, to bring up the record of the conviction, alleging that the proceedings of the court which tried him were without jurisdiction:—Held, that as none of his civil rights were affected by the proceedings of the court-martial, but only his military status, the court could not interfere. Mansergh, Ex parte, 1 B. & S. 400; 30 L. J., Q. B. 296; 7 Jur., N. S. 825; 4 L. T. 469; 9 W. R. 703.

The court has no jurisdiction to quash the proceedings of a court-martial holden in India, although the documents are in the custody of the judge-advocate of England. Ib.

Time for Trial—Habeas Corpus.—The court granted a rule nisi for a habeas corpus, on behalf of an officer under military arrest for charges of misconduct, on an affidavit complaining that he had not been brought to trial, pursuant to the 23rd article of war, as soon as a court-martial could be conveniently assembled; but, it being stated upon the affidavit of the judge-advocate general in answer, that proceedings were instituted as soon as could conveniently be, and according to the course of office, and that the trial had been postponed partly on account of the absence of the prisoner's witnesses, the court discharged the rule. Blake's case, 2 M. & S. 428.

Punishment Abroad—Legality.—By the Mutiny Act, the king may make articles of war, and constitute courts-martial, with power to try and punish, as well in Great Britain as in Gibraltar. By a subsequent clause, no soldier shall, by such articles of war, be subject to the punishment of death, or loss of limb, within Great Britain (omitting Gibraltar) for any crime not expressed to be so punishable by the act. Then, by the articles of war, persons found guilty by a court-martial at Gibraltar, of theft, robbery, or of having used violence, or committed any offence against the persons or property of others, "shall suffer death, or such punishment, according to the nature and degree of the offence, as by the sentence of such court-martial shall be awarded:—Held, that a court-martial had a discretionary power by such words, and was not restricted to pass such sentence on a delinquent as would be warranted by the law of England. Rea v. Suddis, 1 East, 306.

Place of Imprisonment.—By the Mutiny Act, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 13, s. 38, the place of imprisonment of persons under sentence of general courts-martial shall be appointed by the officer commanding the district:—Held, that a person imprisoned under sentence of a general court-martial in any place other than the place appointed by the officer commanding the district was entitled to be discharged summarily by habeas corpus, unless the officer commanding the district shall have changed the place by his order in writing under the provisions of sect. 41. Allen, Ex parte, 30 L. J., Q. B. 38; 7 Jur., N. S. 234; 3 L. T. 468; 9 W. R. 99.

Perjury at.]—Semble, that taking a false oath before a court-martial is perjury at common law. Reg. v. Heane. 4 B. & S. 947.

Evidence.]—Courts-martial are bound by the same principles and rules of evidence as the courts of law; and their proceedings, where not otherwise regulated by statute, must be in accordance therewith. Ship Bounty, 1 East, 312, n.; Stratford's Case, 1 East, 313.

Proceedings at, Privileged.]—See Dawkins v. Rokeby (Lord), 7 L. R., H. L. 744; 45 L. J., Q. B. 8; 33 L. T. 196; 23 W. R. 931. S. P., Home v. Bentinck (Lord), 4 Moore, 563; 2 B. & B. 130—Ex. Ch., supra.

7. ARMY AND NAVY AGENTS.

Charges.]—By 59 Geo. 3, c. 111, army agents were entitled to make the usual charge for passing accounts before that act; and were also entitled to charge commission on the full amount of pay, without being limited by the money actually passing through their hands. Drury v. Atkins, Tamlyn, 75.

Liability—Commission.]—An army agent is responsible for the price of commissions sold by him for an officer on foreign service. Sturdy v. Ross, 1 Esp. 450.

And as to Rights to Commission Moneys, see PAY AND COMMISSION, supra.

Discovery at suit of Crown.]—Information, under 4 Geo. 3, c. 58, by the crown, against an army agent for a discovery and production of documents with a view to an account. Pleas, that the accounts had been settled and closed at the war-office, by the issuing of the clearing warrants, and that the moneys imprested in the agent's hands for the pay or arrears of pay of officers, were held by him as the banker or private agent of the officers by whom he was appointed; and that for such moneys he was not accountable to the crown:—Held, that both the pleas were bad, for that the clearing warrants did not purport on the face of them to be a final settlement of accounts, and that an army agent was a public officer, and was accountable to the crown for moneys received by him for the pay and arrears of pay of officers. Deare v. Att.-Gen., 2 Dow & C. 377.

Partners.]—A person, coming in as a partner in the business of navy agents, in general takes the joint liability of debts owing to a customer by the old firm, although the customer may be wholly unaware of his having joined the concern. Scott v. Beale, 6 Jur. N. S. 559.

I. ON MESNE PROCESS.

1. DEBTOR QUITTING ENGLAND.

Grounds for believing that Debtor is about to quit, Sufficiency of.]—It must be shewn that there is reasonable ground to believe that the defendant is about to quit England to avoid the plaintiff's action. Harvey v. O'Meara, 7 D. P. C. 725; 3 Jur. 629.

Suspicion merely that he is about to leave England is not sufficient. Id.

It is not a sufficient excuse to prevent the granting of a capias, that the defendant is an officer in the army, and is going abroad to join his regiment. Larohin v. Willan, 4 M. & W. 361; 1 H. & H. 332; 7 D. P. L. 11; 2 Jur. 970.

An affidavit, that the defendant was a lieutenant in the 78th regiment of foot, which regiment is under orders to embark for India; and deponent believes, and has no doubt, that it is his intention to embark with his regiment, and quit England, on military service, for India, is sufficient. Askenheim v. Colegrave, 2 D. & L. 642; 13 M. & W. 620; 14 L. J., Ex. 113; 9 Jur. 117.

A person domiciled in Ireland, and about to return to that country, after a temporary sojourn in England, is liable to be held to bail as a person about to quit England. Lamond v. Elffe, 3 G.

& D. 256; 3 Q. B. 910; 12 L. J., Q. B. 12; 6 Jur. 1038.

But a captain of a steamer trading between an English port and Hamburg, and about to depart on one of his regular voyages, is not. Atkinson v. Blake, 1 D., N. S. 849; 6 Jur. 1113.

An attorney about to quit England may be arrested notwithstanding his being an officer of the court. Thomson v. Moore, 1 D., N. S. 283; 5 Jur. 1009; S. P.; Flight v. Cooke, 1 D. & L. 714; 8 Jur. 125.

It is not necessary for a deponent to swear to his own belief that the defendant is about to leave the country. Willis v. Snook, 8 M. & W. 147; 5 Jur. 579.

An affidavit that the deponent has been informed and believes that the defendant is about to leave England, without stating from whom he obtained the information, is not sufficient. Graham v. Sandrinelli, 16 M. & W. 191; 4 D. & L. 317; 16 L. J., Ex. 67.

But an order may be made on an affidavit of the plaintiff, that he has been informed and believes that the defendant is about to leave England, provided the name and description of the person from whom he has received such information are stated. Gibbons v. Spalding, 11 M. & W. 173; 2 D., N. S. 811; 7 Jur. 21.

A party was held to bail on an affidavit, that he had obtained money at the Cape of Good Hope by means of a forged letter, and having been charged with such forgery before a magistrate here, had been discharged, on the ground that the offence was not shewn to have been committed in this country; that it was believed that evidence would be obtained of offences committed in this country; and that the parties therefore believed that it was his intention immediately to quit this country. He applied to the court to be discharged. He did not deny the charges, but swore that he did not intend to quit England. The court refused to discharge him. Ross v. Montefiore, 1 H. & N. 722.

Duration of Absence.]—The principle by which the judges are guided in granting a capias is, to consider whether the defendant's contemplated absence is likely to last for such a time that when the plaintiff, in the usual course of law proceedings, shall be entitled to take the defendant's body in execution, he is not, in consequence of such absence, likely to be forthcoming. Larchin v. Willan, 4 M. & W. 351; 1 H. & H. 322; 7 D. P. C. 11; 2 Jur. 970.

Intention to leave at once must be shewn.]—A defendant arrested gave bail to the sheriff, and shewed that he had no intention of leaving England at the time when the arrest took place, although he intended to do so in about two months afterwards:—Held, that the arrest was premature, and that the bail-bond must be cancelled; although the plaintiff's affidavits stated that in consequence of a commission to examine witnesses abroad no final judgment could be obtained before the expiration of that period. Pegler v. Hislop, 1 Ex. 437; 5 D. & L. 223; 17 L. J., Ex. 53; 11 Jur. 996.

2. OF BANKRUPTS.

English—Who may Arrest.]—If commissioners of bankruptcy issue a warrant to apprehend a bankrupt, and direct the warrant "To J. A. & W. S.

our messengers and their assistants," this warrant does not justify the apprehension of the bankrupt by any one who is not in the presence, actual or constructive, of J. A. or W. S.; and therefore B., who was the assistant of W. S. in his business of a sheriff's officer, is not justified in apprehending the bankrupt in the absence of W. S. & J. A., although B. has the warrant in his possession. Rez v. Whalley, 7 C. & P. 245.

—Validity of Warrant of Commitment.]—The concluding words of a warrant of commitment must be so limited as to have direct reference to the offence imputed in the preceding part; and therefore, where a commitment, after reciting that the bankrupt had surrendered, and that the commissioners examined him touching his trade, and caused such examination to be reduced into writing and read over to him, to which examination the bankrupt did refuse to sign his name (not having a reasonable objection to the wording thereof or otherwise), required the gaoler to detain the bankrupt in custody until such time as he should submit himself, and full answer make to the satisfaction of the commissioners, to all such questions as should be put to him, and sign and subscribe to such examination as aforesaid:—Held, void. Leake, Ex parte, 9 B. & C. 234; 3 Y. & J. 46.

A warrant directed to the messenger of the court, and to his assistants, and to the governor, or keeper of Her Majesty's gaol of the castle of York, is sufficient, without naming the messenger. Lord, Ex parte, 16 M. & W. 462; 16 L. J., Ex. 118; 11 Jur. 186.

A bankrupt applied for a habeas corpus, on affidavit, which set out the conclusion only of the warrant as follows: "which answers so given on the same several examinations as aforesaid, by" &c., "and the schedule by him referred to, and hereto annexed as part of this our warrant, not being satisfactory to us the commissioners, these are therefore to will," &c. It appeared from the affidavit that the bankrupt had been several times examined, but no part of any examination was there set out:—Held, that no defect appeared: it not being necessary that the warrant should further particularize the objections, and the examinations themselves not being brought before the court. Davneey, Ex parte, 4 Q. B. 668; 3 G. & D. 640; 12 L. J., Q. B. 239; 7 Jur. 555.

Since 8 & 9 Vict. c. 48, for the substitution of a declaration for an oath in bankruptcy, it is illegal for a commissioner to examine a bankrupt upon oath; and a warrant of commitment, stating that the bankrupt was duly sworn, is void. Ramsden, In re, 1 B. C. Rep. 133; 3 D. & L. 748; 15 L. J., Q. B. 234; 10 Jur. 879.

In a warrant for the committal of a bankrupt for not answering satisfactorily, it is sufficient to state, that the answers of the bankrupt, set out in the examination, are not satisfactory; it is not necessary to state which of them are not so. Davneey, Ex parte, 1 D. & L. 608; 12 M. & W. 271; 13 L. J., Ex. 165; 8 Jur. 829.

It is not necessary in a warrant of a commissioner in a district where there are two commissioners, for the committal of a bankrupt for not giving satisfactory answers to questions propounded to him touching matters relating to his trade, dealings and estate, to allege that the prosecution of the fiat was allotted to him the committing commissioner, or that his brother commissioner was absent at the time. Ward, In re, 1 B. C.

Rep. 127; 3 D. & L. 756; 15 L. J., Q. B. 233; 10 Jur. 433; S. P. Ramsden, In re, 1 B. C. Rep. 133; 15 L. J., Q. B. 234; 10 Jur. 879.

When a party complaining obtained a warrant for the apprehension of the party ordered to be committed, and delivered it to the officer by whom it was executed, and afterwards the party committed was discharged on his own application, and various orders were made founded on the commitment, and it afterwards appeared that the warrant was by an oversight not sealed:—Held, that the commitment was invalid, that the consequential orders ought to be discharged, and that the party committed was entitled to recover damages from the party obtaining the process. Van Sandau, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 303.

Scotch Fugitive.—The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 41, s. 18 (similar to 19 & 20 Vict. c. 79, s. 47), empowered the Lord Ordinary to grant to the debtor a warrant of protection or liberation; and the warrant granting protection or liberation, or a copy thereof, certified by one of the bill chamber clerks, shall protect or liberate the debtor from arrest or imprisonment in Great Britain and Ireland, and her Majesty's other dominions, for civil debt contracted previous to the date of sequestration; but such warrant of protection or liberation shall not be of any effect against the execution of a warrant of arrest or imprisonment in meditatione fugæ:—Held, that a departure from England, for the purpose of returning to Scotland, was not a meditatione fugæ within this exception, and that the debtor, having been arrested after such order of protection was granted, was entitled to his discharge. McGregor v. Fischen, 5 D. & L. 722; 17 L. J., Q. B. 186.

Where a Scotch bankrupt obtains a warrant of protection, and is afterwards arrested in England for a prior debt, the court is bound to discharge him, although it is alleged that the bankruptcy is fraudulent and collusive, and that there was no trading. O'Brien v. Don, 26 L. J., C. P. 96; 3 Jur., N. S. 318.

By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 79, s. 47, a warrant granting protection shall protect the debtor from arrest in Great Britain and Ireland, and her Majesty's other dominions, for civil debt contracted previous to the sequestration; but such warrant shall not be of any effect against the execution of a warrant of apprehension in meditatione fugæ:—Held, that the exception was not confined to the warrant in meditatione fugæ peculiar to Scotland, but extended to analogous process in other parts of the Queen's dominions. Dutton v. Hally, 2 B. & S. 748; 31 L. J., Q. B. 297; 7 Jur., N. S. 99; 7 L. T. 527.

Therefore, a Scotch debtor, who has obtained a warrant of protection, and comes to England, is liable to be arrested on a capias under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 3, when he is about to leave this country for New Zealand. Id.

3. FOR WHAT DEBT OR DAMAGES.

Under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 3.—A judge, by consent of the parties in a cause, ordered, that, on payment of the debt and costs, the costs down and the debt in six months, all further proceedings should be stayed. The defendant paid the costs in pursuance of the order:—Held, that the plaintiff could not, within the six months, obtain an order to arrest the defendant. Ball v. Stanley, 6 M. & W. 396; 8 D. P. C. 344; 4 Jur. 561.

Although it distinctly appears that he is about to leave the kingdom, unless a stipulation reserving to the plaintiff the power of applying for a capias in that event is inserted in the first judge's order. Id.

Semble, where an affidavit discloses a cause of action for unliquidated damages only, it should specify the amount of damage sustained. Bullock v. Jenkins, 1 L. M. & P. 645; 20 L. J., Q. B. 90.

Where, however, a judge had granted an order upon an affidavit which did not contain such a statement, the court refused to rescind the order, or to discharge the defendant out of custody; as the judge might have been satisfied upon the facts, that the plaintiff had sustained damage to the amount for which he had ordered the defendant to be held to bail. Id.

A capias is not grantable in an action by indorsee of a bill of lading against the master of the vessel, for a deceit in the representation in the bill of lading signed by him, that the goods were shipped in good order and well-conditioned. Gadsden v. M'Lean, 9 C. B. 283, sed quære. See 18 & 19 Vict. c. 111, s. 3.

A capias is an improper proceeding in an action on a scire facias. Agassiz v. Palmer, 1 D. & L. 18; 6 Scott, N. R. 603; 5 M. & G. 697; 12 L. J., C. P. 245; 7 Jur. 972.

A garnishee against whom a judgment creditor has obtained leave to proceed by writ calling upon him to shew cause why there should not be execution against him under the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 64, cannot be held to bail or arrested under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 2. Horner v. Luff, 3 B. & S. 818.

A party cannot be held to bail for arrears of a fee farm rent issuing out of premises situate in Scotland. McKenzie v. Johnson, 1 Scott, 694.

Second Arrest for same Cause.—A defendant was arrested for 70*l.*, but it appearing that to part of that amount the defendant had a defence under the Statute of Limitations, it was agreed that he should be discharged out of custody on giving a bill of exchange for 30*l.* drawn by a third person, and accepted by himself. The defendant having been arrested on the bill:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to be discharged out of custody, as having been a second time arrested for the same debt. Hamber v. Cooper, 2 C., M. & R. 148; 3 D. P. C. 671; 1 Gale, 103; 5 Tyr. 718.

A foreigner resident abroad having been arrested during a visit to this country on an affidavit for money lent abroad, and having been discharged on the ground of a composition made abroad, and denied by the plaintiff, and having been again arrested on an affidavit on a promise in the agreement of composition, to pay the residue of the debt when he should be of ability, and the affidavits leaving the cause of action doubtful:—Held, that there was no sufficient ground for again discharging the defendant from custody, although there might be an equitable ground for reducing the amount of bail. Barker v. Lindholt, 11 W. R. 68.

After Proceedings in Foreign and Colonial Courts.—After an arrest in a foreign country, upon a judgment obtained there, the defendant, having escaped, may be arrested here in an action on that judgment. Aliven v. Furnival, 1 D. P. C. 614; S. P., Maule v. Murray, 7 T. R. 470.

There is no objection to an arrest here, after an arrest in a foreign country, where it does not distinctly appear that the defendant could have the same redress and benefit by the proceedings abroad as here. Imlay v. Ellefsen, 2 East, 453.

So one foreigner may arrest another in England for a debt which accrued in Portugal while both resided there, though the Portuguese law does not allow of arrest for debt. De la Vega v. Vianna, 1 B. & Ad. 284.

A defendant may be held to bail in this country notwithstanding proceedings had for the same cause of action in Scotland, such proceedings not enuring to deprive the party of his liberty there, and the debt being unsatisfied. Sharp v. Johnson, 2 Scott, 407.

4. AFFIDAVIT OF CAUSE OF ACTION.

a. Form of.

Intitling.—An affidavit of debt sworn before a commissioner need not be intitled in any court. Urquhart v. Dick, 2 D. P. C. 17.

An affidavit, not intitled in any court, the jurat of which stated it to be sworn before a commissioner of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, is sufficient. Ferguson v. Mahon, W., W. & D. 605.

An affidavit need not be intitled in the cause, if made before the writ of summons is sued out. Schelleter v. Cohen, 9 D. P. C. 277; 7 M. & W. 389; 5 Jur. 74.

It is no objection to an affidavit that it is sworn before the writ of summons is issued, and is headed with the name of the court, and also described in the heading as "between" the parties, designated in such heading as "plaintiff" and "defendant." Hargreaves v. Hayes, 5 El. & Bl. 272; 24 L. J., Q. B. 281; 1 Jur., N. S. 521.

Where a defendant was arrested by a wrong name, the affidavit to ground a motion that the bail-bond be delivered up to be cancelled must be intitled in the defendant's right name, "sued by the name of." Finch v. Cucken, 2 C. & M. 412; 2 D. P. C. 383; 4 Tyr. 285.

Who may make.—It is not necessary that the creditor should himself swear to the debt; it suffices for another person to swear positively that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff, without shewing that the deponent is the agent of, or connected with, the plaintiff. King v. Turner (Lord), 1 Chit. 58; S. P., Pieters v. Luytjes, 1 B. & P. 1; Short v. Campbell, 3 D. P. C. 487.

And without shewing the deponent's means of knowledge of the existence of the debt. Holliday v. Laues, 4 Scott, 354; 3 Bing. N. C. 541; 5 D. P. C. 485; 1 Jur. 151.

Consequently, it is no objection that it states that the plaintiff resides in a foreign country, and that it does not appear how the deponent could know that fact. Andriani v. Morgan, 4 Taunt. 231.

An affidavit made by a person, who described himself as agent and collector to the plaintiff, an hotel keeper, is sufficient. Short v. Campbell, 3 D. P. C. 487; 1 Gale, 60.

In an action by the assignees of a bankrupt, a positive affidavit, made by the clerk to the plaintiff's attorney, is sufficient. Anon., 1 Chit. 58, n.

So an affidavit by a bankrupt, for his assignees. Tucker v. Francis, 4 Bing. 142; 12 Moore, 347.

b. Must be positive.

Generally.—An affidavit to hold to bail must shew on what account the debt became due. Polleri v. De Souza, 4 Taunt. 154; S. P., Cooke v. Dobree, 1 H. Bl. 10.

And the statement of the cause of action must be positive. Van Maset v. Julian, 1 Wils. 231; S. P., Pomp v. Ludrigson, 2 Burr. 655; Champion v. Gilbert, 4 Burr. 2126.

An affidavit, that the defendant is indebted "for money paid, laid out, and expended, and wages due to the plaintiff for his services on board the defendant's ship," is sufficient, without expressly stating that the debt is due from the defendant. Symons v. Andrews, 1 Marsh. 317; 5 Taunt. 752.

An affidavit for the price of goods guaranteed by the defendant, without shewing on what terms, or that the time for payment had expired, is bad. Angus v. Robilliard, 2 D. P. C. 90.

An affidavit to hold to bail, stating simply that the defendant is "well and truly indebted to the plaintiff for money lent and goods sold and delivered," is bad, as not stating the cause of action with sufficient precision. Handley v. Franchi, 2 L. R., Ex. 34; 36 L. J., Ex. 32; 15 L. T. 252; 15 W. R. 158.

Reference to Documents.—An affidavit by a third person, that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in certain sums, and that the deponent is more strongly and better assured that the said sums of money are due, by means of the deponent's having transmitted to him, and in his custody, certain documents, is sufficient. Brown v. Phepoe, 3 Dougl. 370.

So, a statement that the defendant "is indebted, as appeared by an account stated and under the defendant's own hand." Anon., 1 Wils. 121.

So, "that the defendant is indebted in 20*l.* according to the bill delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant." Williams v. Jackson, 3 T. R. 575.

So, that the defendant is indebted on a bill of exchange, as "appears by such bill." Rollin v. Mills, 1 Wils. 279; S. P., Bright v. Purrier, 3 Burr. 1687; Bull. N. P. 269.

So that the defendant was indebted in such a sum, as the deponent computes it, is sufficient. Moulthby v. Richardson, 2 Burr. 1032.

Executors.—An affidavit by an executor stating the debt to be due, "as appears by the testator's books," is not sufficient, without the words "and which the deponent believes to be true." Graham v. Hammond, 2 B. & P. 298; S. P., Sheldon v. Baker, 1 T. R. 8.

Partners.—An affidavit for money lent by the plaintiff and his late copartners, C. and D., is insufficient, inasmuch as it does not shew that C. and D. were dead. Morrall v. Parker, 3 M. & W. 65; M. & H. 361; 6 D. P. C. 123; S. P., Edgar v. Watt, 1 H. & W. 108.

An affidavit for a debt, stated therein to be due to A. and B., is good, though the plaintiffs are partners, and are not stated to be so in the affidavit. Bodfield v. Padmore, 5 B. & Ad. 1095.

Husband and Wife.—An affidavit, for goods sold and delivered to, and for money paid and laid out for the wife of the defendant, before his intermarriage with her, no request being stated, is insufficient. Gray v. Shepherd, 3 D. P. C. 442.

In an action by husband and wife against husband and wife, an affidavit to hold to bail stated the defendant to be indebted "for goods delivered and sold by the plaintiff's wife to the defendant's wife," not stating the transaction to have taken place before their respective marriages. The defendant, having failed in an attempt to justify bail, moved to set aside the bail-bond, on the ground of the above irregularity. The court discharged the rule on terms. Morgan v. Davies, 1 Scott, 93.

In an action by husband and wife, administratrix, on a bond given to the intestate, it is no objection to the affidavit that the defendant is alleged to be indebted to the husband and wife, administratrix; or that the affidavit omits to state that the deceased died intestate, or to whom the sum mentioned in the condition is made payable; the same degree of precision not being required in an affidavit as in a declaration. Coppin v. Potter, 4 M. & Scott, 272; 10 Bing. 441; 2 D. P. C. 785.

Bankrupt's Assignees.—An affidavit, by the assignee of a bankrupt for a sum of money "for interest agreed to be paid by the defendant, as appears to this deponent by the books of account of the bankrupt, and as this deponent verily believes to be true," is sufficient. Harrison v. Turner, 4 D. P. C. 72; 1 H. & W. 346.

Foreign Money and Claims.—An affidavit, made before a British consul in a foreign country, stated that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in a certain number of pounds sterling:—Held, that the affidavit was insufficient, inasmuch as it did not appear with certainty whether the defendant was indebted in British or Irish sterling money. It ought to have said "pounds sterling, English." Pickardo v. Machado, 7 D. & R. 478; 4 B. & C. 886.

An affidavit that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff, "as liquidator of an estate duly appointed by the law of France," is defective for not shewing that the plaintiff, as liquidator, is by the law of France entitled to sue. Tenor v. Mars, 3 M. & R. 38; 8 B. & C. 638. See Alison v. Furnival, 1 C. M. & R. 277.

But an affidavit that A. was indebted to B. for goods sold and delivered in Holland, and that the debt was assigned to C. according to the laws of that country, and that the assignee of a debt may sue the debtor according to the laws of Holland, "as deponent is informed and believes," is sufficient to hold the defendant to bail in this country. Sceurhop v. Schamanuel, 4 D. & R. 180.

c. Defendant's Benefit.

Must be for.—An affidavit for goods sold and delivered, and materials found and work done by the deponent for the defendant, is bad for not stating that the goods were sold and delivered to, and the work done for, the defendant. Young v. Gatten, 2 M. & S. 603; S. P., Bell v. Thrupp, 2 B. & A. 596.

When Sufficiently Stated.—But an affidavit that the defendant was indebted "for the hire of carriages of the plaintiff to and for the use of the defendant," is sufficient, without stating that they were hired of the plaintiff, or by whom they were hired. Brown v. Garnier, 2 Marsh, 83; 6 Taunt. 389.

An affidavit that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff for the hire of a berth on board a vessel of the plaintiff, let by the plaintiff to the defendant at his request, held sufficient, and that it was not necessary to shew actual enjoyment. Shepherd v. O'Brien, 1 M. & W. 601; 2 Gale, 120; 5 D. P. C. 173.

An affidavit for money paid, laid out and expended "to and for the use and on account of the defendant" is sufficient. Harrison v. Turner, 4 D. P. C. 72; 1 H. & W. 346.

An affidavit that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 20l. for money lent on a bill of exchange, drawn by S., accepted by the defendant, and overdue and unpaid, was held sufficient, without saying "lent to the defendant." Bennett v. Dawson, 4 Bing. 609; 1 M. & P. 594.

An affidavit, "for money paid, lent and advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant, and at his request," is bad, for not distinctly shewing that the money paid was paid to the use of the defendant, and at his request. Fricks v. Poole, 4 M. & R. 48; 9 B. & C. 543.

An affidavit that the defendant was indebted to the deponent "for materials found and provided, goods sold and delivered and work and labour done and performed by the deponent to and for the use and benefit of the defendant, and at his request" is sufficient. Lucas v. Goodwin, 4 Scott, 300; 3 Hodges, 32; S. P., Hughes v. Sutton, 3 M. & S. 78.

An affidavit, for work done by the plaintiff for the defendant, as his servant, is sufficient. Bliss v. Atkins, 5 Taunt. 756; 1 Marsh, 317, n.

It is a sufficient statement of the cause of action, that it is for the use and occupation of premises of the creditor; and if the statement proceeds to say, as tenant thereof, it is no objection that there was not added, to the creditor. Lee v. Sellwood, 9 Price, 322.

d. Defendant's Request.

Must Allege.—In an affidavit for the agistment of cattle, it must be alleged that they were agisted at the request of the defendant. Smith v. Heap, 5 D. P. C. 11; 2 H. & W. 89.

An affidavit for money paid to and for the use of the defendant, which did not state that the money was paid at the request of the defendant, was held bad. Marshall v. Davison, 2 Tyr. 315.

So, in another case, in K. B., an affidavit for money lent, and for goods sold and delivered, and for work and labour done, is irregular if it omits to state that it was "at the instance and request of the defendant," although it stated that it was "to and for his use, and on his behalf." Durnford v. Messiter, 5 M. & S. 446.

But in one case an affidavit for work done for the defendant, without adding "at his request," was held sufficient. Anon, 1 Chit. 331.

An affidavit for money paid for the use and benefit of the defendant, without adding "at his request," was held insufficient. Pitt v. New, 3 M. & R. 129; 8 B. & C. 654.

But in C. P., it was held, that an affidavit for money paid for a defendant and advanced to him need not state a request, as it was said that such request must be generally inferred. Berry v. Fernandes, 8 Moore, 332; 1 Bing. 338.

An affidavit, stating that defendant was indebted to plaintiffs in 130*l.* and upwards, for work and labour done, and for paper found by plaintiffs and their servants, in and about the printing of a certain book of defendant's, and at his request, was held to be sufficient to shew that the work was done, and the materials found for the defendant at his instance. Gale v. Lockie, 6 M. & S. 228.

An affidavit that the defendant "before and at the time of the commencement of this suit, was, and still is, justly and truly indebted to the deponent in 100*l.* for work done, and materials for the same provided, and goods manufactured and made by the deponent for the defendant, and at his request," is bad. Pontifex v. De Maltzoff, 1 Ex. 436; 17 L. J., Ex. 55.

An affidavit that the defendant was indebted to the deponent in 337*l.*, that is to say, 267*l.* 16*s.*, being the amount of debt, and 69*l.* 4*s.*, the amount of costs, respectively paid by the deponent to C. in an action on a bill of exchange drawn by B. and accepted by the deponent on the request of the defendant, conveyed through B., or his clerk, and for the accommodation of the defendant:—Held, that the affidavit was not vitiated by the statement of the medium of the request, and that it disclosed a good cause of action for the costs. Stratton v. Mathews, 3 Ex. 48; 6 D. & L. 229; 18 L. J., Ex. 5; 12 Jur. 924. See also cases ante.

e. Agreements.

Generally.—An allegation "that the defendant was indebted in a certain sum upon and by virtue of a charter-party of affreightment, bearing date, &c., for and on account of the hire of a ship called the S., let to hire by the plaintiff to the defendant, and by him taken for a voyage from the port of L. to P.:"—was held sufficiently certain. Skeen v. McGregor, 8 Moore, 107; 1 Bing. 242.

Stating that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff by virtue of articles of agreement, by which the latter agreed to sell and the former agreed to purchase certain lands, and that the defendant had been let into possession in pursuance of the agreement, is insufficient, without stating that a conveyance had been tendered to the defendant. Young v. Dowdman, 2 Y. & J. 31.

Where a plaintiff seeks to hold a defendant to bail for a sum of money to which he alleges he has rendered himself liable for the defendant, he must shew clearly that the liability has been incurred. Townsend v. Barns, 1 D. P. C. 562; 2 C. & J. 468.

It is not sufficient to state "that the defendant was indebted for money lent by the plaintiff to the defendant for the use of another, and for which the defendant promised to be accountable and to repay, or caused to be secured to the plaintiff," it not appearing in the affidavit, but that the money had been secured according to the agreement. Jacks v. Pemberton, 5 T. R. 552.

An affidavit that the defendant was indebted in 1,000*l.* "under an agreement in writing, whereby the defendant undertook to pay the plaintiff the balance of accounts, which balance is due and unpaid," without stating that the balance was 1,000*l.*, was held to be defective. Hatfield v. Linguard, 6 T. R. 217.

Consideration for.—An affidavit on articles of agreement should state the consideration. Walker v. Gregory, 1 D. P. C. 24.

An affidavit "that the defendant was indebted in 1,000*l.* upon and by virtue of a memorandum in writing, signed by the defendant, whereby he promised the plaintiff, that, when he returned in the month of March or April then next, he would marry her, or pay her 1,000*l.*," without shewing any mutual consideration on the part of the plaintiff to sustain the defendant's promise, is insufficient, as a court can take nothing by intendment in an affidavit. Macpherson v. Lovie, 2 D. & R. 69; 1 B. & C. 108.

An affidavit that defendant was indebted to plaintiff in a certain sum, under a deed by which defendant had covenanted to pay certain sums, "at certain times, and on certain events past and happened," is sufficient. Barnard v. Neville, 3 Bing. 126; 10 Moore, 475.

But, an affidavit stating that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff so much "for interest money, under and by virtue of an agreement," is not sufficient. Brook v. Trist, 10 East, 358.

Stating that the plaintiff had furnished goods to the amount of 2,000*l.* to N., for whom the defendant undertook to be answerable; that N. had since failed, and paid 4*s.* in the pound only; and that 1,000*l.* remained due to the plaintiff:—Held, sufficient. Collins v. Wallis, 11 Moore, 248.

Where there is a Penalty.—A party cannot be held to bail for a penalty, but only for the sum secured by the penalty. Hatfield v. Linguard, 6 T. R. 217; S. P., Edwards v. Williams, 5 Taunt. 247.

Therefore, in an action upon a bond conditioned for an indemnification, the defendant ought not to be held to bail for the penalty, but only for the amount of the damage incurred. Kirk v. Strickland, 2 Dougl. 449.

A defendant may be arrested for sums paid by plaintiff as obligor of an indemnity bond, as for liquidated damages, if the sum the plaintiff has been called on to pay can be ascertained. Anderson v. Bell, 2 Tyr. 732; 2 C. & J. 630.

Upon a bond conditioned for paying a less sum by instalments and interest, though a part only of the instalments is due, the obligee may arrest for the aggregate amount of all the instalments, and the interest accrued due before the action brought. Talbot v. Hodson, 5 Marsh. 527; 7 Taunt. 251.

f. Awards.

Submission to Arbitration.—An affidavit on an award ought to state the fact of the submission to, and the making of, the award; and that the money was due at a day past. Anon., 1 D. P. C. 5.

Directing Money to be Paid on Demand.—An affidavit on an award, directing money to be paid upon demand, not alleging a demand, is insufficient. Driver v. Hood, 1 M. & R. 324; 7 B. & C. 494.

For Damages.—But an affidavit "for damages awarded, and for costs and expenses taxed and allowed," is sufficiently certain; for, it will be inferred that the award and taxation are such as will support an action. Jenkins v. Law, 1 B. & P. 365.

g. Bills and Notes.

Name of Drawer not Stated.—An affidavit for principal and interest on a bill of exchange drawn and accepted by the defendant, and payable to the deponent at a day past, is sufficient, although it does not state who is the drawer. Harrison v. Rigby, 3 M. & W. 66; 6 D. P. C. 93; M. & H. 362; 1 Jur. 897.

Certainty required.—An affidavit of debt on a bill of exchange at three days' sight, stating that more than three days had elapsed since the defendant had received sight thereof, but not saying the day when he had had sight, is good. Maynard v. Reynolds, W. W. & D. 394.

An affidavit that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in 500*l.*, for principal moneys due upon a bill of exchange, without stating the sum for which the bill was drawn, is bad. Fouell v. Petre, 1 N. & P. 227; 5 D. P. C. 276; 5 A. & E. 818; 2 H. & W. 379; S. P., Robins v. Grant, W. W. & D. 373.

An affidavit that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in a certain sum upon the balance of a bill of exchange, drawn by the plaintiff upon and accepted by the defendant, and due at a day past, is sufficient. Walmesley v. Dibdin, 4 M. & P. 10.

An affidavit stating that R. S., H. A., R. R., and B. S. were jointly indebted to the plaintiff on a bill of exchange "accepted (in the name and firm of A. and Co.) by the said R. S., H. A., R. R., and B. S., or one of them :"—Held, insufficient. Harmer v. Ashby, 10 Moore, 323.

In an affidavit a plaintiff stated that the defendant was indebted to him as indorsee of a bill of exchange. The declaration was, on a foreign bill, held no variance. Phillips v. Don or Dan, 6 D. & L. 527; 18 L. J., Q. B. 104; 13 Jur. 455.

Must shew that they are due.—It is necessary to state when the bill or note is payable, or that it is overdue. Kirk v. Almond, 1 D. P. C. 318; 2 C. & J. 354; 2 Tyr. 316; S. P., Bill v. Rogers, 12 Price, 194; Jackson v. Yate, 2 M. & S. 148.

An affidavit, which states that the defendant is indebted on a bill, which was payable at a day past, is sufficient, without stating that the bill was not paid when due, or that it is still unpaid. Phillips v. Turner, 3 D. P. C. 163; 1 C., M. & R. 597; 5 Tyr. 196.

The date of bills or notes need not be stated, if it appears in the affidavit that the day of payment of the bills or notes is past. Shirley v. Jacobs, 3 D. P. C. 101; 1 Scott, 67; S. P., Irving v. Heaton, 4 D. P. C. 638; 2 Scott, 798; Weedon v. Medley, 2 D. P. C. 689.

"That the defendant was indebted in a certain sum, as indorsee of a bill drawn by E. F. upon and accepted by the defendant, payable to the order of E. F. at a day past," is equally sufficient and certain. Lamb v. Edwards, 5 Moore, 14; 2 B. & B. 343.

An affidavit that the defendant was indebted as indorsee of a bill of exchange, without alleging the bill to have become due, was held sufficient. Daivson v. March, 1 N. R. 157.

Must shew Title to sue.—An affidavit on bills or notes must shew how the plaintiff became entitled to recover upon them. Balbi v. Batley, 1 Marsh. 424; 6 Taunt. 25.

In an affidavit by an indorsee of a bill, it must be stated by whom the bill was indorsed; it is insufficient to state that the bill was duly indorsed. Lewis v. Gompertz, 1 D. P. C. 819; 2 C. & J. 352; S. P., Woolley v. Escudier, 2 M. & Scott, 392.

Thus, an affidavit that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff upon a note for 10,000*l.*, drawn in favour of Inglis, Ellice & Co., and duly indorsed to the plaintiff, is insufficient, because it did not state any indorsement from the payee (the defendant) to the plaintiff. M'Taggart v. Ellice, 4 Bing. 114; 12 Moore, 826.

It is not necessary that the deponent should describe himself as the indorsee, if he traces title to himself; nor is it necessary to allege the default of the maker. James v. Trevanion, 5 D. P. C. 275; 2 H. & W. 332.

Stating that the defendant is indebted, as indorsee of a bill of exchange, drawn by one T. W. at a day now past, is not sufficient without stating in what character the defendant became liable. Humphries v. Williams, 2 Marsh. 231; S. C., nom. Humphries v. Winslow, 6 Taunt. 531.

Nor is a statement that the defendant is indebted "on a bill of exchange, drawn by the defendant upon, and accepted by A. B.; and on another drawn by the plaintiff upon, and accepted by the defendant;" without stating the dates of the bills, or that they were due and unpaid. Semble, that it is not necessary, in such case, to state the character in which the plaintiff is entitled to sue upon them. Machu v. Fraser, 2 Marsh. 483; 7 Taunt. 171.

So, a statement that the defendant was "justly indebted to the plaintiff in 100*l.* upon and by virtue of a certain bill of exchange drawn by the defendant, and long since due and unpaid," was held sufficient, without stating in what character the bill was due to the plaintiff, whether as payee or indorsee. Bradshaw v. Saddington, 7 East, 94; 3 Smith, 117.

Necessary Averments.—An affidavit on a bill (by indorsee against acceptor) needs not aver a presentment for payment. Osborne v. Pennell, 4 M. & Scott, 431.

An affidavit to hold the drawer of a bill, or indorser of a note, to bail, should state that the acceptor or maker had not paid the amount. Crosby v. Clarke, 1 M. & W. 296; 5 D. P. C. 62; 2 Gale, 77.

A statement, that the amount "is now due and unpaid," will not supply the omission of an allegation of default by the acceptor. Jones v. Collins, 6 D. P. C. 526; 1 W., W. & H. 187.

So where an affidavit alleged that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff on the bill which was overdue, and that the money was still due and owing, but it omitted to aver either presentment or notice. Held bad. Simpson v. Dick, 3 D. P. C. 731.

But in another case it was held sufficient to allege a default by the acceptor, without averring a presentment or notice. Witham v. Gompertz, 4 D. P. C. 382; 2 C., M. & R. 736; 1 Gale, 301; 1 Tyr. & G. 6.

An affidavit by indorsee against drawer of a bill which does not aver presentment and default by acceptor is insufficient. Hopkinson v. Salem-bier, 7 D. P. C. 493; 3 Jur. 538.

h. Bonds.

Generally.—An affidavit on a bond must shew that the bond is due and payable at the time of the arrest. Smith v. Kendall, 7 D. & R. 232.

An affidavit, stating the defendant to be indebted to the plaintiff generally, on a bond conditioned for the performance of an award, which award directed F. to pay a sum of money on demand, was held defective, as it did not appear how the defendant was indebted; and that no demand was expressed to have been made on F. for payment. Armstrong v. Stratton, 1 Moore, 110; 7 Taunt. 405.

Condition of, must be set forth.—A statement "that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in 6,000*l.* upon a bond, made and entered into by the defendant to the plaintiff in the penal sum of 25,000*l.*," without shewing the condition of the bond, is insufficient. Boranguet v. Fillis, 4 M. & S. 330.

But a statement that the defendant was indebted, "for principal and interest due on a bond," was held sufficient to express that such bond was conditioned for the payment of money, without setting forth the condition. Byland v. King, 1 Moore, 24; 7 Taunt. 275.

Amount of Default.—The affidavit must shew that the number of defaults in payments amounts to 20*l.* Chambers v. Ward, 1 D. P. C. 139.

i. Other Causes of Action.

Amount due under Deed.—An affidavit that the defendant was indebted upon and by virtue of a mortgage deed in 500*l.*, by which he covenanted to pay that sum at a certain day then past, is sufficient, without averring that the money was not paid at the appointed day. Masters v. Billing, 3 D. P. C. 751.

An affidavit grounded on a covenant by deed to pay a certain sum at a day named, is good, if it states the defendant to be indebted to the plaintiff, upon and by virtue of the indenture, in the said sum, "at a day now passed," without alleging it to be due and unpaid. Lambert v. Wray, 1 C., M. & R. 576; 3 D. P. C. 169; 5 Tyr. 195.

Where an affidavit states the defendant to be indebted in 304*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*, "principal and interest," by virtue of an indenture covenanting to pay 300*l.*; the amount of principal and interest is sufficiently distinguished. Jones v. Collins, 6 D. P. C. 526; 1 W. W. & H. 187; 2 Jur. 374.

An affidavit set forth an indenture of mortgage with a proviso for re-conveyance on payment of the moneys therein mentioned; and also a covenant on the part of the defendant, and that "there was, and is still due to the deponent the sum of 9,000*l.* and upwards, for moneys, after the date of the indenture, paid and advanced by the deponent for the use and on the account of W. W.; and for work done by the deponent after the date of the indenture, as the agent of and for W. W., and on his retainer; and for interest upon the said moneys so as aforesaid paid and advanced, being computed from the respective times of such moneys being advanced and paid by the said deponent as aforesaid." (The covenant contained an obligation to pay interest.) "And so this deponent says, that the said W. W. now is justly and truly indebted to this deponent upon the said covenant in the said sum of 9,000*l.* of lawful British money." It was objected, that this affidavit was bad; for omitting the words "at the request" of the defendant; for being argumentative, and not positive; for not alleging that the debt was due from the defendant, and for improperly including interest:—Held, that the covenant between the parties dispensed with the necessity of inserting "at the request;" that the omission to allege that the debt was due from the defendant, was, under the terms of the covenant, allowable; and that, under the contract to pay interest, it was enough, in alleging interest to be due, to conform with the covenant. Boddington v. Woodley, W. W. & D. 581; 1 Jur. 960.

Goods Sold and Delivered.—Before the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 3, an affidavit for goods sold must have stated that they were delivered as well as sold. Loisada v. Moryoseph, 8 Moore, 366; S. C., nom. Lascar v. Morioseph, 1 Bing. 357.

Therefore a defendant could not be held to bail on an affidavit stating that he was indebted for goods bargained and sold, without saying also delivered. Hopkins v. Vaughan, 12 East, 398; S. P., Bell v. Thrupp, 2 B. & A. 596.

But in an affidavit, that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 25*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*, being the balance of account for railway shares sold by him to the defendant:—Held, that s. 3 of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, applied to actions for damages, and therefore the affidavit need not state that the shares were delivered as well as sold. Hargreaves v. Hayes, 5 El. & Bl. 272; 24 L. J., Q. B. 281; 1 Jur., N. S. 521.

It must also state that they were sold by the plaintiff. Perkes v. Severn, 7 East, 194; S. P., Taylor v. Forbes, 11 East, 315.

It is not sufficient to state a debt to be for goods sold and appraised to the defendant, without saying "by the plaintiff." Fenton v. Ellis, 1 Marsh. 535; 6 Taunt. 192.

Money Lent.—In an affidavit for a certain sum of money had and received, and money lent, it is not necessary to distinguish how much is due on each account. Hague v. Levi, 1 D. P. C. 720; 9 Bing. 595; 2 M. & Scott, 729.

An affidavit that the defendant is indebted "on balance of account for money paid, laid out, and expended by the plaintiff to and for the defendant, and at his request; and for money had and received by the defendant for the plaintiff; and for interest of moneys due by the defendant to the plaintiff," is not sufficiently certain. Visger v. Delegal, 2 B. & Ad. 571; 1 D. P. C. 333.

An affidavit for "money lent and advanced and interest thereon," is bad. Callum v. Leeson, 2 C. & M. 406; 2 D. P. C. 381; 4 Tyr. 266.

So, for money lent, without stating by whom the money was lent. Smith v. Stevens, 3 Tyr. 219.

An affidavit that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff for money had and received by the defendant, for and on account of the plaintiff and at his request, but not adding that it was received to the plaintiff's use, is insufficient. Kelly v. Curzon, 4 A. & E. 622; 1 H. & W. 678.

An affidavit by a manager of a bank in the following form: "J. H., manager of the Ripon branch of the Yorkshire bank, maketh oath and saith, that A. is indebted unto J. S., as one of the registered public officers of the Yorkshire bank, in 50*l.* for money lent by this deponent, as such manager as aforesaid," is irregular under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 9, in not shewing that the manager was authorized to lend the money; but it is not altogether bad. Spencer v. Newton, 1 N. & P. 823; W. W. & D. 232; 6 A. & E. 630, n.

Account Stated.—An affidavit for money due from the defendant to the plaintiff, "on an account stated between them," is sufficient. Balmanno v. May, 6 D. P. C. 306; 2 Jur. 109; S. P., Debenham v. Chambers, 6 D. P. C. 101.

So, for money due "on the balance of an account stated," without the words "and settled," Tyler v. Campbell, 5 D. P. C. 632; 4 Scott, 384; 3 Bing. N. C. 675; 3 Hodges, 79; 1 Jur. 310.

An allegation of debt "for the balance of account," or "for the balance of principal money on a bill of exchange," is defective; it should be stated that the balance was on an account "stated." Jones v. Collins, 6 D. P. C. 526; 1 W. W. & H. 187; 2 Jur. 374.

An affidavit, that the defendant was indebted "on the balance of an account for goods sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant," is sufficient, without stating that it was an account stated between the parties. Kerrick v. Davies, 9 M. & W. 22; 1 D., N. S. 347; 7 Jur. 1013.

Interest.—An affidavit claiming part of an integral sum for interest should shew that it arose from some contract for the payment of interest. Neale v. Snoultten, 3 D. & L. 422; 2 C. B. 320; 15 L. J., C. P. 48; 9 Jur. 1058.

An affidavit that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 300*l.* for money paid, to and for his use, and at his request, and for interest due and owing from and agreed to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiff for and in respect thereof, is sufficient. Hutchinson v. Hargrave, 1 Scott, 269; 1 Bing. N. C. 369.

In an affidavit to hold to bail, it was stated that a sum was due for money lent and advanced, and for money due and payable for interest upon, and for the forbearance of divers sums of money due and payable and by the plaintiff forborne at the request of the defendant:—Held, that a special contract to pay interest was not sufficiently stated. Drake v. Harding, 4 D. P. C. 34; 1 H. & W. 364.

An affidavit, that a sum is due for principal and interest on a promissory note for a certain amount bearing interest, is sufficient without distinguishing how much is due for principal, and how much for interest. Id.

Torts.—An affidavit to hold to bail in an action for criminal conversation with the plaintiff's wife, stated that she had been taken away from the plaintiff about two years ago, and that the plaintiff had only recently discovered that she had been living ever since with the defendant in adultery, but omitted any positive averment that she was the plaintiff's wife when she was taken away, or that the defendant had committed adultery with her:—Held, sufficient. Bullock v. Jenkins, 1 L., M. & P. 645; 20 L. J., Q. B. 90.

J. Defects in.

Effect of being bad in part.—When distinct sums are alleged to be due, each for an independent cause of action, and some of the causes of action are defectively, and others properly stated, the affidavit though bad in part is not bad altogether. Jones v. Collins, 6 D. P. C. 526; 2 Jur. 374. See Baker v. Wills, 2 C. & M. 415; 3 Tyr. 182.

If an affidavit is good as to one distinct sum stated in it, and this be an arrestable amount, it is no objection that it is bad as to another sum stated in it, unless it appears that process was issued for the whole amount, and not for the former sum only. Cauvce v. Rigby, 3 M. & W. 67; M. & H. 363.

If an affidavit discloses a good cause of action as to part only of the amount for which a defendant is arrested, and the valid portion is separable from the defective part, a judge has power to make a second order upon the same affidavit, reducing the sum for which the defendant is to give bail to the amount of the debt properly sworn to. Cunliffe v. Maltass, 6 D. & L. 723; 7 C. B. 695; 18 L. J., C. P. 233; 13 Jur. 751.

Time of taking advantage of.—A defendant having been arrested on an affidavit which was irregular and not a nullity, obtained a rule to be discharged out of custody upon another ground, which rule having been discharged, the court refused, on an application in a subsequent term, to discharge the defendant out of custody for such defect in the affidavit, he not swearing that his attention had not been drawn to the irregularity at or before the time of the previous application. Spencer v. Newton, 6 A. & E. 630, n.; 1 N. & P. 823.

Two months' delay in taking an objection to an affidavit, that it is not sworn before a proper commissioner, is not a waiver of it. Sharpa v. Johnson, 4 D. P. C. 324; 2 Scott, 407; 1 Hodges, 298; 2 Bing. N. C. 246.

A defendant does not waive a defect in the affidavit by applying for particulars, or demanding a declaration. Hodgson v. Dowell, 3 M. & W. 284.

Where a defendant is held to bail, or detained by virtue of a judge's order, he is not bound to apply either to the same or to another judge at chambers to rescind the order, or to discharge him from custody, on the ground of defects in the affidavit of debt: the application is properly delayed till the court is sitting. Johnson v. Kennedy, 4 D. P. C. 345; 2 Scott, 419.

5. APPLICATION FOR ORDER.

To whom made.—The power to arrest is specially given to a single judge, and not to the court. Harvey v. O'Meara, 7 D. P. C. 725; 3 Jur. 629.

An application for an order for a capias cannot be made to the courts at Westminster, but it may be made to a single judge sitting there. Bentley v. Berrey, 7 M. & W. 146; 4 Jur. 1018; S. P., Barnett v. Craw, 1 D., N. S. 774; 6 Jur. 421.

A judge has a discretion as to granting an order. Stein v. Valkenhuisen, El. Bl. & El. 65; 27 L. J., Q. B. 236; 4 Jur., N. S. 411.

Affidavits used on.]—A warrant to arrest a debtor having been issued under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52, an order to hold to bail may be made upon examined copies of the affidavits filed in the Court of Bankruptcy. Pearce v. Martin, 16 Jur. 270.

An affidavit may be sworn before a writ of summons has been issued. King v. Reg. (in error), 14 Q. B. 31; 18 L. J., Q. B. 253; 13 Jur. 742—Ex. Ch.

Where an order has been made to hold to bail, it is not necessary that the affidavit upon which it was made should shew that a writ of summons has been first issued; as the court will intend that the fact was proved to the satisfaction of the judge. Bullock v. Jenkins, 1 L. M. & P. 645; 20 L. J., Q. B. 90.

On the application a plaintiff may use affidavits made in another court, in an action against the same defendant, at the suit of a different plaintiff. Langston v. Wetherall, 2 D. & L. 858; 14 M. & W. 104; 14 L. J., Ex. 229.

G. WRIT OF CAPIAS.

Form of.]—A capias may be issued into a county palatine, although indorsed for a less sum than 50*l*. Brown v. McMillan, 7 M. & W. 196; 8 D. P. C. 852; 4 Jur. 1090.

A capias was regular in form, but the copy served omitted the form of action:—Held such an irregularity as to render the service void, although the bail bond given by the defendant, upon his arrest, properly recited the form of action. Copley v. Medeiros, 7 M. & G. 426; 2 D. & L. 74; 8 Scott, N. R. 172; 13 L. J., C. P. 148.

In a capias, and in the copy served, it was directed to the sheriffs instead of the sheriff of Middlesex:—Held, an irregularity; that, though the court or a judge might amend the writ, they had no power over the copy; and that the defendant was entitled to his discharge, though the writ was amended, on the ground of variance from it and the copy. Moore v. Magan or McGhan, 16 M. & W. 95; 4 D. & L. 267; 16 L. J., Ex. 57.

In a capias the direction was left in blank, without stating sheriff or county or place, and there was no day or year in the teste:—Held, not to be amendable, and the court discharged the defendant out of custody. Rennie v. Bruce, 2 D. & L. 946; 14 L. J., Q. B. 207; 9 Jur. 597.

A capias was indorsed, "This writ was issued by H. W. N. of the Fleet Prison, in the parish of St. Bride, in the city of London, the plaintiff in person:—Held, sufficient. Needham v. Bristowe, 4 Scott, N. R. 773; 4 M. & G. 262; 1 D., N. S. 700.

After the lapse of twenty days, the court will not discharge a defendant out of custody, on the ground that his addition was not indorsed on the capias, unless he shews circumstances to excuse the delay. Davis v. Watkins, 12 L. J., Q. B. 293.

Misdescription of Name.]—A capias will not be set aside for mere error in the christian name of the judge and surplussage in the statement of his title. Folkard v. Fitzatubba, 1 F. & F. 376.

A defendant was arrested under a capias, in which he was described as William Mortlock, but in the copy served was called William Mortlake: the court refused to discharge him out of custody on the ground of irregularity. Macdonald v. Mortlock, 2 D. & L. 963; 14 L. J., Q. B. 244; 10 Jur. 432.

Where a writ was to take Christopher Hooper, and the English notice was directed to Christopher Wood, the court set aside the service for irregularity with costs. Wright v. Hooper, 2 C. & J. 236.

Irregularly obtained.]—An affidavit having been sworn by a party, and marked with the initials of the judge's clerk, was not signed by the judge until after the capias was issued and executed:—Held, that the order, capias and subsequent proceedings ought to be set aside. Bell or Bell v. Bament, 8 M. & W. 317; 9 D. P. C. 810; 5 Jur. 510.

Amount Endorsed on.]—A judge made an order for the arrest of a defendant for 422*l*.; the capias was endorsed for 422*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*. (the real amount of the debt). The court refused to discharge the defendant out of custody, and directed the writ to be amended on payment by the plaintiff of the costs of the application for the discharge. Plock v. Pacheco, 9 M. & W. 342; 1 D., N. S. 380.

An order for a capias was drawn up by mistake for a less sum than that sworn to, the capias was indorsed for the less sum, and a bail bond was executed in a penal sum for the amount of such lesser sum:—Held, that on payment of the lesser sum and costs, though making a sum less than the penal sum in the bond, the bail were entitled to have the bond delivered up, and to be discharged. Jonas v. Pepper, 1 El. & El. 327.

A capias may be issued into a county palatine although indorsed for a less sum than 50*l*. Brown v. McMillan, 7 M. & W. 196; 8 D. P. C. 852; 4 Jur. 1090.

Who can obtain.]—A capias can only be obtained by a person who is plaintiff in the action and after the commencement of it. Williams v. Griffith, 6 D. & L. 449; 3 Ex. 584.

Effect of.]—A capias, together with the arrest and proceedings under it, either by putting in and perfecting special bail, or depositing and paying money into court, is altogether collateral to the process in the suit, and does not cure any irregularity in it. Vizetelly v. Wickof, 9 Jur. 453; S. P., Ireland v. Berry, D. & M. 505; 5 Q. B. 561.

The court has no power to compel the keeper of a gaol to accept a capias, in order that it may operate as a detainer against a party already in custody. Edwards v. Robertson, 3 Jur. 1106.

7. RESCINDING ORDER.

a. Jurisdiction.

By the Court.]—The court has power to order a party arrested on a capias to be discharged, either under the authority given by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 6, or in virtue of the general jurisdiction which the court previously possessed over a single judge acting in matters pending in the court. Graham v. Sandrinelli, 16 M. & W. 191; 4 D. & L. 317; 16 L. J., Ex. 67; 10 Jur. 1061.

By a Judge.—Where a judge is of opinion that an order to hold to bail ought not to have been made, the proper course is not to set aside the order, but simply to discharge the defendant out of custody. Burness or Burnets v. Guirnorich, 7 D. & L. 235; 4 Ex. 520; 19 L. J., Ex. 110.

Application to the Court.—An application to the court to set aside an order is an original motion, not an application to revise the discretion exercised by the judge. Lamond v. Eiffe, 3 G. & D. 256; 3 Q. B. 910; 12 L. J., Q. B. 12; 6 Jur. 1038.

A defendant, who has obtained a rule to be discharged out of custody, on the ground of the affidavits not shewing sufficiently that he was about to leave England, will not be permitted to advert to the circumstances that it did not appear by the affidavits that any process had been issued in the cause. Willis v. Snook, 8 M. & W. 147; 5 Jur. 579.

It is competent to a defendant to apply to the court to be discharged out of custody, although he has already applied for that purpose, but in vain, to the judge who made the order for his arrest. Bullock v. Jenkins, 1 L., M. & P. 645; 20 L. J., Q. B. 90.

Affidavits used on.—In showing cause against a rule to rescind an order, for the arrest of a party, or for refusing his discharge, either party may read other affidavits than those used before the judge. Gibbons v. Spalding, 11 M. & W. 173; 2 D., N. S. 746; 12 L. J., Ex. 185; 7 Jur. 377.

But those used before the judge ought to be before the court. Heath v. Nesbitt, 11 M. & W. 669; 2 D., N. S. 1041; 12 L. J., Ex. 408; 7 Jur. 586; S. P., Needham v. Brintow, 4 M. & G. 262; 4 Scott, N. R. 773; 1 D., N. S. 700.

Where a judge has made an order, and, on a second application, has refused to rescind it, an affidavit on which a rule to rescind that order is obtained need not mention the second application, except to account for the delay in applying to the court for the rule. Thomas v. Evans, 12 L. J., Ex. 41.

A defendant appealing to the court may use affidavits to dispute the cause of action; and the plaintiff may answer by counter affidavits; but the court will not discharge the defendant under such circumstances, unless it appears most clearly that the plaintiff has no cause of action. Pegler v. Hislop, 5 D. & L. 223; 1 Ex. 437; 17 L. J., Ex. 53; 11 Jur. 996.

On application to the court to be discharged the party may use affidavits to contradict or explain those on which the order was granted, and those affidavits may be answered by the plaintiff on shewing cause. Graham v. Sandrini, 16 M. & W. 191; 4 D. & L. 317; 16 L. J., Ex. 67.

When to be made.—An application to set aside an arrest must be made promptly. Sugars v. Concannon, 5 M. & W. 30; 7 D. P. C. 391.

In order to excuse delay on the ground of a previous application at chambers, the rule must be drawn up on reading the summons, or it must be shewn by affidavit. Ib.

Where a defendant seeks to obtain his discharge on the ground of a substantial objection to his arrest, he is not bound to apply before the expiration of the time for putting in bail. Walker v. Lumb, 9 D. P. C. 131; 1 W. P. C. 8; 4 Jur. 1014.

Form of.—Where a defendant has been arrested by an order made upon insufficient affidavits, an application for his discharge should be by motion to set aside the order, not the capias. Hopkinson v. Salembier, 7 D. P. C. 493; 5 M. & W. 423; 3 Jur. 538.

To support a rule by a defendant to rescind a judge's order, he must swear positively that "he is not about to leave England." Robinson v. Gardner, 7 D. P. C. 716.

Where sufficient has been shewn to indicate that he has an intention of quitting England, the court will not discharge him, even though he swears he never contemplated leaving England, and most positively not for the place alleged in the affidavit on which he was held to bail. Dunoon v. Jacobs, 3 Jur. 1149.

b. Grounds.

Absence of Cause of Action.—The court will entertain an application for the discharge of a party arrested, or for the restoration of money deposited on the arrest, where it plainly appears that the plaintiff has no cause of action. Sammers v. Hughes, 18 C. B. 527; 25 L. J., C. P. 247; 2 Jur., N. S. 572; S. P., Pegler v. Hislop, 1 Ex. 437; 17 L. J., Ex. 53; 11 Jur. 996; Copeland v. Child, 22 L. J., Q. B. 279; 17 Jur. 506; Burns v. Chapman, 5 C. B., N. S. 481; 28 L. J., C. P. 6; 5 Jur., N. S. 19; 7 W. R. 89.

It is no ground for rescinding an order for a capias, that the plaintiff, when he comes to declare, may have to rely upon a cause of action different from that stated in the affidavit upon which the order was obtained. Burns v. Chapman, 5 C. B., N. S. 481; 28 L. J., C. P. 6.

The court will only interfere where it clearly appears that the obtaining the order is an abuse of its process. Ib.

Writ of Summons.—Though a writ of summons must be sued out before a capias can be applied for, it is not necessary that the defendant should be served with a copy previously to his arrest; but where there has been no service of the writ, the court will grant a rule to discharge the defendant out of custody, unless served within a limited time. Brooke v. Snell, 8 D. P. C. 370; 4 Jur. 340.

Where Arrest Preconcerted or Fraudulent.—A creditor, by a concerted fraud, induced his debtor, who resided abroad, to come to England, and immediately had him arrested. The court set the proceedings aside, as an abuse of the process of the court. Stein v. Valkenhuyzen, El. Bl. & El. 65; 27 L. J., Q. B. 236; 4 Jur., N. S. 411.

For not Declaring.—A defendant is not entitled to be discharged, by reason of the plaintiff not having declared against him within a year; but the proper course is to proceed by judgment of non pros. Turner v. Parker, 2 D. & L. 444.

Against Good Faith.—The court refused to interfere summarily to discharge a defendant out of custody, on the ground that the arrest was against good faith, in being made for the whole debt, after an engagement to receive the amount by instalments. Udall v. Nelson, 4 N. & M. 637; 2 A. & E. 215; 1 H. & W. 177.

Where Debt has been Paid.]—If the debt and costs in an action have been paid to the plaintiff, no matter by whom, the defendant is entitled to be discharged. Rimmer v. Turner, 3 D. P. C. 601.

Where Debtor has been adjudicated a Bankrupt.]—A party was adjudicated bankrupt in April, 1857; he did not surrender, but went abroad for some years, coming back to England from time to time under a feigned name, and communicating with some of his assignees. In March, 1863, while in England, he was arrested on a claim of debt for 50,000*l.* on a capias to hold to bail, on the ground that he was about to leave the country. He surrendered to the bankruptcy in July, 1863. The plaintiff had, in 1858, applied to the commissioner of bankruptcy to admit the debt as a claim, but the commissioner had refused on the ground that the debt was for money lent by a banking company, which was not a legal company because it had not paid up a sufficient portion of the subscribed capital. The defendant swore that he did not intend to leave the country at the time of his arrest, nor since, but purposed to remain in England to assist his assignees; he also stated that his health was suffering seriously from the confinement. He had not passed his last examination:—Held, that he was not entitled to be discharged from custody. Steward v. Waugh, 33 L. J., Q. B. 86; 9 L. T. 729.

8. MALICIOUSLY OBTAINING ORDER.

When an Action will lie for.]—An action for maliciously arresting on a capias lies only where the party obtaining the order has imposed on the judge by some false statement or suggestio falsi, and thereby satisfied him of the existence of the debt to the requisite amount, and that there was reasonable ground for supposing that the debtor was about to quit the country. Daniels v. Fielding, 16 M. & W. 200; 4 D. & L. 329; 16 L. J., Ex. 153; 10 Jur. 1061.

A creditor receiving information from one person that his debtor is going abroad, and obtaining an order to arrest him on an affidavit, which is afterwards held to be insufficient and to some extent untrue, is not therefore liable to an action for maliciously obtaining the arrest without reasonable cause, there being enough to justify the belief that the debtor was going abroad, and the payment into court of a sum over 20*l.* is a sufficient admission of a debt to justify the application. Neveill v. Loadman, 2 F. & F. 313.

In an action for maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, causing the plaintiff to be arrested on a capias, the order for which had been obtained upon an affidavit not fairly disclosing the nature of the contract for the alleged breach of which the defendant was suing, the judge having stated that, in his opinion, the plaintiff had failed to make out a want of reasonable and probable cause, told the jury, that, to entitle the plaintiff to a verdict, the jury must be satisfied that there was a total want of reasonable and probable cause, and that the defendant had acted with malice:—Held, a misdirection. Gibbons v. Allison, 3 C. B. 181.

ARTIZANS.

Artisans' and Labourers' Dwellings Improvement Act, 1875—Improvement Scheme—Compensation for Ancient Lights.]—The provisions of the Artizans' and Labourers' Dwellings Improvement Act, 1875, with regard to the extinction of rights and easements in or relating to lands purchased by the local authority, apply to ancient lights in respect of premises adjoining the lands purchased, and the loss of such ancient lights is matter for compensation by the local authority according to the act. Badham v. Marrie, 52 L. J., Ch. 237 n.; 45 L. T. 579.

—Extinguishment of Easement affecting Land purchased by Local Authority—Right to Compensation.]—The effect of s. 20 of the Artizans' and Labourers' Dwellings Improvement Act, 1875, is that upon the purchase of land by a local authority for the purpose of carrying into effect a scheme under the act, all easements whatsoever affecting the land become thenceforth extinguished, subject only to this, that compensation is to be paid by the local authority to persons injured in manner provided by the section. Swainston v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 52 L. J., Ch. 235; 48 L. T. 634; 31 W. R. 498.

A local authority, under the powers of the above act, purchased and took a certain house for the purposes of an improvement scheme. The plaintiffs, the owners of adjoining land, claimed to be entitled to a right to support to a building thereon from the house so purchased, and brought an action to restrain the local authority from removing the house in such a way as to interfere with the plaintiffs' right to support. The local authority had taken no proceedings to purchase the alleged easement of the plaintiffs:—Held, that the only right the plaintiffs could have was to receive compensation under the above section, and that their action must therefore fail. Id.

Provisional Award—Final Award—Time when Ownership of Property passes.]—On the 23rd December, 1878, the Metropolitan Board of Works served a notice on B., the owner of certain houses, stating that they would be taken compulsorily under the Artizans' and Labourers' Dwellings Improvement Act, 1875, and an arbitrator was appointed. The arbitrator made his provisional award on the 18th March, and his final award on the 22nd July, 1880. On the 18th February, 1880, the Metropolitan Board of Works served a notice on B. that the houses were in a dangerous state, and requiring him to take down a portion and repair them, and on the 18th March a magistrate made an order that B. should take down a part and repair the buildings. This order not having been complied with, the Metropolitan Board of Works gave notice to B., on the 16th July, 1880, to hoard and take down the structure; and on the 19th July, the notice not having been complied with, the Metropolitan Board of Works incurred expenses to the amount of 26*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* in hoarding, and afterwards other expenses amounting in all to 78*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* It was contended, on the part of B., that at the time the expenses were incurred the provisional award had been made, and therefore he was not the "owner."—Held, that the ownership in the property was not transferred until the final award was made on the 22nd July, 1880, and therefore the Metropolitan Board of Works could recover the expenses from B. as being the owner when they were incurred. Barnet v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 46 L. T. 384; 46 J. P. 469.

Provisional Award altered by Arbitrator on Account of omission of Interest—Validity of Final Award.—The Metropolitan Board of Works, the "local authority" under the Artizans' and Labourers' Dwellings Improvement Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 36), served on the plaintiff, the lessee of property required for an improvement scheme, a notice for him to send in a statement as to the nature of his claim. This was done, but the arbitrator appointed under the act, through some omission, did not include the plaintiff's interest in his provisional award, framed pursuant to subs. 8 of the schedule to the act. The plaintiff subsequently received a two-days' notice to attend before the arbitrator that his claim might be considered. He attended accordingly, though under protest, and stated his claim, which was considered by the arbitrator, who altered his provisional award by inserting the amount of compensation awarded by him to the plaintiff in respect of his interest. This was confirmed by the final award under subs. 12. In an action to set aside the award:—Held, that, notwithstanding the omission of the plaintiff's interest from the provisional award, he was a "person interested" therein within the meaning of subs. 11, that the proceedings of the arbitrator in considering his claim under that subsection, and in altering the provisional award in respect of his interest under subs. 12, were regular, and that the final award was good. Carr v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 14 Ch. D. 807; 49 L. J., Ch. 272; 42 L. T. 354.

Held, also, that if there had been an irregularity, it would have been formal only, and would have been cured by the latter part of subs. 12. Ib.

Compensation—Duty of Arbitrator—Principle of Assessment.—When an arbitrator has been appointed under the Artizans' and Labourers' Dwellings Improvement Act, 1875, to assess compensation for lands proposed to be taken compulsorily under that act, it is his duty to assess the compensation for such lands upon the footing that the interest in respect of which a claim is made is an existing interest, and it is not his duty to decide whether the interest does or does not exist. Wilkins v. Birmingham (Mayor), 25 Ch. D. 78; 49 L. T. 468; 32 W. R. 118.

From the date when the local authority shall have published once in three successive weeks the particulars mentioned in s. 6 of the schedule to the Artizans' Dwellings Act, the relation of vendor and purchaser is created for the purpose of fixing the subject-matter of compensation, and the effect of the publication of such particulars is analogous to the effect of a notice to treat under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. Section 121 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, is incorporated in the Artizans' Dwellings Act. Ib.

I. EQUITABLE ASSIGNMENT.

See JUDICATURE ACT, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 6.

By Letter—Validity of.]—Where a cestui que trust by letter directed an executor to pay the share to which "I am entitled" or "due to me" to three persons equally, and such letter was adopted and acted on by all parties, the writer having died:—Held, that it was not necessary that an assignment, to be valid in equity, should be by deed, and therefore that such letter operated as an assignment of the whole share of the cestui que trust in the testator's estate, whether immediately payable or in reversion. Lambe v. Orton, 1 Drew. & Sm. 125; 29 L. J., Ch. 319.

A., having assured his life, wrote to the assurance company, "please to take notice that I wish to transfer my interest in the policies" to B. The letter was delivered to the company, and noted in their books:—Held, that this was a good equitable assignment as against a subsequent assignee of the policies, who had, in addition, obtained possession of them. Chowne v. Baylis, 31 Beav. 351; 31 L. J., Ch. 757.

By Parol.]—G., a few hours before his death, said to a creditor, "there is the wool which has gone to Doncaster; go and sell that wool; pay B. the balance due to him on such wool, and keep the remainder yourself:—Held, that these words created a valid equitable lien. Gurnell v. Gardiner, 4 Giff. 626; 9 Jur., N. S. 1220; 9 L. T. 367; 12 W. R. 67.

—Shares deposited as Security—Rights of Parties.]—A. deposited with B. share certificates in a company as security for a loan, and afterwards, by deed, assigned all his personal estate to C. and D., in trust for the benefit of his creditors. The assignees gave notice of the assignment to the company; but B. omitted to give notice of his equitable lien:—Held, that notwithstanding the omission of such notice, C. and D. could not maintain trover against B. for the certificates. Broadbent v. Varley, 12 C. B., N. S. 214.

By Agreement—When enforceable.]—An agreement for an advance in order to enable a contractor for railway works to execute them, on terms entitling the lender to a charge on the contract moneys, and to receive profits in lieu of interest, does not entitle the lender to any part of the benefit of the agreement for security, unless the advance was made to the stipulated extent and at the stipulated times, nor to any lien or charge for a small portion only of the stipulated advance. Twynnam v. Hudson, 4 De G., F. & J. 462.

By an Order for Payment on a third person—Lien.]—A. being indebted to B., gave him an authority addressed to C., from whom certain sums of money were accruing due to A., authorizing C. to pay those sums to B. Notice of this instrument was given to C.:—Held, first, that the authority was not such an order for the payment of money as would require a stamp; and secondly, that it was an equitable assignment of the moneys in C.'s hands to B., creating a lien or charge upon them which might be successfully set up by C. when served with a garnishee order by a subsequent judgment-creditor of A. Sawnderson v. Perrin, 22 L. T. 419.

—Liability to Assignee—Defence of.]—To an action for money due on an award, a plea, that the plaintiff assigned the debts to D. & Co., who gave notice thereof to the defendant, and that the assignment remained in force, and that the defendant still remained liable to pay D. & Co., that the action was not brought for the benefit of D. & Co., nor with their consent, and if the plaintiff recovered, the defendant would nevertheless be obliged to pay D. and Co., is good, as a court of equity would grant an unconditional injunction to restrain the plaintiff from suing for his own benefit. Jefferies v. Day, 1 L. R., Q. B. 372; 35 L. J., Q. B. 99.

Conditional promise not an Assignment.]—A promise to pay money when the debtor receives a debt due to him from a third person, does not constitute an equitable assignment, so as to charge the debt in the hands of such third person. Field v. Megaw, 4 L. R., C. P. 600.

A., having a cargo of wheat, brought by a vessel called the Maraquita, in the hands of a factor for sale, obtained from B. a loan of 500/.. for which he gave B. his acceptance at two months, describing the consideration to be "value received in wheat ex Maraquita," and they verbally agreed that the bill was to be renewed from time to time until A. should receive from the factor the proceeds of the wheat:—Held, that this did not charge the fund in the hands of the factor, so as to amount to an equitable assignment of, or an equitable charge upon, the fund. Id.

When attached—Effect on Garnishment.]—An equitable assignment of property which is subsequently attached, bars the garnishment, though notice of the assignment has not been given to the garnishee before the attachment. Robinson v. Nesbitt, 3 L. R., C. P. 264; 37 L. J., C. P. 124; 17 L. T. 653; 16 W. R. 543.

ASSIZES.

Circuit.]—A circuit is continuous from its commencement to its termination. Oxfordshire (Sheriff), In re, 2 C. & K. 200; S. P., Anon., Salk. 8.

Time during which Assizes Continue.]—Although, by contemplation of law, the whole time during which assizes continue at one place is considered for some purposes as one legal day, yet the particular day on which a conviction actually took place may be proved when necessary. Whitaker v. Wisbey, 12 C. B. 44; 21 L. J., C. P. 116; 16 Jur. 411.

Therefore, where a convicted felon made a bona fide assignment of goods after the commission day of the assizes, but before the day on which he was actually convicted:—Held, that the assignee could prove the actual day of the conviction, although the record mentioned only the commission day, and that the assignment was valid. Id.

Jurisdiction of Judges.]—A judge of assize has authority to order the court, or any part of it, to be cleared if quiet is not preserved in it, and the sheriff is bound to execute his orders and to preserve quiet; and if, instead of that, he incites his officers to disobey such orders, he is guilty of a high contempt of court. A placard issued by him, and posted on the outside of the wall of the court while the judge was sitting:—Held such a contempt. Surrey (Sheriff), In re, 2 F. & F. 236.

Quarter Sessions—How they are affected by.]—The authority of courts of quarter sessions, whether for a county or a borough, is not in law either determined or suspended by the coming of the judges into the county under their commission of assize, oyer and terminer, and general gaol delivery; although, generally speaking, it would be inconvenient and improper that courts of quarter sessions for counties should be held concurrently with the assizes for the same counties. Smith v. Reg. (in error), 13 Q. B. 738; 18 L. J., M. C. 212.

Warrant of Commitment for Contempt by.]—A court of assize being a superior court, a warrant of commitment for contempt need not set out the particulars of the contempt. Fernandez, Ex parte, 6 H. & N. 717; 7 Jur., N. S. 529; 4 L. T. 296; S. P., 10 C. B., N. S. 3; 30 L. J., C. P. 321; 7 Jur., N. S. 571; 4 L. T. 324; 9 W. R. 832.

Clerk of.]—Though the clerk of assize and clerk of arraigns act as officers of, and are subject to, the control of the court, and their names are inserted in the commissions of oyer and terminer, the court stated that there never was an instance of their acting under the commission, and that they had no authority to decide on any question. Milward v. Thatcher, 2 T. R. 83.

Fees of.]—By 19 Geo. 3, c. 74, s. 30, the clerk of assize on each circuit was entitled to receive a certain fee for every person convicted of a transportable offence (except petty larceny), and sentenced to transportation, hard labour or confinement in the house of correction, and for persons capitally convicted, who afterwards received the king's pardon on condition of being transported or imprisoned. Fleetwood v. Finch, 2 H. Bl. 220.

Liability of.]—If a clerk of assize draws an indictment with unnecessary prolixity, he may be ordered to pay the extra expense. Re v. Bury, 1 Leach, C. C. 201; S. P., Re v. May, 1 Doug. 193.

1. IN WHAT CASES.

On Order for Payment of Costs.]—The order for costs on dismissing an action for want of prosecution is not enforceable by attachment of debts under Ord. XLV. r. 2. Cremetti v. Crom, 4 Q. B. D. 225; 48 L. J., Q. B. 337; 27 W. R. 411.

A person who has obtained an order for the costs of an interpleader issue and entered it of record, pursuant to 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 7, so as to have the force and effect of a judgment, is not a judgment creditor within the meaning of the garnishee clauses of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, ss. 60, 61. Bent v. Pembroke, 8 L. R., Q. B. 363; 42 L. J., Q. B. 212; 29 L. T. 327; 21 W. R. 919.

After a rule has been discharged with costs, the person in whose favour the rule has been discharged cannot obtain a garnishee order; the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, giving to rules of the courts of common law the effect of judgments for the purposes of the act, but not actually making them judgments. Sunderland Local Marine Board v. Frankland, 8 L. R., Q. B. 18; 42 L. J., Q. B. 13; 28 L. T. 18.

Under sub-s. 8 of sect. 25 of the Judicature Act, 1873, the Court of Divorce has power to attach a debt due to a respondent in order to compel obedience to an order of that court for payment of costs. Whittaker v. Whittaker, 7 P. D. 15; 51 L. J., P. 80; 47 L. T. 131; 30 W. R. 431.

By Judgment Creditors.]—An executor of a judgment creditor is not entitled to attach a debt due to the judgment debtor before he has made himself a party to the judgment. Baynard v. Simmons, 5 El. & Bl. 59; 24 L. J., Q. B. 253; 1 Jur., N. S. 657.

But a party in an interpleader issue, who has obtained an order for his costs, which, by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 7, has the force and effect of a judgment, is a judgment creditor. Hartley v. Shemwell, 1 B. & S. 1; 30 L. J., Q. B. 223; 7 Jur., N. S. 774; 9 W. R. 520.

A party having obtained judgment in a superior court for a debt, brought an action on that judgment in a county court, which made an order for payment by instalments:—Held, that the court ought not to assist him, by attaching a debt in the hands of a garnishee. Jones v. Jenner, 25 L. J., Ex. 319; 2 Jur., N. S. 574.

A. sued C. as executrix jointly with B. and others, and recovered judgment against them; and under the judgment attached a debt owing by B. to C.'s testator, which B. paid:—Held, that the attachment was void, and that payment of it by B. could not be set off in an action at the suit of C. as executrix against B. to recover it. Chapman v. Callis, 6 L. T. 282.

An attachment can be obtained only by judgment creditors at common law. Commissioners of Donations v. Archbold, 14 Ir. C. L. R. 67.

2. WHAT CAN BE ATTACHED.

Debt Accruing Due.]—Under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 61, an order may be made not only attaching an accruing debt in the hands of the garnishee, but also an order for payment of the accruing debt when it shall become payable by the garnishee to the judgment creditor. It is not necessary to wait till the debt has become actually payable before making the order for payment. Tapp v. Jones, 10 L. R., Q. B. 591; 44 L. J., Q. B. 127; 33 L. T. 201; 23 W. R. 694.

There must be an existing debt due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor, though the time of payment may be postponed. Jones v. Thompson, 1 El. & Bl. & El. 63; 27 L. J., Q. B. 234; 4 Jur., N. S. 338.

Therefore, the amount for which a judgment debtor has obtained a verdict against a third person, in an action for unliquidated damages, no judgment having been signed, and the amount therefore not being a debt, is not attachable. Ib. S. P. Dresser v. Johns, 6 C. B., N. S. 429; 28 L. J., C. P. 281; 5 Jur., N. S. 1262.

Where the attorney of the judgment creditor had, after judgment, taken an assignment from the garnishee of a debt growing due, and which had been paid before the application, there being nothing to shew that the assignment and the payment under it were not bona fide, the court refused to make an order. Wise v. Birkenhead, 29 L. J., Ex. 240; 1 L. T. 223; 8 W. R. 420.

Income from Trust Fund.]—A judgment debtor was entitled for his life to the income arising from a fund vested in trustees, payable half-yearly in February and August. Upon application by the judgment creditor in November for a garnishee order attaching the debtor's share of the income in the hands of the trustees, it appeared that the last half-yearly payment had been made, and that there was no money the proceeds of the trust property in the hands of the trustees:—Held, that there was no debt "owing or accruing" at the time when the order was applied for which could be attached under Ord. XLV. r. 2. Webb v. Stenton, 11 Q. B. D. 518; 52 L. J., Q. B. 584; 49 L. T. 432—C. A. Affirming, 48 L. T. 268.

Seemingly, that the proper course for the judgment creditor to pursue was to apply for the appointment of a receiver, under the practice of the Chancery Division. Ib.

Debt Payable at Future Day.]—A debt due by a third party, but not payable until a future day, may be attached. Sparks v. Younge, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 261—Ex.

The mere possibility that when the day of payment arrives there may be a defence against the recovery of the debt, is no ground for resisting an attachment order. Ib.

Annuity.]—A plaintiff had recovered judgment against the defendant in an action of debt, which judgment still remained unsatisfied. The defendant, under the will of her deceased husband, was entitled to an annuity for the maintenance of herself and her infant son:—Held, that the annuity was attachable in the hands of the trustees in whom it was vested, subject to an inquiry as to the proportion to be allowed for the maintenance of the son. Nash v. Pease, 47 L. J., Q. B. 766.

Dividends due on a savings bank annuity in the hands of the Commissioners for reducing the National Debt, payable to the wife of a party against whom judgment has been obtained, are not in the hands of a garnishee capable of being attached. Dingley v. Robinson, 2 Jur., N. S. 1145.

Bonds.]—Commissioners, incorporated for the purpose of effecting improvements in Westminster, were empowered to borrow money on bonds, and to advance money to builders for building purposes. By the condition of these bonds, all the bondholders were to be paid pari passu. The commissioners advanced a sum to a builder. The plaintiff sued the commissioners on one of these bonds, and they suffered judgment to go by default:—Held, that the debt due from the builder to the commissioners was not such a debt as could be attached, for the plaintiff could not enforce immediate payment, and the effect of the garnishment would be to give him a priority over the other bondholders. Kennett v. Westminster Improvement Commissioners, 11 Ex. 349; 25 L. J., Ex. 97. See Ames v. Birkenhead Dock Trustees, 20 Beav. 332; 24 L. J., Ch. 540; 1 Jur., N. S. 529.

C., at the request of D., commenced an action, in which C. had no interest, against I.; upon D. giving to C. a bond, whereby D. bound himself to C. in a penal sum, subject to the condition that, if D. should pay I. such costs as C. should, in due course of law, be liable to pay in case he should discontinue, become nonsuit, or a verdict should pass against him, such costs to be first taxed, or in case of a judgment obtained by I. for his costs of defence; and also should permit C. during the pendency of the action, or of any liability to him arising therefrom, to retain and apply any of D.'s moneys that might come to C.'s hands towards the discharge of any costs or liabilities which C. might be put to, or incur, by reason of his permitting the action to be carried on in his name, or from any injury to him thereby from the default or omission of D. to pay the same, the bond should be void. C. was nonsuited in the action, and I. had judgment to recover his costs:—Held, that D.'s liability under the bond to pay such costs did not constitute a debt, and could not be attached as such by the judgment creditor. Johnson v. Diamond, 11 Ex. 73; 24 L. J., Ex. 217; 1 Jur., N. S. 938.

Legacy.]—A legacy in the hands of an executor cannot be attached, although he has promised to pay it over if ordered so to do. There must be such an account stated as would sustain an action in order to constitute the legacy a legal debt in the hands of a legal debtor. McDowall v. Hollister, 3 C. L. R. 933; 25 L. T., O. S. 185; 3 W. R. 522.

Superannuation Allowance to Clerk.]—The superannuation allowance to a retired clerk of the East India Company, granted by a resolution of the court of directors, is not attachable to answer a judgment debt due from such clerk. Innes v. East India Company, 17 C. B. 351; 25 L. J., C. P. 154; 2 Jur., N. S. 189.

Pension—Quarterly Instalment due and to become due.]—A quarterly instalment of a police constable's pension which is actually due to him may be attached under Ord. XLV., being "a debt owing" to him. Otherwise as to further instalments to become due in the future. Booth v. Trail, Hayson, In re, 12 Q. B. D. 8; 49 L. T. 471; 32 W. R. 122.

Married Woman—Restraint on Anticipation.]

—Judgment having been signed in an action against the defendants, a man and his wife, it was sought to attach in execution moneys in the hands of trustees forming part of the income of trust funds payable to the wife to her separate use, which had accrued since the judgment. The will by which the trust was created contained a clause restraining anticipation by the wife. It appeared that the action was for the amount of a promissory note made by the husband and wife jointly during the coverture:—Held, that the moneys in question could not be attached in execution. Chapman v. Biggs, 11 Q. B. D. 27; 48 L. T. 704; 47 J. P. 485.

On Bankruptcy.]—An order having been made for the attachment of the surplus of a bankrupt's estate against the official assignee of the Court of Bankruptcy as garnishee, under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854:—Held, that such order was invalid, there being no debt that could be attached within the meaning of the Act. Hunter, In re, 8 L. R., C. P. 24; 42 L. J., C. P. 55; 27 L. T. 827; 21 W. R. 263.

A deed under the Bankruptcy Act of 1861, s. 192, is a bar to an execution issued against a garnishee under an order to the same extent that it is a bar to an execution on a judgment. Kent v. Tomkinson, 2 L. R., C. P. 502; 36 L. J., C. P. 224; 17 L. T. 41.

A dividend payable by the assignees in bankruptcy to a creditor who has proved in the Court of Bankruptcy, cannot be attached by a judgment creditor of the person to whom such dividend is payable. Boyse v. Simpson, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 523; S. P., Gilmour v. Simpson, 8 Ir. C. L. R., App. xxxviii.

—Creditor's Dividend.]—A garnishee order will not be given to attach a dividend in the hands of the official liquidator of a company which is being wound up in bankruptcy. Dawson v. Malley, 1 Ir. R., C. L. 207; 15 W. R. 791.

Cheque stopped.]—A garnishee order was made under Ord. XLV. r. 2, attaching a debt. At the time the order was made, the garnishees had given the judgment debtor a cheque for the amount of the debt. Upon service of the order on the garnishees they stopped payment of the cheque at the bank, the cheque not having been presented:—Held, that upon the cheque being stopped it was as if it had never been given, and that there was therefore an existing debt capable of being attached, and the garnishee order was effectual. Cohen v. Hale, 3 Q. B. D. 371; 47 L. J., Q. B. 496; 39 L. T. 35; 26 W. R. 680.

Money in Court.]—A plaintiff has such an interest in money lodged in the name of the master of the court to the credit of the cause that the money so lodged may be made the subject of a charging order. Adams v. Gillem, 9 Ir. R., C. L. 148. See next case.

Money paid into County Court.]—The proceeds of a judgment paid into the county court are not attachable by means of a garnishee summons at the suit of a third person as "a debt," due from the registrar of the court to the judgment debtor. Dolphin v. Layton, 4 C. P. D. 130; 48 L. J., C. P. 426; 27 W. R. 786.

Absolute Debt—Purchase-money under Lands Clauses Act.]—A "debt due or accruing" to a judgment debtor and therefore capable of being attached by a garnishee order under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XLV. r. 3, must be an absolute and not merely a conditional debt. Thus, where, after notice to treat by a railway company to a landowner, the purchase-money has been fixed by the verdict of a jury and judgment of the sheriff under sects. 49 and 50 of the Lands Clauses Act, the purchase-money cannot be attached by a garnishee order nisi served upon the company by a judgment creditor of the landowner after the verdict but before the execution or tender of a conveyance; for the proceedings under the above sections do not of themselves create an absolute debt due from the company to the landowner, his right to the purchase-money being conditional upon the execution or tender of a conveyance. Accordingly, in a case where the landowner had brought an action and obtained judgment against the company for specific performance of the statutory contract:—Held, that the purchase-money could not be attached by garnishee orders nisi served upon the company, some before and others after the commencement of the action, notwithstanding that a good title had been shewn; nor even by a garnishee order served after the execution of the conveyance when the money had been paid into court by the company under the judgment, the money not being "a debt in the hands" of the garnishee within rule 3 of Ord. XLV. Howell v. Metropolitan District Railway Company, 19 Ch. D. 508; 61 L. J., Ch. 158; 45 L. T. 707; 30 W. R. 100.

Discharge of Garnishee.]—The provisions of rule 8 of Ord. XLV., as to payment or execution being a valid discharge to the garnishee, are inapplicable to a debt due from the judgment debtor that is conditional only. Id.

Wages Attachment Abolition Act, 1870—Salary of Secretary attachable.]—The salary of a secretary to a company amounting to 200l. a year is not "wages" of a "servant" within the Wages Attachment Abolition Act (33 & 34 Vict. c. 30), and is therefore not exempted from attachment by that act. Gordon v. Jennings, 9 Q. B. D. 45; 51 L. J., Q. B. 417; 46 L. T. 534; 30 W. R. 704; 46 J. P. 519.

Money in hands of Receiver.]—A receiver who had been appointed in an administration action and ordered to pay to a legatee a sum quarterly out of moneys in or coming to his hands, was, on the application of creditors who had in an action in a Common Law Division obtained a judgment against the legatee, ordered, under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XLV., to pay them their debt and costs. Crowans' Estate, In re, Ravier v. Wright, 14 Ch. D. 638; 49 L. J., Ch. 402; 42 L. T. 866; 28 W. R. 827.

Debt Due from Partnership Firm.]—A gar-nishee order cannot be made under Ord. XLV. r. 2, attaching a debt due from a partnership firm described by its partnership name. Walker v. Roofs, 6 Q. B. D. 631; 50 L. J., Q. B. 470.

Funds in Hands of Executor.—The court refused to attach, at the instance of a judgment creditor, on a judgment de bonis testatoris against an executrix, funds lodged by her in that capacity in the bank of the judgment creditor. Hewat v. Davenport, 21 W. R. 78.

A charging order will not be made against government stock, standing in the name of a judgment debtor, upon a judgment de bonis testatoris obtained against the debtor as administratrix. Ib.

A garnishee order made against executors will not affect money paid into court by them in an administration suit, and carried to a separate account to meet a debt due to the judgment debtor. Sterens v. Phelps, 10 L. R., Ch. 417; 44 L. J., Ch. 689; 23 W. R. 716.

A judgment creditor obtained a garnishee order nisi against the executors of P., a debtor of the judgment debtor. At that time P.'s estate was being administered in the Court of Chancery, and after the service of the garnishee order the executors paid the personal estate in their hands into court, and a sufficient sum to answer P.'s debt to the judgment debtor was carried to the separate account of the judgment debtor in the suit. The judgment debtor afterwards filed a petition for liquidation, and obtained an injunction restraining the judgment creditor from proceeding with his garnishee order. The trustee in the liquidation then applied in the suit for payment to him of the sum standing to the separate account of the judgment debtor:—Held, that there was no debt owing to the judgment debtor in the hands of the executors of P. at the time when they were served with the garnishee order, and consequently the judgment creditor had no charge on the fund in court. Ib.

Surplus on Fl. Fa.—Surplus money realized by a sale under a fl. fa. belongs to the judgment debtor, and may be attached in the hands of a sheriff. O'Neill v. Cunningham, 6 Ir. R., C. L. 503.

Within the Jurisdiction.—A debt cannot be attached under the garnishee clauses of the Irish Common Law Procedure Act, 1856, unless the garnishee is within the jurisdiction; and a registered company, whose head office is in London, are not within the jurisdiction within s. 63, although they have an agent residing in Ireland and transacting their business there. Martyn v. Kelly, 5 Ir. R. C. L. 404.

Notice to Treat.—A notice to treat, upon which nothing has been done, does not constitute "a debt owing or accruing," which can be attached under Order XLV. r. 2, of the Judicature Act, 1875. Richardson v. Elmit, 2 C. P. D. 9; 36 L. T. 58.

Promissory Note.—A promissory note not yet due does not constitute a debt which can be attached to answer a judgment debt. Pine v. Ainner, 11 Ir. R., C. L. 40.

Rent.—Rent due may be attached. Mitchell v. Lee, 2 L. R., Q. B. 259; 36 L. J., Q. B. 154; 15 L. T. 502; 15 W. R. 337; 8 B. & S. 92.

A mortgagee who has given notice to the tenant to pay rent to him has not a lien or a charge upon the rent within 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, (Common Law Procedure Act, 1860), s. 29. Ib.

Salary.—The salary of a medical or other officer cannot, before it is actually payable, be attached by a garnishee order under the County Court Rules, 1875, for it is not "a debt due, owing, or accruing" to the judgment debtor. Hall v. Pritchett, 3 Q. B. D. 215; 47 L. J., Q. B. 15; 37 L. T. 671; 26 W. R. 95.

Interest on Railway Stock guaranteed by Garnishee.—The defendants raised money by the issue of capital stock to complete a portion of their line. By an arrangement between the defendants and the D. Railway Company, confirmed by an Act of Parliament, the line was worked by the latter company, who provided and paid to the defendants half-yearly a sum of money for the payment of interest on the stock. Judgment having been recovered by the plaintiff against the defendants and one of the half-yearly instalments being due:—Held, that it could be attached in the hands of the D. Railway Company as a debt under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 61. Bouch v. Sevenoaks, &c. Railway Company, 4 Ex. D. 133; 48 L. J., Ex. 338; 40 L. T. 560; 27 W. R. 507.

Verdict.—A verdict in an action of trespass upon which no judgment has been entered, is not a debt which can be attached. Shaw v. Shaw, 18 L. T., 420.

Order of Court for Payment.—An order of the court of Chancery for payment of money, though a judgment debt within 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 11, cannot be attached, the provisions of the C. L. P. Act, 1854, ss. 60, 61, applying only to judgments in the superior courts of common law. Price, In re, 4 L. R., C. P. 155; 17 W. R. 319.

Proceeds of Execution.—The proceeds of an execution may be attached in the sheriff's hands for a debt due by the execution creditor. Murray v. Simpson, 8 Ir. C. L. R. App. xlv.

In other Cases.—Upon a joint judgment recovered against several, a debt due to one or more of the judgment debtors may be attached in the hands of the garnishee. Miller v. Myan, 1 El. & El. 1075; 28 L. J., Q. B. 324; 5 Jur., N. S. 1257; 33 L. T., O. S. 184; 7 W. R. 524; 2 F. & F. 379.

A judgment creditor cannot attach a debt due to the wife of a judgment debtor, under a specialty given to her dum sola. Dingley v. Robinson, 26 L. J., Ex. 55; 2 Jur., N. S. 1145.

Nor a judgment creditor, who has taken his debtor in execution under a ca. sa. Jauralde v. Parker, 6 H. & N. 431; 30 L. J., Ex. 237; 3 L. T. 751; 9 W. R. 346.

But a judgment creditor may attach a debt due to his debtor, although the garnishee has been taken in execution for the debt. Marples v. Hartley, 1 B. & S. 1; 30 L. J., Q. B. 223; 7 Jur., N. S. 774; 9 W. R. 620.

A judgment creditor having arrested his debtor, the debtor filed a petition in bankruptcy, and obtained his discharge:—Held, that the creditor might attach the debt of his judgment debtor in the hands of a third party, notwithstanding his arrest. Halahan v. Worman, 7 L. T. 278; 11 W. R. 10.

Where judgment is recovered against an executor, a debt due from a third person to the testator's estate may be attached, and it is no answer that a decree has been made in a suit in Chancery for the administration of the testator's estate. Burton v. Roberts, 6 H. & N. 93; 29 L. J., Ex. 484.

And a court of equity will not interfere with or restrain such attachment. Fowler v. Roberts, 2 Giff. 226; 6 Jur., N. S. 1189; 8 W. R. 492.

A judgment creditor cannot (without leave of the Court of Chancery) attach moneys in the hands of its receiver which have been directed to be paid by him to the judgment debtor. De Winton v. Brecon (Mayor, &c.), 28 Beav. 200; 6 Jur., N. S. 1046.

Where an official manager of a company in the course of being wound up has funds in his hands belonging to the company, he may be ordered to pay out of the funds in his hands a debt due to a creditor of the company's creditor. Warwick and Worcester Railway Company, In re, Turner, Ex parte, 2 De G., F. & J. 354; 30 L. J., Ch. 92; 6 Jur., N. S. 1172; 3 L. T. 380.

But money in a sheriff's hands, levied under an attachment for costs, awarded by a decree in equity, remains in custodia legis, and is not, without further order, the property of the party who has issued the attachment. Williams v. Reeves, 12 Ir. Ch. Rep. 173.

An order upon a garnishee has no operation upon debts of which a judgment debtor has already divested himself by bona fide assignment. Hirsch v. Coates, 18 C. B. 757; 25 L. J., C. P. 315.

3. EFFECT AND OPERATION OF.

Priority between Garnishee Order and Solicitor's Charging Order.—A judgment creditor of the defendant in a partnership action obtained a garnishee order nisi to attach all moneys in the hands of the receiver in the action appearing to be due to the defendant on taking the accounts. On the following day, and before service of the order nisi, the defendant's solicitors obtained, on a summons served on the receiver, a charging order intitled in the action, declaring that they were entitled to a charge for their costs upon all moneys coming to the defendant under the action. On the next day the garnishee order nisi was served on the receiver, and was subsequently made absolute:—Held, that the solicitors were entitled to their costs in priority to the claim of the creditor under the garnishee order both under the act and independently of it. Hamer v. Giles, 11 Ch. D. 942; 48 L. J., Ch. 508; 27 W. R. 834.

By an award made pursuant to an order of nisi prius, the sum of 179l. was ordered to be paid by M. to P. This amount remained unsatisfied. The plaintiffs obtained judgment for 1,200l. against P. B., who acted as P.'s attorney in the action in which the order of nisi prius was made, and took out a summons for a charging order under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 28, upon the 179l. Afterwards the plaintiffs obtained a garnishee order under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 61, against M. —Held, that the unpaid amount of 179l. was property within 23 & 24 Vict. c. 27, s. 28, and the summons for the charging order having been issued by B. before the plaintiffs obtained the garnishee order, B.'s lien as the attorney by whom the 179l. had been recovered must prevail, and he was entitled to receive that sum in priority to the plaintiffs. Birchall v. Pugin, 10 L. R., C. P. 397; 44 L. J., C. P. 278; 32 L. T. 495; 23 W. R. 923.

Solicitors who act for a plaintiff in an action in which he recovers damages are entitled to a charge or lien upon such damages for their costs in the action, as against a judgment creditor of the plaintiff who has obtained an ex parte garnishee order before such costs have been taxed. Shipley (or Shippey) v. Grey, 49 L. J., C. P. 524; 42 L. T. 673; 28 W. R. 877.

An attachment of a judgment debt overrides an attorney's lien on or control over the judgment, in respect of general costs due to him from the garnishee. Hough v. Edwards, 1 H. & N. 171; 26 L. J., Ex. 54; 2 Jur., N. S. 814.

But if a judgment creditor receives a debt which has been attached from the garnishee, with notice of the lien of the judgment debtor's attorney, he will be liable to repay it to the attorney. Eisdell v. Covingham, 28 L. J., Ex. 213.

So an order attaching a fund in the hands of a garnishee, to answer a judgment debt, will not displace the prior lien for costs of a solicitor who has given notice to the garnishee. Sympton v. Prothero, 26 L. J., Ch. 671; 3 Jur., N. S. 711; 5 W. R. 814.

On Proctor's Lien.—A proctor's lien on a fund in court is not affected by a garnishee order, and he is entitled to be paid his costs in priority to the claim of the holder of the garnishee order. The Jeff Davis, 2 L. R., Adm. 1; 17 L. T. 151.

A plaintiff having obtained a decree in the Admiralty Court for payment by the defendant of a sum of money for costs, the defendant, under the authority of two garnishee orders, paid part of the sum to judgment creditors of the plaintiff. No notice had been given to the plaintiff's proctor previously to the application for the garnishee orders, nor was the existence of the proctor's lien mentioned to the judge who made the orders:—Held, that the defendant was still liable to pay the costs decreed. The Leader, 2 L. R., Adm. 314; 37 L. J., Adm. 57; 18 L. T. 767; 17 W. R. 61.

Secured Creditor, who is.—An attachment under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, ss. 61—63, resembles an actual seizure by a sheriff, and therefore a garnishee order absolute is a security on the property of the judgment debtor within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 12, and if he afterwards becomes bankrupt the execution creditor is a creditor holding a charge on the bankrupt's estate, as a security for a debt due to him, within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 16, sub-s. 5. Emanuel v. Bridger, 9 L. R., Q. B. 286; 43 L. J., Q. B. 96; 30 L. T. 195; 22 W. R. 404.

A judgment creditor, who, before a liquidation petition filed by his debtor, has obtained a garnishee order nisi attaching debts due to the debtor, is a secured creditor within ss. 12 and 16 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and is, therefore, entitled to the attached debts as against the trustee in the liquidation, even though they did not become actually payable until after the commencement of the liquidation. Joselyne, Ex parte, Watt, In re, 8 Ch. D. 327; 47 L. J., Bk. 91; 38 L. T. 661; 26 W. R. 645—C. A.

A judgment creditor, who has obtained and served on the garnishee a garnishee order nisi, before a petition for liquidation has been presented by the judgment debtor, is a creditor holding a security on the debtor's property within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 12. Lowe v. Blakemore, 10 L. R., Q. B. 485; 44 L. J., Q. B. 155; 33 L. T. 473; 23 W. R. 856.

A judgment creditor who has obtained a garnishee order nisi to attach debts due to his debtor does not obtain any charge on the debts until service of the order nisi on the garnishees. Stanhope Silkstone Collieries Company, 11 Ch. D. 160; 48 L. J., Ch. 409; 40 L. T. 204; 27 W. R. 561—C. A.

A creditor of a liquidating debtor who before the presentation of the petition has obtained a garnishee order affecting money accruing due to his debtor, but who has not obtained any order for payment by the garnishee, is not a secured creditor within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 40. Greenway, Ex parte, Adams, In re, 16 L. R., Eq. 619; 42 L. J., Ch. 110; 29 L. T. 75; 21 W. R. 866. But see cases supra.

A party who pays money under compulsion of a court of law is protected against all claims made to it by other parties. Wood v. Dunn, 2 L. R., Q. B. 73; 36 L. J., Q. B. 27; 15 L. T. 411; 15 W. R. 180; 7 B. & S. 94—Ex. Ch.

A. executed a deed, which was registered in accordance with the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 192, whereby he conveyed all his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. A creditor of his obtained a garnishee order against B., attaching a debt due by him to A. B., having no notice or knowledge of the deed, paid the debt:—Held, first, that this payment, being under the compulsion of the judge's order, was protected against the claim of the trustee. Ib.

Held, secondly, that the execution creditor was in the position of a creditor having security for his debt in respect of a lien within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 184. Ib.

Set-off between Garnishee and Judgment Creditor.—When a debt due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor has been attached, the garnishee has no right to retain the amount of any debt due to him from the judgment creditor, and the judge must order execution to levy the whole amount due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor. Sampson v. Seaton and Beer Railway Company, or Sampson, In re, 10 L. R., Q. B. 28; 44 L. J., Q. B. 31; 31 L. T. 672; 23 W. R. 212.

Mode of Paying.—A garnishee, whose debt has been attached, and who has been summoned, has no right to substitute a different mode of discharging his debt to that already existing between the judgment creditor and the judgment debtor. Turner v. Jones, 1 H. & N. 878; 26 L. J., Ex. 262.

If before regular service of a garnishment summons the garnishee (an order for execution having been granted) bona fide pays the debt, he is protected. Cooper v. Brayne, 27 L. J., Ex. 446.

— By Process of Law.—A plaintiff having recovered judgment against a defendant for 18l., and the defendant having recovered judgment against B. for 44l., the plaintiff obtained an order, attaching B.'s debt, together with a summons, calling on B. to shew cause why he should not pay to the plaintiff 18l. of the amount of the debt due to the defendant. Afterwards, and before the return of the summons, the defendant taxed his costs as against B., and on the same day issued a fi. fa. under which the sheriff took possession of the goods of B., who gave notice to the sheriff of the summons, and offered to pay the sheriff the debt due to the defendant, less the amount due to the plaintiff. This the sheriff refused to accept, and insisted on being paid the whole amount for which execution was levied. Whereupon B. paid the whole amount under protest:—Held, that B. having been compelled by process of law to pay the debt to the sheriff, could not be called upon to pay it a second time to the plaintiff. Turnbull v. Robertson, 47 L. J., C. P. 294; 38 L. T. 389; 26 W. R. 557.

— "Devolution of Estate by Operation of Law."—A garnishee order was made absolute in favour of judgment creditors of W. attaching a judgment debt recovered by W. against S.:—Held, that this was a devolution of estate by operation of law within Ord. L. r. 2, and that the judgment creditors of W. were entitled to be added as co-plaintiffs in the action of W. against S., but not to have the conduct of the action. Wallis v. Smith, 51 L. J., Ch. 577; 46 L. T. 473.

In case of Bankruptcy of Judgment Debtor.—P. sent goods to an auctioneer for sale for ready money, not to be removed until payment. The auctioneer sold them on those terms, stated in the conditions of sale, and received part of the price from some of the purchasers; but H. who had purchased part, took them away without payment, and without the consent of the auctioneer or of P. H. refused to pay, offering to set off a debt due to him from P. This was declined. H. having obtained judgment against P., obtained an order to attach the price of the goods remaining in the auctioneer's hands, which was served on the garnishee. On the same day, but after the service, P. became bankrupt. His assignees claimed the money from the garnishee, and also demanded payment from H. of the price of the goods taken away by him:—Held, that the service bound the debt so as to render the judgment creditor a creditor having security for his debt within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 184, but did not give him a lien, so as to bring him within the exception in that section, and consequently that the judgment creditor could not prevail against the assignees. Holmes v. Tutton, 5 El. & Bl. 65; 24 L. J., Q. B. 346; 1 Jur., N. S. 975.

If a judgment creditor obtains an order attaching a debt due to the judgment debtor, and subsequently another order, directing the garnishees to pay the amount attached to the judgment creditor, or that execution may issue against them, and the judgment debtor becomes bankrupt before payment by the garnishees or execution levied on them, the judgment creditor cannot avail himself any longer of the order, but must share equally with the other creditors, as he is only in the situation of a creditor having security under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 184, and not within the exception to that section, as a creditor having a mortgage or lien. Tilbury v. Brown, 30 L. J., Q. B. 46; 6 Jur., N. S. 1151; 3 L. T. 380.

A judgment creditor obtained a garnishee order attaching a debt due to his debtor. After the order was made absolute, but before execution levied, the judgment debtor became bankrupt. The judgment creditor then issued execution against the garnishee. The garnishee applied to set the execution aside. The assignees in bankruptcy had notice of all the proceedings, and declined to make any claim. The court refused to set aside the execution. European Bank v. Fox, 15 W. R. 158; 15 L. T. 288.

Garnishee Order not transferring Debt due with benefit of Securities.—M. mortgaged a leasehold to W., and then to B. A judgment creditor of B. obtained a garnishee order against M. After this W. sold the property under a power of sale, and an action was brought to distribute the surplus proceeds:—Held, that the judgment creditor had no claim against the surplus proceeds of sale, for that a garnishee order has not the effect of transferring the debt due from the garnishee with the benefit of the securities for it, and that to treat the garnishee order as affecting the land before execution would conflict with the provisions of 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112. Chatterton v. Watney, 17 Ch. D. 259; 50 L. J., Ch. 535; 44 L. T. 391; 29 W. R. 573—C. A. Affirming, 16 Ch. D. 378; 50 L. J., Ch. 227; 44 L. T. 53; 29 W. R. 373.

Common form of Garnishee Orders nisi.—Mention is made in them of "the said garnishee" when the name of the garnishee has not been before stated. Id. Per V.-C. B., 16 Ch. D. 386.

Trust Moneys—Right of Cestui que Trust to intervene on Summons.—A garnishee summons having been issued to attach certain moneys due to the judgment debtor on a judgment, the judgment creditor received notice from a third person that she claimed the said moneys as trust moneys recovered for her benefit by the judgment debtor as her trustee. On the hearing of the summons no suggestion was made by the garnishee under Ord. XLV. r. 6, that the moneys sought to be attached belonged to some third person, and the master refused to hear a solicitor on behalf of the claimant, on the ground that no such suggestion, as aforesaid, having been made he had no power under Ord. XLV. rr. 6, 7, to hear him, and made the order absolute:—Held, that where in garnishee proceedings circumstances are brought to the knowledge of the master which afford reasonable ground for supposing that the money sought to be attached is trust money, the master should exercise an equitable jurisdiction and withhold the order absolute, and order the money to be paid into court to abide the event of an inquiry. Roberts v. Death, 8 Q. B. D. 319; 51 L. J., Q. B. 15; 46 L. T. 246; 30 W. R. 76—C. A.

The master had power under rule 7 to hear the claimant. Id.—Per Cotton and Lindley, L.JJ. (Brett, L. J., diss.)

VOL. I.

Payment by Garnishee.—Payment into court by a garnishee under a judge's order, is a payment within the meaning of the C. L. P. Act of 1854, s. 65, and discharges the garnishee; and the subsequent execution of a composition deed by the debtor will not prevent the creditor from being entitled to the money so paid into court. Culverhouse v. Wickens, 3 L. R., C. P. 295; 37 L. J., C. P. 107; 17 L. T. 478; 16 W. R. 402.

A. having signed judgment against B. (a solicitor), obtained a garnishee order against C. who owed B. a bill of costs; C. obtained further time for taxing the bill on payment into court of 25*l.* B. subsequently, and before the taxation was complete, executed a composition deed, and gave notice to C. not to pay the amount of the bill to A. The bill when taxed was found to exceed 25*l.* On an application by C. for the repayment to him out of court of the 25*l.*:—Held, that the payment into court was a discharge as against B., and that A. was entitled to the money. Id.

A garnishee order cannot be reviewed by the Admiralty Court, and therefore payment under a garnishee order of the costs pronounced due to a party by decree of that court is a satisfaction of the decree even as against that party's proctor claiming a lien. The Olive, Swabey, Adm. Rep. 423; 5 Jur., N. S. 445.

But where a garnishee order had been obtained against a receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery, he not objecting to the order being made, and he paid over to the person named in the order moneys in his hands as such receiver, he was ordered to refund. De Winton v. Brecon (Mayor, &c.), 28 Beav. 200; 6 Jur., N. S. 1046.

Action for work done in New York. Plea, that an action had been brought by D. against the plaintiff in the supreme court of New York, for a sum exceeding 50*l.*; that by process issued out of that court, and executed on the defendant, that sum, due and owing from the defendant to the plaintiff, was attached in the defendant's hands according to the laws of that state, to satisfy the demand in the action; and that judgment was recovered by D. in that court, and a writ of execution issued by D. on such judgment to the sheriff, whereupon the defendant was liable and obliged, by the laws of the state, to pay over to the sheriff the 50*l.*, deducting the necessary expenses of the attachment. The plea alleged that the plaintiff and the defendant were citizens of New York, and the defendant was resident there, and subject to the jurisdiction and process of the court, and that by the laws of the state he was discharged and acquitted of the 50*l.*:—Held, that this plea was sufficient without setting out the American law as to foreign attachment, and a good defence pro tanto. Gould v. Webb, 4 El. & Bl. 933; 24 L. J., Q. B. 205; 1 Jur., N. S. 821.

4. PRACTICE ON.

Notice of Attachment out of Mayor's Court.—Quære, whether a notice of attachment out of the Mayor's Court is any answer to an order attaching a debt. Newman v. Rook, 4 C. B., N. S. 434.

At all events, service of such a notice upon the vestry clerk of a parish without the limits of the city can have no operation upon a debt due from the vestry to the judgment debtor. Ib.

To entitle a garnishee to a writ, he must satisfy the court or judge that he has a real ground for disputing his liability for payment of the debt. Ib.

Proceeding against Garnishee by Writ.]—It is discretionary with a judge to order, if a garnishee disputes his liability, that the judgment creditor shall be at liberty to proceed against the garnishee by writ. Wise v. Birkenshaw, 29 L. J., Ex. 240; 1 L. T. 223; 8 W. R. 420.

Where an order for an attachment of debts has been obtained ex parte, and a summons, calling on the garnishee to shew cause why he should not pay the money to the judgment creditor, has been issued, and the garnishee appears and disputes his liability; and the judgment creditor does not ask to be allowed to proceed against him by writ, the judge may not only dismiss the summons, but discharge the attachment order altogether. Wintle v. Williams, 3 H. & N. 288; 27 L. J., Exch. 311.

While an action is pending against a garnishee, the court will not, without evidence of collusion between him and the judgment debtor, grant a writ against the garnishee. Richardson v. Greaves, 10 W. R. 45.

Where the court cannot clearly, beyond all doubt, see that the garnishee is not liable to attachment, the court will not set aside the order without allowing the judgment creditor to proceed against him by writ. Seymour v. Brecon Corporation, 29 L. J., Ex. 243.

A garnishee, against whom a judgment creditor has obtained leave to proceed by writ, calling upon him to shew cause why there should not be execution against him, cannot be held to bail or arrested under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 2. Horner v. Luff, 3 B. & S. 818.

Examination of Judgment Debtor.]—The court has no power to order the directors of a railway company against which judgment has been obtained to be orally examined as to debts owing to the company. Dickson v. Neath and Brecon Railway Company, 4 L. R., Ex. 87; 38 L. J., Ex. 57; 19 L. T., 702; 17 W. R. 501.

Under Rules of Supreme Court, Ord. XLV.]—In the oral examination of a judgment debtor "as to whether any and what debts are owing to him," the examination is not confined to the question whether any debts are owing and what they are, but any question fairly pertinent and properly asked with a view to ascertain full particulars of what debts there are and which of them may be attached, must be answered. Per James, L. J.: The examination may take the form of the severest cross-examination. Republic of Costa Rica v. Strousberg, 16 Ch. D. 8; 50 L. J., Ch. 7; 43 L. T. 399; 29 W. R. 179—C. A.

Non-attendance—Effect of.]—A judgment debtor was ordered to attend on the 7th December to be examined, under Ord. XLV. r. 1, as to the debts owing to him, with a view to attaching them. He did not attend on that day, and the examination was adjourned to the 21st December. Before the 21st December, upon a judgment debtor's summons, he was ordered to pay the judgment debt by instalments. He did not attend upon the 21st December. Upon the application of the judgment creditor that an attachment might issue for contempt:—Held (Brett, L. J. diss.), that the having obtained an order that the debt should be paid by instalments was not inconsistent with examining the debtor as to debts owing to him, and that the attachment ought to issue unless the debtor attended to be examined within fourteen days. Per Brett, L. J.: To pursue the two proceedings concurrently was lawful, but oppressive; the allowing an attachment to issue was always matter of discretion; the Court of Appeal ought not to differ from the court below on a matter of discretion unless it was made absolutely clear that they had exercised their discretion wrongly; and that was not clear in the present case. Hayter or Hayton v. Beall, 44 L. T. 131—C. A. Reversing, 29 W. R. 333.

Service of Rule for.]—Service of a rule, for the oral examination of the judgment debtor upon his wife, without shewing that it came to his knowledge, is not sufficient. Mason v. Mugeridge, 18 C. B. 642.

Applying to Inferior Courts.]—Where, by an order in council, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 105, the act has been applied to an inferior court of record, the inferior court has the same powers with respect to the garnishee clauses as the superior courts. Dauber or Dawler v. Barnes, 31 L. J., Q. B. 302; 8 Jur., N. S. 512; 6 L. T., 333; 10 W. R. 605.

Decision of Judge final.]—When upon an attachment, under a garnishee order by a judgment creditor, of moneys due to the judgment debtor, a third party claims such moneys for a debt due to him from the judgment debtor, and consents to a judge at chambers deciding the issue summarily between him and the judgment creditor, instead of asking under Ord. XLV. r. 7, for an issue to be tried in the usual way, such decision of the judge is final, and cannot be appealed against by such third party. Eade v. Winsor, 47 L. J., Q. B. 584.

Against Executors.]—If a garnishee order is made against the executors of a debtor of the judgment debtor, it ought to appear on the face of it that they are sought to be charged as executors. Stevens v. Phelps, 10 L. R., Ch. 417; 44 L. J., Ch. 689; 23 W. R. 716.

Costs.]—Where a garnishee disputes his liability, and the court authorizes the judgment creditor to proceed by writ against the garnishee, omitting all mention of costs, the successful party is entitled to his costs in the ordinary way, and an order of the court is not necessary for that purpose. Johnson v. Diamond, 11 Ex. 431; 25 L. J., Ex. 40; 1 Jur., N. S. 1093.

Officers of the Court.]—Where the process of the court has been abused, and undue means have been used in its execution, an attachment, and not an information, is the proper remedy. Asen., 2 Ld. Ken. 372; S. P.; Gregory v. Onslow, Loft. 35.

An attachment was granted for arresting a plaintiff while attending arbitrators under a rule of court, on purpose to prejudice his cause. Ree v. Hall, 2 W. Bl. 1110.

Altering a sheriff's warrant is no ground for an attachment, unless an ill use is made of it. Hale v. Castleman, 1 W. Bl. 2.

Where a rule for an attachment against a clerk of assize for not returning a certiorari has been discharged, on the ground that it was not shewn by affidavits in support of the application that the clerk was a commissioner of oyer and terminer, the court will not grant another rule for an attachment in respect of the same default, or a rule requiring the clerk to return the certiorari. Reg. v. Harland, 8 D. P. C. 323.

Writs of certiorari to remove indictments were directed to the justices of oyer and terminer for a county, and served upon the clerk of assize. No return having been made, a side-bar rule issued, directed to the said justices, requiring them to return the indictments within six days after notice to them, or one of them, or the clerk of assize. The rule was served upon the clerk of assize, on the 30th of April, and on one of the justices of oyer and terminer, on the 10th of May. On the 22nd an attachment was moved for against the same justice:—Held, that the rule for an attachment was not absolute in the first instance:—Held, also, that the service of the rule upon the justice was too late, and that the indictments being retained by the clerk of the assize, who was also a quorum commissioner of oyer and terminer, until payment of certain fees, he was the proper party to be served with the side-bar rule, and not one of the judges of the superior courts. Newton v. Alderson, 4 Jur. 190.

A sheriff having seized goods under process out of the common pleas, an officer of the palace court, during the temporary absence of the sheriff's officer (whose son remained on the premises with the warrant), took the goods under process of that court, the court refused to interfere, either by granting an attachment against the officer of the palace court, or by ordering him to refund a sum paid to him in order to obtain the release of the goods. White v. Chapple, 4 C. B. 628; 16 L. J., C. P. 233; 11 Jur. 543.

Rescuers from Bailiff.]—An attachment granted against rescuers, upon a return by the sheriff of rescue from his bailiff. Cobby v. Dewes, 10 Bing. 112.

Member of late Parliament for Contempt—Privilege.]—On a motion for attachment of a member of the parliament which was dissolved on the 24th of March, for contempt in not obeying an order of the court to pay certain moneys, &c., to the liquidator of the company:—Held, that the rule laid down in Goudy v. Duncombe (1 Ex. 430), that a member of parliament was entitled to privilege from arrest for forty days both after and before the meeting of parliament, and whether after a prorogation or a dissolution, applies to a person who was a member of the old, but is not a member of the new, parliament. Anglo-French Co-operative Society, In re, 14 Ch. D. 533; 49 L. J., Ch. 388; 28 W. R. 580.

Infant for not executing Settlement.]—Leave will not be given to issue a writ of attachment against a person who refuses to execute a settlement which he has been ordered to do under the Infants Marriage Act, ss. 19, 23, until the settlement has been tendered to him personally for execution after service of the decree, and he has refused to execute it. Att.-Gen. v. Warring, 28 W. R. 623.

Peer.]—An attachment may issue against a peer for refusing to obey the process of the court. Ree v. St. Asaph (Bishop), 1 Wils. 332.

Against Witness for Disobeying Subpoena.]—A subpoena may be issued from the crown office, requiring a witness to attend at the assizes in the country, to give evidence in support of an intended prosecution for a felony; and the court will grant an attachment against him for not attending in obedience to the subpoena. Reg. v. Ring, 8 T. R. 585.

Against Keeper of Asylum for obstructing Service of Writ.]—A keeper of an asylum having refused to allow service of a writ on a lunatic under his charge, or to bring it to his notice, the court granted a rule nisi for an attachment against him for obstructing its proceedings. Denison v. Harding, 15 W. R. 346.

II. PRACTICE ON.

1. WRIT.

Requirements of.]—An attachment must be directed to elisors, when against coroners for not attaching the sheriff. Andrews v. Sharp, 2 W. Bl. 911; S. P., Rex v. Peckham, 2 W. Bl. 1218.

An attachment will be irregular if for more than the precise sum allowed, however small the difference. Daniel v. Bishop, M'Clel. 61; 13 Price, 129.

Motion for.]—In order to obtain an attachment, it is not sufficient that all the necessary steps be taken, partly at one time and partly at another. Rogers v. Twissel, 3 D. P. C. 572.

Upon a motion for an attachment for non-payment of money, the court refused to allow cause to be shewn at chambers, though it was at the end of the term. Fall v. Fall, 2 D. P. C. 88.

Where a reasonable time had not been given between the day of serving a rule for an attachment and the day of shewing cause, the court, on making the rule absolute, directed the attachment to lie in the office a few days, until notice of that step having been taken should be given to the defendant. Rex v. Giles, 4 D. P. C. 569.

The ten days after demand of costs under a recognizance, taken by virtue of 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, ss. 2 & 3, must elapse before an attachment can be granted against a party refusing to pay them. Rex v. Ireland, 3 T. R. 512.

Extent of.]—An application to make a judge's order a rule of court, and for an attachment for disobeying it, may be made on the same motion. Hinchliffe v. Jones, 4 D. P. C. 86; 1 H. & W. 337; S. P., Forster v. Kirkwall, 4 D. P. C. 370.

When made.]—Whenever an attachment is absolute in the first instance, it may be moved for on the last day of term. Anon., Loftt. 301.

But not where there is only a rule nisi. Anon., 3 Smith, 118.

An attachment cannot be moved for on the last day of term, except for non-payment of costs, or against a sheriff for not returning a writ. Anon., 1 Burr. 651; S. P., Rex v. York, 5 Burr. 2686.

A motion for an attachment cannot be made upon the last day of term. Sutton, Ex parte, 25 L. T. 572.

By whom made.]—An attachment for misconduct cannot be moved for by a complainant in person, but must be made by a barrister. Fenn, Ex parte, 2 D. P. C. 527.

On Notice.]—The issuing of an attachment is one of the matters as to which the old practice may be followed in suits which were pending when the Judicature Acts came into operation (Nov. 2, 1875), down to the time when issues might be joined, or notice of motion for decree given in such suits. Garling v. Royds, 1 Ch. D. 81; 45 L. J., Ch. 56; 24 W. R. 23.

But the new practice by which writs of attachment are only to be issued after notice to the party sought to be attached applies to all orders made subsequently to the Judicature Act coming into force, and applies whether the suits in which the orders have been made are being carried on under the old or the new practice. Dallas v. Glyn, 3 Ch. D. 190; 46 L. J., Ch. 51; 34 L. T. 897; 24 W. R. 880.

An application for leave to issue a writ of attachment, for the enforcement of an order perfected before the commencement of the Judicature Acts, cannot be made ex parte, but only upon notice. Anon., 24 W. R. 103.

An attachment may be issued for disobeying an order to do an act within a specified time after notice of the order, although the person served has received actual notice of it by means of an informal service, and the specified time after receiving the actual notice has already elapsed before the order is regularly served. Gregg, In re, and Prance, In re, 9 L. R., Eq. 137; 39 L. J., Ch. 107; 23 L. T. 234; 18 W. R. 589.

Before making an application for an attachment on the ground of contempt, notice of the application must be given to the party to be affected by the attachment, although the proceeding may have been commenced before the Judicature Acts came into operation. Baigent, In goods of, 1 P. D. 421; 33 L. T. 462; 24 W. R. 43.

Literal execution of an attachment before proceeding to take a bill pro confesso may, under certain circumstances, be dispensed with. Culley v. Buttifant, 1 Ch. D. 84; 45 L. J., Ch. 200; 24 W. R. 55.

Under Ord. XLIV. r. 2, a motion for an attachment for removing goods out of the custody of the sheriff can only be made on notice. Jupp v. Cooper (5 C. P. D. 26) considered. Eynde v. Gould, 9 Q. B. D. 335; 51 L. J., Q. B. 425; 31 W. R. 49.

Costs—Indorsement on Order.]—On the 20th of May, 1881, an order was made for the defendants within seven days after service to file an affidavit as to documents. The copy served had no such indorsement as is required by Cons. Ord. XXIII. r. 10. The defendants filed successively three affidavits, which were successively held insufficient, and on the 10th of February, 1882, filed a fourth. A summons was taken out to consider its sufficiency, and on its being attended on the 24th of February, the defendants' solicitor stated that the draft of a further affidavit had been sent into the country, and that the affidavit would be filed as soon as possible, and requested an adjournment. The chief clerk refused to adjourn, held the affidavit of the 10th of February to be insufficient, and ordered the defendants to pay the costs. On the 25th, the plaintiffs served notice of motion for attachment for the 3rd of March. On the 28th of February, the defendants filed a further affidavit, and on the 1st of March asked the plaintiffs' solicitors whether they proposed to withdraw their notice of motion. The plaintiffs' solicitors replied that they did not, as their briefs had been delivered before the affidavit was filed, but that they would consider any proposal the defendants had to make. The defendants' solicitors wrote in answer making no offer to pay any costs, but saying that they should deliver their briefs. North, J., refused the motion with costs:—Held, on appeal, that the plaintiffs were right in giving their notice of motion, and that as the defendants had made no offer to pay any costs, the plaintiffs were entitled to bring on their motion, and must have the costs of it. Under the practice established by the Judicature Acts, it is not necessary that the copy of an order which is served should have the indorsement required by Cons. Ord. XXIII. r. 10, stating the consequences of failing to obey the order. Thomas v. Palin, 21 Ch. D. 360; 47 L. T. 207; 30 W. R. 716.

Motion to Commit after Notice.]—A plaintiff who has served a notice of motion for leave to issue a writ of attachment against a defendant in contempt, and obtained an order accordingly, cannot afterwards move ex parte for an order of committal to issue instead of the writ of attachment which he has obtained. Buist v. Bridge, 43 L. T. 432; 29 W. R. 117.

Attachment for not Returning a Writ of Fi. fa.]—An application, on notice, under Ord. XLIV. r. 2, to attach the sheriff for not returning a writ of fi. fa., should be for an order nisi. Fowler v. Ashford, 45 L. T. 46.

Enlarging Rule.]—An application on the last day but one of term to enlarge a rule for an attachment without any affidavit of attempts to serve was refused. Smith v. North, 27 L. J., Ex. 421.

2. AFFIDAVITS.

How intitled.]—Affidavits for attachment in civil suits are proceedings on the civil side of the court until the attachments issue, and are to be intitled with the names of the parties; as soon as the attachments issue, the proceedings are on the crown side, and from that time the queen is to be named as the prosecutrix. Wood v. Webb, 3 T. R. 253.

Affidavits to set aside attachments which have been granted (though not issued) must be intitled in the name of the queen. Rea v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 7 T. R. 439, 527.

Which title is sufficient, without naming the cause, although it is convenient to do so. Rea v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 5 B. & C. 389; 8 D. & R. 149.

So, affidavits in answer to a rule nisi for an attachment must be entitiled in the cause out of which the motion arises; but after the rule is granted, the affidavits must be intitled on the crown side. Whitehead v. Frith, 12 East, 165.

Affidavits in answer to any application for an attachment in a criminal case should not be intitled in that case unless the record is in the Q. B., but should be intitled in the court only. Rea v. Stretch, 4 D. P. C. 30.

Where a submission to an award is made a rule of court, there being no action, the affidavits on which to apply for an attachment for disobeying the award need not be intitled in any cause, but the affidavits in answer must. Beran v. Beran, 3 T. R. 601.

Seemle, that the proper title of affidavits in support of a rule for an attachment against a sheriff's officer, for extortion in the execution of a fi. fa., is in the cause. Masters v. Lowther, 11 C. B. 848; 21 L. J., C. P. 130; 16 Jur. 374.

Where an attachment has issued in a cause, in moving to discharge the person arrested under it, the affidavits must be intitled the queen against the person arrested in the original cause, and not simply in the original cause. Brown v. Edwards, 2 D. & L. 520; 14 L. J., Q. B. 17.

A rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment of money pursuant to an award was intitled "in the matter of A. and B.," but the affidavit of service was intitled, "between A. B., plaintiff, and C. D., defendant :"—Held, irregular, as the affidavit should have been intitled the same as the rule. Houghton, In re, 2 M. & P. 452.

Contents of Affidavit generally—Service.]—An affidavit for a rule for an attachment for a contempt must state that the party was served personally with a copy of the rule, and that the original was shewn to him at the same time. Rea v. Smithies, 3 T. R. 351; S. P., 7 D. & R. 612.

— Misdescription.]—An attachment for non-payment of money will not be granted, if an affidavit, on which it is sought to bring the party into contempt, describes the rule of court as an order. Turner, In re, 6 D. P. C. 6; W., W. & D. 575.

By whom made.]—On a motion for an attachment for non-delivery of a bill of costs to a party pursuant to rule of court, the affidavit should be made by the party himself; that of a third person is insufficient. Potter v. Back, 8 D. P. C. 872.

Party shewing cause—Necessity for.]—The rule, that a party cannot shew cause unless he takes office copies of the affidavits on which the rule has been obtained, applies to a rule for an attachment. Reg. v. Carttar, 1 L., M. & P. 274.

When allowed.]—Upon shewing cause against a rule for an attachment, fresh affidavits by the party who has obtained the rule are inadmissible. Butler, In re, 13 Q. B. 341; 18 L. J., Q. B. 328; 13 Jur. 869.

3. SERVICE OF RULE, ORDER, OR MOTION.

Notice of Motion.]—A party must be personally served with notice of a motion for an attachment, and service on his solicitor in the cause will not be sufficient, although the order, in respect of a breach of which the attachment is asked for, has been personally served, unless it is shewn that personal service on the party cannot be effected. Mann v. Perry, 50 L. J., Ch. 251; 44 L. T. 248.

Rule or Order—Personal—Sufficiency of.]—The court will not make a rule nisi for an attachment absolute, unless there is a personal service, or it appears that it has been seen in the possession of the party sought to be served, even although an attorney of the court, and circumstances are sworn to that leave no doubt that he is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding the service, and the applicant has no other remedy. Payne, In re, 1 D. & L. 703; 13 L. J., Q. B. 37; 7 Jur. 1109.

It is not, in every case, and under all circumstances, an inflexible rule, that the court will not make a rule for an attachment absolute, without personal service. Whalley, In re, 14 M. & W. 731; 3 D. & L. 291; 15 L. J., Ex. 4; 9 Jur. 995.

A rule absolute will be granted for an attachment without an affidavit of personal service of the rule nisi if the affidavits disclose circumstances to satisfy the court that the rule nisi has reached the hands of the party, though they shew that he is keeping out of the way to avoid service. Morris, In re, 22 L. J. Q. B. 417.

The court will not break in upon the rule which requires personal service for the purpose of an attachment, although the party keeps himself secluded, in order to evade service, and there is reason to believe that the rule of court has been brought to his knowledge. Thomas v. Rawlings, 28 L. J., Ex. 347.

Where the court is satisfied that a rule nisi for an attachment has reached the hands of the person against whom it is directed, and that he is keeping out of the way to avoid service, the court will make the rule absolute, notwithstanding its not having been served personally. Morris, In re, 1 B. C. C. 190; 1 C. L. R. 522.

A rule nisi for an attachment must be personally served. Denman v. Golding, 2 Tidd's Prac. 981.

Even when against an attorney. Wilkinson v. Pennington, 5 Scott, 401; 6 D. P. C. 183; S. P., Anon., 1 D. & R. 529.

The court refused to order that service at the dwelling-house should be deemed good service of a rule for an attachment, upon an affidavit that the defendant was "shy and difficult to be met with," and that the deponent had tried all the means in his power, for two months, before he could serve the defendant personally with the award, for the non-performance of which the attachment was sought to be enforced. Garland v. Goulden, 2 Y. & J. 89.

In order to ground an attachment for non-payment of costs, the rule for the payment of them, as well as the rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment, must be personally served. Birket v. Holme, 4 D. P. C. 556; 1 H. & W. 659.

In order to obtain an attachment for non-payment of costs, pursuant to a rule of court, or the master's allocatur, there must in all cases be a personal service, unless it appears that the rule or allocatur has been seen in the actual possession of the party. Dicas v. Warne; 1 Scott, 537.

The court will not grant an attachment without personal service, in any case where the party applying has another remedy. Love, In re, 4 B. & Ad. 412.

It is not sufficient to shew the party the original rule, without personal service of a copy. Parker v. Burgess, 3 N. & M. 36.

It is not necessary to place the original in the defendant's hands; if shewn to him, so that he can read the contents, it is sufficient. Calvert v. Redfearn, 2 D. P. C. 505.

In order to obtain an attachment for non-payment of costs, pursuant to the master's allocatur, it is not indispensably necessary that a copy of the rule and allocatur should be left in the hands of the defendant. Rez v. Koops, 3 D. P. C. 566; S. C., nom. Rose v. Koops, 1 H. & W. 213.

To bring a party into contempt for non-payment of costs, pursuant to the master's allocatur, a copy of the rule and allocatur must be left with the defendant. Dalton v. Tucker, 5 D. P. C. 550; W., W. & D. 199.

Personal service of the rule for payment of costs is necessary in order to obtain an attachment, although the defendant is an attorney. Albin v. Toomer, 3 D. P. C. 563; 1 H. & W. 215.

Where it is clear that the copy of the rule and allocatur have come to the hands of the defendant, an attorney, the court will grant a rule nisi for an attachment, although strict personal service has not been effected. Phillips v. Hutchinson, 3 D. P. C. 583; S. P., Rez v. Dignam, 4 D. P. C. 359.

Where there had not been personal service of the rule of court and master's allocatur, but copies had been left, and notice had been given of a call that would be made, the court made a rule for an attachment against an attorney absolute, where on shewing cause against the rule nisi, he did not deny having received the papers and notice. Bottomley v. Belchamber, 4 D. P. C. 26; 1 H. & W. 362.

A personal service of a rule of court must be made to ground an attachment for non-payment of money, pursuant to a judge's order, which is afterwards made a rule of court; and service of the order and allocatur is not sufficient, nor is service of the rule on the London agents of the attorney sufficient. Woollison v. Hodgson, 3 D. P. C. 178.

It is no answer to a rule for an attachment, that the judge's order, which has been made a rule of court, has not been personally served, if the rule itself has been regularly served. Greenwood v. Dyer, 5 D. P. C. 255.

Where, in moving for an attachment absolute in the first instance for non-payment of costs, pursuant to a rule of court, it appears that accidentally it has not been stated that the original rule was shewn at the time of service, the court will allow the attachment to lie in the office until the defect is supplied. Davies v. Skerlock, 7 D. P. C. 592.

The court will not dispense with personal service of a rule nisi for an attachment for disobedience of a rule of court. Swinfen v. Swinfen, 1 C. B. N. S. 364; 26 L. J., C. P. 97; 3 Jur. N. S. 85.

A compromise having been entered into by a plaintiff's counsel on her behalf at the trial, and embodied in an order of nisi prius, afterwards made a rule of court, upon a motion against her for an attachment for refusing to perform it, on the ground that it was done without her authority, and against her express instructions:—Held, that the dissent of one of its members was enough to justify the court in declining to attach the plaintiff. Id.

A rule nisi was obtained against a solicitor to shew cause why an attachment should not issue against him for disobedience to an order of the court. There was no personal service of such rule nisi upon him. He had at one time instructed counsel to shew cause against the making absolute of such rule, and such counsel had consented to an application for a postponement of the hearing being made to the court by the counsel for the applicant, but upon the application to make absolute the rule nisi, the counsel who had been instructed formerly did not appear, nor did anyone appear on behalf of the solicitor. The court held that personal service might, under the circumstances, be dispensed with, and made absolute the rule for an attachment. Alcock, In re, 1 C. P. D. 68; 33 L. T. 532; 24 W. R. 320; 45 L. J., C. P. 86, sub nom. Anon.

Service of a notice of motion for a writ of attachment upon the solicitor on the record of the party against whom the attachment is to be issued, is sufficient notice to the party, without personal service. Browning v. Sabia, 5 Ch. D. 511; 46 L. J., Ch. 728; 25 W. R. 602. S. P., Richards v. Kitchin, 36 L. T. 730; 25 W. R. 602.

— Endorsement.—An attachment may be granted for disobedience of an order, though the copy of the order served on the party in default has not the endorsement required by the CIVth Gen. Ord. of March, 1843, or the XCIXth Gen. Ord. of October, 1867, as varied by the 1st Gen. Ord. of April, 1873. Thomas v. Palin (21 Ch. D. 360) followed. Wallace v. Graham, 11 L. R., Ir. 369.

On Defendant's Wife.—The court refused to make a rule absolute for an attachment, where the service of the rule nisi had been on the wife of the defendant at his dwelling-house, the person effecting the service exhibiting the original. Guard, In re, 6 Jur. 916.

On Defendant's Son.—Where a copy of a rule nisi for an attachment was delivered to the defendant's son, who refused to say where his father was, and an appointment was made for a subsequent day :—Held, not sufficient to dispense with personal service. Ibbertson, In re, 5 D. P. C. 160.

Insufficiency of Demand.—A judge's order was served upon C., an attorney, calling upon him to deliver his bill of costs to B. within ten days. This order, not having been obeyed, was made a rule of court, and the rule was served upon C. by B.'s clerk, who at the same time demanded the bill of costs, but had no power of attorney to make the demand :—Held, that this was insufficient to support an attachment against C. Briggs, Ex parte, Catlin, In re, 6 D. & L. 566; 7 C. B. 136; 18 L. J., C. P. 184; 13 Jur. 471.

On Partners.—An attachment for disobedience of a judge's order will not be issued against two partners unless each has been served with the order. Welland, Ex parte, 11 C. B. 544.

On Sunday.—A rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment of money pursuant to the master's allocatur cannot be served on a Sunday. McIbham v. Smith, 8 T. R. 86.

Non-Service—How Objection Taken.—The court will not open a rule for an attachment on the mere affidavit of the party that he has not been served; at least unless he shows some mistake in the service. Hopley v. Granger, 1 N. R. 256.

Order Wrongly Entitled.—An order that a father named Holt should deliver over his infant daughter to her mother was intituled in the matter of the infant (naming her), and in the matter of the act 36 & 37 Vict. c. 12. The copy served on the father was intituled only in the matter of the act, but was indorsed on the outside "Re Holt:"—Held, that the service was ineffectual, and that the order to attach must be discharged. Holt, In re, 11 Ch. D. 168; 40 L. T. 207; 27 W. R. 485.

Waiver of.—Where a rule nisi issues to shew cause why an attachment should not issue for not obeying a judge's order, which has been made a rule of court, and the rule nisi is not personally served, but the party appears upon it and objects to the want of personal service, such appearance waives the necessity of personal service. Levi v. Duncombe, 1 C., M. & R. 737; 3 D. P. C. 447; 5 Tyr. 490; 1 Gale, 60.

If a party is in contempt, it is not necessary that a rule calling upon him to answer it should be personally served. Id.

4. DEMAND.

When Necessary.—In order to bring a party into contempt by not paying money according to an order, a demand of the money must be made after the order has been made a rule of court. Chilton v. Ellis, 2 D. P. C. 338; 2 C. & M. 459; 4 Tyr. 369.

Where a judge's order directed that certain deeds should be given up on a tender of, &c., to the plaintiffs or their agent :—Held, that, before an attachment for a refusal of the tender to him, the plaintiffs must have notice of that tender, and be personally required to give up the deeds. Evans v. Millard, 3 D. P. C. 661; 1 Gale, 138.

To sustain an attachment for disobedience of a rule requiring a party to execute a conveyance, it is not enough merely to serve him with a copy and to shew him the original rule; there must be an express demand upon him to do the act which the rule commands him to do. Swinfen v. Swinfen, 18 C. B. 485; 25 L. J., C. P. 303.

A common law court may issue an attachment for disobedience of a rule drawn up on an order of nisi prius made at the trial of an issue directed by the Court of Chancery. Id.

In order to obtain an attachment for non-payment of costs, a demand is not necessary, if the party sought to be served by his violence prevents the demand from being made. Wentham v. Downes, 3 D. P. C. 573; 1 H. & W. 216.

An attorney's bill having been ordered to be taxed after the client had given a bill of exchange for the amount, it was found that he had been overpaid, and the attorney was ordered to refund the overpayment to the client; and also, by a subsequent order, to pay the costs of taxation, more than a sixth having been taken off. Upon an application of the attorney to be allowed to pay these sums to the holder of the bill of exchange (which had been dishonoured), instead of his client, he was ordered to do so within a week, or, in default, that an attachment should issue :—Held, that no demand of these two sums was necessary to ground an attachment, but that it was his duty to seek the holder of the bill, and pay the money to him. Woollison v. Hodgson, 3 D. P. C. 178.

Sufficiency of.—A personal demand is absolutely necessary before moving for an attachment for non-payment of costs. Stannell v. Truer, 1 C., M. & R. 88; 2 D. P. C. 673; 4 Tyr. 862.

In order to bring a party into contempt for non-delivery of a bond pursuant to a rule of court, the demand of it must be made by one of the parties mentioned in the rule as entitled to receive it. Fortescue, Ex parte, 2 D. P. C. 448.

Or it must appear that the demand was made by a person duly authorized. Doe d. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Scott, N. R. 398; 4 Jur. 746.

An attachment for non-payment of costs cannot be supported by a demand of the costs by a third person, authorized by the attorney to receive them. Clark v. Dignum, 3 M. & W. 319; 1 H. & H. 86.

By Solicitor.—A demand of costs on the master's allocatur by the attorney in the cause, they being costs in the cause, is sufficient whereon to ground an attachment. Cox v. Salmon, 2 M. & W. 127; 2 Gale, 226.

Where in a country cause costs are by a rule to be paid to the party, or his attorney, a demand by the attorney in the country is sufficient to found a motion for an attachment for non-payment, although the agent in London is strictly the attorney on the record. Dennett v. Pass, 1 Scott, 586; 1 Bing. N. C. 638; 3 D. P. C. 632; 1 Hodges, 157.

If a rule is made that a party do pay the costs of the day to another, without adding "or to his attorney," it is sufficient, in order to ground an attachment for disobedience, to show that the demand of them was made by the attorney of that party. Inman v. Hill, 4 M. & W. 7; 6 D. P. C. 666; 2 Jur. 470; S. P., Mason v. Whitehouse, 6 D. P. C. 602; 1 Arn. 261; 6 Scott, 575; 4 Bing. N. C. 692; 2 Jur. 545.

By Power of Attorney.—If money is ordered to be paid to a certain person (not an attorney), or his agent, the demand must either be made by himself, or by some one authorized by power of attorney. Brown v. Jenks, 4 D. P. C. 581.

If the demand is made by the authority of a power of attorney, a copy of that power must be left at the time of the demand. Doe d. Cope v. Johnson, 7 D. P. C. 550; 3 Jur. 28; 1 W., W. & H. 549.

If not left, the court will not afterwards grant an attachment. Rez v. Packwood, 2 D. P. C. 570.

5. EXAMINATION OF DEFENDANT.

Examination of Debtor as to his Means—Contents of Affidavit.—A party applying for the attachment of a judgment debtor for non-compliance with an order for his oral examination, must make an affidavit that conduct money has been tendered to the debtor, and also there must be an affidavit shewing some good reason for not examining the debtor at his place of residence, and also that there were no other means of ascertaining what debts were owing to the debtor. Protector Endowment Company v. Whitlam, 36 L. T. 467.

Liability of Defendant to answer Interrogatories.—A defendant under attachment must answer interrogatories; he cannot come in and confess the contempt before he does so. Rez v. Edwards, 4 Burr. 2105; 1 W. Bl. 637.

But on an attachment for rescue, a defendant may submit to a fine without answering interrogatories. Rez v. Elkins, 1 W. Bl. 640; 2 Burr. 2129.

But where a defendant is brought up, it is the practice of the court to put interrogatories to him, although he does not deny the charge, unless the prosecutor waives putting them. Rez v. Horsley, 5 T. R. 362.

Report of Master.—On attachment for a contempt, where a defendant has been examined on interrogatories, and the master of the crown office directed to report thereon to the court: if he reports that the defendant has cleared himself of the contempt, the court will not enter into a discussion of the correctness of such report, unless it appears, by the interrogatories and answers (semble, not by affidavit) that the master has been mistaken. It is not sufficient ground for a review that the master's report appears contradictory to the opinion of a judge who granted the attachment. Rez v. Morley, 4 A. & E. 849.

The report of the master of the crown office that a defendant and his attorney were in contempt for not obeying an award, and filing a bill, is to be taken as a conviction; and on his being brought up for judgment, the court will not receive affidavits in denial of the contempt, but only in mitigation of punishment. Coulson v. Graham, 2 Chit. 57.

The master's report upon interrogatories of contempt cannot be moved for on the last day of term, without the previous leave of the court, unless upon extraordinary cases, and personal service of notice. Rez v. Wheeler, 1 W. Bl. 311; 3 Burr. 1256.

Interrogatories—Defendant not ruled to Answer.—Where a defendant was in custody on an attachment for non-performance of an award, the prosecutor was ruled to exhibit interrogatories: he did so, and they were filed: but not ruling the defendant to appear before the examiners, the court discharged him on bail. Doe d. Clarke v. Stillwell, 2 D., N. S. 18; 7 Jur. 154.

—Not Answering.—Where an order of a judge had been obtained for a defendant to answer interrogatories, and he had obtained an extension of the time, but no answer had been given, the court granted a rule nisi for an attachment for contempt of court, although there had been no personal service. Seafeld (Lord) v. Pratt, 5 L. T., 580.

—Effect of Answers to.—Where a person, adjudged to be in contempt, fails to purge such contempt by his answers to personal interrogatories administered to him by the prosecutor, the court will proceed to pass sentence; but, before doing so, will give the party so in contempt an opportunity of filing affidavits in mitigation of punishment. Matthews, In re, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 273.

Where a person, in contempt, is ordered to answer personal interrogatories, upon the discussion of the sufficiency of the answers to such interrogatories, the prosecutor has the right to begin. Ib. 275.

6. OTHER MATTERS RELATING TO.

Entry of Order made in Chambers.—Attachment for contempt will not be granted for disobedience to an order made in chambers unless the order be duly entered in accordance with Consolidated Order XXXV. r. 32. Ballard v. Tomlinson, 48 L. T. 515; 31 W. R. 563.

Bail.—An action on 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, will not lie against a sheriff for refusing to take bail on an attachment out of Chancery; that statute referring only to process in courts of common law. Studd v. Acton, 1 H. Bl. 468; S. P., Phelps v. Barrett, 4 Price, 23.

For although a sheriff may, if he chooses, take a bail-bond on an attachment out of Chancery, he is not compellable to take bail thereupon. Morris v. Hayward, 6 Taunt. 569; 2 Marsh. 280.

The sheriff may recover on a bail-bond so taken. Ib.

But such bail-bond is not assignable under 4 Ann. c. 16, s. 20. Miller v. Palfreyman, 4 B. & Ad. 146; 1 N. & M. 696.

It is the duty of a sheriff to execute a writ of attachment, issued for not appearing to a subpoena ad respondendum; and he must return the writ as having been executed (in whatever manner), or that the party is not found in his bailiwick. Masters v. Cooper, 1 Price's P. C. 8.

Two days' notice of bail on an attachment is not required, nor any justification of such bail. Rex v. Hall, 2 W. Bl. 1110.

A defendant may be admitted to bail, and sworn to answer interrogatories upon an attachment for contempt, although a defective notice of bail has been served on the prosecutor. Anon., 4 D. & R. 393.

Jurisdiction to Commit for Default in Payment of the Costs.—Upon a motion for an attachment, no order was made, except that the respondent pay the costs of the motion. Upon default in payment:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to commit to prison for the default. Micklethwaite v. Fletcher, 27 W. R. 793.

Discharge from Arrest.—An attorney was arrested under an attachment issued by a court of law for contempt of court in not obeying a previous order that he should pay to a client a sum which he had received for him while acting in the capacity of attorney. Before the attachment issued the attorney had been adjudicated bankrupt, but when he was arrested the bankruptcy was not closed, nor had he obtained an order of discharge:—Held, that the Court of Bankruptcy ought not to order his release from custody, but ought to leave the court of law to decide whether the attachment was merely a process to compel payment of a debt, or whether it was issued in the exercise of the court's quasi criminal jurisdiction over its own officer. Deere, Ex parte, Deere, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 658; 44 L. J., Bk. 120.

Where a party is arrested under an attachment for contempt of court in not paying money, he is not entitled to be discharged upon tendering the amount to the officer. Pitt v. Coombs, 3 N. & M. 212; 5 B. & Ad. 1078.

A party irregularly arrested upon an attachment on the 3rd of February, did not apply for his discharge until the 10th day of Easter Term, which was at the end of the month of April:—Held, that the application was too late. Reg. v. Burgess, 3 N. & P. 366; 8 A. & E. 275; 2 Jur. 856.

If there is a misnomer of the Christian name of the defendant in a writ of attachment, though amended by order of a judge after arrest, the court will discharge him out of custody. Reg. v. Burgess, 1 W., W. & H. 46; 2 Jur. 396.

A party cannot be detained, but may be retaken on an amended writ of attachment. Ib.

Where, in a copy of a rule for an attachment for nonpayment of costs pursuant to the master's allocatur, the defendant's name was spelt Calver instead of Calvert, and the master's name Day instead of Dax, the court set aside the attachment, and discharged the defendant out of custody, although in the rule the names were spelt correctly. Rex v. Calvert, 2 C. & M. 189; 4 Tyr. 77; 2 D. P. C. 276.

A party in contempt for filing a bill in chancery to set aside an award, after entering into a rule of court to abide by it, was discharged without any fine, rather than set a small one for so high an offence. Rex v. Wheeler, 3 Burr. 1256; 1 W. Bl. 311.

Purging Contempt.—A party arrested on an attachment for not obeying a judge's order cannot purge his contempt or be discharged, unless his compliance with the order is complete and bona fide. Reg. v. Weston, 8 Jur. 1122.

A party attached for contempt in not performing an award, and sentenced to imprisonment for a definite period, is not, by undergoing such imprisonment, exonerated from the performance of the award. Reg. v. Hemsworth, 3 C. B. 745.

Costs were granted upon an attachment for contempt to the person who had purged himself of the contempt upon examination. Rex v. Plunket, 3 Burr. 1329.

Setting Aside.—A rule for an attachment having been obtained on the part of a woman, who described herself in an affidavit as a widow, against her attorney for not paying her a sum of money, the court set aside the rule on its being shewn that she was a married woman (her second marriage having taken place subsequently to her employment of the attorney), since, although the concealment of her second marriage was not made with any fraudulent intention, she had deceived the court, made a false affidavit, and was no longer in a condition to give a legal discharge for the money. Reg. v. Carttar, 1 L. M. & P. 386; 19 L. J., Q. B. 422; 15 Jur. 176.

Detention in Prison beyond proper Period.—The plaintiff, having been guilty of a contempt in chancery, was arrested by the sheriff under a writ of attachment and delivered into the custody of the defendant, the governor of a county gaol, under a warrant commanding him to keep the plaintiff in custody so that the sheriff might bring her before the court of Chancery to answer her contempt. The defendant having detained the plaintiff in custody beyond the prescribed period, although the plaintiff in chancery had not brought her to the bar according to 11 Geo. 4 and 1 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 15:—Held, first, that in proceedings against the defendant for the undue detention, the proper form of action was trespass, and not case; and, secondly, that such an action was not within the limitation in 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 75, which applied only to proceedings for acts done in a supposed exercise of the powers of the statute. Moone v. Rose, 4 L. R., Q. B. 486; 38 L. J., Q. B. 236; 20 L. T. 606; 17 W. R. 729.

Priority of Motion to discharge a Prisoner from Custody.—A motion to discharge a prisoner from custody has priority over all other motions. Ash-ton v. Shorrocks, 43 L. T. 530; 29 W. R. 117.

Costs.—The costs of an attachment are no longer fixed, but by Ord. L.V. r. 1, they are in the discretion of the court, and should be disposed of at the time of the application for the writ under Ord. XLIV. r. 2. Abud v. Riches, 2 Ch. D. 528; 45 L. J., Ch. 649; 34 L. T. 713; 24 W. R. 637.

When they were applied for subsequently, but no additional expense had been incurred, taxed costs were allowed to the plaintiff, in addition to the fixed sum payable on discharge. Ib.

ATTAINDER.

1. Of Peers.—See PEERS AND PEERAGE.
2. Of Other Persons.

2. OF OTHER PERSONS.

Effect of.—By attainder, all personal property and rights of action in respect of property accruing to the party attainted, either before or after attainder, are vested in the crown without office found; and, therefore, attainder may well be pleaded in bar to an action on a bill of exchange indorsed to the plaintiff after his attainder. Bullock v. Dodds, 2 B. & A. 258. And see Lambert v. Taylor, 6 D. & R. 188; 4 B. & C. 138.

Personal property not belonging to a felon, convicted of simple larceny and sentenced to transportation, at the time of conviction, but accruing due to him afterwards, before his term of transportation has expired, is forfeited to the crown: Roberts v. Walker, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 752.

A., in January, 1815, was convicted of bigamy. In April, he conveyed away, by lease and release, lands in which he had an estate for life:—Held, that such conveyance was not void as against the crown, there having been no attainder. Rez v. Bridger, 1 M. & W. 145.

In an action for slander, imputing felony, the plaintiff had a verdict. Before judgment signed, the plaintiff was attainted of the felony; Quære, whether, before office found, the damages vested in the crown, and whether this would be sufficient matter suggested by the defendant, the crown refusing to interfere, on a writ of audita querela, to prevent judgment and execution following the verdict. Symonds or Symons v. Blake, 2 C., M. & R. 416; 4 D. P. C. 263; 1 Gale, 182; 5 Tyr. 840.

Where a party, convicted of felony, is entitled to a chose in action, the right of suing being in another in trust for him, that right of suit does not vest in the crown upon the conviction. Bishop v. Curtis, 18 Q. B. 878; 21 L. J., Q. B. 391; 17 Jur. 23.

An assignment of a felon's goods bona fide for a good consideration after the commission day of the assizes, but before the day upon which he was actually tried and convicted, will pass the property. Whitaker v. Wisbey, 12 C. B. 44; 21 L. J., C. P. 116; 14 Jur. 411.

A grant of a liberty in a manor of goods and chattels of tenants in such manor attainted of felony is confined to the goods and chattels of felons being locally situate within the manor, and does not pass goods or chattels lying out of it. Rez v. Capper, 5 Price, 217.

During the abeyance of a barony descendible to heirs of the body, one of the co-heirs was attainted for treason; an act of parliament afterwards passed to restore in blood the sons and daughters of the attainted co-heir:—Held, that it was competent to the crown to determine the abeyance in favour either of a party claiming through the co-heir, who was so attainted, or of one claiming through another co-heir. Braye and Camoys Peccage, In re, 8 Scott, 108; 5 Bing. N. C. 754.

As regards Marriage.—An attainted man, although civilly dead for some purposes, is nevertheless capable of contracting in a foreign country a marriage which will be deemed valid in England, if it was valid by the law of that country. Kynnauld v. Leslie, 1 L. R., C. P. 389; 35 L. J., C. P. 226; 12 Jur., N. S. 468; 14 L. T. 756; 14 W. R. 761; 1 H. & R. 521.

R. was attainted of high treason in 1715; he escaped from England, married at Brussels in 1724, and left issue, B. a son, and M. a daughter. B. left surviving him an only son, J., who died in 1814:—Held, first, that the descendants of M. could inherit from J., as they need not mention R., the common ancestor in the pedigree, and were, therefore, unaffected by the old doctrine as to corruption of blood which prevailed before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 10. Ib.

Held, secondly, that the marriage of R. being contracted in a foreign country was valid in England, and the children legitimate. Ib.

When Pardon Granted.—A party sentenced to death for felony, which sentence was commuted to transportation for life, received a conditional free pardon in a penal colony:—Held, that such pardon did not alter the effect of the attainder in investing his property in the crown. Church, In re, 16 Jur. 517.

Rights of Wife of Attainted Person.—A. died intestate, the wife of a felon under sentence of transportation, and leaving property acquired after the conviction of her husband:—Held, that such property belonged to the crown as accrued to the felon, and not to the next of kin of the wife. Coombes v. Queen's Proctor, 2 Rob. Ecc. Rep. 547; 16 Jur. 820.

Can be heard in Court on subject of Attainder only.—A person attainted can be heard as a suitor in a court of justice only for the direct purpose of reversing the attainder, not in the prosecution of a civil right. Bullock, Ex parte, 14 Ves. 452; nom. Rez v. Bullock, 1 Taunt. 82; 2 Leach C. C. 966.

Actions against Attainted Persons.—Ejectment may be maintained for freehold lands, on the demise of a person attainted of felony, when there has been no office found on behalf of the king. Doe d. Griffith v. Pritchard, 5 B. & Ad. 765; S. C., nom. Doe d. Evans v. Pritchard, 2 N. & M. 489.

An action will lie against one attainted of treason. Ramsay v. McDonald, 1 W. Bl. 30; S. C., nom. Ramsden v. Macdonald, 1 Wils. 217.

ATTORNEY AND SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

Precedence.—After the 14th Dec. 1814, the attorney and solicitor-general took precedence before all the Queen's serjeants; whereas before they were accustomed to have place and audience in the courts next after the two most ancient of the Queen's serjeants, but before the others. 6 Taunt. 424; 2 Ves. & B. 422.

The attorney-general, in the Queen's business, has pre-audience in the Exchequer over the postman and tubman. Reg. v. Exeter (Bishop), 7 M. & W. 189; 9 D. P. C. 276; 5 Jur. 102.

Although not a serjeant, he had a right of audience in the Common Pleas, in a cause in which the crown was interested, before the exclusive privileges of the serjeants were abolished by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 54. Paddock v. Forester, 8 D. P. C. 334; 1 Scott, N. R. 391; 1 M. & G. 583.

The attorney-general, by an order of the House of Lords, has pre-eminence over the lord advocate, and the solicitor-general over the Scotch solicitor-general. 2 C. & F. 482.

Representations of Crown.—The attorney-general is the only legal representative of the crown in the courts. Rea v. Austen, 8 Price, 142.

But during the vacancy of the office, the whole business and authority of the attorney-general devolve upon the solicitor-general. Rea v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 2554, 2570.

The attorney-general is an officer of the crown, and in that sense only the officer of the public. Att.-Gen. v. Brown, 1 Swanst. 288.

Privileges of Office.—An information being laid in Middlesex, by the attorney-general for the Duchy of Cornwall, for the recovery of dues claimed in respect of goods imported into a port alleged to be parcel of the duchy, the defendant applied to change the venue to Devonshire, upon an ordinary affidavit that the cause of action arose and the witnesses resided there:—Held, first, that although the attorney-general may not have a right in all cases to lay and retain the venue where he pleases, he has such a right in the case of such an information, it being a suit in the nature of a transitory action. Att.-Gen. v. Crossman, 4 H. & C. 568; 1 L. R., Ex. 381; 35 L. J., Ex. 215; 12 Jur., N. S. 712; 14 L. T. 856; 14 W. R. 996.

Held, secondly, that in the case of such an information relating to matters affecting the duchy of Cornwall, the attorney-general for the Prince of Wales would have the same right as the attorney-general for the crown. Ib.

But as documents relating to the duchy of Cornwall would have to be produced from their place of deposit in Middlesex, there was no such preponderance upon the balance of convenience in favour of a trial in Devonshire as to call on the court to interfere, or to render it necessary to decide the question of prerogative. Ib.

The attorney-general attends, in peerage cases, as assistant to the lords' committees for privileges, and, it is said, that he is entitled to sit (on a chair) inside the bar. Saye and Sele (Barony), 1 H. L. Cas. 511, n.

The courts exercise over the attorney-general the same authority which they exercise over every other suitor; and the attorney-general would not, any more than any other suitor, be permitted to prosecute any proceeding which was merely vexatious or had no legal object. Reg. v. Prosser, 11 Beav. 306; 18 L. J., Ch. 35; 13 Jur. 71.

Where there has been an excess of the statutory powers granted to a public company, but no injury has been occasioned to any individual, and there is none which is imminent, or of irreparable consequence, the attorney-general alone can obtain an injunction to restrain the exorbitancy. Ware v. Regent's Canal Company, 3 De G. & J. 212; 28 L. J., Ch. 163; 5 Jur., N. S. 25.

When entitled to take Proceedings on behalf of the Public.—The attorney-general may properly take proceedings on behalf of the public, when acts tending to the injury of the public are being done without lawful authority, even though no evidence be produced of actual injury having been inflicted. After the expiration of the parliamentary powers of a bridge company the company continued to carry on their operations, on and off their own lands, intending to apply for a new act to revive and extend the powers conferred by their original act. An action having been commenced by the attorney-general, on the information of two of the shareholders, for the purpose of restraining the company from proceeding with their works without due authority, and from using the moneys of the company for such works, or for other unauthorized purposes, the company obtained their new act, and the plaintiffs thereupon obtained leave to discontinue so much of their claim as related to matters other than the claim to have the company restrained, before the passing of the new act, from executing works off their own lands. The action being brought to a hearing:—Held, that the action was justifiably commenced, and that the company must pay the costs of the action, other than those relating to the part of it which had been discontinued. Attorney-General v. Shrewsbury (Kingsland) Bridge Co., 21 Ch. D. 752; 51 L. J., Ch. 746; 46 L. T. 687; 30 W. R. 916.

Action against Corporation by Freemen—Information unnecessary.]—In an action by some (on behalf of all) of the freemen of a borough to establish the right of all the individual freemen to share for their private benefit the net proceeds of certain properties vested in the corporation:—Held, on demurrer, that the effect of the saving of rights in s. 2 of the Municipal Corporations Act of 1835 was to legalize the beneficial interests therein mentioned, without reference to the legality of their origin, and, in particular, to obviate any objection which might otherwise arise in respect of the tendency towards a perpetuity of any such beneficial interest. Prestney v. Colchester (Mayor), 21 Ch. D. 111; 51 L. J., Ch. 805.

An action to establish such rights as aforesaid may be brought by parties claiming to be entitled, without an information by the attorney-general. Ib.

Information by, to restrain Public Body.]—Upon an information filed by the attorney-general to restrain a public body from transgressing powers conferred by an act of parliament, it is not necessary to prove that injury to the public will result from the acts complained of; and in this respect there is no difference between an ex-officio information and an information at the relation of a private individual. Att.-Gen. v. Cockermouth Local Board, 18 L. R., Eq. 172.

Right to sue Railway Company for breach of its powers.]—The right of the attorney-general to sue a railway company for breach of its powers is not taken away by the provisions of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85. Att.-Gen. v. Great Northern Railway Company, 29 L. J., Ch. 794; 6 Jur., N. S. 1006.

Fiat for bringing Error.]—The attorney-general having refused his fiat for a writ of error to a person convicted of a misdemeanour:—Held, that in a proper case the fiat was due ex debito justitiæ; but that the attorney-general was to determine, on his own responsibility, whether or not each case was proper, and that the court could not review his decision. Newton, Ex parte, 4 El. & Bl. 869; 24 L. J., Q. B. 246; 1 Jur., N. S. 591; S. P. & S. C., 16 C. B. 97.

Where, in a colony, a person has been convicted of a criminal offence, and is undergoing his sentence, no writ of error will be granted to bring up the record of conviction unless the attorney-general has given his fiat for the writ. Reg. v. Lees, El., Bl. & El. 828; 27 L. J., Q. B. 403; 5 Jur., N. S. 333.

Entry of Nolle Prosequi.]—Where a defendant has been found guilty upon several counts of an information, the attorney-general may enter a nolle prosequi on one of the counts, after a rule nisi for a new trial. Reg. v. Leatham, 30 L. J., Q. B. 205; 7 Jur., N. S. 674.

The attorney-general has power to enter a nolle prosequi on an indictment without calling upon the prosecutor to shew cause why that should not be done; and where he has done so, the court will not interfere. Reg. v. Allen, 1 B. & S. 850; 9 Cox C. C. 120; 31 L. J., M. C. 129; 8 Jur., N. S. 230; 5 L. T. 636.

Right of Reply.]—Where a question affecting the crown is discussed on motion, the attorney-general, having shewn cause against the rule, has no right to reply. Reg. v. Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, 16 Q. B. 357; 20 L. J., Q. B. 305; 15 Jur. 767.

AUDITÀ QUERELÀ.

Common Right.]—A writ of audità querelà is of common right. Giles v. Nathan, 5 Taunt. 558; 1 Marsh. 226; S. P., Lister v. Mundell, 1 B. & P. 427.

Where an audità querelà clearly affords relief to the defendant, the court will relieve him on motion, without putting him to the audità querelà. Ib.

When allowed.]—No writ of audità querelà shall be allowed unless by rule of court or order of a judge. Reg. Gen., Q. B., C. P. and Ex., H. T. 16 Vict. r. 79; 1 El. & Bl. App. xv.

By Motion only.]—Before this rule, it could only be granted upon affidavit and motion in open court. Dearie v. Ker, 7 D. & L. 231; 4 Ex. 82; 18 L. J., Ex. 448.

Where Relief questionable.]—Where the relief is questionable, the court will not dispose of the case on motion, but leave the defendant so to proceed that the plaintiff may demur or bring error. Ib.; S. P., Symonds v. Blake, 4 D. P. C. 263; 2 C., M. & R. 416; 1 Gale, 182.

Where Fraud imputed.]—Where fraud was imputed to a defendant, on affidavits stating that he had fraudulently caused a commission of bankruptcy to be issued against the plaintiff, and there were counter-affidavits, denying the existence of fraud, the court refused to go into the question on motion, but left the party to his remedy by action, or by audità querelà. Baker v. Ridgway, 2 Bing. 41; 9 Moore, 114.

Not Ex parte.]—A court of equity refused to order a writ of audità querelà to be issued upon an ex parte application. Troop v. Ricardo, 33 Beav. 122; 9 Jur., N. S. 887; 8 L. T. 757; 11 W. R. 1014.

A defendant may plead several matters by leave. Giles v. Hutt, 5 D. & L. 387; 1 Ex. 701; 17 L. J., Ex. 121.

Security for Costs.—So a plaintiff will be compelled to give security for costs where such security would be required in an ordinary action. Helmes v. Pemberton, 1 El. & El. 369; 28 L. J., Q. B. 172; 5 Jur., N. S. 727; 7 W. R. 160. See further, sub tit. PRACTICE.

Venire facias—Supersedeas.—In an auditá querelá, the court granted a rule absolute for a supersedeas, together with a venire facias. Giles v. Hutt, 5 D. & L. 115; 1 Ex. 59; 16 L. J., Ex. 258.

Personal Service.—The venire facias and summons to appear must be personally served, it being original process. Williams v. Roberts, 1 L. M. & P. 381; 10 L. J., Ex. 269; 14 Jur. 399.

Judgment—Deed of Settlement—Alternative Powers.—Upon an auditá querelá to be relieved from a judgment, the writ set out a deed of settlement of a company, by which it was agreed between the defendant and the shareholders, of which the plaintiff was one, that upon the neglect of a shareholder to pay any call within a calendar month after notice, the directors might after the expiration of such month declare that such shares as to which the full amount should not have been paid should be forfeited; provided that it should be lawful for the directors, if they should think fit, to enforce the payment of any call, instead of declaring forfeited any share. It stated that the plaintiff having neglected to pay his calls, the defendant sued him, recovered judgment and levied part of the amount of the calls, and that they afterwards declared his shares forfeited:—Held, that the power in the deed was in the alternative, and that in case of non-payment of a call the directors might either sue or declare the shares forfeited, but that they could not do both; that the proceeding to judgment and execution was an election by them of their remedy, and that the declaration afterwards that the shares were forfeited was a nullity; and consequently, that the plaintiff was not entitled to be relieved from the judgment. Giles v. Hutt, 3 Ex. 18; 5 Railw. Cas. 505; 18 L. J., Ex. 53.

Subsequent Release.—Jurisdiction in equity to restrain execution upon a judgment against a defendant, on the ground of a subsequent release by the plaintiff of his claims under the judgment, for a valuable consideration paid by the defendant, notwithstanding that a rule obtained by the defendant, to set aside the judgment on the ground of such subsequent release, had been discharged, and a writ of auditá querelá on the same ground had been set aside by a court of law. Williams v. Roberts, 8 Hare, 315.

Bill in Equity for Relief.—Although an auditá querelá is said to be "in the nature of a bill in equity to be relieved against the oppression of the plaintiff" (3 Black. Com. 406), yet the defendant is not, either by the existence of that remedy, or by having unsuccessfully resorted to it, precluded from bringing an original bill in equity for relief against the plaintiff, in a case where a court of law has set aside the writ in a summary proceeding. Id.

I. FORM AND NATURE OF BAIL-BOND.

General Requisites.—The 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, is a public act. Samuel v. Evans, 2 T. R. 569.

The sheriffs of London, to whom, as such, a writ of special capias was directed, under which they arrested the plaintiff, cannot be sued for damages for not having taken bail for his appearance, according to the 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, the sufficiency of the bail tendered being only alleged to be within Middlesex and London taken together. Lovell v. London (Sheriffs), 15 East, 320.

Although the sheriff takes a bail-bond on 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, yet that is at his peril, and the plaintiff shall not be concluded thereby. Wolfe v. Collingwood, 1 Wils. 262.

An undertaking by an attorney to give a bail-bond to the sheriff is contrary to 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, and therefore void. Lewis v. Knight, 1 D. P. C. 261; 1 M. & Scott, 353; 8 Bing. 271; S. P., Sedgeworth v. Spicer, 4 East, 568; 2 Smith, 305.

If a sheriff's officer takes an undertaking for the appearance of the party, instead of a bail-bond, without the plaintiff's assent, and bail above be not duly put in, the sheriff is liable to an action for an escape. Fuller v. Prost, 7 T. R. 109.

Where a sheriff suffers a person, who has been arrested, to go at large without taking a bail-bond, the court will not suffer him to render the defendant after an action against him for an escape; though he should not have been ruled to return the writ, or bring in the body, before action commenced, and although the defendant was in custody in several other actions. Birn v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 Marsh. 261; S. C., nom. Bird v. Bond, 6 Taunt. 554. And see Hamilton v. Wilson, 1 East, 383.

A bond stated to have been taken on a certain day, conditioned for appearance on the day previously to the date of the bond, is void by the statute. Samuel v. Evans, 2 T. R. 569.

A bail-bond conditioned to appear in eight days after the date (the arrest having been on the same day) is sufficient. Erans q. t. v. Muerley, 2 D. P. C. 364; S. C., nom. Erans v. Shropshire (Sheriff), 4 Tyr. 169.

If a party executes a bail-bond before the condition is filled up, it is void. Powell v. Duff, 3 Camp. 181. See Holding v. Raphael, 5 N. & M. 655.

By a writ, a sheriff was commanded to take W. P. and one S. P., and him and the said S. P. safely keep until he and S. P. should have given him bail in an action at the suit of the plaintiff. The sheriff took a bail-bond conditioned for the appearance of W. P. alone:—Held to be no variance. Grottick v. Phillips, 3 M. & Scott, 132; 9 Bing. 721.

To whom given.—A bail-bond must be given to the sheriff, as such, for the appearance of the party, and for no other purpose. Rogers v. Reeves, 1 T. R. 418, 422; S. P., Jackson v. Hunter, 6 T. R. 71.

Penalty and Sureties.—A bail-bond taken in more than double the sum sworn to is good. Norden v. Horsley, 2 Wils. 69.

An attorney ought not to prepare a bail-bond for a larger sum than is requisite according to the practice of the court. Wingrave v. Godmond, 7 C. & P. 66.

A sheriff is bound to let his prisoner arrested on mesne process go at large, on having reasonable sureties. Matson v. Booth, 5 M. & S. 223.

A bond with five sureties, three of whom are respectively worth more than the penalty of the bond, is sufficient, though the other two are worth less than the penalty. Ib.

The addition of another obligor in a bond given to the sheriff after the bond has been executed, but before the sheriff has accepted it, with the assent of the sheriff and the prior obligors, does not vacate the bond nor make a new stamp necessary. Ib.

Where a sheriff took a bail-bond executed by one surety only, the court refused to set aside an attachment against him for not bringing in the body, although he consented to pay the costs. Rez v. London (Sheriff), 9 Moore, 422; 2 Bing. 227; S. P., Reg. v. Lane, 7 D. P. C. 313.

But when the application is made at the instance of the bail, the court will set aside such an attachment. Rez v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 D. P. C. 140.

A sheriff took a bail-bond with one surety only; he afterwards made a day's default in returning the writ. The court set aside an attachment against him on payment of costs. Rez v. Surrey (Sheriff), 2 C., M. & R. 698; 1 T. & G. 32.

Cancelling or Setting Aside.—A bail-bond given upon an arrest on a capias was set aside for a variance between the capias and the paper served as a copy of the writ. Copley v. Medeiros, 7 M. & G. 426; 8 Scott, N. R. 172.

The court has power to order a bail-bond to be given up to be cancelled. Needham v. Bristow, 1 D., N. S. 700; 4 Scott, N. R. 773; 4 M. & G. 262.

But the court will not order a bond given to be delivered up to be cancelled, on affidavit that the defendant has rendered himself to gaol according to the condition of the bond. Ridler d. Bilton v. Chappelow, 1 D., N. S. 637; 6 Jur. 375.

A defendant, having been arrested, gave bail to the sheriff, but before the expiration of the time for putting in bail to the action, he died. A rule having afterwards been obtained, calling upon the plaintiff or his attorney to shew cause why the bail-bond given to the sheriff should not be given up to be cancelled:—Held, that the rule should also have called upon the sheriff, and was bad for not so doing. Cook v. Lynch, 2 B. C. Rep. 291.

A defendant having been arrested, paid into court the sum indorsed on the writ, and 20*l.* as a security for costs, to abide the event of the suit, in pursuance of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, instead of putting in and perfecting special bail:—Held, that he was entitled to have the bail-bond delivered up to him to be cancelled. Smith v. Jordan, 2 M. & P. 428.

Forfeiture by not putting in Special Bail.—If a party does not put in special bail within eight days after execution of the process upon him, including the day of such execution, the plaintiff, immediately on the expiration of that time, may put the bail-bond in suit. Hillary v. Rowles, 5 B. & Ad. 460; 2 D. P. C. 201; S. P., Robinson v. Hawkins, W., W. & D. 575; 1 Jur. 843.

If a defendant gives a bail-bond to the sheriff, he cannot afterwards, by surrendering to the sheriff, vacate the bond; but, after such surrender, and after the expiration of eight days from the arrest, if special bail is not put in, proceedings may be had upon the bail-bond. Hodgson v. Mee, 3 A. & E. 765; 5 N. & M. 302; 1 H. & W. 398.

— By giving Time to Principal.—After a bail-bond has been forfeited, and an assignment thereof taken, time given to the principal is no discharge of the sureties. Woonnam v. Frier, 1 C. & M. 352; 3 Tyr. 375.

If one of the bail below consents to time being given to the defendant to perfect bail above, this act is binding on both. Howard v. Bradberry, 3 D. P. C. 92.

II. ASSIGNMENT OF BAIL-BOND.

Form of.—The seal to the assignment of a bail-bond, being a seal of office, is sufficient to give it validity, whoever signed it, and, therefore, it is no objection that it was signed by one of the under sheriffs' clerks. Hams v. Ashby, 1 Selw. N. P. 586, n.

An assignment must be executed in the presence of two witnesses, but it is not necessary that they should both subscribe their names in the presence of the officer assigning. Phillips v. Barlow, or Barber, 1 Scott, 322; 1 Bing. N. C. 433; 3 D. P. C. 381; 6 C. & P. 781.

An assignment is invalid, if executed in the presence of and attested by the plaintiff in the action and another person. White v. Barrack, 1 M. & W. 425; 5 D. P. C. 64; 2 Gale, 57.

Effect of Assignment.—A plaintiff who takes an assignment of a bail-bond given for a defendant arrested on a capias, and on bail above not being put in in due time, commences an action upon it, ought not on that account to discontinue his original action against the defendant. Ede v. Collingridge, 11 M. & W. 61; 2 D., N. S. 764; 12 L. J., Ex. 247; 7 Jur. 203.

If a plaintiff accepts an assignment, he cannot call upon the sheriff to return the writ, nor shall he have a rule for that purpose before it is determined whether or not the bond is good. Brooke (Lord) v. Stone, 1 Wils. 223.

Although a rule to return the writ cannot be had after the plaintiff has taken a valid assignment of the bail-bond, it is otherwise if the bond from any cause is void. Williams v. Jacques, 1 Tidd's Prac. 307.

If a plaintiff sues the bail by action, and takes them in execution, he cannot afterward take the principal, though one of the bail becomes bankrupt and is discharged, and the other also is discharged on payment of 5*s.* in the pound, and upon an understanding that the plaintiff was at liberty to proceed against the principal. Allen v. Snow, 2 M. & S. 341.

In an action by assignees of a bail-bond, it is no objection to their recovering that the sheriff, before assigning the bond, returned non est inventus. Taylor v. Clow, 1 B. & Ad. 223.

Waiver of Assignment by excepting to Bail.—Where a defendant is guilty of a neglect in not putting in bail in time, whereby the bail-bond becomes forfeited, the plaintiff may except to bail put in to stay the proceedings on the bail-bond, and it will not be a waiver of the assignment. Boldero v. Gray, Cowp. 769.

It is not a waiver of the assignment, that the plaintiff intends to oppose the justification of bail. Edmond v. Ross, 9 Price, 5.

— By proceeding against Sheriff.—A plaintiff may abandon an attachment, and take an assignment of the bail-bond, and proceed thereon. Pople v. Wyatt, 15 East, 215.

So, where an attachment has been set aside. Brown v. Neave, Wightw. 406.

But where the plaintiff had ruled the sheriff to bring in the body, he could not take an assignment pending such rule. Blackford v. Hawkins, 7 Moore, 600; 1 Bing. 181.

But must have waited till the rule expired. Whittaker v. Oldaker, 1 M. & R. 298; 7 B. & C. 478.

III. ACTIONS ON BAIL-BONDS.

1. GENERALLY.

In what Court.—An action by an assignee of a bail-bond must be brought in the court out of which the process issued. Miller v. Pulfreyman, 1 N. & M. 696; S. P. Morris v. Rees, 2 W. Bl. 838; 3 Wils. 348; Walton v. Bent, 3 Burr. 1923.

Although it was irregular to bring an action on a bail-bond in a different court from that in which the original action was commenced, yet a defendant could not take advantage of it under non est factum. Wright v. Walmesley, 2 Camp. 396.

When.—A plaintiff who has held a defendant to bail, and has taken an assignment of the bail-bond, does not preclude himself from proceeding thereon against the bail, by going on with the original action against the defendant. Betts v. Smyth, 1 G. & D. 284; 2 Q. B. 113; 6 Jur. 343.

Parties.—Where two of three parties to a bail-bond were sued jointly:—Held, to be no irregularity. Knowles v. Johnson, 2 D. P. C. 653.

2. PLEADINGS.

Declaration.—In an action against an assignee of a bail-bond, a declaration stated that A. had been arrested under a capias, and that the defendant had entered into the bail-bond with a condition, reciting that A. had been arrested by virtue of a capias against him, in an action at the suit of the plaintiff, and that the bond had been assigned to the plaintiff by the sheriff:—Held, that the defendant was estopped by his execution of the bail-bond from objecting that A. was not arrested in an action at the suit of the plaintiff. Barnes v. Keane, 15 Q. B. 75; 19 L. J., Q. B. 309; 14 Jur. 786.

A plaintiff declared, as assignee of the sheriff, and set forth a bond to himself:—Held, no ground of demurrer. Reynolds v. Walsh, 1 C., M. & R. 580; 5 Tyr. 202; 3 D. P. C. 441.

In an action by an assignee of a bail-bond a declaration stated that the sheriff, "by an indorsement on the writing obligatory, duly made and sealed with the seal of the officer of the sheriff, assigned the writing obligatory to the plaintiff, according to the form of the statute:—Held, that the declaration was good, and that it was not necessary to state that the assignment was under the hand of the sheriff, and executed in the presence of two witnesses. Lewis v. Parkes, 3 M. & W. 133; 6 D. P. C. 93; M. & H. 321.

Pleas.—It is no plea to an action on a bail-bond, that there was no affidavit of debt filed in the action against the principal. Knowles v. Stevens, 1 C., M. & R. 26; 4 Tyr. 1016; S. C. nom. Snow v. Stevens, 2 D. P. C. 664.

Or that there was no proper affidavit. Hume v. Liversedge, 1 C. & M. 332; 1 D. P. C. 660; 3 Jur. 257.

Bail sued on a bail-bond cannot traverse the arrest. Taylor v. Clow, 1 B. & Ad. 223.

3. PRACTICE.

Staying Proceedings.—After the time for giving bail has elapsed and no bail has been given, notice of appeal against a judgment does not stay the proceedings or affect it in any way. Burnaby v. Earle, 9 L. R., Q. B. 490; 43 L. J., Q. B. 209; 30 L. T. 760; 22 W. R. 877.

A bond for the payment to plaintiff of the sum for which he had obtained a verdict "if the determination of the action should be in his favour" was given by the defendant and others. A rule was afterwards obtained to set aside the verdict for the plaintiff, which rule was afterwards discharged. Thereupon, on the 15th November, 1870, the defendant gave notice of appeal under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 37, but bail was not put in as required by s. 38; and no further steps were taken to prosecute the appeal. On the 9th April, 1872, the plaintiff having brought an action on the bond, the defendant pleaded that the former action was undetermined in favour of the plaintiff:—Held, that as there was, at the commencement of the present action, a judgment in favour of the plaintiff, and no stay of execution thereon, such a state of things amounted to a determination of the former action in favour of the plaintiff within the meaning of the condition to the bond. Id.

Where a defendant, having had notice on the 16th May, of actions having been commenced on the bail-bond, applied on the 29th May (being the 4th day of the term), to set aside the proceedings:—Held, that the application was too late. Smith v. Webb, 2 M. & W. 879.

Where there has been delay in applying to have a bail-bond set aside, which has arisen from compliance with the request of the plaintiff:—Held, that it could not be objected that the application was not made in a reasonable time. Gould v. Williams, 1 H. & W. 344.

Where several actions are brought on the same bail-bond, it is too late, after verdict, to move to stay proceedings on payment of the costs of one action only. Johnson v. Macdonald, 2 D. P. C. 45.

In staying proceedings on a bail-bond, it is not necessary to shew that a rule for the allowance of bail has been obtained, if sworn that the bail have been put in and justified. Crosby v. Innes, 5 D. P. C. 566; W., W. & D. 192.

Proceedings may be stayed on a bail-bond, on payment of costs, though the bail surrender the principal without having justified. Meysey v. Carnell, 5 T. R. 634. And see St. Hanlaire v. Byam, 7 D. & R. 458; 4 B. & C. 970.

Necessary Affidavit.—It is not sufficient for a defendant, on moving to set aside proceedings on a bail-bond, to swear that the defendant in the original action has a good defence, even though an infant; he must swear to merits. Hullett v. Aubrey, 1 D. P. C. 688.

An affidavit must state that the defendant had a good defence upon the merits: a good defence to the action is not sufficient. Grottick v. Bailey, 5 B. & A. 703.

An affidavit of merits, if made by an attorney, must describe him as the attorney to the defendant; and it is not sufficient to shew, by other affidavits, that there is an attorney of the same Christian and surname, residing at the same place as that of which the deponent describes himself. Bonnefor v. Russell, 5 D. P. C. 546.

Collusion with the defendant must be denied by both the bail. Dowson v. Cull, 2 C. & J. 761.

— How Intituled.—Affidavits to set aside or stay proceedings on a bail-bond may be intituled either in the original action, or in the action against the bail. Lisle v. Chetwode, 2 Tyr. 177; S. C., nom. Leyles v. Chetwood, 2 C. & J. 332; 1 D. P. C. 321; S. P., Stride v. Hill, 4 D. P. C. 709; 1 M. & W. 37; 1 Gale, 431.

They may be intituled in both actions. Pocock v. Cockerton, 7 D. P. C. 21.

Bail-bond standing as Security.—To have the bail-bond stand as a security, it must appear that a trial was lost at the time of moving for the rule. Stride v. Hill, 4 D. P. C. 709; 1 M. & W. 37.

Where a bail-bond stands as a security, the plaintiff may sign judgment upon it, notwithstanding he may have commenced an action thereon, such action being unnecessary. Storey v. Stephens, 2 Jur. 594; 1 W., W. & H. 298.

A bail-bond, executed by one only of the bail, may be ordered to stand as a security. Re v. London (Sheriffs), 9 Moore, 422; 2 Bing. 227.

On Payment of Costs.—Where an attorney had become bail to the sheriff, and the bail-bond had been assigned, the court would stay proceedings upon the bail-bond upon payment of costs. Mann v. Nottage, 1 Y. & J. 367.

Where a defendant gave bail to the sheriff, and subsequently obtained an order to stay proceedings in the action on payment of debt and costs forthwith, "the plaintiff to be at liberty to sign final judgment and issue execution for the amount," if the debt and costs were not so paid; and default being made in payment, the plaintiff took an assignment of the bail-bond, and issued process against the bail, after which the defendant died:—Held, that the bail were entitled to stay proceedings on the bail-bond on payment of costs; that the order did not require them to put the plaintiff into a condition to sign judgment, by justifying bail above; and therefore he had not lost a judgment by their laches. Isaac v. Richards, 7 D. P. C. 94; 4 M. & W. 382; 1 H. & H. 333.

As to Judgment.—Final judgment may be entered up on a bail-bond without executing a writ of inquiry. Moody v. Pheasant, 2 B. & P. 446.

If it appears in a declaration by an assignee of the sheriff on such bond, that the bond is void, the court will arrest the judgment after verdict against the defendant, upon a plea of non est factum. Samuel v. Evans, 2 T. R. 569.

IV. RIGHTS AND LIABILITY OF BAIL TO THE SHERIFF.

Bail to the sheriff have no right to take their principal into custody. Re v. Hughes, 3 C. & P. 373.

Bail to the sheriff are liable for the plaintiff's whole debt (without regard to the sum sworn to) and costs, provided they do not exceed the penalty of the bail-bond. Stevenson v. Cameron, 8 T. R. 28; S. P., Mitchell v. Gibbons, 1 H. Bl. 76; Orton v. Vincent, Cowp. 71.

V. DEPOSIT OF MONEY IN LIEU OF BAIL.

1. GENERALLY.

Where money is paid into the hands of a sheriff in lieu of bail, the defendant has, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, till the day for perfecting special bail, for giving notice of his intention that the money shall remain in court to abide the event of the suit. Rouse v. Softly, 6 Bing. 634; 4 M. & P. 464.

Where a defendant has paid the debt, and 10*l.* for costs, to the sheriff in lieu of bail, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 46:—Held, that he has, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, till the day for perfecting special bail, to pay in the additional 10*l.* for costs. Stafford v. Love, 3 D. P. C. 593; S. C., nom. Stafford v. Love, 1 H. & W. 195.

Before bail are perfected, or until the time for excepting to them has passed, a defendant is entitled as a matter of right to pay in the debt, with a sum for costs, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2; and therefore, though he does not pay in the money until after he has put in, though not justified, bail above, and the plaintiff has been put to expense by searching for them, and making inquiries, the defendant is not liable to pay those expenses, but they are properly costs in the cause. Stanforth or Stanford v. McCann, 4 D. P. C. 367; 2 C., M. & R. 631; 1 Gale, 344.

Upon a capias, indorsed for bail for 200*l.*, the defendant paid the amount into the hands of the sheriff, on the 28th of April, with 10*l.* for costs: on the 29th, he entered an appearance to the action, and requested the officers of the court to receive 10*l.* for costs, to abide the event under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, and which the officers refused, because nothing had been paid in by the sheriff. The time for putting in bail above expired on the 5th of May; the sheriff, though frequently requested, did not pay the money into court till the evening of that day. On the 6th, the plaintiff obtained a rule nisi to have the money paid over to him: and, on the evening of that day, the defendant paid in the further sum of 10*l.* for costs, to abide the event of the suit:—Held, that these several payments were not equivalent to putting in and perfecting bail to the action. Hannah v. Willis, 4 Bing. N. C. 310; 6 D. P. C. 417; 5 Scott, 731; 1 Arn. 117.

The 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2, enabled a person arrested upon mesne process under a mistake as to identity, as well as persons properly arrested, to deposit the debt and costs in lieu of bail.

De Mesnil v. Dakin, 3 L. R., Q. B. 18; 37 L. J., Q. B. 42; 16 W. R. 145; 8 B. & S. 650.

A sheriff, against whom an action had been brought, for falsely returning that money deposited with him in lieu of bail had been paid into court, was allowed to pay into court in the original action the money so deposited, though the plaintiff had been delayed two months by the sheriff's neglect. Hall v. Jones, 4 D. P. C. 712.

Money paid into court in lieu of bail cannot be transferred to the account of a payment into court. Ball v. Stafford, 2 Scott, 426; 4 D. P. C. 327; 1 Hodges, 316.

Nor appropriated to the purposes of a plea of tender. Stultz v. Hencage, 4 M. & Scott, 472; 2 D. P. C. 806.

Money deposited in court in one action cannot be paid out to the execution creditor in another action in satisfaction of his claim, notwithstanding 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 12, as that section does not give power to seize money in execution, while in the hands of a third person as trustee for the defendant. France v. Campbell, 9 D. P. C. 914.

2. WHEN DEFENDANT MAY TAKE OUT OF COURT.

If a defendant has deposited money in lieu of bail, which the sheriff pays into court, he is entitled to take it out on justifying bail in due time. Young v. Maltby, 3 D. P. C. 604; 1 H. & W. 214; S. P., Geach v. Coppice, 3 D. P. C. 74.

Notwithstanding it has been paid in without prejudice to an application for defects in the affidavit of debt. Green v. Glasbrooke, 1 Scott, 402; 1 Bing., N. C. 516; 1 Hodges, 27.

The court will not order the sum paid into court in lieu of special bail to be paid out to a defendant on perfecting special bail, unless that is done before issue joined. Welshman v. Sturges, 13 Q. B. 556; 18 L. J., Q. B. 168; 13 Jur. 388.

When a plaintiff replies by taking issue on and demurring to a plea, the defendant, on putting in bail before issue is joined on the demurrer, is in time to apply to take out of court money paid in in lieu of bail, which by the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 3, he may take out at any time during the progress of the cause before issue joined in law or fact. Alcenius v. Mygren, 23 L. J., Q. B. 287.

A defendant arrested deposited a sum of money in lieu of bail, and applied to the court for a return of the deposit. The court thought that, but for the matters disclosed in the affidavits on shewing cause, the defendant would have been entitled to a return; but the affidavits having raised a question whether the defendant had not since his arrest broken up his establishment and gone abroad, on which point the defendant had had no opportunity of being heard, the court referred that question to the master before deciding on the return of the deposit. Talbot v. Bulkeley, 4 D. & L. 317; 16 M. & W. 191; 16 L. J., Ex. 67; 10 Jur. 1061.

A defendant, having been arrested, deposited with the sheriff the amount claimed, and 10*l.* for costs, in lieu of bail, and the sheriff paid the amount into court. The defendant afterwards put in and perfected bail, but not in due time:—Held, that, having made an affidavit of merits, he was entitled to take the money out of court, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to elect whether he would take the security of the bail or of the money. Brooke v. Brooke, 1 B. C. C. 120; 22 L. J., Q. B. 81; 17 Jur. 186.

Money having been deposited in lieu of bail, and an order for better particulars with a stay of proceedings having remained unobeyed for a year, the court refused to grant a rule for taking the money out of court. Harden v. Harbourn, 7 D. P. C. 546; 1 W., W. & H. 568.

A defendant, having been arrested under a capias under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, paid money into the hands of the sheriff, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2. He subsequently put in special bail, to whom an exception was made, and the defendant then rendered:—Held, that the putting in bail, and the render of the defendant, were equivalent to an appearance for the purpose of an application to pay the money out of court to the defendant. Brooke v. Gunning, 8 D. P. C. 11; 6 Bing., N. C. 157; 8 Scott, 343.

3. WHEN PLAINTIFF MAY TAKE OUT OF COURT.

A plaintiff is not entitled to receive out of court money paid in by a defendant in lieu of bail, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, unless judgment has been obtained, or the suit otherwise legally determined. Johnson v. Wall, 4 D. P. C. 315.

Where a party arrested by capias deposits money with the sheriff, and subsequently neglects to put in bail to the action, the plaintiff is entitled to take the money out of court without waiting for the final determination of the suit. Tuton v. Gale, 1 D., N. S. 383; 5 Jur. 1137.

Under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, the court has the same power with respect to money deposited with the sheriff, or paid into court in lieu of bail, as under 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2, and 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2. Scherwinski v. Peronnet, 8 D. P. C. 229; 6 M. & W. 90.

Where a defendant is arrested and is released on depositing with the sheriff the amount indorsed upon the writ, with 10*l.* for costs, which sums are afterwards paid into court, the plaintiff is entitled to have the money paid out of court to him (subject to taxation), if the defendant neglects to pay an additional 10*l.* into court. Nuyssen v. Iuyssens, 5 Ex. 857; 20 L. J., Ex. 33.

Upon his arrest at the plaintiff's suit, in January, 1863, the defendant deposited with the sheriff, pursuant to 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2, the sum indorsed upon the writ, together with 10*l.* to answer costs, and was thereupon discharged, the sheriff paying the deposit into court. The defendant being subsequently, upon his own petition, adjudicated a bankrupt, was thereby prevented from perfecting special bail, or paying in the additional sum in lieu thereof, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, and, upon motion for payment of the deposit out of court to the plaintiff:—Held, that, notwithstanding the intervening bankruptcy of the defendant, and the claim made to the money by his assignees, the plaintiff was entitled, under the express words of 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2, to have the deposit paid out of court to him, with such a sum for costs, out of the 10*l.*, as the master should allow. Cooke v. Bell, 8 L. T. 431; 11 W. R. 732.

Money having been paid into court by a defendant, in lieu of special bail, and to abide the event in the suit, and a verdict having been given for the plaintiff:—Held, no sufficient cause against a rule to pay the money out to him, that, in a foreign country, the defendant had since been made a bankrupt. Stead v. Speigelberg, 10 W. R. 46.

Where money is paid into court in lieu of bail, not by the defendant himself, but by one of the bail, and the plaintiff obtains judgment, he is entitled to have the money paid out to him in discharge of the debt and costs. Bull v. Turner, 4 D. P. C. 734; 1 M. & W. 47.

A defendant having been arrested was discharged upon paying the amount indorsed on the writ, together with 10*l.* for costs, into the hands of the sheriff. The sum was afterwards paid into court, together with 10*l.* for costs, in lieu of special bail. The plaintiff obtained a verdict in the action for a sum less than the sum indorsed on the writ, and for which the defendant was held to bail; but which, together with the costs in the action, considerably exceeded the amount paid in for debt and costs:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the whole amount paid over to him, and not merely the sum for which he had recovered a verdict, together with 20*l.* for costs. Welchman v. Sturgis, 6 D. & L. 739.

If money is deposited in court, in lieu of bail above, and the plaintiff obtains a verdict, he must limit his execution to the surplus of his demand, beyond the sum deposited, which he is bound to take out of court. Heus v. Pyke, 1 D. P. C. 322; 2 C. & J. 359; 2 Tyr. 313.

4. BY THIRD PARTIES.

The court permitted bail to take out of court money, which he had paid in for the defendant's use, on a motion for a commission to examine witnesses abroad, the defendant having died abroad, intestate and insolvent, before the trial, the rule nisi having been served on all persons in any way interested in the cause. Palmer v. Reiffenstein, 7 M. & G. 641; 8 Scott, N. R. 347.

When money has been paid in by a third party, on the bail being put in and perfected, the court will pay it out to him, if the attorney who gives instructions for the application swears that he is the attorney of the defendant and acts for him, though the defendant himself is abroad. Alcenius v. Nygren, 23 L. J., Q. B. 287.

Money deposited by a third person in lieu of special bail, cannot be got back by application, on the defendant's rendering; it must remain in court to abide the event. Bull v. Turner, 4 D. P. C. 734; 1 M. & W. 47.

But where a friend of a party arrested makes a deposit of his own money on the defendant's behalf, in lieu of bail, and the sum is afterwards paid into court to abide the event of the suit, and the defendant then renders, the owner of the money may have it restored to him, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 5, if the defendant appears in court and assents. For this purpose the render is equivalent to putting in and perfecting special bail. Douglass v. Stanbrough, 3 A. & E. 316.

5. PRACTICE.

On the Defendant taking out Money.—If money has been paid into court to abide the event of the suit under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, and a defendant wishes to take it out on perfecting special bail, he must make an application before issue is joined. Ferrall v. Alexander, 1 D. P. C. 132; S. P., Hanwell v. Mure, 2 D. P. C. 155.

But if the cause is in such a state that issue may be joined before the rule is disposed of, the court will grant the application with a stay of proceedings. Bloor v. Cox, 6 D. P. C. 266; 1 W., W. & H. 84.

An application on the part of a defendant after issue joined, on rendering or putting in special bail, is clearly too late. Morris v. Shepherd, 2 Jur. 1069.

If a defendant pays money into court to abide the event of the cause, the court will not grant a rule absolute in the first instance for repayment to him, judgment being for him, but there must be a rule to shew cause. Symes v. Rose, 5 Bing. 269; 2 M. & P. 426.

A rule for taking money, deposited in lieu of bail, out of court, in consequence of the plaintiff becoming nonsuit, is nisi in the first instance. Grant v. Willis, 4 D. P. C. 581.

Or where a defendant succeeds, the rule for taking the money out of court is nisi in the first instance. Lorer v. Tolmin, 5 D. P. C. 388; W., W. & D. 75; 1 Jur. 104.

So after judgment of non-pros the rule is nisi only. Wild v. Rickman, 1 H. & W. 670.

Where a defendant had obtained judgment as in case of a nonsuit, a rule to pay out of court money paid into court in lieu of bail was a rule nisi in the first instance. D'Ebro v. Schmidt, 13 Q. B. 653; 6 D. & L. 743; 18 L. J., Q. B. 223; 16 Jur. 389.

On the Plaintiff taking out Money.—A plaintiff is entitled to have money paid into court in lieu of bail paid out to him, if special bail is not perfected in due time, although the defendant has rendered since the time for perfecting bail, unless an affidavit of merits is produced. Newman v. Hodgson, 1 D. P. C. 329; 1 B. & Ad. 422.

If a defendant has deposited money in lieu of bail and he afterwards leaves the country, the court will allow a rule nisi for taking money out of court to be served by sticking it up in the office. Know v. Duncan, 9 D. P. C. 179.

Where money has been paid into court in lieu of bail, the plaintiff, on moving to have it paid out to him, is entitled to the costs of the application. Freeman v. Paganini, 4 M. & Scott, 165; 2 D. P. C. 776.

Where a sum had been paid into court to abide the event of the suit, and the cause and all matters in difference were referred; a sum being awarded in favour of the plaintiff in the action and as to the matters in difference, the court made absolute a rule obtained by the plaintiff for obtaining payment out of court of a part of the deposit in respect of the action, but refused, on disposing of that rule, to direct the residue to be paid over to the defendant, but left him to make a separate application. Fowle v. Steinkeller, 9 D. P. C. 1037.

A defendant was arrested, and deposited the amount of debt and 10*l.* costs with the sheriff. A few days after he embarked for Australia, leaving no person to receive papers or act for him. The plaintiff obtained a rule calling upon defendant to shew cause why the money should not be paid to the plaintiff according to 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2. A copy of the rule was stuck up four days in the offices of the court:—Held, that there had been a sufficient service of a rule nisi, which was made absolute. Shackell v. Johnson, 7 C. B. 865; 18 L. J., C. P. 249; S. P., Know v. Duncan, 9 D. P. C. 179.

Where a defendant has gone abroad, after depositing money in lieu of bail, pursuant to 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2, without putting in and perfecting bail in due time, and it does not appear that the defendant has a residence in this country, or employed an attorney in the action, the plaintiff may take the money out of court after serving his rule on the sheriff, and putting it up in the Queen's Bench office, Hunt v. M' Lachlan, 7 D. P. C. 708; 3 Jur. 999.

VI. WHO MAY BE BAIL.

Attorneys, their Clerks, and Sheriffs' Officers.]

—By Reg. Gen. H. T. 16 Vict. r. 94, if any person put in as bail to the action, except for the purpose of rendering only, be a practising attorney, or clerk to a practising attorney, or a sheriff's officer, bailiff, or person concerned in the execution of process, the plaintiff may treat the bail as a nullity, and sue upon the bail-bond as soon as the time for putting in bail has expired, unless good bail be duly put in in the meantime.

Both before and since this rule, an attorney or an attorney's clerk, or indeed any person, might be bail, for the purpose of rendering the principal. Bell v. Gate, 1 Taunt. 162.

The rule applied to bail to the action only, and not to bail to the sheriff. Mann v. Nattage, 1 Y. & J. 367, n.

An attorney is liable to an action on his recognition of bail, though contrary to the rule of court that he should be a bail at all. Harper v. Tuhourdin, 1 Chit. 714, n.; 6 M. & S. 383.

Persons Indemnified.]—The court rejected bail, who had received a verbal promise of indemnity from the defendant's attorney, although they gave time to put in fresh bail. Greensill v. Hopley, 1 B. & P. 103; S. P., Cupon v. Dillamore, 8 Moore, 516; 1 Bing. 423.

But it is no objection to bail that they are indemnified by the sheriff's officer. Chick's bail, 1 Chit. 714, n.

It is no objection to bail that they became so at the request of the defendant's attorney, unless they are also indemnified by him. Hunt v. Blaquiére, 4 Bing. 588.

Bail are not bound to disclose the name of the party, or friend, at whose solicitation they became bail, provided it were not the defendant's attorney, or his clerk, and they were not indemnified. Vestris's bail, 4 Scott, 395; 1 Jur. 335.

A bail who expects the attorney for the defendant to indemnify him, though he has received no undertaking to that effect, cannot justify. Anon., 1 D. P. C. 1.

Peers and Members of Parliament.]—Bail was rejected on the ground that one of them was a peer of the realm. Burton v. Atherton, 2 Marsh. 232.

Nor can a member of the House of Commons be allowed to justify, because he is not liable to the ordinary process of the courts. Duncan v. Hill, 1 D. & R. 126; S. P., Graham v. Sturt, 4 Taunt. 249.

Persons under other Circumstances.]—A servant in the king's household, who is liable to be called on to attend the person of his Majesty, cannot be bail, for his person cannot be taken in execution. Anon., 1 D. & R. 127, n.

A domestic servant of a foreign ambassador cannot become bail. Lock's bail, 1 D. P. C. 124.

Bail was rejected where he was to receive a commission on the amount for which he proposed to justify. Foxall's bail, 7 D. & R. 783.

It is no objection to bail, that he is one of the indorsers of the bill of exchange upon which the action is brought. Mitchell's bail, 1 Chit. 287; S. P., Stevens's bail, 1 Chit. 305; and Harris v. Manley, 2 B. & P. 526.

So, also a drawer of a bill may justify as bail in an action against the acceptor. Prince v. Beasley, 5 D. P. C. 477; 4 Scott, 37; 3 Bing. N. C. 391; 1 Jur. 8.

But an acceptor of a dishonoured bill is not competent to become bail in an action against the drawer. Anon., 1 D. P. C. 183.

VII. QUALIFICATION OF SPECIAL BAIL.

Housekeepers or Freeholders.]—A plaintiff may waive the qualification that the bail shall be housekeeper or freeholder. Saggers v. Gordon, 5 Taunt. 174.

If notice of bail does not describe them either as housekeepers or freeholders, they may be rejected. Cripp's bail, W., W. & D. 387.

Bail must swear themselves "housekeepers;" "householders" is not sufficient. Anon., 1 D. P. C. 127.

— Within Jurisdiction.]—Bail must be housekeepers within the jurisdiction of the courts, so as to be amenable to their process. Hughes v. Sterling, 11 Price, 158.

A lodger in England, possessed of a house in Scotland, cannot justify as bail. Anon., 1 D. P. C. 61.

— What an Occupation.]—Where the bail lived in lodgings, but paid part of the rent and taxes of a house occupied by his partner, as a trader:—Held, that he might be considered as a housekeeper. Savage v. Hall, 8 Moore, 525; 1 Bing. 430.

But rejected, where it appeared that he had rented a house, and underlet the same to another, who paid the taxes, and let the first floor to the bail, but whom the landlord would not accept as tenant, and therefore he paid the full rent to the bail, who paid it to the landlord. Anon., 1 Chit. 502.

Where a person had taken a house occupied by lodgers, from one of whom he had received rent, he was held to be qualified, though he had never in fact occupied the house himself. Cohen v. Waterhouse, 8 Moore, 365.

But not where he occupied every room in the house except one, which was reserved for his landlord, who paid all the taxes. Slade's bail, 1 Chit. 502.

Nor in respect of a house which he had hired, but which he was prevented from occupying by illness in the family of the former tenant. Bold's bail, 1 Chit. 288.

Nor in respect of the occupation of a tap connected with a tavern, if the licence is taken out in the name of the tavern keeper. Walker's bail, 1 Chit. 316.

But an occupier of a house for a limited period, though he pays neither rent nor taxes, is sufficient. Williams v. Dethick, 2 Price, 8.

If it appears from the affidavit to oppose the justification of bail, that the person offering himself for that purpose has ceased to be actually a housekeeper, although he occupied a house when he signed the bail-piece, and is about to occupy another, he is not admissible. Weale, v. Wild, 12 Price, 770.

It is no objection that a man has not been assessed to the poor's rate; such assessment being only evidence of his being a housekeeper. Anon., Lofft, 328.

— Description of House.—Keeping a gambling-house is no ground of opposition. Anon., 1 D. P. C. 160.

So, keeping a brothel is not of itself a ground for rejecting bail. Gouge's bail, 3 D. P. C. 320.

Estate.—A leaseholder, not a housekeeper or freeholder, cannot justify as bail. Smith's bail, 1 D. P. C. 1.

A leaseholder for ninety-nine years was admitted as bail by consent. Anon., 2 Chit. 96.

A copyhold estate in right of the wife is not sufficient property to constitute a qualification. Anon., 2 Chit. 97.

Seemle, that a bail may justify as a tenant by the curtesy of lands in the Isle of Man, without affidavit, or other evidence, that the law of tenancy by curtesy prevails there. Tomsay v. Napier, 8 Taunt. 148.

Property.—Bail may justify in respect of shares in a railway company in actual operation. Pierpoint v. Brewer, 3 D. & L. 487; 13 M. & W. 201; 15 L. J., Ex. 81; 10 Jur. 79.

The possession of effects abroad to any amount is not sufficient on justification. Anon., Lofft, 34, 147; S. P., 1 Chit. 258; Wightwick v. Pickering, Forrest, 138.

But bail was allowed to justify in respect of property, consisting partly of cash and partly of a freehold house at Gibraltar. Beardmore v. Phillips, 4 M. & S. 173.

VIII. PUTTING IN BAIL.

When to be Put in.—A sheriff may put in bail before the return of a writ. Evans v. Sweet, 2 Bing. 271; 9 Moore, 556.

The bail to the sheriff cannot put in bail to the action before the return of the process, without consent of the defendant. Birt v. Roberts, M. & M. 177.

Where special bail have been put in, but have omitted to justify, the sheriff may put in fresh bail to render the defendant, even after an attachment has issued against him for not obeying the rule to bring in the body. Hamilton v. Jones, 4 M. & P. 454; 6 Bing. 628.

Bail above may be put in on a dies non juridicus. Baddeley v. Adams, 5 T. R. 170.

A defendant arrested between the 10th of August and 24th of October, must put in and justify bail before a judge at chambers, in the same way as in any other part of the vacation. Re v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 C. & M. 333; 2 D. P. C. 286; 4 Tyr. 60.

A defendant arrested on a capias has only eight days to put in special bail, whether in a town or a country cause. Grant v. Gibbs, 1 Scott, 390; 3 D. P. C. 409; 1 Hodges, 56.

And such bail is not deemed to be put in until notice thereof served on the plaintiff's attorney or agent. Id.

How put in.—Where a poor defendant was arrested for 700*l.*, the court granted a rule to justify three bail instead of two. Eastar v. Edwards, 1 D. P. C. 39.

If in the bail recognizance the cause is rightly named, it is sufficient, though in the affidavits of the sufficiency of the bail, and of the acknowledgment of the bail, the cause be misnamed. Lowe v. Galloway, 5 Taunt. 663. And see Austen v. Fenton, 1 Taunt. 23.

If in an action, at the suit of two, bail is put in as in an action at the suit of one only, such bail may be treated as a nullity. Anon., 2 Chit. 77.

So, in a joint action against two, if the bail is put in as in an action against one only. Holt v. Frank, 1 M. & S. 199.

Bail-piece.—Where bail has been rejected for insufficiency, the bail-piece is a nullity, and a new one is necessary. Lewis v. Gadderer, 1 D. & R. 350; 5 B. & A. 704.

The bail-piece must be intitled of the court, and in the cause. Hall's bail, 1 Chit. 79.

Recognizance.—Where bail have become incompetent after the recognizance has been completed, a party cannot be called upon to find fresh bail, either in civil or criminal proceedings. Reg. v. Shirley, 12 L. J., Q. B. 346.

IX. NOTICE AND JUSTIFICATION OF BAIL.

1. DESCRIPTION.

A notice of bail describing him as a housekeeper is insufficient, if he is only a lodger, although on examination it appears that he is a freeholder. Wilson's bail, 2 D. P. C. 431.

It must contain their addition, as well as place of abode. — v. Costar, 5 Taunt. 554.

And a false addition is a fatal objection. Wood v. Chadwick, 2 Taunt. 173.

A schoolmaster is well described as "gentleman." — v. Pasman, 5 Taunt. 759.

To describe bail as "jewellers," when they are merely clerks in a jeweller's shop, is a misdescription. Hamlet's bail, 1 D. P. C. 501.

Gentleman not an objectionable description of one who deals by commission. Anon., Lofft, 281.

Nor of a clerk in the custom-house. Anon., 1 Chit. 492, n.; 5 Taunt. 759.

But a clerk in a mercantile house, described in the notice of justification by the addition of "gentleman," was rejected. Moss v. Heavyride, 7 D. & R. 772.

So, "shopkeeper" is an insufficient addition, where the bail had been before described as a grocer, and there were other circumstances of suspicion. Anon., 1 Chit. 494, n.

An agent for the sale of Scotch ale, who described himself as a gentleman, was held to be misdescribed. Fleming's bail, 1 D. P. C. 641; 1 C. & M. 111.

"Yeoman" is a good description. Lanyon's bail, 3 D. P. C. 85.

"Gentleman" is a good description of a clerk in the post-office. Wood v. Ray, 4 D. P. C. 692.

"Manufacturer" is a bad description. Fearnley's bail, 1 D. P. C. 40.

The misnomer of a christian name of one of the bail in a notice, is fatal. Anon., 1 Moore, 126.

A notice, describing one of the bail by the initial only of his second christian name, is bad. White's bail, 2 H. & W. 134.

Notice of J. M. as bail, was held not good notice for J. M. the younger, and the plaintiff need not swear there are two of the name. Smith v. Mellon, 5 Taunt. 854; 1 Marsh. 386; Anon., 1 Chit. 88.

The want of a description of bail is cured by the plaintiff's excepting to them. Bigg v. Dick, 1 Taunt. 17.

2. RESIDENCE.

Omission in Description of Bail.—An omission to describe the bail, as housekeepers or freeholders, can only be objected to when the bail come up to justify. Bell v. Foster, 1 M. & Scott, 518; 8 Bing. 334; 1 D. P. C. 271.

Where the bail omitted to state in the affidavit that they were housekeepers, the court permitted them to justify, as the plaintiff did not interpose. Martin v. Gell, 2 Tyr. 166.

Sufficiency of Description.—If a bail have two places of residence, it is only necessary to state one of them in the action. Fortesque's bail, 2 D. P. C. 541.

The residence of a bail is sufficiently described by stating it to be at a place well known as a village, without mentioning any street in it. Smith's bail, 1 D. P. C. 499.

A misdescription of the number of a house in which the bail resided was held to be a ground of rejection. Anon., 1 Chit. 493.

The name of a township, without the name of a street, stated to be in a certain parish named in the notice of bail, is sufficient. Lanyon's bail, 3 D. P. C. 85.

An objection to a notice, that the number of the street is not stated, must be taken in the first instance; and it is waived by obtaining time to inquire, unless it is sworn that the residence cannot be found. Foster's bail, 2 D. P. C. 586.

Where a notice of bail omitted to mention the numbers of the houses where the bail resided, in a place where the houses are numbered, the plaintiff had the option of having further time to make further inquiries, or the costs of his affidavit and appearance. Muir v. Smith, 2 Tyr. 742.

A notice of bail did not state the numbers of the houses where the bail resided, upon which ground, the bail having been found and being sufficient, the plaintiff had the costs of his appearance to oppose. Innis v. Smith, 2 C. & J. 634.

What Residence.—The actual and not the constructive residence of the bail must be stated. Thomson v. Smith, 1 D. P. C. 340.

It is not necessary that a bail should sleep in the house described in the notice as his residence. Thomson's bail, 1 D. P. C. 497.

If a man carries on his business at a lodging in one place, and keeps a house at another, a notice describing him as of the former place is sufficient. Weddall v. Berger, 1 B. & P. 325.

So, a notice of bail as of his place of business is sufficient. Tunner v. Nash, 1 Price, 400.

A notice, describing the bail to have resided within the last six months (instead of for the last six months) at a particular place, is bad; but if the affidavit of justification is correct, it may be connected with the notice, so as to make the notice sufficient. Ward's bail, 1 D. P. C. 596; 1 C. & M. 28; 3 Tyr. 208; S. P., Johnson's bail, 1 D. P. C. 438.

A notice, stating the residences for the last six months to be as follows, and describing one of the bail as of one place, and now residing at another, is sufficiently positive as to where that one has resided. Park's bail, 2 H. & W. 134.

Where a notice omitted to state the residences of the bail for six months, and whether they were housekeepers or freeholders:—Held, that this was not such a defect as entitled the plaintiff to treat it as a nullity, and an attachment against the sheriff was set aside. Ree v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 D. P. C. 5; 1 C. & M. 482.

A notice omitting to state the residence of the bail "for the last six months," is an irregularity of which the court will take notice, though the bail be unopposed. Sywood v. Doherty, 1 Scott, 79.

3. BY PRISONER.

If the defendant is a prisoner, the notice of bail must state that fact. Fuller's bail, 5 Tyr. 491.

It is sufficient if the notice of bail by a prisoner is signed by him as being in custody, though it does not state in the usual way that he is a prisoner. Frith's bail, 2 D. P. C. 229.

A two days' notice of justification by a prisoner, accompanied by an affidavit, is bad, unless it expresses that he is a prisoner. Bullen's bail, 3 D. P. C. 422.

4. IRREGULAR NOTICE.

Where a sheriff, in order to avoid an attachment for not bringing in the body, gave the plaintiff notice of putting in bail, but omitted to state the names of the proposed bail in such notice:—Held, that the notice could not be treated as a nullity, so as to entitle the plaintiff to move for an attachment. Pugh v. Emery, 4 D. & R. 80.

A plaintiff cannot take proceedings on the bail-bond on the ground of an informality in the notice of bail. Wigley v. Edwards, 2 C. & M. 320; 2 D. P. C. 282; 4 Tyr. 235.

An informality in a notice does not render the proceedings null, so as to justify the plaintiff in issuing an attachment against the sheriff. Ree v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 1 C. & M. 482; 3 Tyr. 440.

A defendant being arrested, employed on the sudden one attorney to put in bail for him, and another to carry on the subsequent proceedings at the return of the writ; each attorney gave notice of bail above, describing himself as the defendant's attorney: the plaintiff excepted to one set of bail; and that set not justifying, he attached the sheriff, without regarding the notice given by the second attorney:—Held, that he was bound to attend to both notices, and the attachment was set aside for irregularity. Gilmore v. Brindley, 7 D. & R. 259.

5. AFFIDAVIT OF JUSTIFICATION ACCOMPANYING NOTICE.

In an action against several, it is no objection to the notice of justification that it states that the bail will justify for three, bail for two only having been put in. Denton's bail, 1 D. P. C. 2.

The notice of justification stated that the two persons seeking to justify were bail of the defendant to the sheriff; in fact there were three defendants, and they had been bail for two of them: they were allowed to justify. Anon., 1 Tyr. 378.

If bail justify by affidavit, the notice must be accompanied either by the original affidavit, or by a copy purporting upon the face of it to be a copy. West v. Williams, 2 B. & Ad. 345; 1 D. P. C. 162.

"He's" is sufficient in an affidavit of justification instead of "he is." Lanyon's bail, 3 D. P. C. 85.

Though the form of the affidavit to be made by bail, according to the rule, is several, it may be made jointly. Anon., 1 D. P. C. 115.

Where a bail swears, "that he is not bail for any," without adding other persons, it is sufficient. Smith's bail, 1 D. P. C. 514.

An affidavit of justification stated "that the bail were not bail for any other defendant except the above-named defendants," but did not allege that they were not bail in any other actions for the same defendant:—Held, insufficient. De Burgh's bail, 7 D. P. C. 96; 1 Arn. 371; 2 Jur. 922.

The court allowed them to amend their affidavit by stating that they were not bail for any defendant "except in this action," the costs of the opposition to be costs in the cause. Id.

6. JUSTIFICATION.

When necessary.—Bail who surrender their principal need not justify. Anon., 2 W. Bl. 758.

Effect of ruling the Sheriff.—By giving the sheriff a rule to bring in the body, the time for justifying bail is extended till the rule expires. Whittle v. Oldaker, 7 B. & C. 478; 1 M. & R. 298.

Personal Attendance.—Bail, who live within ten miles of the city of London or Westminster, must justify in person, and not by affidavit. Anon., 1 C. & J. 516; 1 D. P. C. 293.

The rule extends to bail living within the bills of mortality. Wilmot v. Eaton, 1 Price's P. C. 91.

Where such an objection, and that of the description of Somer's Town as the residence of the bail, were taken and allowed, the court gave time, notice to be given forthwith. Id.

A defendant usually residing in the country, arrested in London, in a town cause, may justify bail by affidavit. White v. Thomas, 5 Price, 13.

Bail (at least town bail) may justify in person, where there has been an insufficient affidavit of justification. Shave v. Spode, 2 M. & W. 42; 2 Gale, 225.

Bail who have been rejected at chambers, for being unprepared to state positively what debts were owing to and from them, may justify afterwards in court, when prepared, by examination of their books, to speak positively. Clarke v. Vectris, 4 Scott, 391; 1 Jur. 335.

Within what time.—The days between Thursday next before, and Wednesday next after, Easter-day, are not to be reckoned in notices of justification of bail. Cumming v. Pullen, 1 Scott, 638.

Form.—It seems that the defendant's attorney may give notice of justification of bail put in by the sheriff, provided the exception has been properly entered. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 D. & R. 149; 5 B. & C. 389.

Where one bail only has been rejected on account of insufficiency, and notice was given of adding and justifying another in lieu of the one rejected:—Held, that the original notice was a nullity, and that there should have been a fresh notice of putting in and justifying de novo, and not of adding bail. Lewis v. Gadderrier, 1 D. & R. 350; 5 B. & A. 704.

7. IN WHAT SUM.

If an affidavit states that the bail are "possessed" of a certain sum, instead of "worth," it is insufficient, and must be amended. Rogers v. Jones, 1 D. P. C. 704; 1 C. & M. 323; 3 Tyr. 256.

An affidavit which merely states that the bail is "possessed," instead of "worth," will not be allowed to be amended. Worlison's bail, 2 D. P. C. 53; S. P. Naylor's bail, 3 D. P. C. 452.

It is not a ground for rejection, but merely of depriving the defendant of costs of justifying. Carter's bail, 5 D. P. C. 577; W., W. & D. 187.

Bail opposed on the ground that the affidavit stated the deponent "was worth 4*l.* beyond his just debts," instead of "beyond what would pay his just debts":—Held, no objection to the bail justifying, although, if they justified, the defendant would not be entitled to the costs of justification. Miller's bail, 5 D. P. C. 602; 1 Jur. 264; nom. Sterens v. Miller, 2 M. & W. 368; M. & H. 70.

An affidavit of justification of bail sworn in the country, stated the bail to be possessed of property of a certain amount, without further stating that each of the bail was worth double the sum for which the defendant was held to bail above his own just debts, or every other sum for which he might be then bail:—Held bad, but time given to amend, on payment of the plaintiff's costs of the day occasioned by the affidavit. Darling v. Hutchinson, 2 Tyr. 491.

It is sufficient for a bail to swear to property over and above "what will pay his debts." Lawson's bail, 3 D. P. C. 85.

"Debts," without describing them as "book debts," is sufficient. Id.

An affidavit that the bail was worth property to the requisite amount "over and above his just debts," but omitting "what will pay," is also sufficient. Hunt's bail, 4 D. P. C. 272; 1 H. & W. 520; contra, Keough's bail, 1 Arn. 243.

Stating that he was not bail in any other action for any defendant is also sufficient. Id.

An affidavit that the deponent is possessed of a certain sum "over and above all his just debts," is sufficient. Housley v. Boyd, 1 Scott, 698.

An affidavit that the deponent's property consists of "a freehold house situate, &c.," without stating its value, is sufficient. Id.

It is not enough that the bail should describe himself as possessed of "money in the funds," without stating in what fund it is. Anon., 1 D. P. C. 159.

Stock in trade cannot be considered as "effects." Deluarte's bail, W., W. & D. 390.

Where persons are shewn to be bail in other actions, they must swear that they are worth the sum required beyond what will satisfy their debts and their other engagements. Henshaw v. Woolwich, 1 C. & J. 150.

A rejection of one bail is a rejection of both. Lewis v. Gadderrerr, 1 D. & R. 350; 5 B. & A. 704.

8. COSTS.

Generally.—Where there is a defect in a notice of bail, and further time is given to inquire as to them, and they ultimately justify, the defendant is not entitled to the costs of justification. Anon., 1 D. P. C. 126.

Costs of bringing up bail to justify allowed, when they have given notice of putting in and justifying at the same time, accompanied by an affidavit of justification, and after exception attend to justify, and are not opposed. Bowman v. Russell, 2 Tyr. 744.

If a plaintiff alarm bail who have been put in, and thus prevent them from justifying, the court will compel him to pay the costs of putting them in. Gwynne v. Fuller, 1 D. P. C. 444.

The rule, as to the addition of the deponent, applies to affidavits of sufficiency made by bail, and therefore, if it is omitted, the affidavit must be amended, and the defendant will not be entitled to the costs of justification. Brown's bail, 5 D. P. C. 220; 2 H. & W. 291.

Where an affidavit of sufficiency omits to state the place where the property of the bail is situate, and only ascribes the value to several kinds of property collectively, it is a departure from the form given by the rule, and the bail having justified, the defendant is not entitled to the costs of justification. Hodgson v. Cooper, 2 C., M. & R. 43; 3 D. P. C. 692; 5 Tyr. 740.

If bail on examination justify for different property than that mentioned in the affidavit, the defendant must pay the costs of the justification. Deluarte's bail, W., W. & D. 390.

Upon justification of bail in a country cause, one of the bail was allowed time to explain respecting some property which it was alleged was mortgaged: this being afterwards done:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the costs of justification. Grant's bail, 3 D. P. C. 165; 1 C., M. & R. 598; 5 Tyr. 227.

In order to obtain the costs of justifying bail, an application should be made at the time of justification. Fream v. Best, 2 D. P. C. 590.

Costs of Opposition.—The costs of opposing bail who have complied with the rule of court, but are rejected, are allowed as a matter of course to the plaintiff, unless some very strong ground is shewn on the part of the defendant for putting in bail, who could not justify. Evan's bail, 1 D. P. C. 334.

Where an affidavit of justification of bail did not comply with the rule, by not stating the value of the different descriptions of the bail's property, and the bail were allowed:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of opposition. Rout's bail, 2 H. & W. 291.

Where bail justify for property which, though sufficient in amount, is not properly described in an affidavit of justification, the plaintiff is not entitled to the costs of opposition, but the bail will be admitted without payment of costs, and the costs of the opposition will be costs in the cause. Brown v. Ahrenfeldt, 4 M. & W. 76; 7 D. P. C. 46.

Where bail were rejected on the ground of a defect in the affidavit of justification, in omitting to describe the bail as housekeepers or freeholders, the court refused to allow the plaintiff the costs of his opposition, or of the opposition to a former justification on the ground of a defective notice. Kibble v. Thorburn, 2 M. & Scott, 359.

Where property of which the bail describes himself possessed in his affidavit is insufficient, the court will not allow him to justify, without payment by the defendant of the costs of opposition, although possessed of sufficient other property. Jackson's bail, 1 D. P. C. 172.

Where bail cannot justify in respect of the property described in an affidavit, but are allowed to pass on justifying for other property, the plaintiff is entitled to the costs of the opposition. Hemming v. Blake, 1 D. P. C. 179.

Costs of opposition on technical grounds are not allowed. Hanwell's bail, 5 D. P. C. 425.

Where proceedings have been taken on a bail-bond, before the bail come up to justify, the payment of those costs cannot be insisted on as a preliminary objection. Wilson's bail, 1 D. P. C. 614.

—When there are several Notices.—Where six different notices of the same bail were given, the court compelled the defendant to pay all the costs incurred by the plaintiff in consequence thereof. Aldiss v. Burgess, 3 B. & A. 759.

A deposit must be made for costs before the second set of bail justify, in the case of country as well as town bail. Goodricke v. Turley, 2 C., M. & R. 636; 4 D. P. C. 498.

It is no objection that bail has been already rejected, unless it appears that he was rejected on the merits. Id.

On bail justifying, a plaintiff was allowed the costs of a former successful opposition, though he did not ask for them until after the bail had passed. Lewis v. Glossop, 2 C., M. & R. 655.

What allowed.—A plaintiff's costs of inquiries after sufficiency of bail, are costs in the cause. Paine v. Muntton, 2 Tyr. 162.

If time to justify bail is granted, a defendant must pay the plaintiff's costs of attending to oppose. De Bode's bail, 1 D. P. C. 368.

If a copy of an affidavit of sufficiency served on the plaintiff does not purport to be a copy, or does not state the names of the parties and the sums in the actions in which they are already bail, or the names of the occupants, and numbers of the houses, stated by the bail to be in their possession; these defects are not grounds for rejecting the bail, but for disallowing the defendant his costs of justification. Id.

Liability of Solicitor.—Where time is applied for, to send an affidavit of justification into the country to amend a mistake in the jurat, the court will make the attorney pay the costs of the application. Shilletoe's bail, 9 D. & R. 6.

Where an attorney, knowing that bail were insufficient, caused them to be put in, and gave notice of justification, the court compelled him to pay the costs of the opposition. Blundell v. Blundell, 1 D. & R. 142; 5 B. & A. 533.

X. EXCEPTION.

When allowed.—If the bail to the sheriff is put in above, and exception taken before an assignment of the bail-bond, they are bound to justify, notwithstanding such assignment. Hill v. Jones, 11 East, 321.

Where bail are put in in due time, an exception must first be entered before the sheriff can be ruled to bring in the body; and the adding bail afterwards does not supersede the necessity of such exception, before an attachment can issue against the sheriff on account of the added bail not having justified in time. Rez v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 T. R. 258; S. P., 7 D. & R. 264.

If a sheriff's officer, or any attorney, or his clerk, or other disqualified person, be put in as bail, the plaintiff may except to the bail, and cannot proceed as if the matter were a mere nullity. Banter v. Levi, 1 Chit. 714; S. P., Rez v. Surrey (Sheriff), 2 East, 182; Fozall v. Bowerman, 2 East, 182.

A defendant gave a notice of bail, accompanied by an affidavit of justification, but without four days' notice of justification:—Held, that the plaintiff had twenty days to except to the bail. Goddard v. Jarvis, 2 M. & Scott, 169; 9 Bing. 88; 1 D. P. C. 278.

After bail had justified, a plaintiff not having excepted to them, in consequence of each of them positively swearing to the requisite amount, he discovered that they were both insolvent:—The court refused to compel the defendant to put in other bail. Lazarus v. Levaux, 4 D. P. C. 353.

Where a sheriff, eight days after an arrest, is called upon by a judge's order forthwith to put in and perfect bail, he is bound to justify without notice of exception. Reg. v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 4 M. & W. 529; 1 H. & H. 335.

In order to compel a justification of bail, it is sufficient to except to one of them. Feltham v. King, 5 D. P. C. 658; W., W. & D. 388; 1 Jur. 707.

Must be entered.—The exception must also be entered in the bail-book before the body rule can be served on the sheriff. Rez v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 7 D. & R. 264; S. P., Rez v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 D. & R. 149; 5 B. & C. 389.

And the irregularity is not waived by the defendant's acting upon the notice. Thwaites v. Gallington, 4 D. & R. 365.

In another case the want of entry in the book of the notice of exception is waived by giving notice of justification. Hanwell's bail, 3 D. P. C. 425.

Where the plaintiff took an assignment of the bail-bond, and afterwards gave notice of exception to the bail without entering it:—Held, that the plaintiff's irregularity in not entering an exception was not waived by the defendant's having given two notices of justification, under one of which the bail justified; and therefore held that the proceedings should be stayed, but the bail-bond was not to be delivered up to be cancelled. Hodson v. Garrett, 1 Chit. 174.

Notice must be given.—It is no exception until the defendant has had notice. Oldham v. Burrell, 7 T. R. 26.

Parol notice of exception to bail is not sufficient; it must be written. Rez v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 D. & R. 149; 5 B. & C. 389.

A notice of justification of bail is a waiver as between the parties of a neglect to give notice of exception, though it is not a waiver so as to support a rule to bring in the body. Anon., 1 Chit. 174; S. P., Rogers v. Mapleback, 1 H. Bl. 106.

So it is a waiver of an irregularity in giving an imperfect notice of exception. Aldridge v. Schroder, 1 Smith, 75.

Form of Notice.—Notice of exception to bail intitled in a wrong court is a nullity. Anon., 1 Chit. 375.

XI. ADDING BAIL AND GIVING TIME.

Changing Bail.—By Reg. Gen. H. T. 16 Vict. r. 92, the bail, of whom notice shall be given, shall not be changed without leave of the court or a judge.

Where bail has been rejected, others cannot be put in without an order of the court or a judge. Ventris's bail, 5 D. P. C. 622; 4 Scott, 394; 3 Bing. N. C. 677; 3 Hodges, 129; 1 Jur. 335.

The rule does not apply to the case of a prisoner. Bird's bail, 2 D. P. C. 583. But see contra, Stroud v. Kenny, 4 M. & Scott, 248.

But the rule applies to bail put in by the sheriff for the purpose of rendering the defendant. Rez v. Ennez (Sheriff), 4 M. & Scott, 247; 2 D. P. C. 782.

The rule does not apply to added bail. Key v. McIntyre, 2 M. & W. 347; 5 D. P. C. 453; M. & H. 44; S. P., Perry's bail, 2 C. & J. 475; 1 D. P. C. 564.

Costs of bail, changed by judge's order for that purpose, must be paid before the bail can justify. Jourdain v. Gunn, 2 Tyr. 491.

When Bail become Disqualified.—Where bail has been rejected on the ground of a technical objection, the court will not allow bail to be added. Elliott v. Gutteridge, 6 D. P. C. 255; 1 W., W. & H. 41.

Where one of the bail failed to appear to justify, and an affidavit was produced, stating that he was prevented from attending by an agreement which he had entered into with his partner never to become bail:—Held, that nothing but an unforeseen accident of a serious nature could be a sufficient excuse for non-attendance, and the court refused to allow time to substitute another person in his stead. Well's bail, 8 Moore, 378; 1 Bing. 359.

Where a notice of bail to add and justify at the same time, was regularly served, and the new bail were substituted by a judge's order on the morning of justification, the court refused the costs of the plaintiff's opposition on that ground, but offered time to inquire after them. Bowman v. Russell, 2 Tyr. 744.

Time is generally allowed, where the justification is prevented by subsequent insolvency or bankruptcy. Anon., 1 Chit. 2.

Where bail cease to be housekeepers, time will be allowed. Anon., 1 Chit. 6.

So, where the bail was not a housekeeper in point of law. Hughes v. Stirling, 11 Price, 158.

So, where the bail had taken a house, but from an unforeseen accident was unable to take possession. Bold's bail, 1 Chit. 288. And see Slade's bail, 1 Chit. 502.

The court refused time to add and justify, where one was an attorney. George v. Barnsley, 1 Chit. 8.

If added bail are excepted to on the ground that the original bail were attorney's clerks, the court will give time to put in and justify fresh bail. Hodges v. Meek, 3 Moore, 240.

Time was given to enable bail to pay his taxes, where his property was sufficient, and he had acted without bad faith in not paying them. Spradens v. Mahoney, 1 Chit. 309.

The court granted time to add and justify, where one of the bail, of whom notice had been given, was taken suddenly ill. Gillbank's bail, 9 D. & R. 6.

But time to justify bail, on account of the illness of the bail, refused, because it did not appear that he was really ill. Gablentz's bail, 1 H. & W. 111.

To amend Proceedings.—In general, time is allowed to correct errors in the notice of justification, or notice of bail, or jurat of bail-piece. Anon., 1 Chit. 2, 495, 351.

XII. ALLOWANCE OF BAIL.

Necessity of.—Bail is not regularly put in till the rule for the allowance of it has been served, even though the plaintiff opposes the justification. Rez v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 4 T. R. 493; 2 Chit. 99.

If such rule is not served upon the plaintiff, he may take an assignment of the bail-bond, though he knows of the justification. Holland v. White, 2 B. & P. 341.

The court refused, on behalf of bail to the action, to set aside a regular attachment against the sheriff, upon an affidavit of merits, and on payment of costs, where the rule for the allowance of bail had not been served on the plaintiff's attorney. Rez v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 D. P. C. 116.

Setting aside.—Allowance of bail may be set aside under circumstances of gross imposition and fraud on the part of bail. Gould v. Berry, 1 Chit. 143.

The court will not set aside the allowance of bail on the ground that they have sworn to a false account of their property, without the privy of the defendant or his attorney. Anon., 1 Chit. 116, 143.

Allowance of bail was discharged on affidavit of perjury by bail uncontradicted. Barling v. Waters, Bing. 423; 4 M. & P. 125.

The court would not discharge a rule for allowance of bail, on account of perjury in one of them, who had sworn on his justification that he was a housekeeper, and a few days before that he was not; the plaintiff's only remedy was by indictment. Shee v. Abbott, 5 Moore, 321; 2 B. & P. 619.

Where a bail has misdescribed his place of residence on justification, but has been allowed to pass, the court will not set aside the rule for the allowance of the bail, but he may be indicted for perjury. Eaglefield v. Stephens, 2 D. P. C. 438.

XIII. LIABILITY OF BAIL.

When Liable.—If bail enter into a recognizance, although excepted to and never justified, they are liable. Bramwell v. Farmer, 1 Taunt. 427.

They are only liable as a security for the original action; therefore, when judgment cannot be had, they are not liable. Anon., Lofft, 545.

To what Amount.—By Reg. Gen. H. T. 16 Vict. r. 109, bail shall only be liable to the sum sworn to by the affidavit of debt and the costs of suit, not exceeding in the whole the amount of their recognizance.

This means the sum mentioned in the order to hold to bail, and indorsed on the capias and costs. Jonas v. Tepper, 28 L. J., Q. B. 85; 5 Jur., N. S. 545.

Bail, having made default and then rendered their principal, are liable, in an action on the bail-bond, for the debt and costs, unless proceedings are stayed, as they may be, by order of a judge, on payment of costs; but if such an order is not taken advantage of until judgment is signed, the bail can have no relief. Jallicks v. Costar, 28 L. J., Ex. 209.

The liability of bail upon a recognizance given in an action is neither destroyed nor extended by inserting in the declaration, under an order to amend, new causes of action not included in the writ, and increasing the claim of damages. Taylor v. Wilkinson, 5 N. & M. 189; 1 H. & W. 451.

The bail to the action are not liable to pay the costs of a writ of error. Yates v. Doughan, 6 T. R. 288; S. P., Anon., Lofft, 520.

A plaintiff held the defendant to bail on an original writ; after declaring, he amended the declaration, adding fresh counts. He recovered a verdict on all the counts, with damages assessed severally on each. He then taxed the costs generally, without separating those incident to the new counts from the others:—Held, that the bail (though liable to the damages recovered on the causes of action mentioned in the recognizance) were not liable for the costs incident to the new counts, and that the plaintiff, not having separated the two classes of costs, could not recover any from the bail. Taylor v. Wilkinson, 6 A. & E. 533; 1 N. & P. 629; 2 Jur. 261.

XIV. DISCHARGE OF BAIL.

1. BY RENDER OF PRINCIPAL.

Bail who have not justified.—Bail who are excepted to, and do not justify on the day appointed, cannot afterwards render the principal, being thereby out of court. Hardwick v. Bluck, 7 T. R. 297; S. P., Rez v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 7 T. R. 527, 439.

When Render may be made.—A defendant who entered into the bond with two sureties, required by sect. 8 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, is in the same situation as if he were at large on bail, and he may render even before judgment is recovered, according to the practice in the case of a defendant on bail. Ovaston v. Coates, 2 P. & D. 485; 10 A. & E. 193; 3 Jur. 434.

Enlargement of Time.—Time was enlarged for bail to surrender their principal, who had become a bankrupt, for the purpose of his examination. Maude v. Jowett, 3 East, 145; S. P., Offley v. Dickens, 6 M. & S. 348; Glendining v. Robinson, 1 Taunt. 320.

Where a defendant became bankrupt after action, the court enlarged the time for him to surrender in discharge of his bail, until a fortnight after he had finished his last examination. Stead v. Yates, 3 M. & P. 272.

In the case of a London as well as a country commission, the court, on behalf of bail, will, to prevent inconvenience, allow the time for the render to be enlarged. Ruston v. Green, 2 D. P. C. 617; S. P., Waugh v. Ashford, 1 Scott, 167; 1 Bing., N. C. 294; 3 D. P. C. 123.

The time for rendering a bankrupt will be enlarged by the court, notwithstanding 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 21, authorising the render of defendants in discharge of bail to the county prison. Harris v. Alcock, 1 D. P. C. 568; 2 C. & J. 486; 2 Tyr. 418.

Bail shall have time to render, after a writ of error brought by the principal. Capron v. Archer, 1 Burr. 334.

The time was refused to be enlarged for bail to render their principal, on an affidavit that he was a lunatic: it not appearing that he was in such a state as to occasion any immediate peril of life, either to himself or those about him. Cock v. Bell, 13 East, 355.

So, on an affidavit that he could not be removed without endangering his life. Wynn v. Petty, 4 East, 102; S. P., Nightingale v. Lowry, 4 East, 102, n.; Warrington v. Sammell, 10 Moore, 170.

The court will allow time to the bail to render their principal, where, the principal being in custody, under process of another court, it appears, on the return made to a habeas corpus, issued by the bail, in order to render him, that he cannot be removed out of such custody without danger to his life, and that such impossibility still continues. Winstanley v. Gaitskell, 6 East, 389.

Defendant in Criminal Custody.—Where a defendant is in the criminal custody of K. B., the court of C. P. will not interfere summarily to procure him to be rendered in discharge of his bail. Currie v. Kinnear, 1 B. & P. 23; S. P., Bennett v. Same, 3 Moore, 259.

But the Court of Exchequer allowed the time to be enlarged for bail to render their principal, for a week after the expiration of the term of his imprisonment in a county gaol, under a conviction and sentence for a misdemeanor. Ashmore v. Fletcher, McClell. 252; 13 Price, 523; S. P., Rouch v. Boucher, 10 Price, 104.

Where a defendant, subsequently to arrest, and before perfecting special bail, was committed to criminal custody, in which he remained awaiting the decision of the judges on a point of law arising out of his defence on the criminal charge, the court refused to enlarge, till the opinion of the judges should have been delivered, the time for perfecting special bail, or to permit the sheriff's bail to render him. Joyce v. Pratt, 6 Bing. 377; 4 M. & P. 55.

But granted an enlargement for four days. Id. The court, on the application of bail, granted a habeas corpus to the sheriff in whose custody the defendant was under a charge of felony, to bring him up, in order that he might be surrendered. Sharp v. Sheriff, 7 T. R. 226.

The court, on application by the bail of a defendant, who was in custody on a charge of obtaining money upon false pretences, will grant a habeas corpus to the gaoler, to bring him up, in order that he may be rendered in discharge of his bail. Daniel v. Thompson, 15 East, 78.

The court will enlarge the time for bail to render a defendant who is under imprisonment in a county gaol upon a conviction for libel, until a week after the imprisonment under the sentence has expired; not until a week after the term for which he was sentenced to be imprisoned. Campbell v. Ackland, 1 C. & M. 73; 1 D. P. C. 635; 3 Tyr. 230.

Where a man was convicted of setting fire to his house, and sentenced to be imprisoned, the court gave the bail time to render during the period of his imprisonment. Rea v. Fearn, 1 Marsh. 170, n.

One who was committed to Newgate, by commissioners of bankruptcy, for not answering satisfactorily to certain questions, must, for the purpose of being surrendered by his bail in a civil suit, be brought up by habeas corpus, issued on the crown side of the court, on which side also must be taken the subsequent rule for his surrender in the action, his commitment pro forma to the marshal, and his recommitment to Newgate, charged with the several matters. Taylor's case, 3 East, 232.

Defendant in other Custody.—Where a man was held to bail in a civil action, and was afterwards committed to the custody of the sheriff upon an extent: the court, on an application by the bail for relief, held, that although they could not allow an exoneretur to be entered without the consent of the crown, they would give the bail time for surrendering the defendant. Hodgson v. Temple, 1 Marsh. 166; 5 Taunt. 503.

It is no objection to a motion on the part of bail to enlarge the time for rendering the principal, on good grounds, (as that the defendant is in custody quasi criminal,) that the bail have not justified. Tinson v. White, 1 Price's P. C. 156.

A defendant being in custody of a messenger, under an order of the secretary of state, for the purpose of being sent out of the kingdom, by virtue of the Alien Act, 43 Geo. 3, c. 165, the court refused to issue a habeas corpus on the application of his bail to bring him up, that they might render him in their own discharge, on account of the public inconvenience, and of the probable risk of his passage, which had been taken in a ship immediately about to sail to his destined port. Folekin v. Critico, 13 East, 457.

So, because of the unwarrantable arrest and detention of the principal as a prisoner of war by a foreign enemy. Grant v. Fagan, 4 East, 189; 1 Smith, 12.

Mode of Render.—Where a sheriff has put in bail above in order to render, and has obtained a judge's order for rendering at the instance of himself and his bail, that order will not be rescinded, though it might be amended by striking out all which shewed it to be granted at the sheriff's instance. Green v. Jacobs, 3 Tyr. 231.

A render may be made by the party himself, and without an attorney. Nethersole's bail, 2 Chit. 99.

Notice of Render.—The render is not complete or effectual till notice served. Rea v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Price, 338.

On notice of render being given to the plaintiff or his attorney all further proceedings against the bail are to cease. Anon., 1 Chit. 128.

Where writs of summons were served on the bail, after notice of the render of their principal:—Held, that the service was irregular. Lewis v. Grimstone, 5 D. P. C. 711; W., W. & D. 357; 1 Jur. 514.

The render of the principal, and notice thereof, by bail, do not operate as a stay of proceedings, unless the costs of writ and service thereof, are paid. Horn v. Whitcombe, 5 D. P. C. 328.

Where, after due notice of render of the principal, the plaintiff still proceeded against the bail in an action upon the recognizance, because no offer was made by them to pay the costs in the suit against them, nor any rule obtained by them to stay proceedings in the action against them on payment of costs:—Held, that the subsequent proceedings were irregular, being contrary to the rule of court, T. T. 1 Anne, which says, that, on such notice of render, all further proceedings against the bail shall cease. Byrne v. Aguilar, 3 East, 306.

The court, upon payment of costs, entered an exoneration on the bail-piece after execution against the bail, where the defendant in the original action was rendered in due time, but no notice of the render had been given until the goods of the bail had been taken in execution. Thorn v. Hutchinson, 4 D. & R. 712; 3 B. & C. 112.

Right of Bail to take Principal.—Special bail in the superior courts have a right to take their principal into custody at any time, and render him in discharge of themselves. Rea v. Hughes, 3 C. & P. 373.

A person may assist bail in taking, and may lawfully detain, the principal, although the bail do not continue present. Pycwell v. Stow, 3 Taunt. 425.

Bail cannot take their principal on a Sunday in order to render him. Brookes v. Warren, 2 W. B. 1273.

A bankrupt may be taken by his bail for the purpose of rendering him, notwithstanding his privilege from arrest, and if they neglect to take him they may be fixed. Payne v. Spencer, 6 M. & S. 237.

Bail above may justify the breaking and entering the house of A. (the outer door being open), in which the principal resides, in order to seek for him, for the purpose of rendering him: such a justification is good without averring that the principal was in the house at the time. Sheers v. Brooks, 2 H. Bl. 120.

2. BY BANKRUPTCY OF PRINCIPAL.

Generally.—When a defendant obtained his certificate under a commission before the trial, but did not plead it puis darrein continuance, the court ordered an exoneration to be entered on the bail-piece. Todd v. Maxfield, 5 D. & R. 258; 3 B. & C. 222.

Where the principal and bail both became bankrupts, the court ordered them to be relieved on motion, without pleading, though the bail-bond had been ordered to stand as a security. Streeter or Slater v. Scott, 2 D. P. C. 362; 2 C.,

M. & R. 475; S. C., nom. Slatter v. Stacey, 4 Tyr. 372.

Where a defendant obtained his certificate as a bankrupt after issue joined, and before trial, but did not plead it puis darrein continuance, and the plaintiff proceeded to trial, and obtained judgment, the court refused to order an exoneration to be entered on the bail-piece, although the plaintiff's attorney knew before the trial that the defendant had got his certificate; because the bail were still in a condition to render the defendant. Humphries v. Knight, 4 M. & P. 370; 6 Bing. 569.

Where a defendant becomes bankrupt and obtains his certificate, but omits to plead it, and his bail become fixed, the court will not set aside the proceedings on motion. Clarke v. Hoppe, 1 Rose, 353; 3 Taunt. 36.

After the bankruptcy of a defendant, the plaintiff may sue out a ca. sa., and proceed under it to fix the bail. Payne v. Spencer, 6 M. & S. 231.

Where the principal debtor is entitled to be discharged, if rendered on the ground that the plaintiff has proved under a fiat which was subsequently issued against the debtor, and, therefore, had elected to relinquish the action, the sureties are equally entitled to summary relief on motion, in case they are sued on the bond by the plaintiff. Geike v. Hewson, 4 M. & G. 618; 5 Scott, N. R. 484.

To scire facias against bail upon their recognizance, it is competent to a defendant to plead in bar against issuing execution, that, before issuing the alias writ of sci. fa. the plaintiff became bankrupt, and a commission issued against him, on which he was declared a bankrupt before the return of the writ, and his effects assigned to the provisional assignee, who was entitled to sue the defendants. Kinnear v. Tarrant, 15 East, 622; 1 Rose, 350.

Bail being fixed with the debt, and having paid it, sue the principal and obtain the judgment, after a commission of bankruptcy has issued against him, but before he has obtained his certificate; after he obtains it, the bail in the second action apply to be exonerated, on the ground that the plaintiffs, the bail in the original action, might prove their debt under the commission, by virtue of 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8. The court refused to interfere summarily, but left the bail to an audita querela. Hewes v. Mott, 2 Marsh. 37, 192; 6 Taunt. 329; 2 Rose. 455.

But if a plaintiff, after judgment obtained, proved his debt under a commission of bankruptcy, sued out against the defendant, and also proceeded against the bail, the bail were thereby entitled to their discharge, under 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14; and the court will discharge them on motion. Linging v. Comyn, 2 Taunt. 246; 1 Rose, 116.

At what time Certificate obtained.—The bail are entitled to be discharged, upon their bankrupt principal's obtaining his certificate, before the time allowed to them by the indulgence of the court for rendering their principal is out. Mannin v. Partridge, 14 East, 599; S. P., Thackrey v. Turner, 1 Moore, 457; 8 Taunt. 28.

Bail may apply to enter an exoneration, if the principal has become bankrupt, at any time before they are actually fixed. Moorby v. Gadge, 2 Chit. 104.

Where the principal became bankrupt, and on the same day that he obtained his certificate, but before the rising of the court, the bail were fixed on scire facias:—Held, that the bail had till the rising of the court on that day, before they could be actually fixed; and on payment of costs the court ordered an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece. Johnson v. Linacy, 2 D. & R. 385; 1 B. & C. 247.

If a defendant against whom judgment has been recovered afterwards become bankrupt, and obtain his certificate within fourteen days of the service of process upon his bail, the bail are entitled to have proceedings stayed, though no notice is given to the plaintiff or application made to stay such proceedings, till after the expiration of the fourteen days. Jones v. Ellis, 1 A. & E. 382.

3. BY LUNACY OF PRINCIPAL.

Bail are not discharged by a commission of lunacy having issued against the principal. Anon., Lofft. 617.

The court refused to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, on the ground that the principal was a lunatic, and that the marshal had refused to receive him into his custody. Anderson's bail, 2 Chit. 104.

Even where a defendant became a lunatic, after the commencement of the action. Ibbotson v. Galway (Lord), 6 T. R. 133.

4. BY PRINCIPAL BECOMING PRIVILEGED.

Bail are discharged by the defendant becoming a member of the House of Commons. Langridge v. Flood, 1 Tidd's Prac. 293.

So, by his succeeding to a peerage. Trinder v. Shirley, 1 Dougl. 45.

An unprivileged person in custody in execution, elected a member of parliament, is entitled to his discharge on motion; and, therefore, bail may have an exoneretur entered on the bail-piece, if the privileged person is elected between perfecting bail and final judgment. Phillips v. Wellesley, 1 D. P. C. 9.

5. BY DEATH OF PRINCIPAL.

If the principal die after the return of a ca. sa. and before the return be filed, the bail are fixed, and the court will not stay the filing of the return in favour of the bail. Rawlinson v. Gunston, 6 T. R. 284; S. P., Field v. Lodge, 3 Dougl. 410.

If a principal die after the return of a ca. sa., although his death happen before suing forth the first sci. fa., the bail are fixed in point of law, the sci. fa. being only an indulgence of the court. Filewood v. Popplewell, 2 Wils. 61, 65.

6. BY TAKING A COGNOVIT.

A cognovit by the principal, without notice to the bail, does not of itself discharge the bail. Hodgson v. Nugent, 5 T. R. 277.

Unless time is thereby given. Stevenson v. Roche, 9 B. & C. 707; S. C., nom. Stevenson v. Crease, 4 M. & R. 561.

But if a plaintiff accepts from the principal defendant a cognovit, whereby he gives him time for payment by instalments, he thereby discharges the bail, unless they are parties to the arrangement. Bowfield v. Tower, 4 Taunt. 456.

And if a plaintiff takes a cognovit, payable by instalments, and postponing the payment of any instalment to a later date than the time when the plaintiff could, with diligence, have obtained judgment and execution, the bail are discharged. Croft v. Johnson, 5 Taunt. 319; 1 Marsh. 59.

Where a plaintiff, with the consent of the bail to the sheriff, took a cognovit with a stay of execution for a month:—Held, that although the bail continued liable, the debt not having been paid, yet the plaintiff could not take proceedings against them without giving them notice that the cognovit was unsatisfied. Clift v. Gyr, 9 B. & C. 422; S. P., Charleston v. Morris, 6 Bing. 427; 4 M. & P. 114.

A defendant, with consent of bail, gave a cognovit with stay of execution. He omitted to pay when the time had elapsed. The plaintiff not having given the bail notice of this:—Held, that he could not proceed against them half a year afterwards, upon the defendant's death. Surman v. Bruce, 4 M. & Scott, 184; 2 D. P. C. 777; 10 Bing. 434.

The bail are discharged by the defendant's giving a cognovit for the payment of debt and costs. Farmer v. Thorley, 4 B. & A. 91.

A warrant of attorney to pay by instalments discharges the sheriff. Brown v. Neave, Wightw. 121.

So, also, a cognovit. Rez v. Surrey (Sheriff) 1 Taunt. 159.

7. BY PART LEVY IN EXECUTION.

A plaintiff may sue out a fi. fa. against the principal, and levy part of the debt, and afterwards sue out a ca. sa. as to the residue, and charge the bail. Stevenson v. Roche, 9 B. & C. 707; S. C., nom. Stevenson v. Crease, 4 M. & R. 561.

It is no ground for setting aside an execution issued against bail, that the plaintiff has accepted a composition from the defendant, and suspended the execution of a ca. sa. which had been issued against him, though it were without the knowledge or consent of the bail. Brickwood v. Annis, 1 Marsh. 250; 5 Taunt. 614.

A plaintiff sued out a ca. sa. against a principal, who having put in bail, became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate; he afterwards agreed to accept a composition, provided all the creditors would accept the same, of which the bail had no notice:—Held, that the ca. sa. against the principal must be set aside, and that as the bail had not applied to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece until after execution had been levied on them, they could only be relieved on payment of costs. Thackrey v. Turner, 1 Moore, 457; 8 Taunt. 28; S. P., Mannin v. Purtridge, 14 East, 599.

8. BY ARRANGEMENT WITH PRINCIPAL.

Where a plaintiff receives bills of exchange from a defendant with an agreement that he shall not be precluded from proceeding while the bills are running, the bail are not thereby discharged. Melvil v. Glendinning, 7 Taunt. 126.

Bail are discharged by time being given to their principal without their consent, although they may not have been damnified. Hannington v. Beare, 4 D. P. C. 256.

Bail knowing of an agreement to give time must apply for relief immediately on being served with process. Vernon v. Turley, 4 D. P. C. 660; 1 M. & W. 316.

A mere honorary obligation on the part of a plaintiff not to press a defendant for payment of debt and costs is not such an indulgence to him as will release his bail. Ladbroke v. Hewett, 1 D. P. C. 488.

If a plaintiff by an agreement with a defendant expedites his remedy against him, the bail are not thereby released. Id.

Time was given by a plaintiff to the defendant without the knowledge of the bail. Subsequently, a consent for "further time" was obtained from the bail:—Held, that this operated as a waiver of the original irregularity. Spyer v. Carper, 5 D. P. C. 448; M. & H. 47; 1 Jur. 137.

Bail are not discharged by time being given to a principal, within the limits in which regularly final judgment could be obtained against him, although the plaintiff might have signed final judgment by the order of a judge at an earlier period. Whitfield v. Hodges, 1 M. & W. 679; 2 Gale, 127.

Where, in the course of a cause, an order was made for taking the bill on which the action was brought, and which by mistake was drawn up as a stay of proceedings:—Held, that the bail could not avail themselves of that order, as a giving of time, so as to discharge them. Woosman v. Wood, 1 D. P. C. 681.

9. BY OTHER MEANS.

A plaintiff, having obtained bail to his action, sued in equity for the same cause, and being put to his election by the court of equity, elected to proceed there, and a perpetual injunction went not to proceed at law:—Held, that this was no ground for discharging the bail. Horsley v. Walstab, 7 Taunt. 235; 2 Marsh. 548.

The court permitted an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece, the defendant being under sentence of transportation for a felony. Wood v. Mitchell, 6 T. R. 247.

10. APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

Bail excepted to, but not struck off the bail-piece, may apply for an exoneretur. Humphry v. Leite, 4 Burr. 2107.

In order to exonerate bail excepted to, his name must be struck out of the bail-piece. Fulke v. Bourke, 1 W. Bl. 462.

After bail put in and justified, and demand of plea with time allowed for pleading, it is too late to move to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, on the ground that the plaintiff has not declared on the cause of action which he swore to in his affidavit. Knight v. Dorey, 1 B. & B. 48. And see Ward v. Forrest, 2 D. & R. 250; 1 B. & C. 149.

Irregularities in the conduct of a ca. sa. against the principal may be objected to on motion, in proceedings under a sci. fa. against the bail, as well as by plea. Goldney v. Laporte, 2 B. N. C. 456; 4 D. P. C. 639; 2 Scott, 670.

Where bail would be fixed by an indulgence granted by the court, such terms will be imposed upon the plaintiff as will give the bail an opportunity of freeing himself from his liability. Bradley v. Bailey, 3 D. P. C. 111.

A. had arrested B., who put in bail. A summons was afterwards obtained by the defendant's attorney for entering an exoneretur on the bail-piece. The clerk to the agent of the plaintiff's attorney gave his consent, not knowing that the defendant was at that time a merchant residing abroad; the exoneretur was accordingly entered. The court, having granted a rule nisi calling on the defendant to shew cause why the judge's order should not be rescinded and the exoneretur entered upon the bail-piece be struck out, made that rule absolute on payment of costs. Firth v. Harris, 8 D. P. C. 437.

XV. PROCEEDINGS AGAINST BAIL.

Ca. sa. against Principal.—In order to charge the bail, a ca. sa. against the original defendant must be in the sheriff's office four days before the return-day, exclusive of the day when it is lodged, and of the return day; and an intervening Sunday is not to be reckoned one of the four days. Furnell v. Smith, 7 B. & C. 693; S. P., Howard v. Smith, 1 B. & A. 528.

It is no objection to a ca. sa., to fix bail, that some of the days during which the ca. sa. lay in the sheriff's office were half holidays. Rigbye, Ex parte, 6 N. & M. 773; S. P., nom. Armitage v. Rigbye, 5 A. & E. 76.

Scire facias on recognizance of bail. Plea, no ca. sa. duly issued, lodged and returned. Replication, ca. sa. issued and returned non est inventus. Rejoinder, that the ca. sa. did not lie in the sheriff's office four days exclusive of the day it was lodged, the return-day, and an intervening Sunday:—Held, that the rejoinder was bad. Sandon v. Proctor, 7 B. & C. 800; S. P., Elliot v. Lane, 1 Wils. 334.

The want of a ca. sa. is not an irregularity, but matter of substance, of which the bail can only take advantage by plea. Philpot v. Manuel, 5 D. & R. 615.

A defendant having put in and perfected bail, a ca. sa. was lodged and returned non est inventus, and proceedings being had against the bail, they rendered the principal in time: the defendant was then bailed again and discharged:—Held, that proceedings could not be had against the last bail without taking out a fresh ca. sa. Thackray v. Harris, 1 B. & A. 212.

Where, before the granting of a rule nisi for a new trial, a ca. sa. has been returned non est inventus, the plaintiff may, after the discharge of that rule, proceed immediately against the bail. Rigbye, Ex parte, 6 N. & M. 773; S. C. nom. Armitage v. Rigbye, 5 A. & E. 76.

Where proceedings have been taken against the bail, affidavits in support of an application to set aside the ca. sa. are properly intitled, both in the original action, and in that against the bail. Pocock v. Capperton, 1 H. & H. 334.

The court would set aside proceedings against bail, if the ca. sa. were tested of a term prior to that in which judgment was signed against the principal. Gawler v. Jolley, 1 H. Bl. 74.

A return of non est inventus, procured by the plaintiff against the principal, in order to found proceedings against the bail, is irregular, if the principal was at the same time in custody of the same sheriff who made the return, though at the suit of another person; and the subsequent proceedings against the bail will be set aside. Burke v. Maine, 16 East, 2.

So, if a plaintiff procured a ca. sa. against the defendant to be returned non est inventus, knowing that he was in custody of the sheriff, although by a different name. Briggs v. Richardson, 2 D. P. C. 158.

So, where the principal was in custody of the sheriff upon a criminal charge, and the plaintiff knew that he was in such custody at the time of the return. Ward v. Brumfit, 2 M. & S. 238.

By Action.]—A declaration in an action on a recognizance against bail, must set out for whom the defendant was bail, and in what sum. Park v. Yestary, 1 Wils. 284.

A parol agreement to give the principal time cannot be pleaded in bar of a recognizance. Woodman v. Ford, 2 Jur. 11.

A plea to an action on a recognizance of bail, that the plaintiff entered into an agreement with the principal, without the privity of the bail, to take from the principal goods to secure payment of part of the money recovered, and that such goods were consigned to them accordingly:—Held, bad, because such agreement, by parol, with a person not a party to the cause, could not be pleaded in bar of such an action, arising on matter of record. Bulteel v. Jarrold, 8 Price, 467.

By Seire Facias—Form.]—A sci. fa. against bail might have been sued out after a ca. sa. was returned, though not regularly filed; and the shortness of notice to the bail was immaterial. Hunt v. Cox, 1 W. Bl. 393; 3 Burr. 1360.

A plaintiff might have sued out a sci. fa. against the bail, on the return-day of the ca. sa. against the principal. Shivers v. Brooks, 8 T. R. 628.

A sci. fa. against bail need not have been tested on the return-day of the ca. sa. Sandland v. Claridge, 2 D. P. C. 115; 1 C. & M. 673; 3 Tyr. 804.

It might have been tested afterwards. Ib.

It was irregular in a sci. fa. to state the bail to have been put in on a day previous to its issuing. Peacock v. Day, 3 D. P. C. 291.

In a sci. fa. upon a recognizance of bail taken before a commissioner in the country, it was necessary to aver that the recognizance was transmitted to, and inrolled in the court above, as a sci. fa. could only issue on a matter of record, and inrolment was essential to constitute a record. Laverty v. Duffin, 1 Alcock & Napier, 295.

Where a sci. fa. did not aver any record upon which it was founded, the proper course was to demur; a plea of nul tiel record was improper. Ib.

—Pleadings—Declaration.]—Where a plaintiff issued a joint sci. fa. against A. and B., bail of C. and D., upon which A. only was summoned, B. not being found, and A. entered an appearance for himself only:—Held, that a declaration against him alone was irregular. Sainsbury v. Pringle, 10 B. & C. 751.

Sci. fa. to have execution for damages and costs recovered against B. upon a recognizance of bail, conditioned in case B. and K. should be condemned, that B. and K. should pay, &c., or render themselves, the plaintiff alleged that B. and K. have not paid, or rendered themselves, according to the form and effect of the recognizance:—Held, that the breach was ill assigned, for non constat but that B., who was condemned, has paid or rendered. Williams v. Thorley, 4 M. & S. 33.

—Pleas.]—The bail could take advantage of a mere irregularity in a sci. fa. by pleading. Powell v. Taylor, 2 Tidd's Prac. 1182.

A writ of error allowed, though not returned, was in itself a supersedeas; and might have been pleaded by the bail to have been issued and allowed after the issuing and before the return of the ca. sa. against the principal, so as to avoid proceedings against them upon the recognizance of bail, prosecuted after a return by the sheriff of non est inventus made pending such writ of error. Sampson v. Brown, 2 East, 439.

A plea of the bankruptcy and certificate of the principal was bad to a sci. fa. on a recognizance. Beddome v. Holbrooke, 1 B. & P. 450, n.; S. P., Donnelly v. Dunn, 2 B. & P. 46.

To a sci. fa. against bail upon their recognizance, the defendants might have pleaded in bar against the execution, that the plaintiff became a bankrupt, and a commission issued against him, on which he was declared a bankrupt before the return of the writ, and his effects assigned to the provisional assignee, who, before plea pleaded, assigned to the assignee under the commission, who was entitled to sue the defendants. Kinmear v. Tarrant, 15 East, 622; 1 Rose, 350.

Staying Proceedings.]—A writ of error allowed is a supersedeas in law to all further proceedings in the court below. Miller v. Neubald, 1 East, 662; S. P., Sampson v. Brown, 2 Esp. 439.

Where a ca. sa. is returnable against the principal on a particular day, before which a writ of error is allowed and served; that operates as a supersedeas to any proceedings against the bail, though the ca. sa. has lain four days in the office before the allowance of the writ of error. Perry v. Campbell, 3 T. R. 390.

Where a writ of error is allowed before the expiration of the time permitted to the bail to render their principal, the bail are entitled to stay the proceedings against them pending the writ of error, on the terms of undertaking to pay the damages recovered, or to surrender the defendant within four days of the determination of the writ, if determined in favour of the original plaintiff. Sprang v. Monpiratt, 11 East, 316.

If proceedings against bail be stayed, upon undertaking to pay debt and costs within four days after affirmance of judgment, it means the final affirmance of it. Kershaw v. Cartwright, 5 Burr. 819.

The court will not stay proceedings against the bail, pending a writ of error on the judgment against the principal, if the principal has confessed that the writ of error is brought purely for delay. Pool v. Charnock, 3 T. R. 79.

Other Cases.]—When a rule to set aside proceedings for irregularity, and to stay proceedings in the meantime, is obtained, the proceedings are suspended for all purposes till the rule is discharged. Swayne v. Crammond, 4 T. R. 176.

Where bail is put in above, an injunction to stay proceedings against the principal extends to proceedings against the bail. Carte v. Carte, Amb. 32.

XVI. BAIL ON REMOVAL FROM INFERIOR COURTS.

A cause was removed by certiorari from the Lord Mayor's Court. The defendant paid a sum of money into court in lieu of bail, and shortly afterwards obtained a rule for security for costs, on the ground that the plaintiff resided out of England. The security for costs was never given, and a period of nearly two years elapsed without any proceeding in the cause. The court made absolute a rule calling on the plaintiff to give security for costs within a fortnight, otherwise the defendant to be at liberty to take the money paid in, in lieu of bail, out of court. Tassie or Tassi v. Kennedy, 5 D. & L. 587; 2 B. C. Rep. 278; 17 L. J., Q. B. 215; 12 Jur. 854.

Where a cause has been removed from the Lord Mayor's Court by certiorari on the part of a defendant, and the plaintiff serves him with a rule for a procedendo, the latter has a right to give notice of justifying his bail, which he has already put in, and of which he has given notice, without waiting until served by the plaintiff with a rule for better bail; and if the plaintiff objects to such a notification, he is bound to attend before the judge when the bail appears to justify, and if he does not, and the bail are allowed, he has no right to treat the rule for the allowance as a nullity, and issue a procedendo. Scarnett v. Rice, 1 D., N. S. 333.

When a cause had been removed from an inferior court by habeas corpus at the defendant's instance, and no further steps taken on either side for a year, the plaintiff might apply ex parte for a procedendo to issue, unless bail in the Queen's Bench were given within four days. And the bail below cannot move to set aside such procedendo when issued, until they or the defendant have put in bail in that court. Blanchard v. De la Crouée, 9 Q. B. 869; 16 L. J., Q. B. 181; 11 Jur. 283.

The customary process of foreign attachment in the city of London is not equivalent to an arrest on mesne process, though the attachment can only be dissolved by the defendant putting in bail or rendering himself to prison; and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, does not affect the custom. Day v. Paupierre, 7 D. & L. 12; 13 Q. B. 802; 18 L. J., Q. B. 270; 14 Jur. 40.

The general rule, that where an action against an executor is removed from an inferior court, the defendant is not bound to put in special bail, does not extend to the case of an inferior court where a custom of foreign attachment exists which can only be dissolved on putting in special bail. Bastow v. Grant, 13 Q. B. 807; 21 L. J., Q. B. 377; 17 Jur. 299.

Upon the removal of a cause by certiorari from the Lord Mayor's Court, the defendant is not at liberty, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, to pay money into court in lieu of putting in and perfecting special bail. Morgan v. Pebrer, 2 Scott, 853.

XVII. BAIL IN ERROR OR ON APPEAL.

When necessary.—It is not necessary for a plaintiff in error, who was the plaintiff below, to give bail in error. James v. Cochran, 9 Ex. 552; 2 C. L. R. 651; 23 L. J., Ex. 126.

Bail in error is not necessary when the writ is of error coram nobis, as it is not a supersedeas of execution. Knight v. Thynne, 9 D. P. C. 984; 5 Jur. 1109.

Dispensing with.—A judge having in the exercise of his discretion dispensed with bail on appeal, on the ground that the question to be determined was a doubtful one, and had been decided by the court in deference to a single authority, the court refused to set aside his order. Turquand v. Moss, 17 C. B., N. S. 24.

The court or a judge has a discretion to dispense with bail on appeal, as well as with bail in error. Brown v. Whitmore, 15 C. B., N. S. 442.

An official assignee of a district court of bankruptcy having been sued by the trade assignee for contribution to the costs of an unsuccessful action to which the former was an assenting party, and judgment having gone against him:—Held, that it was a fit case for dispensing with bail on appeal. Id.

Bail in error by defendants not dispensed with, on the ground that they were overseers, who ought not to be personally liable for costs. Reg. v. Ives, 11 W. R. 67.

Who may be.—Members of a corporation holding office in the corporation, may be bail for the corporation in error brought by the corporation. Reg. v. Saddlers' Company, 2 F. & F. 249; S. P., Henley v. Lyme Regis (Mayor, &c.), 3 M. & P. 450; 6 Bing. 195.

If hired bail is put in on a writ of error, the plaintiff may issue execution. Browne v. Brown, 12 Moore. 172; 4 Bing. 38; S. P., Bradley v. Gompertz, 1 M. & R. 567; Sutcliffe v. Eldred, 2 D. P. C. 184.

Where sham or hired bail, who are insolvent, and of whom notice has been given, and to whom no exception is entered, become bail in error, the plaintiff may treat the writ of error and the bail as nullities, and take out execution. Ward v. Leri, 2 D. & R. 421; 1 B. & C. 268.

And the court will discharge a rule for setting such execution aside with costs. Crum v. Kitchen, 1 B. & C. 269, n.

Recognizance and Proceedings.—A recognizance of bail in error for a less sum than double the sum recovered by the judgment does not stay the execution. Reed v. Cooper, 5 Taunt. 320.

A recognizance entered into by the bail in error without the principal is good. Dixon v. Dixon, 2 B. & P. 443.

Money cannot be paid into court in lieu of bail in error unless by consent. Collins v. Gwynne, 2 M. & Scott, 775.

It is uncertain whether bail in error can be taken before a commissioner in the country, but the court will not make an order for it to be so taken. Williams v. Panton, 8 D. P. C. 701; 4 Jur. 990.

Money deposited in lieu of bail in error cannot, upon the reversal of the judgment, be retained to satisfy interlocutory costs incurred in the court below. Collins v. Gwynne, or Gwynne v. Collins, 1 M. & G. 938; 2 Scott, N. R. 85; 9 D. P. C. 70.

A plaintiff had judgment, and the damages were referred, and a sum of money paid into court to cover the damages and costs, upon the terms that it should be in lieu of giving bail in error, and to abide the further order of the court, and that thereupon all further proceedings upon the reference should be stayed until after the proceedings in error should be disposed of. The judgment was afterwards reversed in the Exchequer Chamber:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to have the money paid out to him without awaiting the result of an appeal to the House of Lords. Castrique v. Imrie, 10 C. B., N. S. 340; 30 L. J., C. P. 281; 7 Jur., N. S. 998.

As to the form of the recognizance, see Hesse v. Wood, 4 Taunt. 691; Harelock v. Geddes, 12 East, 622; Matthews v. Gibson, 8 East, 527; and Graham v. Grill, 1 M. & S. 409.

Justification and Notice.—Where bail in error were regularly put in, and properly described in the notice, and were described as the bail "already put in" in the notice of justification:—Held sufficient, although it was objected that these names and additions should have been inserted in the notice of justification, as well as in the notice of their being put in. Richardson v. Mellish, 9 Moore, 579.

Bail in error, who refuses to justify, may have his name struck out of the bail-piece at any time. Jones v. Tubb, 1 Wils. 337.

Changing.—Bail in error cannot be changed. Anon., 2 Chit. 84.

Liability of Bail.—As bail in error cannot surrender the principal, they are not entitled to relief though the principal becomes a bankrupt pending error. Southcote v. Braithwaite, 1 T. R. 624.

If a defendant, (the plaintiff in the action,) upon judgment being affirmed, takes in execution the body of the plaintiff in error, for the debt, damages and costs in error, he does not thereby discharge the bail in error, but may sue them on their recognizance. Perkins v. Pettitt, 2 B. & P. 440.

Amending Bail-piece.—The court will not admit the bail-piece in error to be amended by enlarging the penalty in order to defeat the execution. Reed v. Cooper, 5 Taunt. 320.

XVIII. CONTRACTS TO INDEMNIFY.

An indictment against a defendant for a misdemeanor having been removed into the Queen's Bench, the plaintiff became bail in 40*l.*, the condition of the recognizance being that the defendant should appear and plead, and at his own costs cause the issues to be tried. The defendant was convicted, but the costs of the prosecution not having been paid, the recognizance was escheated, and the plaintiff compelled to pay 40*l.*:—Held, that he was entitled to recover that sum from the defendant as money paid; for that, as it was not contrary to public policy for the defendant to indemnify his bail against the costs of the prosecution, the law would imply a promise to that extent. Jones v. Orchard, 16 C. B. 614; 24 L. J., C. P. 229; 1 Jur., N. S. 936.

At the request of a defendant the plaintiff became bound in a recognizance of bail for the appearance of the defendant's daughter at the Central Criminal Court, to which court she had been committed for trial; the defendant having verbally promised the plaintiff to indemnify him against all liability. The daughter did not appear, and the recognizance was estreated and the plaintiff was obliged to pay the amount and was put to other expenses:—Held, that this was not a promise to answer for the debt or default of another person within the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 4), and need not be in writing. Cripps v. Hartnoll, 32 L. J., Q. B. 381; 10 Jur., N. S. 200; 8 L. T. 765; 11 W. R. 953.

A judgment having been recovered against A. in a county court, he was arrested by the bailiff for non-payment. The judgment was for 34*l.*, but the creditor authorized the bailiff to accept 17*l.*, whereupon K. came forward and told the bailiff that if he would release A. he would produce him on the following Saturday, or pay the 17*l.*:—Held, that this was not a promise by K. to answer for the debt or default of another, so as to bring it within the Statute of Frauds. Reader v. Kingham, 13 C. B., N. S. 344; 32 L. J., C. P. 108; 9 Jur., N. S. 797; 7 L. T. 789.

On a deposit of money by one person with another as security upon his becoming bail for the depositor, the money to be returned when the liability as bail has ceased: the question for the jury is, whether the proceedings have in effect terminated, and the rescission of an order for the institution of proceedings, with the fact that none have in fact been since instituted, coupled with lapse of time, is evidence that the proceedings have terminated. Batson v. Trance, 3 F. & F. 320.

1. CONTRACT.

Bailment or Sale.—A bailment on trust implies that there is reserved to the bailor the right to claim a re-delivery of the property deposited in bailment. South Australian Insurance Company v. Randell, 3 L. R., P. C. C. 101; 22 L. T. 843.

Wherever there is a delivery of property on a contract for an equivalent in money, or some other valuable commodity, and not for the return of the identical subject-matter in its original or an altered form, this is a transfer of property for value—it is a sale and not a bailment. Id.

T

Where therefore, corn was deposited by farmers with a miller, to be stored and used as part of the current consumable stock or capital of his trade, and was by him mixed with other corn deposited for the like purpose, subject to the right of the farmers to claim at any time an equal quantity of corn of the like quality, without reference to any specific bulk from which it was to be taken, or in lieu thereof, the market price of any equal quantity, on the day on which he made his demand, with a small charge for general purposes:—Held, that such a transaction amounted to a sale by the farmer to the miller, and was not a bailment of the corn, and entitled the miller to claim in respect thereof upon a policy of insurance against fire as for his own property, notwithstanding that such corn was not specifically insured, or described, as required by the conditions of the policy, as “goods held in trust and on commission,” upon which condition the claim was resisted by the insurers. Ib.

Deposit by several Persons.]—If personal property is made the subject of a bailment by all the owners of it, the bailee may refuse to deliver it up to only some of them, acting without the consent of the other owner or owners. Harper v. Godsell, 5 L. R., Q. B. 422; 39 L. J., Q. B. 185; 18 W. R. 954.

If a thing is deposited by one, with the authority of another, and received by the bailee to keep on the joint account of the two, one alone cannot lawfully demand it without the authority of the other, so as to maintain trover upon the bailee's refusal to deliver it. May v. Harvey, 13 East, 197.

Where goods had been bailed by several upon the terms that the bailee was not to part with the possession, except upon the joint order or request of the bailors, and the bailee afterwards delivered the goods to one of the bailors upon his sole request:—Held, that the bailors jointly could not maintain an action for the delivery up of the goods without the joint order or request of the bailors. Brandon v. Scott, 7 El. & Bl. 234; 26 L. J., Q. B. 163; 3 Jur., N. S. 362.

Jus Tertii—Estoppel.]—Although in certain cases a bailee may set up the jus tertii, yet if he accepts the bailment with full knowledge of an adverse claim, he cannot afterwards set up the existence of such claim as against his bailor. Davies, Ex parte, Sadler, In re, 19 Ch. D. 86; 45 L. T. 632; 30 W. R. 237—C. A.

After the filing of a liquidation petition the holder of a registered bill of sale executed by the debtor instructed an auctioneer to take possession of the chattels comprised in it. The auctioneer took possession, and advertised the goods for sale on behalf of the bill of sale holder. The sale was stopped by injunction, and the auctioneer remained in possession of the goods on behalf of the receiver under the petition. On the appointment of a trustee the auctioneer held possession for him, and ultimately by his directions advertised the goods for sale, the advertisements and the catalogues of the goods being headed “In liquidation. By order of the trustee.” The goods were sold, and the proceeds of sale were received by the auctioneer. The bill of sale holder gave him notice not to pay them to the trustee, and he declined to pay them over. The trustee applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for an order for payment to him, serving notice of his motion on the auctioneer only. On the hearing of this motion an order was made by consent that the money should be paid into court, and the hearing adjourned, notice being meanwhile given to the bill of sale holder. Notice was served on him, but not a four-days' notice as required by rule 50 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, and he did not appear on the adjourned hearing. He had meanwhile commenced an action against the auctioneer for the proceeds of sale:—Held, that the Court of Bankruptcy ought to exercise its jurisdiction under sect. 72 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that the money must be paid out to the trustee, on the ground that the auctioneer had with full knowledge of the adverse claim, deliberately elected to sell the goods for the trustee, and was, therefore, estopped from denying his title. Ib.

To trover for goods, a defendant pleaded that the goods were delivered by the plaintiff to him, to be by him warehoused and taken care of; that before the delivery the goods had been the property of A., deceased, and that there was not at the time of the delivery any legal representative of A., and that this fact was concealed from the defendant; that afterwards one who had obtained letters of administration to the effects of A., claimed the goods, and forbade the defendant to deliver them to the plaintiff:—Held, a good plea. Thorne v. Tilbury, 3 H. & N. 534; 27 L. J., Ex. 407.

Semble, that a warehouseman, being a bailee of goods, is not estopped from disputing the title of the bailor; but that if the goods are the property of another, he may refuse to redeliver them, if he does so relying upon the right and title and by the authority of that other. Ib.

The estoppel against a bailee from disputing the title of his bailor, and setting up a jus tertii, ceases when the bailment on which the estoppel is founded is determined by what is equivalent to an eviction by title paramount. It is not enough that the bailee has become aware of the title of a third person, or that an adverse claim is made upon him, so that he may be entitled to an interpleader. Biddle v. Bond, 6 B. & S. 225; 34 L. J., Q. B. 137; 12 L. T., 178; 13 W. R. 561.

A warehouseman receiving goods from a consignee who has had actual possession of them, to be kept for his use, may nevertheless refuse to redeliver them, if they are the property of another. Ogle v. Atkinson, 6 Taunt. 759; 1 Marsh. 323.

Attornment.]—A wharfinger, having acknowledged certain timber on his wharf to be the property of the plaintiff:—Held, that he could not dispute the plaintiff's title in an action of trover brought against him by the plaintiff. Gosling v. Birnie, 7 Bing. 339; 5 M. & P. 160.

A manufacturer deposited goods with a wharfinger at S., for the purpose of being shipped for the defendants' wharf in L., receiving from them receipts describing them. The manufacturer indorsed upon these receipts, orders upon the defendants to deliver the goods on their arrival to the plaintiffs, the latter having advanced money upon them. The plaintiffs sent the receipts and delivery orders to the defendants, and demanded the goods. The defendants stated that the goods had not arrived, but promised that when they did arrive they should be forwarded to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the defendants, having thus assented to the plaintiffs' title to the goods, could not afterwards dispute it, and that the plaintiffs might maintain trover upon their refusal to deliver them. Holl v. Griffen, 3 M. & Scott, 732; 10 Bing. 246.

An attornment by a warehouseman or a wharfinger does not dispense with an appropriation of goods, so as to vest the property in the vendee. Austin v. Adams, 1 F. & F. 312.

Where on a contract of sale of a portion of a large quantity of goods in the warehouse of the vendor, the vendee has resold the goods to a third person, whose right to them the vendor has recognized, he cannot afterwards dispute the title of such third person, although the specific goods have never been appropriated to him. Woodley v. Coventry, 2 H. & C. 164; 32 L. J., Ex. 185; 9 Jur., N. S., 548; 8 L. T. 249; 11 W. R. 599.

Therefore, where the defendants sold 348 barrels of flour to C., who sold them to the plaintiffs, and gave them a delivery order, upon presenting which to the defendants they said it was all right, and transferred the flour in their books from the name of C. to that of the plaintiffs:—Held, that the defendants were estopped from saying that no property in the flour passed to the plaintiffs, although no specific portion of a larger quantity had been appropriated to them. Id.

A wharfinger had malt deposited with him on account of B., as a security for money lent by the plaintiff, made a sale of the goods to him with a condition annexed for repurchase by B. at such an advanced price as to make the transaction usurious. The wharfinger, on notice of the sale, transferred the malt in his books from B. to the plaintiff, and held it at the disposal of the plaintiff. B. afterwards became bankrupt. His assignees claimed the malt, on the ground that the transaction with the plaintiff was usurious, and that the property had never passed; but they eventually compromised with the plaintiff:—Held, afterwards, in an action against the wharfinger for the proceeds of the malt, that the wharfinger could not set up the ius tertii in the assignees, which they had themselves abandoned. Betteley v. Reed, 3 G. & D. 561; 4 Q. B. 511; 12 L. J., Q. B. 172; 7 Jur. 507.

A warehouseman, who, on receiving an order from the seller of malt to hold it on account of the purchaser, gives a written acknowledgment that he so holds it, cannot set up a defence for not delivering it to the purchaser, that by the usage of trade the property in malt sold is not transferred till it is measured, and that before the malt was remeasured the seller became a bankrupt. Stonard v. Dunkin, 2 Camp. 344.

Goods in bales were sent from the country to a wharf in London, consigned to B. & Co., who were factors, for sale, and made deliverable to them or their assigns. A. having bought of B. & Co. forty-eight bales of goods, so consigned, and lying at the wharf, B. & Co. ordered the wharfingers to weigh and deliver the same to A. They accordingly weighed the goods, and communicated the weight to B. & Co., who thereupon sent to A. an invoice, stating the weight, together with the price. Five of these bales were afterwards delivered by the wharfingers, on the order of A., to a party to whom A. had resold them; the residue remained at their wharf, and were afterwards stopped by

B. & Co. as unpaid vendors. No transfer of any of the bales was made in the books of the wharfingers from B. & Co. to A., nor was any warehouse rent paid by him. A. afterwards became bankrupt, and his assignees brought an action against the wharfingers for the non-delivery of the goods:—Held, that these facts did not make them wharfingers to the bankrupt, so as to entitle the assignees to sustain the action. Tanner v. Scovell, 14 M. & W. 28; 14 L. J., Ex. 321.

See also SALE (STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU) and ESTOPPEL.

Liabilities arising from.]—L. having bought cases of wine of the plaintiff to be forwarded by the plaintiff from France, deposited the bill of lading with the defendant, a wharfinger, directing him to take delivery and warehouse the goods on his, L.'s, account. The shipowner put a stop order on the goods for freight. On the arrival of the wine, L. gave notice to the plaintiff that he had rejected it as not corresponding to sample. The plaintiff ultimately agreed to take back the wine, but on demanding a delivery order, found that L. had on the same day indorsed the bill of lading to M., who took it to the defendant and had the wine transferred into his own name. The plaintiff then tendered to M. a sum claimed for expenses, which being refused, he demanded the wine from the defendant, offering to pay all charges, and to indemnify him against the claim of any other person, but he declined to deliver, on the ground that warrants had been given for the wine to M. The jury found that M. had not been a bona fide purchaser for value from L.:—Held, that the defendant was liable in an action of detinue, inasmuch as his title as bailee could be no better than that of L., his bailor. Batuff or Batut v. Hartley, 7 L. R., Q. B. 594; 41 L. J., Q. B. 273; 26 L. T. 968; 20 W. R. 899.

C., a merchant domiciled at Alexandria, being indebted to T., a merchant carrying on business at Leipsic, for the purpose of settling litigation between them, deposited with B. (an English merchant resident at Alexandria) bills drawn in his favour as security for T.'s debt; B., by the agreement between C. & T., constituting himself a voluntary depositor of them, and undertaking to be responsible for them to T., "until the effective encashment of them, which remains intrusted to C.":—Held, that B. was not guilty of a breach of duty under this agreement in allowing C. to take the bills when due, for encashment at his discretion, and was not bound to see that C. handed over the money to T. Treffitz v. Canelli, 4 L. R., P. C. 277; 27 L. T. 252; 20 W. R. 842.

Pledge of Goods obtained by Fraud from Pledgee and re-pledged.]—D. & Co. deposited certain goods with the plaintiffs as security for an advance; they afterwards obtained possession of the goods by fraudulently representing to the plaintiffs that they had sold them to the defendants, and would hand over to the plaintiffs the money to be received in payment. D. & Co. obtained an advance from the defendants, and deposited the goods, with a power of sale, with them:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division, that as the plaintiffs had parted with their special property in the goods to D. & Co., they could not recover them in an action from the defendants who had obtained them bonâ fide and for a good consideration. Babcock v. Lawson, 5 Q. B. D. 284; 49 L. J., Q. B. 408; 42 L. T. 289; 28 W. R. 591—C.A.

2. KINDS OF BAILMENT.

a. Bankers.

Liability of.]—A box containing debentures and other securities was deposited at a bank, the depositor keeping the key. The bank received no payment for their care of the box, which was kept in a strong room with similar boxes of other customers, and with property belonging to the bank. The debentures were stolen by the cashier of the bank. In an action by the depositor against the bank :—Held, that the bank was not bound to more than ordinary care of the deposit intrusted to them, and that the negligence for which alone they could be made liable would have been the want of that ordinary care which men of common prudence generally exercise about their own affairs. Giblin v. McMullen, 2 L. R., P. C. 317; 38 L. J., P. C. 25; 21 L. T. 214; 17 W. R. 445.

It is not, however, sufficient to exempt a gratuitous bailee from liability, that he keeps goods deposited with him in the same manner as he keeps his own, though this degree of care will ordinarily repel the presumption of gross negligence. Id.

The term "gross negligence" is not intended as a definition, but is useful as expressing the practical difference between the degrees of negligence for which different classes of bailees are responsible. Id.

For Loss or Theft of Securities.]—A customer, who kept an account with a banker, made a special deposit of certain bonds for safe keeping, paying nothing for the privilege; the bonds were stolen by the teller of the bank, who had always borne a good character :—Held, that the bank was a gratuitous bailee, and as such not liable, except for gross negligence. Scott v. National Bank of Chester Valley, 10 Canada, L. J., N. S. 182.

An owner of railway shares in two companies deposited the certificates for safe custody with a banking company, who undertook to receive the dividends for a small commission. On receiving the certificates from the railway companies, he gave his address in one instance at the office of the bank, and in the other at a club. The manager of the bank, who had the key of the safe where the certificates were kept, fraudulently sold the shares, and forged the name of the owner to the transfer. The companies wrote to him informing him of the transfers, and receiving, in one instance, no answer, and in another an answer in his name forged by the manager, registered the transfer. He afterwards, on discovery of the fraud, brought suits against the two companies and the transferees of the shares, in which he recovered the shares, but the court gave him no costs. The banking company being wound up, he claimed to prove against the company for the amount of his costs in the suits which had been occasioned by their negligence :—Held, that the banking company was a bailee for reward of the certificates, and that they had been guilty of culpable negligence in keeping them, but that the loss of the costs was too remote in consequence of the negligence of the company for them to be held liable for it. United Service Company, In re, Johnston, Ex parte, 6 L. R., Ch. 212; 40 L. J., Ch. 286; 24 L. T. 115; 19 W. R. 457. Affirming 9 L. R., Eq. 181; 39 L. J., Ch. 390.

b. Warehousemen and Wharfingers.

i. Rights of.

Rent.]—A person has no right to keep the property of another, and charge for the standing of it, unless there was a previous bargain between him and the owner of the property, or between him and some agent authorised by the owner. Buxton v. Baughan, 6 C. & P. 674.

If the purchaser neglects after notice to remove the goods within a reasonable time, the seller may charge him with warehouse room, or bring an action for not removing them. Greaves v. Ashlin, 3 Camp. 426.

Wharfingers in London are not entitled to wharfrage for goods unladen into lighters out of barges fastened to their wharfs. Stephen v. Coster, 3 Burr. 1408; 1 W. Bl. 413, 423.

By an act of parliament, certain persons were incorporated as the Hull Dock Company, and premises (before the property of the crown) were given to them for the purposes of the act, and they were authorised to make a dock, quays, wharfs, &c., which it was enacted should be vested in them for the purposes of the act. It was provided that all goods, &c., which should be landed or discharged upon any of the quays or wharfs which should be erected by virtue of that act should be liable to pay, and should be charged and chargeable with the like rates of wharfrage and payments as were usually taken or received for any goods, &c., loaded or discharged upon any quays or wharfs in the port of London :—Held, that as the premises were only vested in the company for the purposes of the act, they had no common-law right to a compensation for the use of them, and that the statute did not give them any right to claim wharfrage for goods shipped off from their quays. Hull Dock Company v. La Marche, 8 B. & C. 42; 2 M. & R. 107.

Insurable Interest.]—Warehousemen and wharfingers with whom goods are deposited have an insurable interest in such goods, although there has been no previous authority to insure given by the real owners, nor any notice given to them of such insurance. Waters v. Monarch Life and Fire Insurance Company, 5 El. & Bl. 870; 25 L. J., Q. B. 102; 2 Jur. N. S. 375. See Bateman, Ex parte, 8 De G., M. & G. 263; 25 L. J., Bk. 19; 2 Jur. N. S. 265.

The insurers are entitled in such a case to recover from the insurance office the full value of goods destroyed by fire, but are liable to account to the true owners for the excess of the money received beyond the amount of their own charges in respect of such goods. Id.

Lien.]—Wharfingers have a general lien for the balance of their accounts. Naylor v. Mangles, 1 Esp. 109; S. P., Spears v. Hartley, 3 Esp. 81. And see Rushforth v. Hadfield, 6 East, 519; 7 East, 224.

A wharfinger has not a general lien in respect of labourage and warehouse room, except by agreement express or implied: general continued and undisputed usage may be evidence of such agreement; but where the right is disputed in the place where the wharfinger lives, he cannot set it up against a customer unless he has previously given him notice that he will deal only upon those terms. Holderness v. Collinson, 1 M. & R. 55; 7 B. & C. 212.

A wharfinger's general lien on the goods of his customer in his possession for his balance in respect of freight and wharfage, due before the teste of an immediate extent, issued against such customer, being the crown's debtor, will prevail against the extent. Rex v. Humphrey, M'Clel. & Y. 173.

In an action to restrain the infringement of a trade mark, a wharfinger, who had received goods bearing the pirated trade mark in the ordinary course of business without any knowledge of the fraud, was made a co-defendant, and in his statement of defence disclaimed all interest in the matter in dispute, and submitted to act as the court should direct, on having his charges for warehouse rent and his costs of the action paid or provided for. At the trial of the action he contended at the bar that the plaintiff ought not to touch the goods for the purpose of removing the trade mark without first paying his charges:—Held, that the wharfinger was entitled to be paid his costs of the action by the plaintiff, and had a lien on the goods in his possession for his warehouse charges in priority to the lien (if any) which the plaintiff might have thereon for his costs. Moet v. Pickering, 8 Ch. D. 172; 47 L. J., Ch. 527; 38 L. T. 799; 26 W. R. 637—C. A.

— Where Goods mixed.—Where, after a fire at a wharfinger's, the salvage of oil belonging to various owners, the identity of which was lost, was retained in the warehouses under an arrangement with the agent of the owners, to pay charges upon the whole, and there was a distinct quantity of oil belonging to another owner, the identity of which was not lost, and which was not treated as salvage:—Held, that the wharfingers had no lien on this oil for the charges on the whole of the salvage. Grant v. Humphrey, 3 F. & F. 162.

— Method of Payment.—Where wharfage and other charges due on goods imported were, by the course of trade, paid by the importer at the Christmas following the importation, whether the goods were in the meantime removed or not; and goods were sold to S., and after Christmas the importer became bankrupt:—Held, that there was no lien on the goods for the wharfage as against S. Crawshaw v. Homfray, 4 B. & A. 50. And see Richardson v. Goss, 3 B. & P. 119.

— After Notice.—Where goods deposited at a wharf are sold by the owner, and he gives notice thereof to the wharfinger, paying all charges up to that time, the wharfinger cannot claim a lien against him for subsequent charges in respect of such goods, on the ground that no delivery order was lodged, and the notice was merely oral. Barry v. Longmore, 12 A. & E. 639; 4 P. & D. 344.

Acting as a Factor.—A person who carries on the business of a warehouseman, and in that character receives goods solely for the purpose of warehousing them, is not an agent within the Factors Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 39), although he also carries on the business of a broker; and therefore a pledge of the goods by such person without the authority in fact of his principal either to pledge or sell them is not protected by s. 1. Cole v. North Western Bank, 10 L. R., C. P. 354; 44 L. J., C. P. 233; 32 L. T. 733—Ex. Ch.

Where Goods wrongfully taken.—Goods came to a wharfinger consigned to A.; B., believing them to be meant for himself, carried them from the wharf, and used them before he discovered the mistake:—Held, that the wharfinger, after paying A. the value of the goods, could not maintain an action against B. for money paid to recover the amount. Sills v. Laing, 4 Camp. 81.

ii. Liability of.

Wharfingers.—The liability of a wharfinger who undertakes to convey goods from his wharf to the vessel in his own lighters is similar to that of a carrier. Maving v. Todd, 1 Stark. 72; 4 Camp. 225.

Where goods are to be carried coastwise, and the usage of the wharf is to deliver them on the wharf to the mate of the ship by which they are to be carried: if they are delivered to the mate, the wharfinger's responsibility is at an end, and he is not liable, though the goods are lost from the wharf before they are shipped. Cobban v. Downe, 5 Esp. 41.

His liability commences from the time the crane is applied to raise them into the warehouse; and it is no defence that they were injured by falling into the street, from the breaking of tackle, the carman who brought the goods having refused the offer of slings for further security. Thomas v. Day, 4 Esp. 262.

If goods are sent to a wharf, to go by a vessel to any place on the coast of England, the wharfinger does not discharge his duty by delivering them to one of the crew, but should deliver them to the captain of the vessel, or some other person in authority on board of it. Leigh v. Smith, 1 C. & P. 638; R. & M. 224.

B., a carrier and wharfinger, received into his warehouse goods of A., on the terms that they should be conveyed by B.'s barges to London when A. should direct, at the usual freight, and that in the meantime they should be kept by B. without charge for warehousing:—Held, in an action for not keeping the goods safely, that B. was not a gratuitous bailee. White v. Humphrey, 11 Q. B. 43; 12 Jur. 417.

— Evidence of Acceptance by.—To charge a wharfinger, the goods must be proved to have been booked, or to have been delivered to the wharfinger himself, or to some person who can be proved to have been his agent for the purpose of receiving them. Buckman v. Levi, 3 Camp. 414.

Goods were sent by canal carriers, directed to a person in the Isle of Man, to the care of the defendant at Liverpool. On the arrival of the goods at Liverpool, they were landed on a public wharf, and notice sent to the defendant, who was the agent of a steam-vessel company. He signed the carriers' book, and afterwards entered them in the manifest and clearance of the steam-vessel going to the Isle of Man. There was also evidence that on former occasions, the defendant had desired that goods sent to him should remain on the wharf:—Held, that there was evidence of a delivery to and acceptance by the defendant of the goods, so as to make him liable for a subsequent loss by negligence. Quiggin v. Duff, 1 M. & W. 174; 1 Gale, 420.

An order signed by O. for the delivery, by the defendants, wharfingers, of twenty sacks of flour to the plaintiff (the party named in the order), was lodged with and accepted by them in the usual course of business, they at the same time declaring they had but five sacks to spare, which the party might have, and he received them accordingly. On application for the rest, they declined to deliver it. On trover brought against them by the party named in the order, it did not appear that he knew that O. had any other flour in the defendants' possession, and the defendants did not produce any delivery orders by which any such flour had been previously appropriated by O. The jury found that the defendants had accepted the order generally, and gave a verdict for the plaintiff for the value of the fifteen sacks. The court refused to disturb the verdict, and held, that trover was maintainable, as the defendants had not limited their acceptance of the order to any minor quantity of O.'s flour then in their hands, or alleged that they must select the sacks to be delivered to the plaintiff. Gillett v. Hill, 2 C. & M. 531; 4 Tyr. 290.

Where goods consigned to A., in London, and deliverable in the river, were, by his direction, he being insolvent, landed on a wharf at which he had been in the habit of landing goods, A. having no premises adjoining the river, but having a warehouse in the city, and the goods were stopped in transitu in the hands of the wharfinger:—Held, in trover for the goods, by the assignees of A. (who became bankrupt a few days afterwards), against the wharfingers, that the proper question to be left to the jury was, whether the wharfingers received the goods as A.'s agents, to take possession of them for his own benefit as owner, or as agent only, to forward them to him, or to keep them for the seller. James v. Griffin, 1 M. & W. 20.

—Sufferance.—In an action against a wharfinger, to whom goods were sent to be shipped, for neglecting to take out a sufferance, for want of which the goods were seized, it is not necessary to aver or prove that the goods were condemned by a sentence in rem. Baker v. Liscoe, 7 T. R. 171.

—Insurance Moneys.—If A. deposits goods in the warehouse of B., a wharfinger, for the purpose of sale by B., who is paid 10*l.* per annum for warehouse rent, and receives a commission on the sale: B., having insured the goods, which are afterwards burnt in the warehouse, and having received the amount from the insurer, is liable to A. for so much money had and received to his use. Sideways v. Todd, 2 Stark. 400; S. P. Waters v. Monarch Life and Fire Insurance Company, 5 El. & Bl. 870; 25 L. J., Q. B. 102.

—Authority of Agent.—Where the agent of a wharfinger, whose duty it was to give receipts for goods actually received at the wharf, fraudulently gave a receipt for goods which he had not received, the wharfinger held not responsible, because it is not within the scope of the agent's authority in the course of his employment to give such a receipt. Coleman v. Riches, 16 C. B. 104; 3 C. L. R. 795; 24 L. J., C. P. 125; 1 Jur., N. S. 596.

—Warehousemen.—A warehouseman is only bound to take reasonable and common care of any commodity entrusted to his charge. Catliiff v. Danvers, Peake, 114.

—Theft.—A. hired a room in the house of B. at 2*s.* a week, for the purpose of depositing goods for safety, and kept the key of a padlock by which the room door was fastened, and the goods were stolen by one of B.'s family:—Held, that B. could not be sued as bailee for the value of the goods stolen. Peers v. Sampson, 4 D. & R. 636.

—Carriers as.—The plaintiff was consignee of some flax sent by railway to New Church Station. On its arrival at the station the railway company sent to the plaintiff an advice note of its arrival, requiring him to remove it, and stating that they, the company, would hold it, "not as common carriers, but as warehousemen, at owner's sole risk, and subject to the usual warehouse charges." Soon after the receipt of this notice, the plaintiff went to the station and removed two tons of the flax, but left the rest at the station for more than two months. There were no warehouses at the station, and the flax remained on open ground insufficiently covered, and became damaged by wet. In an action for the damage it was admitted that, if the company was bound to take reasonable care of the flax, they had not done so:—Held, that, treating the advice note acquiesced in by the plaintiff as a contract, the terms of it, taken altogether, did not exempt the company from liability for negligence to the extent that they would be liable as warehousemen or bailees for hire; and that they were therefore liable for the damage. Mitchell v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 10 L. R., Q. B. 256; 44 L. J., Q. B. 107; 33 L. T. 61; 23 W. R. 853.

A package of goods was delivered to the Great Western Railway Company, and another to the London and North Western Railway Company, for carriage to the station of the former company at W., both packages being addressed to the plaintiff, "to be left till called for." One of the packages arrived at W. on the 24th of March, the other on the 25th. On their arrival they were placed in the station warehouse to await their being called for. The defendants did not know the address of the plaintiff, who travelled about the country with drapery goods. The goods had not been called for when, on the morning of the 27th of March, a fire having accidentally broken out, the warehouse was burned down and the goods were consumed by fire. The plaintiff on the same day after the fire called for the goods, and, not receiving them, brought actions against the defendant companies as common carriers to recover their value:—Held, that after the interval of time which the plaintiff had suffered to elapse since the arrival of the goods, the liability of the defendants as common carriers in respect of the goods had ceased, and they had become mere warehousemen of them, and consequently that the actions were not maintainable in the absence of any evidence of negligence on the part of the defendants. Chapman v. Great Western Railway Company, 5 Q. B. D. 278; 49 L. J., Q. B. 420; 42 L. T. 252; 28 W. R. 566; 44 J. P. 363.

Where a commercial traveller deposited a case of patterns in a waiting room of a railway company, and it was lost:—Held, that in an action against them as warehousemen for negligence, he could not recover damages beyond the actual value of the article lost. There is no undertaking on the part of warehousemen to be answerable beyond the actual value of the articles, except by special contract. Anderson v. North Eastern Railway Company, 4 L. T. 216; 9 W. R. 519.

Special Contract as to Goods.—The defendant contracted to warehouse certain goods for the plaintiff at a particular place, but he warehoused a part of them at another place where, without any negligence on his part, they were destroyed. In an action to recover as damages the value of the goods:—Held, that the damage was not too remote, and that the defendant, by his breach of contract, had rendered himself liable for the loss of the goods. Lilley v. Doubleday, 7 Q. B. D. 510; 51 L. J., Q. B. 310; 44 L. T. 814; 46 J. P. 708.

If the owner of property gives another person authority to deal with it in a particular way, and such person chooses to deal with it in another way, he must take the risk of the consequences, and is liable for its loss or injury, unless such loss or injury would have occurred in whichever way the property had been dealt with. Id.

Where an order is given previously to the delivery of goods to a bailee, carrier or other person, to deal with them, when delivered, in a particular manner, to which he assents, and afterwards the goods are delivered to him accordingly; a duty arises on his part, on the receipt of the goods, to deal with them according to the order previously given and assented to; and the law infers an implied promise by him to perform such duty. Streeter v. Horlock, 1 Bing. 34; 7 Moore, 283.

Pledge by Consignee before Arrival—Bills of Lading—Delivery Order.—When goods are shipped under a bill of lading drawn in parts, to be delivered to the consignee "or his assigns, the one of which bills being accomplished, the others to stand void," the master, or the warehouseman who has the custody of the goods under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1862, ss. 66–78, is justified in delivering to the consignee on production of one bill of lading, although there has been a prior indorsement for value to the holder of another part; provided the delivery be bona fide and without notice or knowledge of such prior indorsement.

Goods having been shipped for London consigned to C. & Co., the shipmaster signed a set of three bills of lading marked "First," "Second," and "Third," respectively, making the goods deliverable to C. & Co., or their assigns, freight payable in London, the one of the bills being accomplished, the others to stand void. During the voyage C. & Co. indorsed the bill of lading marked "First," to a bank in consideration of a loan. Upon the arrival of the ship at London, the goods were landed and placed in the custody of a dock company in their warehouses; the master lodging with them notice under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1862, s. 68, &c., to detain the cargo until the freight should be paid. C. &

Co. then produced to the dock company the bill of lading marked "Second," unindorsed, and the dock company entered C. & Co. in their books as proprietors of the goods. The stop for freight being afterwards removed, the dock company bona fide and without notice or knowledge of the bank's claim, delivered the goods to other persons upon delivery orders signed by C. & Co.:—Held, that the dock company had not been guilty of a conversion, and that the bank could not maintain any action against them. Glyn, Mills & Company v. East and West India Dock Company, 7 App. Cas. 591; 52 L. J., Q. B. 146; 47 L. T. 309; 31 W. R. 201—H. L. Affirming, 6 Q. B. D. 475; 50 L. J., Q. B. 62; 43 L. T. 584; 29 W. R. 316—C. A.

c. Livery Stable Keepers.

Bound to take Reasonable Care.—When a livery stable keeper undertakes for reward to receive a carriage and lodge it in a coach-house, the case comes within the second class of the fifth sort of bailment mentioned by Holt, C. J., in Coggs v. Bernard (2 Ld. Raym. pp. 917, 918), viz., a delivery to carry or otherwise manage for reward, to a private person, not exercising a public employment; and he is bound to take reasonable care. Searle v. Laverick, 9 L. R., Q. B. 122; 43 L. J., Q. B. 43; 30 L. T. 89; 22 W. R. 367.

The obligation to take reasonable care of the thing entrusted to a bailee of this class, involves in it an obligation to take reasonable care that any building in which it is deposited is in a proper state, so that the thing deposited may be reasonably safe in it; but no warranty or obligation is to be implied by law on his part that the building is absolutely safe. Id.

The fact that the building has been erected for the bailee on his own ground makes no difference in his liability. Id.

The plaintiff brought his horses and two carriages to the defendant, a livery stable keeper; the carriages were placed under a shed on his premises, a charge being made by him in respect of each. The shed had just been erected, the upper part being still in the hands of workmen. The defendant had employed a builder to erect the shed for him, as an independent contractor, not as his servant, and he was a competent and proper person to be so employed. The shed was blown down by a high wind, the defendant being ignorant of any defect in it, and the carriages were injured; upon which the plaintiff brought an action against him. At the trial, these facts having been admitted, the judge rejected evidence to prove that the fall of the shed was owing to it being unskillfully built through the negligence of the contractor and his men; and he nonsuited the plaintiff, ruling that the defendant's liability was that of an ordinary bailee for hire, and that he was only bound to take ordinary care in the keeping of the carriages, and that if he had exercised in the employment of the builders such care as an ordinary careful man would use, he was not liable for damage caused by the carelessness of the builder, of which he, the defendant, had no notice:—Held, that the nonsuit and ruling were right. Id.

As to Liability of Proprietors of Cabs.]—See* HACKNEY CARRIAGE.

d. Hirers of Property.

Musical Instruments.]—The hirer of goods—as in the case of musical instruments hired to be used at the Opera House—is not answerable for a loss by fire. Longman v. Culini, Abb. Ship. 270, n.

Carriage.]—The hirer of a carriage by the year, under a written agreement, binding the carriage-maker “to keep the same in perfect repair without any further charges whatever,” is not liable for repairs made necessary by accident, and not by the wilful default of the hirer. Reading v. Menham, 1 M. & Rob. 234.

Where a carriage is hired for a certain time, and sent back before the expiration of it, if the party of whom it was hired sells it within the time, he cannot recover his charge for the hire. Wright v. Melville, 3 C. & P. 542.

A railway company enters into an agreement with A. for the delivery to them, during a certain period, of a certain quantity of coals, to be carried by them for hire, to be paid by A., and in A.'s waggons; the company to have the right to detain any waggons of A. on certain defaults on his part. In order to complete this agreement, A. agrees with B. to supply a portion of the coals to be sent on to the line, in waggons which had been hired, for a term from A. by B., but re-let for hire by him to A. for this purpose. A. having made default, the company seize and detain the waggons then on the line as being A.'s, but they are, in fact, waggons sent on by B., under his agreement with A. The company cannot retain them against B. North v. Great Northern Railway Company, 6 Jur., N. S. 98.

Horse.]—A party who rides a horse at the request of the owner, for the purpose of exhibiting and offering him for sale, without any benefit to himself, is bound to use such skill as he possesses; and, if proved to be conversant with, and skilled in, horses, is equally liable with a borrower for an injury done to the horse. Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. 113; 12 L. J., Ex. 264.

Ship.]—After bailment of a ship the bailor mortgages to a third person, who, having the right to do so, demands the ship from the bailee; he is entitled to refuse to restore it to the bailor, because he could not do so without exposing himself to an action. European and Australian Royal Mail Company v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, 30 L. J., C. P. 247; 8 Jur., N. S. 136.

Amount of Care Necessary.]—What is reasonable care, skill and diligence varies in the case of a gratuitous bailee, and a bailee for hire; but the failure on the part of a bailee to exercise reasonable care, skill and diligence is in law gross negligence. Beale v. South Devon Railway Company, 11 L. T. 184; 12 W. R. 1115—Ex. Ch.

e. Other Bailees.

Carriers—Liability and Duty of.]—A common carrier by sea from London to Aberdeen received a mare to be carried to Aberdeen for hire. In the course of the voyage the ship encountered rough weather, and the mare received such injuries that she died. The jury found that the injuries were caused partly by more than ordinary bad weather, and partly by the conduct of the mare herself by reason of fright and consequent struggling, without any negligence of the carrier's servants:—Held, that the carrier was not liable for the death of the mare. Nugent v. Smith, 1 C. P. D. 423; 45 L. J., C. P. 697; 34 L. T. 827; 25 W. R. 117—C. A. Reversing the decision of the Common Pleas Division, 1 C. P. D. 19; 45 L. J., C. P. 19; 33 L. T. 731; 24 W. R. 237—C. A.

A carrier does not insure against the irresistible act of nature, nor against defects in the thing carried itself; and if he can shew that either the act of nature or the defect of the thing itself, or both taken together, formed the sole direct and irresistible cause of the loss, he is discharged. Ib.

In order to shew that the cause of the loss was irresistible it is not necessary to prove that it was absolutely impossible for the carrier to prevent it, but it is sufficient to prove that by no reasonable precaution under the circumstances could it have been prevented. Ib.

A shipowner, who is not a common carrier, is not subject to the liability of a common carrier—i. e. does not insure the goods bailed to him for carriage. Ib.

In order to come within the exception of loss by the act of God as applied to the liability of a common carrier, the loss need not have been caused directly and exclusively by such a direct and violent, and sudden and irresistible act of nature as the carrier could not by any amount of ability foresee, or (if he could foresee it) could not by any amount of care and skill resist so as to prevent its effect. Ib.

A loss is a loss by the act of God if it is occasioned by the elementary forces of nature unconnected with the agency of man or other cause; and a common carrier is entitled to immunity in respect of loss so occasioned if he can shew that it could not have been prevented by any amount of foresight, pains and care reasonably to be required of him. Ib.

If the loss is occasioned partly by the act of God as above defined, and partly by some other cause, which, if it had been the sole cause of the loss, would have furnished a defence, the carrier will be entitled to immunity in respect of such loss if he can shew that it could not have been prevented by any amount of foresight, pains and care reasonably to be required of him; and per Cockburn, C. J., in such cases a common carrier has done all that is reasonably to be required of him, if he has used all the means to which prudent and experienced carriers ordinarily have recourse to ensure the safety of goods entrusted to them under similar circumstances. Ib.

And see CARRIER.

Pawners of Goods—Rights of Owner of Goods pledged against his Will.]—The indemnity given by s. 25 of the Pawnbrokers Act, 1872, to a pawnbroker who delivers a pledge to the person producing the pawn-ticket applies only as between the pawnbroker and the pawnor or the owner who has authorized the pledge, and the act does not affect the common law rights of the owner of property which is pledged against his will. Singer Manufacturing Company v. Clark, 5 Ex. D. 37; 49 L. J., Ex. 224; 41 L. T. 591; 28 W. R. 170; 44 J. P. 59.

— Sale by—Shares.—The registered holder of shares in a company, whose articles of association did not require that a transfer of shares should be made by deed, deposited the certificates of his shares, accompanied by a transfer executed by himself, but with the name of the transferee and the date of execution left in blank, with a person who advanced him money, as security for the loan. No time was fixed for the repayment of the loan, and nothing was said as to the object of the transfer:—Held, that the deposit had no authority, without a previous demand for repayment of the loan, to sell or sub-mortgage the shares and fill in the name of the purchaser or sub-mortgagee as transferee. Sargent, Ex parte (17 L. R., Eq. 273) distinguished. France v. Clark, 22 Ch. D. 830; 52 L. J., Ch. 362; 48 L. T. 185; 31 W. R. 374. Affirmed, W. N. 1884, 43—C. A. The rules as to the power of sale possessed by the pledgee of a chattel apply also to the pledgee of a chose in action. Ib.

— Chattels.—The deposit of personal chattels with another as a pledge to secure the repayment of money on a given day, with power to sell in case of default, creates an interest and a right of property in such chattels in the pledgee, and the wrongful act of such pledgee does not annihilate the contract between the parties, or the interest of the pledgee in the chattels under such contract, so as to enable the pawnor to maintain detinue without tendering the amount due. Donald v. Suckling, 1 L. R., Q. B. 585; 35 L. J., Q. B. 232; 12 Jur., N. S. 795; 14 L. T. 772; 15 W. R. 13; 7 B. & S. 783; S. P. Halliday v. Holgate, 3 L. R., Ex. 299; 37 L. J., Ex. 174—Ex. Ch.

A creditor who loses or disposes of a pledge loses his lien, and the pledgor can recover its value without deducting the debt due. Cooke v. Haddon, 3 F. & F. 229.

— Date of Sale.—A deposited a dock-warrant for brandies with B. as a security for a loan, which was to be repaid on the 29th of January, or, in default, the brandies were to be forfeited. On the 28th, B. agreed for the sale of the brandies to C., and on the 29th delivered to him the dock-warrant, and C. took actual possession of the brandies on the 30th:—Held, that the sale on the 28th, and the delivery of the dock-warrant to the vendee on the 29th, A. having the whole of that day to redeem it, amounted to a conversion. Johnson v. Seear, 15 C. B., N. S. 330; 33 L. J., C. P. 130; 10 Jur., N. S. 99; 12 W. R. 347.

Held, by Erle, C. J., Byles, J., and Keating, J., that the proper measure of damages was the actual damage which A. had sustained by the wrongful conversion, which, as there was no intention on his part to redeem the pledge, was merely nominal. Ib.

But by Williams, J., that the proper measure of damages was the value of the thing converted, the bailment having been terminated by the wrongful sale. Ib., and see Davis v. Artingstall, infra.

Where goods are deposited as security for the repayment of a loan of money on a future day certain, though without any express stipulation that the pawnee shall have power to sell in default of payment on the day,—Semble that such a power of sale is implied by law from the nature of the transaction. Pigot v. Cubley, 15 C. B., N. S. 701; 33 L. J., C. P. 134; 10 Jur., N. S. 318; 12 W. R. 467.

But where there is no stipulated day for payment, or where the stipulated time has been rendered indefinite by a subsequent agreement between the parties, it is not competent to the pawnee to sell without a proper demand and notice. Ib.

A notice that he will sell unless an excessive sum be paid immediately, is not such a notice as will justify the sale. Ib.

— When Property Passed.—B., being indebted to A., entered into an agreement that certain goods should be held by A. as a security for the debt, and the agreement contained an acknowledgment that A. had received into his possession the goods which were the subject of the pledge. Part of the goods was, in fact, delivered to A.; but a cart and one set of harness were, by arrangement, left in the possession of B. Shortly afterwards, upon A. getting into difficulties, B. took back all the goods which were the subject of the pledge into his own possession; but, upon A.'s being declared bankrupt, his assignees seized the goods, and sold them for the benefit of his creditors:—Held, in trover by B., against the assignees, that there was a constructive delivery of all the goods into the possession of the pawnee. Martin v. Reid, 11 C. B., N. S. 730; 31 L. J., C. P. 126.

Liability of Auctioneer on Sale of Goods after Notice from true Owner.—Goods, the separate property of a married woman, were placed by her husband in a hired warehouse, and entrusted to auctioneers for the purpose of sale:—Held, that the auctioneers became possessed of the goods, so that on receipt of notice of the wife's claim before sale they were liable to the wife for the value of both the goods sold and goods not sold but afterwards removed by the husband. Davis v. Artingstall, 49 L. J., Ch. 609; 42 L. T. 507; 29 W. R. 137.

The plaintiff is entitled to the real value of the goods sold, and not merely to what they fetched at the auction, which sum could not be assumed to be the real value of the goods. Ib.

See also PAWNBROKER and SALE (BY AUCTION).

Liability of Bailees for Hire—Theft.—A bailee of goods to be kept for hire is bound to take the same care of them as he would of his own; but if they are stolen by his servants he is not liable without gross negligence on his part. Finnane v. Small, 1 Esp. 315. See Peers v. Sampson, 4 D. & R. 636.

A treasurer of a benefit building society, having covenanted with its trustees that he will faithfully discharge the duties of treasurer, obey the directions of the trustees in relation to such duties, and punctually account to the trustees for all and every sum and sums of money, bills, notes, securities, goods and chattels, which he, in his office of treasurer, shall receive on the society's account, and being bound by the rules of the society to pay over in a given time the same moneys which he shall receive, does not violate such obligation if, after receiving moneys, and before he has an opportunity of paying them over, he is robbed of them by irresistible violence, and without fault of his own; such obligation being that only of a bailee. Walker v. British Guarantee Association, 18 Q. B. 277; 21 L. J., Q. B. 257; 16 Jur. 885.

— Workmen for hire.—A watchmaker is bound so to secure property placed in his hands in the way of his trade, as to protect it against depredations that may be committed by the persons in his employ. Therefore, where A. entrusted B. (who was a chronometer maker) with a chronometer to be repaired, and B. suffered his servant to sleep in the shop in which the chronometer was deposited; B. was held liable to A. for its value, B.'s servant having stolen it, and B., at the same time when the theft was committed, having deposited his watches in a more secure place than that in which the chronometer was left. Clarke v. Earnshaw, Gow. 30.

A workman for hire is not only bound to guard the thing bailed to him against ordinary hazards, but likewise to exert himself to preserve it from any unexpected danger to which it may be exposed. Leck v. Maestac, 1 Camp. 138.

Where chattels are bailed to an artisan for the purpose of his executing certain work upon them, at an agreed price, the bailor may reclaim the chattels before such work is fully executed; and the bailee has only a lien upon them to the extent of what would be a fair price for so much of the work as has then been executed. Lilly v. Barnsley, 2 M. & Rob. 548.

Gratuitous Bailees.—Upon a bailment without reward, in order that an act may be done by the bailee for the sole benefit of the bailor, such bailee (or mandatory) is liable only for gross negligence. Doorman v. Jenkins, 4 N. & M. 170; 2 A. & E. 256.

— Animals.—If A. places a dog with B., and the dog is received by B. to be kept by him, for reward to be paid to him by A., B. is not answerable for the loss of the dog if he took reasonable care of it; but if the dog is lost, the onus lies on B. to acquit himself by showing that he was not in fault with respect to the loss. Mackenzie v. Cor, 9 C. & P. 632.

A horse being for sale, A. asked the agent of the vendor to let him have the horse for the purpose of trying it, and the agent did so:—Held, that A. was entitled to put a competent person on the horse for the purpose of trying it, and was not limited to merely trying it himself. Camoyse (Lord) v. Scurr, 9 C. & P. 383.

— Picture.—A. lent a picture to B., who wished to shew it to C.; B., without any previous communication, and unknown to C., sent the picture to his house, where it was accidentally injured:—Held, that C. was not responsible for not keeping the picture safely. Lethbridge v. Phillips, 2 Stark. 544.

Merchant entering Goods at Custom-House.—A., a general merchant, undertakes, voluntarily and without reward, to enter a parcel of goods, the property of B., together with a parcel of his own of the same sort, at the Custom-house, for exportation, but makes the entry under a wrong denomination, whereby both parcels are seized. A., having taken the same care of the goods of B. as of his own, and not having received any reward, and not being of a profession or employment which necessarily implied skill in what he had undertaken, was not liable to an action for the loss occasioned to B. Shiells v. Blackburne, 1 H. Bl. 158.

As to Innkeeper.—See INNKEEPER.

3. LIABILITY OF LENDERS OF PROPERTY.

Defects.—A lender of a chattel is responsible for defects in it with reference to the use for which he knows that the loan is accepted, of which he is aware, and owing to which directly the borrower is injured. Blackmore v. Bristol and Exeter Railway Company, 8 El. & Bl. 1035; 4 Jur., N. S. 657.

A gratuitous lender of an article is not liable for injury resulting to the borrower or his servant, while using it, from its defective state, if the lender was not aware of it. Mac Carthy v. Young, 6 H. & N. 329; 9 W. R. 439; 3 L. T. 785.

Loan of Shed.—The gratuitous loan of a shed for a particular purpose bears no analogy to a bailment of personal chattels, but is a mere licence to use the shed, revocable at any time. Williams v. Jones, 3 H. & C. 256; 10 Jur., N. S. 852; 11 L. T. 108; 12 W. R. 1007; affirmed on appeal, 3 H. & C. 602.

A. lent his shed to B. to make therein a sign-board, and D., a carpenter employed by B., lighted his pipe from a match with a shaving, which he dropped, and thereby set fire to the shavings on the ground, by which the shed was burned:—Held, that B. was not liable either as bailee or by relation of master and servant. Id.

And see NEGLIGENCE.

4. REMEDIES.

Who may Recover.—In a case of simple bailment of a chattel, without reward, it may be recovered in trover either by the bailor or bailee, if taken wrongfully out of the bailee's possession. Nichols v. Bastard, 2 C., M. & R. 659; 1 Tyr. & G. 156; 1 Gale, 295.

In an action by a bailee of a jewel for sale, against a sub-bailee for sale, for some injury done to it during the sub-bailment:—Held, that assuming there was no positive direction by the bailee to the sub-bailee not to part with it out of his possession, it would be for the jury to say (either on express evidence, or on their own knowledge) whether it would be according to the usage of trade for the sub-bailee thus to part with it temporarily to an expected purchaser, or whether it would be improper and negligent to do so, in which case the sub-bailee would be liable for the diminution in value. Von Minden v. Pyke, 4 F. & F. 533.

A bailee for hire of goods, who sells them by private sale to a bona fide purchaser, thereby determines the bailment, and the bailor may maintain trover for their recovery against the purchaser. Cooper v. Willomatt, 1 C. B. 672; 14 L. J., C. P. 219; 9 Jur. 598.

The owner of goods, let out by him in the ordinary course of trade, can recover in trover against a bona fide purchaser to whom the hirer has wrongfully sold them. Merner v. Bankes, 16 W. R. 62; 17 L. T. 147.

Where the bailee refuses to deliver on the ground of the title being in a third person. Bateel v. Hartley, 7 L. R., Q. B. 594; and cases supra, sub tit. "CONTRACT."

Owner against Third Person—Negligence.]—

An owner of a barge, which is out on hire for an unexpired term, may maintain an action against a third person for a permanent injury to it. Mears v. London and South-Western Railway Company, 11 C. B., N. S. 850; 31 L. J., C. P. 220; 6 L. T. 190.

Detinue—Demand before Action.]—An action of detinue does not lie against a bailee of goods until demand made by the bailor, after the determination of the bailment and before action brought. Cullen v. Barclay, 10 L. R., Ir. 224—C. A.

Operation of the Statute of Limitations.]—

When a bailee of goods for safe custody converts them, and subsequently refuses to deliver them up on demand to the bailor, who then first learns the conversion, the bailor may elect to sue for the detention, and against such action the Statute of Limitations runs only from the time of the demand. Wilkinson v. Verity, 6 L. R., C. P. 206; 40 L. J., C. P. 141; 24 L. T. 32; 19 W. R. 604.

An incumbent sold the communion plate belonging to the parish church which was intrusted to his charge. More than six years afterwards the churchwardens demanded it of him, and then first heard of its having been sold. They brought an action of detinue, and he pleaded the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the statute afforded no defence as it ran from the time of the demand and not of the conversion. Ib.

Where Deposit on Illegal Consideration.]—

The plaintiff deposited with the defendant the half of a 50l. bank note by way of pledge to secure the payment of money due from the plaintiff to the defendant. The debt was contracted for wine and suppers supplied to the plaintiff by the defendant in a brothel kept by her, to be there consumed in a debauch. The plaintiff having brought an action to recover the half-note:—Held, that the maxim, in pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis, applied; and that as the plaintiff could not recover without shewing the true character of the deposit, and that being on an illegal consideration to which he was himself a party, he was precluded from obtaining the assistance of the law to recover it back. Taylor v. Chester, 4 L. R., Q. B. 309; 21 L. T., 359; 38 L. J., Q. B. 225.

Larceny—Fraud by Bailee.]—See CRIMINAL LAW.

Pleading.]—In all cases of bailment, the duty of a bailee may be alleged in a declaration to be safely and securely to keep the goods entrusted to him. Ross v. Hill, 2 C. B. 877; 3 D. & L. 788; 15 L. J., C. P. 182; 10 Jur. 435.

I. BANK OF ENGLAND.

1. GENERALLY.

Exclusive Privileges of Banking—Infringing.]

—A company, consisting of a number of persons subscribing small sums, was formed for buying land, erecting dwellings thereon, and allotting the same to the subscribers. The allotment depended upon the result of a ballot. In connexion with this company there was established a bank for receiving the deposits of small capitalists and working men, upon the security of the property of the company: and as part of the same concern a bank in which the subscribers of the company might place their savings for purchasing their land from the company:—Held, that the scheme was illegal, as being contrary to the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 32. O'Connor v. Bradshaw, 5 Ex. 882; 20 L. J., Ex. 26.

Statute Regulating Powers of Banks with regard to Bills of Exchange.]—By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 32, s. 26, repealing 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 6, banks, though the partners exceed six in number, carrying on business in London, or within sixty-five miles of London, are enabled to draw, accept or indorse bills of exchange, not being payable to bearer on demand.

—Bank of England, how affected thereby.]

—The 4 Geo. 3, c. 25, giving protection to the Bank of England against competition, did not prevent merchants from issuing bills short of six months' date, though there were more than six partners in their firm, if really not bankers, and only done for the purpose of commerce. Wigan v. Fowler, 2 Chit. 228; 1 Stark. 459; S. P., Perring v. Dunston, R. & M. 426.

A co-partnership consisting of more than six persons, carrying on the business of bankers, within sixty-five miles of London, could not legally, in the course of such business, accept a bill of exchange, payable at less than six months from the time of giving such acceptance. Bank of England v. Anderson, 4 Scott, 50; 3 Bing. N. C. 589; 2 Hodges, 294; 1 Jur. 9; 2 Keen, 328.

A London bank (being a partnership in London consisting of more than six persons) agreed with a bank in Canada, that the manager of the London bank, but not a partner therein, should accept bills drawn by the Canadian bank, payable at a date earlier than six months; and that the London bank would provide funds for the due payment of such bills:—Held, that the acceptance of such bills, in execution of such agreement, was unlawful, regard being had to the acts in force respecting the Bank of England; and, secondly, would not have been lawful, even if the London bank, at the time of such acceptances, had in their hands funds of the Canadian bank equal to the amount of the bills; nor, thirdly, if without such funds in the hands of the London bank, the bills had been accepted by the manager on the credit of a contract by the Canadian bank to remit such funds to meet the acceptances; and, fourthly, that the Bank of England might maintain an action against the London bank founded on such transactions, as being an infringement of their privileges. Booth v. Bank of England, 2 Scott, N. R. 701; 6 Bing. N. C. 415; 7 C. & F. 509; 4 Jur. 762; affirming S. C., 2 Keen, 466; 2 Jur. 510.

A., being agent of, and also partner in the Leith Banking Company, opened an office at Carlisle, and circulated there promissory notes, drawn by the company's cashier in Scotland, and made payable to the bearer on demand at the company's office in Leith:—Held, that this was a violation of the statutes passed for the protection of the Bank of England, and that a debt formed of notes so issued could not be proved under a commission of bankruptcy. Hurdleson, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 86.

Branch of.]—A notice of an act of bankruptcy given to the Bank of England, in London, in time for communication to be made to the branch banks, is sufficient to bind the bank, in respect of transactions with the bankrupt, at any of the branch banks of that establishment. Willis v. Bank of England, 4 A. & E. 21; 5 N. & M. 478; 1 H. & W. 620.

The assignees of A., a bankrupt, are entitled to recover in trover against the Bank of England the amount of bank post-bills, converted into money by A. at a Bank of England branch bank after notice given at the Bank of England in London, in sufficient time to have communicated with the branch bank, that A. had committed an act of bankruptcy. Id.

But they cannot recover the amount of a bank post-bill paid to B., a bonâ fide holder for value, who had received it of A. after the commission of an act of bankruptcy, but without notice thereof. Id.

II. OTHER JOINT-STOCK BANKS AND BANKERS.

1. GENERALLY.

Irish Banks.]—The 33 Geo. 2, c. 14 (Ir.), does not relate exclusively to persons who carry on the business of banking in the way of banks of issue, but to all bankers whatever. Copland v. Davick, 5 L. R., H. L. 358; 21 W. R. 1.

That statute is unrepealed, except as to such specific matters contained in it as have been the subject of special legislation. Id.

A memorandum accompanying a deposit of deeds made as security for a debt, and made by a person carrying on the ordinary business of a banker, is within that statute, and ought to be registered in order to be valid as against creditors under a trust deed executed pursuant to the provisions of that act. Id.

A deposit of deeds as security for a debt, accompanied by a memorandum stating the purpose of such deposit, constitutes a conveyance under that statute, and might have been registered, and ought to have been registered, even though the stoppage of payment by the banker took place within one month after its date. Id.

A trust deed so executed will be valid for all purposes affecting the distribution of the estate among the creditors, though it should be followed by a general bankruptcy. Id.

The 10th section of that statute, which relates to the approval of a trust deed by the majority of the creditors, is merely directory. Id.

The 33 Geo. 2 c. 14 (Irish), is repealed so far as banking companies in Ireland are concerned, by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 42, though the former is not mentioned in the latter act, the provisions of the two statutes being entirely incompatible with each other. O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142. But see Davies v. Kennedy, infra.

When judgment has been obtained in Ireland against a public officer, a warrant of attorney under 6 Geo. 4, c. 42, s. 12, to confess a judgment in England for a less sum than that for which judgment was obtained in Ireland, is a nullity. Walker v. M'Dowell, 3 Jur., N. S. 1078.

The 33 Geo. 2, c. 14 (Irish), is not repealed by 6 Geo. 4, c. 42, contrary to the opinion of Lord St. Leonards, expressed in O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 185, but still regulates all banking transactions in Ireland. Per Walshe, M. R., in Davies v. Kennedy, 17 W. R. 305; 3 Ir. Eq. R. 31; and O'Hagan, C., 3 Ir. Eq. R. 668.

What are Banking Companies.—A company called "The District Savings Bank" was registered in 1858 under the Joint-Stock Companies Act of 1856, with limited liability, but was never registered under the acts of 1857 and 1858 relating to banking companies, and its shares were of 1*l.* each. Its objects were to receive deposits, to grant loans on security, and to conduct the business of emigration agents. Money could not be drawn out by cheques payable on demand, but could only be withdrawn after notice, and the company kept banking accounts with two banks in London:—Held, that it was not a banking company within the meaning of the acts relating to such companies. Coe, Ex parte, 3 De G., F. & J. 335; 31 L. J., Bk. 8; 10 W. R. 138.

Where a banking co-partnership had once begun to carry on the trade and business of bankers, and issued notes accordingly, but subsequently stopped payment, and merely kept the establishment open for the purpose of paying their notes and winding up the affairs of the concern:—Held, that they still continued to be a banking co-partnership, so as to be entitled to sue by their public officer. Davidson v. Cooper, 11 M. & W. 778.

Branches.—A banking company was established in 1836 by a deed, which provided that the business of the company should be carried on at D., and such other places as might afterwards be chosen with the consent of all the directors. In 1839 a branch bank was established at C., which continued until 1843, when an action was brought against one of the shareholders, who executed the deed of 1836, to recover a sum of money deposited at it:—Held, that it might be presumed, either that the branch bank had been established in compliance with the provisions of the deed, or that the shareholder knew of, and was a consenting party to, carrying on business at it. Crellin v. Culcort, 14 M. & W. 11; 14 L. J., Ex. 375; 9 Jur. 810.

Appropriation of Name.—In an action against a banking corporation a declaration stated that the plaintiff had established a bank, called the Bank of London, and caused the name to be published and affixed to the offices of the bank, and prospectuses to be issued, and that the defendant afterwards fraudulently established another bank under the style of "The Bank of London," in imitation of the Bank of London of the plaintiff, by reason of which he was prevented from carrying on his business at his bank so fully as he otherwise would, and was deprived of gains and profits:—Held, that the declaration was bad, for not shewing that the plaintiff carried on the business of a banker. Lawson v. Bank of London, 18 C. B. 84; 25 L. J., C. P. 188; 2 Jur., N. S. 18. See 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, s. 20. See also TRADE-MARK.

Injunction.—A banking company established in 1878, having offices in Bloomsbury, and intended to deal chiefly with tradesmen in that district, was registered with a name similar to that of a banking company established in 1863, having offices in the city, and dealing principally with wholesale merchants:—Held, that since there was no mala fides on the part of the new company in adopting the name they had taken, the old company was not entitled to an injunction restraining them from using it, and that since the name of the new company had been duly registered, s. 20 of the Companies Act, 1862, had no application to the case. Merchant Banking Company of London v. Merchants' Joint Stock Bank, 9 Ch. D. 560; 47 L. J., Ch. 828; 26 W. R. 847. See also TRADE.

2. POWER AND AUTHORITY OF DIRECTORS.

Amalgamation of Banking Companies.—Two incorporated banking companies, the Bank of Hindustan and the Imperial Bank of China (under powers contained in their articles of association), agreed to amalgamate, the business of the latter company being transferred to the former, and the shareholders in the Imperial Bank of China having the option of taking newly-created shares in the Bank of Hindustan at a premium, part of which was to be paid out of the funds of the Imperial Bank. The directors of the Bank of Hindustan, without pursuing the course pointed out by the Companies Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89), ss. 12, 50, 51, but by a simple resolution passed at one meeting, and confirmed at a subsequent meeting, resolved to create and issue 20,000 new shares of 100*l.* each, for the purpose of carrying out the proposed amalgamation; their power to increase their capital under the articles of association having already been exhausted. They afterwards issued circulars informing the shareholders in the Imperial Bank of the arrangement which had been made, and intimating to them that they had an option to take such new shares on the terms specified. A shareholder in the Imperial Bank, in consequence, in 1864, applied for and obtained an allotment of shares, paid a portion of the deposit and premium thereon, and by his letter of application engaged to pay the residue on a given day. Calls were afterwards made, of which he had notice; but he never repudiated his liability until an action was brought against him in 1867 for non-payment of those calls. In 1868, the supposed amalgamation of the two banks was, by a decree in Chancery, in a suit by dissident shareholders in the Imperial Bank, declared void:—Held, that the directors of the Bank of Hindustan had no power to issue the new shares, and that the shareholder was not by any acquiescence or conduct on his part estopped from denying that he was a shareholder in the Bank of Hindustan. Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan v. Alison, 6 L. R., C. P. 54; 40 L. J., C. P. 1; 23 L. T. 616; affirmed on appeal, 6 L. R., C. P. 222; 40 L. J., C. P. 117; 23 L. T. 854; 19 W. R. 505—Ex. Ch.

To Borrow Money.—By a deed of settlement, a banking company, called The Bank of Australia, was established as a bank of issue and deposit in New South Wales. The deed contained clauses conferring powers upon the directors for the better management of the concerns of the company; whereby it was declared that they shall have and be expressly invested with full power and authority to superintend, order, conduct, regulate and manage all and singular the affairs and business of the company, to the best of their discretion and judgment, under and subject to the provisions thereafter contained. Such board of directors was empowered to devise and make such provisions, rules, orders and regulations, touching the government, carrying on, and management of the affairs of the company, the same not being repugnant to the general rules and regulations therein contained, as they should think expedient. In 1843, the Bank of Australia became involved in pecuniary difficulties, whereupon the directors applied to the Bank of Australasia for a loan, and borrowed from that bank at various times 154,000*l.*, for which the directors gave their promissory note. Upon the negotiation of this loan, the directors of the Bank of Australia entered into an agreement with the Bank of Australasia, whereby they stipulated that the Bank of Australia should cease to be a bank of issue, deposit and discount, and should become a loan company, and that no transfer of shares or stock should be made without the consent of the Bank of Australasia; they also agreed to wind-up and get in their capital as a loan company. Payment of the note was refused by the shareholders of the Bank of Australia, on the ground that the stipulations contained in the agreement were ultra vires the directors. In an action by the Bank of Australasia on the note, against the Bank of Australia:—Held, first, that the directors of the Bank of Australia had the power of managing partners in an ordinary banking partnership, and that amongst these was the power of borrowing money for the purpose of discharging the existing liabilities of the bank till the assets should be realised, and of discontinuing the bank if they thought such conduct essential to the interests of the shareholders. Bank of Australasia v. Breillat, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 152; 12 Jur. 189.

Held, secondly, that the circumstances of the engagements of the directors to repay the loan being accompanied by other stipulations, some of which were ultra vires, did not discharge the bank from liability to repay the loan, as the only effect of those stipulations was, that they could not be enforced. Id.

By a deed of settlement of a company, the directors were authorized to borrow, under the seal of the company, such sums as should from time to time, by a resolution passed at a general meeting of the company, be authorized to be borrowed, not to exceed a certain sum. At a general meeting the directors were authorized to borrow such sums, and at such interest, and for such periods as they might deem expedient, in accordance with the provisions of the deed of settlement. The directors having borrowed 1,000*l.* on bond under the seal of the company:—Held, that the company was liable to repay the amount, whether the resolution was or was not a sufficient authority to the directors to borrow; for though parties dealing with a joint stock company are bound to take notice of any limitation of the authority of the directors in the deed of settlement, yet where the directors have power to borrow, the lenders of the money have a right to presume that the company which put forward their directors as authorized to borrow, has taken every step requisite to empower them to do so. Royal British Bank v. Turquand, 6 El. & Bl. 327; 25 L. J., Q. B. 317; 2 Jur., N. S. 663. Judgment of Q. B. affirmed, 5 El. & Bl. 240—Ex. Ch.

An action was brought on promissory notes; they were at five years' date; attached to each were coupons for half-yearly interest at the rate of five per cent. till the principal would become due. They were issued through a broker employed by bank directors, and the plaintiff paid him the full value. In the advice notes from the broker to the plaintiff the transaction was called a sale of debentures. The money thus raised was employed as capital in starting branches of the bank abroad:—Held, that though the transaction was called a "sale of debentures," yet it appeared to be in substance a loan on the security of the notes; and that assuming that the directors had authority to borrow it for the company, the plaintiff might recover against the shareholders for money lent. Maelac v. Sutherland, 3 El. & Bl. 1; 2 C. L. R. 1320; 23 L. J., Q. B. 229; 18 Jur. 942.

Held, also, that the transaction appeared to be so much out of the ordinary course of banking transactions, that the plaintiff could not recover merely on the implied authority given to the managers of a company to do all that was in the ordinary course of the business for which the company was formed. Id.

The deed of the company authorized the establishment of branches in all places east of the Cape of Good Hope, and gave full powers to the directors to manage the whole concern; it provided that for the first four years there should be no general meetings. The money raised on the notes was employed in establishing branches; during the first four years dividends were paid by the directors, and afterwards, at three successive general annual meetings, dividends were voted on the supposition that they were derived from the profits of these branches and received by the shareholders:—Held, that the deed authorized the directors to issue notes and borrow money as they had done for the purpose of starting the branches. Id.

Held, also, that supposing it had not, the shareholders must be taken to have ratified the means by which the directors had raised the capital for establishing the branches from which the dividends were derived. Id.

Deeds of Settlement of Companies—Loans and Advances.—A banking company incorporated by charter, which contained a clause declaring that it should not be lawful for the company to advance money on the security of merchandise, advanced money on the faith of receiving as security a preferential lien on the wool of an ensuing clip to be shorn from the sheep of the party in whose favour the advances were made, but who was not in the actual possession of the sheep, though a part owner of the sheep and the agent of the other owners for whose benefit the advances had been made:—Held, in an action of trover by the company on such agreement giving them a preferable lien, that it was maintainable, and that the banking company was entitled to recover for the value of the wool on such preferential lien. Ayers v. South Australian Banking Company, 3 L. R., P. C. 548; 40 L. J., P. C. 22; 19 W. R. 860; 7 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 432.

Authority to use Trustees' Names in Legal Proceedings.—The deed of settlement of a banking company contained a proviso that, where property was vested in trustees, the court of directors should have power to direct any actions or suits to be commenced, prosecuted, or defended, on account of the property of the bank, and to direct the necessary parties to such actions or suits to carry them on or defend them, and that such parties should be indemnified out of the funds of the bank. Property was vested in a person, who as one of the trustees of the bank, and who had executed the deed, was made a co-defendant, with two other trustees, in a suit by persons claiming the property adversely to the bank. The solicitors of the bank entered an appearance for him without his knowledge:—Held, that the provision in the deed of settlement operated as an authority to the bank to use the names of their trustees in any action or suit, and that the solicitor of the bank was entitled to enter an appearance for him, and conduct the defence for him. Heinrich v. Sutton, 6 L. R., Ch. 220; 24 L. T. 530.

To bind Shareholders.—Directors of an unincorporated and unregistered banking company called the Royal Bank of Australia issued promissory notes in this form:—"The Royal Bank ——. We, the directors of the Royal Bank of Australia, for ourselves and the other shareholders of the company jointly and severally, promise to pay to A., or order, for value received on account of the company. (Signed) A. chairman, B. and C. directors, — of Australia:—"Held, assuming that the parties signing were authorized to sign promissory notes on account of the partnership, that this form of note showed sufficiently an intention to bind the company jointly, and that though the attempt to bind the shareholders severally was ultra vires and void, yet the shareholders were bound jointly. MacLac v. Sutherland, 3 El. & Bl. 1; 2 C. L. R. 1320; 23 L. J., Q. B. 229; 18 Jur. 942.

Directors of a bank issued instruments in the following form: "Union Bank Post Bill, Calcutta. At sixty days after sight of this our first bill of exchange (second and third of the same tenor and date not paid), we promise to pay, on account of the proprietors of the Union Bank of Calcutta, to the order of C. L. & Co., the sum of Company's rupees 10,000, value received. Signed J. R., W. G., directors." By the deed of settlement, the business of the company was to consist in issuing promissory notes, payable to bearer on demand for any sum not less than eight Company's rupees, and not exceeding 1,000, and bills of exchange payable at such time after date or sight as the directors should fix, to parties who should require the same and deposit the amount of such bills in the bank and in all other branches of business usually transacted by bankers at Calcutta. It was provided, that no promissory notes or bills of exchange should be issued otherwise than of the description and in the manner mentioned. In an action by an indorsee of one of these instruments against a shareholder in the bank:—Held, first, that the directors had power to bind the shareholders by issuing instruments of that description. Forbes v. Marshall, 11 Ex. 166; 24 L. J., Ex. 305.

Held, secondly, that they were in a form which bound the shareholders. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that they were substantially made in the name of the partnership firm. Ib.

A banking company, established under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 96, is a quasi corporate body, so as not to be affected by what may be known to each individual shareholder. Poules v. Page, 3 C. B. 16; 15 L. J., C. P. 217; 10 Jur. 526.

When, therefore, D., one of the partners of a firm which was a customer of such banking company, was also one of the directors of the company, but his being director gave him no management of the banking accounts, which were conducted by the manager with the concurrence of three managing directors, of whom D. was not one, and the firm dissolved partnership: D.'s knowledge of such dissolution does not operate as a notice to the company. Ib.

Knowledge of a particular fact relating to the accounts, by one director of a banking company, is not notice to the company, where that director had no voice in the management of the accounts, and the money transactions of the company were conducted exclusively by a manager under three directors, of whom the director possessing the knowledge was not one. Carew, In re, 31 Beav. 39.

When a director is about to commit a fraud, it is to be presumed that he will not disclose the circumstances to his colleagues. Ib.

A. fraudulently obtained possession of acceptances from C., and he got them discounted and carried to his account by a banking company, to which he was largely indebted, and of which he was a director and local manager:—Held, under the circumstances, that the bank had notice, and could not be considered bonâ fide owners. Ib.

Directors guaranteeing Debentures of another Company.—The directors of a joint stock bank, the deed of settlement of which gave them extensive powers to carry on the business of bankers, and to act in such manner as might appear to them best calculated to promote the interest of the bank, have, when the formation of another company is of importance to the bank, power to guarantee the payment of interest on debentures of that company issued for the purpose of forming it. West of England Bank, In re, Booker, Ex parte, 14 Ch. D. 317; 49 L. J., Ch. 400; 42 L. T. 619; 28 W. R. 809.

In relation to the Salaries of Bank Servants.]

—The deed of settlement of a banking company contained clauses empowering the directors to pay and allow to the servants of the company such remuneration, salaries and wages as the court of directors should think proper, and to confirm any contract and all acts done by persons acting as directors in relation to the formation and establishment of the company. The provisional directors entered into a contract with a manager to pay him a salary, and if the bank should discontinue business before the term agreed upon to pay him 1,000*l.* a year for three years, such contract to be confirmed by the proprietary, or a board duly authorized:—Held, that the directors alone had power to confirm that contract by deed. Wilkins v. Roebuck, 4 Drew. 281.

- Provision in Deed of Settlement to dissolve on Contingency—Happening of Contingency—Continuing Bank.]—The deed of settlement of a banking company provided, that when one-fourth of the capital was lost, the directors should call a meeting, and the company should be dissolved. Considerably more than one-fourth of the capital was lost, and a meeting was called, at which the shareholders resolved to continue the bank. Further losses were made, but no such meeting was called again:—Held, that as the shareholders knew that the bank was going on after more than one-fourth of the capital was lost, the directors were not liable for continuing the bank. Turquand v. Marshall, 4 L. R., Ch. 376; 38 L. J., Ch. 639.

The directors of a banking company are not liable to the company for including in their accounts as good, debts which were, in fact, bad, unless they can be fixed with knowledge of the fact. Ib.

To lend Money—Ultra vires.—A banking company permitted its customers, a railway company, to draw cheques against a sum entered in the books of the bank under the title "Loan Account." The company being insolvent, the claim of the bank was disputed as being an unauthorized loan:—Held, that though the transactions between the banking company and the railway company were recorded in the bank books under the title of "Loan Account," yet they were not the less mere overdrawings in the regular course of a banking business, and that there was no borrowing or loan in the proper sense of the word, which could be questioned as ultra vires. Waterlow v. Sharp, 8 L. R., Eq. 501.

A banking company I., the articles of which in general terms gave the directors very ample powers of management, advanced money on the deposit of shares in Company A. The directors becoming alarmed by a judicial opinion that the shares remained within the order and disposition of the depositors, passed a resolution to have the shares transferred into the name of Company I. or its manager. They were accordingly transferred into the name of Company I., the transfers being executed on behalf of Company I. by an agent, not under the common seal. The company was registered as shareholder, sold some of the shares and received the purchase-money, and received the dividends on the rest. Company A. was afterwards ordered to be wound up:—Held, that although the acts of ownership exercised by Company I. over the shares would not have prevented its repudiating them if the transaction had been ultra vires, Company I. was rightly placed on the list of contributories; for that, although buying the shares of another company as a speculation would have been ultra vires, it was within the powers of the company, as bankers, to advance money on the deposit of shares, and to do all such acts as were reasonable and proper for making the security available. Asiatic Banking Company, In re, Royal Bank of India, Ex parte, 4 L. R., Ch. 252.

3. LIABILITIES.

Under Companies Act.]—The Court of Chancery has no jurisdiction under the Companies Act, 1862, s. 100, to order moneys of the company to be repaid by the bankers of the company, unless the moneys can be clearly proved to have been paid directly out of the funds of the company. Imperial Land Company of Marseilles, In re, National Bank, In re, 10 L. R., Eq. 298; 39 L. J., Ch. 331; 22 L. T. 598; 18 W. R. 661.

The bankers of a company are not officers of the company within s. 165, and the court has no jurisdiction therefore on a summary application to order them to repay moneys improperly retained. Ib.

For Honouring Cheques of Company.]—All persons dealing with a company are bound to take notice of its external position, as evidenced by its articles of association and partnership deed; but they are not bound to inquire into its internal management, provided that their transactions with it are such as might legally take place and be consummated under the articles of association. Mahony v. East Holyford Mining Company, 7 L. R., H. L. 869; 33 L. T. 383; 9 Ir. R., C. L. 306—H. L.

The articles of association of a company contained provisions as to the appointment of directors, and the drawing of cheques; they also contained a clause validating the acts of the directors notwithstanding any defect in their appointment. Certain persons assumed the office of directors without having been properly appointed, and communicated to the bankers of the company an alleged resolution, in accordance with the articles, as to the form in which cheques were to be drawn. The bank acted upon this communication, and honoured cheques drawn in the manner described. In an action by the official liquidator of the company to recover the amount paid upon these cheques:—Held, that, even without the validating clause, as the bank had dealt bona fide, in a manner authorized by the articles of association, with persons who were the de facto directors of the company, suffered by the shareholders to occupy that position, they were not liable to refund the money so paid. Ib.

For Profits on sale of Shares.]—Some of the directors of a banking company, whose duty it was, as directors, to watch over and regulate the completion of a contract entered into by S. to take up a large number of new shares in the bank, at his request, and before he had paid for and become the owner of the shares, entered into personal contracts with him to take some of the shares off his hands. They did so, and realized profits by the sale of the shares, and also by the sale of bonus shares issued in respect of the shares so taken by them from S.:—Held, that they must account for all such profits to the bank. Parker v. McKenna, 10 L. R., Ch. 96; 44 L. J., Ch. 425; 31 L. T. 739; 23 W. R. 271.

For Fraud of Agent.]—An action for deceit will lie against a banking corporation for a fraud committed by its agent, provided the fraudulent act was within the scope of the agent's authority, and the corporation has derived benefit from it. Mackay v. Commercial Bank of New Brunswick, 5 L. R., P. C. 394; 43 L. J., P. C. 31; 30 L. T. 180; 22 W. R. 473.

The cashier of a bank, who discharged the duties of manager, by sending a fraudulent answer to a telegram, induced a party to accept certain bills drawn upon them by L., and indorsed to the bank :—Held, first, that it was within the scope of the cashier's authority to send such a telegram. Ib.

Held, secondly, that the bank, having obtained the benefit of the bills, was liable in an action for the false representations. Ib.

Representation of Manager.—The plaintiffs purchased from the New Orleans Bank a bill of exchange drawn on the Bank of Liverpool. The manager of the New Orleans Bank, at the time, told the plaintiffs that there was, or would be at the maturity of the bill, a balance at the Bank of Liverpool more than sufficient to meet the bill, and that there was no doubt it would be paid. The course of dealing between the New Orleans Bank and the Liverpool Bank was that the former drew bills on the latter, and employed them also to collect the moneys receivable on bills remitted to them, the agreement being that the Liverpool Bank was never to be under cash advances, and the funds remitted had always been sufficient to meet its acceptances. Soon after the purchase, the New Orleans Bank suspended payment, and the Liverpool Bank refused to accept the bill. The funds in the hands of the Liverpool Bank were abundantly sufficient to meet all their acceptances for the New Orleans Bank, and also to pay this bill :—Held, that the statements of the manager were merely a correct statement of the course of business between the two banks, and did not give the purchaser of the bill any lien on the funds in the hands of the Liverpool Bank. Thomson v. Simpson, 5 L. R., Ch. 659; 39 L. J., Ch. 857; 18 W. R. 1090.

The plaintiff supplied oats to D., a customer of a bank, for the purpose of enabling him to perform a contract with the government for the supply of oats, on the faith of a guarantee given by the manager that, on receipt of the money to be paid by the commissariat department to the bank for D. for the price of the oats supplied to the government by D., the bank would pay the plaintiff out of that money the sum due to him, subject only to the debt due to the bank from D. D. was, at the time, so largely indebted to the bank, that it was practically impossible that there should be any surplus to come to the plaintiff, after payment of the debt due to the bank; but the manager concealed this from the plaintiff. The bank having appropriated the whole of the money to the payment of their own debt :—Held, that on proof of these facts, there was evidence to go to the jury of a false representation on the part of the manager of the bank; that the bank was answerable for such false representation; and that the false representation was properly described in the declaration as that of the bank. Barwick v. English Joint Stock Bank, 2 L. R., Ex. 259; 36 L. J., Ex. 147; 16 L. T. 461; 15 W. R. 877.—Ex. Ch.

For Statements as to Solvency of Customers or Others.—In an action against the County of Gloucester Bank and K., the manager of one of their branches, for a false representation as to the solvency of an individual, the statement of claim alleged as follows :—That the plaintiffs, through their bankers, Stuckey's Banking Company, caused the following letter to be written and sent to the County of Gloucester Bank : "Private.—Somersetshire Bank, Bristol, Oct., 1875.—We shall feel obliged by your favouring us with your confidential opinion as to the general character and responsibility in the way of business of J. F. to the extent of 1,000*l.* to 2,000*l.*" That in answer to the letter the County of Gloucester Bank, intending thereby to deceive the plaintiffs and induce them to give credit to J. F., caused a letter of reply to be sent to Stuckey's Banking Company, which was written and signed by K. upon paper belonging to the County of Gloucester Bank, and supplied by them to K. for the express purpose of answering such inquiries, and was in the words following : "County of Gloucester Bank, Stroud, 6th Oct., 1875.—Confidential.—For your private use and without responsibility on the part of this bank or the manager.—Stuckey's Banking Company, Bristol.—Gentlemen,—The person you inquire about is respectable and doing a good business, but we consider his means are not sufficient for his requirements in trade. The amount you state (2,000*l.*) seems rather large for a single transaction.—We are, &c., C. W. Kingdom, manager." The words, "County of Gloucester Bank, Stroud, 1875.—Confidential.—For your private use and without responsibility," &c., were printed upon the paper by the instructions of the County of Gloucester Bank before it was supplied to K. That at the time the reply was written and sent by the defendants, J. F., to their knowledge, was insolvent, and owed more than 1,000*l.* beyond his assets, and was largely indebted to the County of Gloucester Bank, and the defendants were interested in inducing corn merchants to give him credit. That, in consequence of the reply, the plaintiffs were induced to sell and deliver goods to the value of 818*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* to J. F., on credit, in February, 1876, in which month he filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs, and the plaintiffs lost the whole of the 818*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* :—Held, that judgment must be given for the defendants, first, on the ground that Bull, as the public officer of the County of Gloucester Bank, was not liable for the misrepresentation of his co-defendant K., the manager; and, secondly, on the ground that the letter in question was expressed on its face to be a confidential communication intended for the private information of the Somersetshire Bank only, and that it was not known to the defendants, at the time the letter was written, that the information was asked for on behalf of the plaintiffs, or that it would be communicated to them. Hosegood v. Bull and Kingdom, 36 L. T. 617.

At the request of a customer the manager of the Sheffield Bank wrote to the manager of the Cheltenham Branch of the Gloucestershire Banking Company, "I shall be much obliged by the favour of your opinion, in confidence, of the respectability and standing of R., and whether you consider him responsible to the extent of 50,000*l.*" Goddard, who was the manager of the Cheltenham branch, wrote in answer, "I am in receipt of your favour of the 8th instant, and beg to say in reply that R. is the lord of the manor of Charlton Kings, near this town, with a rent-roll, I am told, of over 7,000*l.* per annum, the receipt of which is in his own hands, and has large expectancies, and I do not believe he would incur the liability you name unless he was certain to meet the engagement." Signed, J. B. Goddard, Manager. The representation contained in the last-mentioned letter was false to the knowledge of Goddard, who, in writing it, acted within the scope of his authority as manager to answer such inquiries, but without making any communication to the directors or other officers of the company:—Held, that the bank was not liable in respect of the misrepresentation, inasmuch as under 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 6, it is necessary that the representation as to credit, &c., should "be made in writing signed by the party to be charged therewith;" and inasmuch as there was no signature by the bank, but that Goddard was personally liable. Swift v. Jewsbury, 9 L. R., Q. B. 301; 43 L. J., Q. B. 56; 30 L. T. 31; 22 W. R. 319—Ex. Ch. Overruling on this point the decision of the court below, 8 L. R., Q. B. 244; 42 L. J., Q. B. 111; 28 L. T. 338; 21 W. R. 562, sub nom. Swift v. Winterbotham.

For acts of Manager.—Two directors of a company wrote a letter to a bank, stating that they, as directors, had appointed C. to be legal manager, and had authorized him to draw cheques upon the account of the company. The directors were not empowered to give C. this authority. On the faith of the letter, advances were made by the bank on cheques drawn by C., purporting to bind the company. There was no imputation of fraud in the transaction. In an action by the bank against the directors to recover the amount so paid on C.'s cheques:—Held, that the law implied a warranty to the bank on the part of the directors, that C. had authority to bind the company, so as to make them responsible to the bank for the advances on the cheques. Cherry v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 38 L. J., P. C. 49; 21 L. T. 356; 17 W. R. 1031.

An agent, but without the knowledge or authority of his principal, and the general manager of a bank without the knowledge or authority of the bank directors, concerted for their own purposes the following scheme, which the court held to be entirely void for fraud, and not binding on the principal. Two accounts were opened with the bank in the respective names of the agent and of the principal. The agent, on behalf of his principal, requested the bank to honour the agent's cheques, and guaranteed repayment, all moneys standing to the credit of the principal to be charged with such repayment. The agent paid to his principal's account 1,500*l.*, belonging to the principal, and drew on his own account for a like sum, which he spent in promoting the scheme. He drew other cheques on his own account, and paid the proceeds to his principal's account as moneys belonging to the principal. Thus in the bank books the agent's account stood with a large debit, and the principal's account stood with an equal credit charged with the guarantee. The principal having brought an action against the bank to recover the whole amount standing to his credit:—Held, that he could recover 1,500*l.*, his own money; but not the residue, which never had been his money. British and American Telegraph Company v. Albion Bank, 7 L. R., Ex. 119; 41 L. J., Ex. 67; 26 L. T. 257; 20 W. R. 413.

Guardians of the poor appointed the defendant, who was the manager of a bank, to be their treasurer. He received no remuneration from them nor profit from the sums deposited in his hands, those sums being dealt with by the bank as other funds deposited by customers. The clerk to the guardians allowed L., a clerk in his employ, to draw up orders on treasurer for payment of money. These orders were paid across the bank counter, as cheques usually are. L. drew up orders in such a manner as to enable himself to increase the amount after they had been duly signed by the guardians and countersigned by the defendant, and he did increase them accordingly by various sums, in most instances by 10*l.*, the syllable "teen" being added after the written word four, six, eight or nine, and a 1 being inserted before the figure 4, 6, 7, 8 or 9, in spaces left by L. for the purpose. The orders thus fraudulently increased were presented at the bank and paid in the ordinary way, and the payment of the excess was due solely to the fact that the defendant's clerks were misled by want of proper caution on the part of the guardians and their clerk in signing the orders. In some cases L. forged the indorsement of payees; in others he both increased the amounts and forged the indorsements. The guardians sued their clerk for negligence in his duty, but settled the action on his consenting to a judge's order to stay proceedings on payment of a certain sum. They then brought a similar action against the defendant:—Held, that the clerk and the treasurer were not joint tortfeasors so as to make the compromise of the action against the one a bar to the action against the other, but, nevertheless, that the plaintiffs were disentitled, by the negligence of themselves and their clerk, to recover against the defendant. Halifax Union (Guardians) v. Wheelwright, 10 L. R., Ex. 183; 44 L. J., Ex. 121; 32 L. T. 802; 23 W. R. 704.

Held, also, that although the treasurer was not within the protection afforded to a banker by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 59, yet the account of the guardians must be deemed to have been kept with the bank itself, and the act operated to discharge the bank, and consequently the defendant, its servant, from liability in respect of the payment of the orders of which the indorsements were forged. Ib.

A. kept a deposit account at a banking company. The manager of the bank represented to him that the bank had an equitable mortgage on some houses of a third person, subject to a mortgage of 400*l.*, and advised him to purchase the houses for 595*l.*, 400*l.* to be paid in discharge of the mortgage, and 195*l.* to the bank. A. consented, and took his deposit receipts to the manager at the bank, who, on presenting them to a clerk, obtained from him 595*l.* The manager then gave A. a receipt in his own name, stating that 195*l.* was the balance of purchase-money of the houses, and that 400*l.* was deposited with him to pay off the mortgage. He afterwards absconded with the 595*l.* A. having brought an action against the bank to recover the money, the jury found that the manager intended to make A. believe, and A. did believe, that the manager was acting in the transaction as agent for the bank:—Held, that the bank was responsible for the money. Thompson v. Bell, 10 Ex. 10; 2 C. L. R. 1212; 23 L. J., Ex. 321.

A manager of a bank obtained the signature of A. to a cheque, purporting to be drawn upon the bank by A., under the pretence that it was a receipt (A. being unable to read it), and then paid him a private debt of his own with the bank's money. The transaction was entered in the books of the bank as a loan from the bank to A., upon his cheque:—Held, that the banker was not entitled to maintain an action against A. to recover back the money, the cheque having been obtained by the fraud of his agent. Forster v. Green, 7 H. & N. 881 ; 6 L. T. 390.

C. entered into the service of bankers, as their clerk, at B., and gave a bond, with sureties, for the faithful discharge of his duties, and they covenanted to make good all losses which might accrue to the bankers through the negligence of C. D., a customer of the bank, lived twelve miles from B., and requested the bankers to send over a person to receive his rents. C. was accordingly sent over, received the cash from D., and lost it on his way home. In an action against the sureties for the amount of money lost by C., the jury found that it was not the custom for bankers at B. to send over and receive money from their customers in the country :—Held, that the money was received by C. in the course of his employment as bankers' clerk, and that the receipt of the money by C. was a receipt by the bankers. Melville v. Doidge, 6 C. B. 450 ; 18 L. J., C. P. 7 ; 12 Jur. 922.

4. MANAGER AND CLERKS.

Manager—Action against—Evidence—Questions as to Duties.—Where, in an action against an acceptor of a bill of exchange, purporting to be accepted "per proc. the Tipperary joint-stock bank, W. K. manager," upon an issue raised upon a traverse of the acceptance, W. K., being called as a witness, was asked, on the part of the plaintiff, whether it was part of his business, as manager, to accept bills of exchange for the bank, which was objected to by the defendant :—Held, that the question was admissible. Ere v. McDowell, 14 Ir. C. L. R. 314.

An entry, contained in a book belonging to the bank, purporting to be a copy of a circular informing the customers of the bank that W. K. had been appointed manager, and had been empowered to sign all documents and indorse all bills on account of the bank, was admitted at the time as secondary evidence on the part of the plaintiff, of the issuing of the original circular :—Held, that in the absence of evidence of the sending of the original to the customers of the bank, the evidence was inadmissible. Ib.

The defendant's counsel proposed to ask the manager of another bank whether the bill of exchange sued on was one which, in the ordinary course of business, a bank, according to banking usages, would accept for an inland customer :—Held, that the question was proper. Ib.

He also proposed to ask the witness whether a bill, accepted in the same way as the above, would, according to the course of trade and bankers, put a party upon enquiry as to the authority of an acceptance :—Held, that the question was proper. Ib.

He also proposed to ask the witness whether authority to indorse was authority to accept :—Held, that the question was inadmissible. Ib.

The judge having told the jury that if they believed that W. K., as manager of the bank, signed the bill by direction of J. S., and that J. S. was a director at the time, the acceptance was binding on the bank :—Held, having regard to the fact that the bill was accepted per procuration, and that the deed of partnership required three directors to form a court, and empowered the court of directors to make regulations respecting the accepting of bills, that the direction was wrong. Ib.

—Action against, by Bank.—A declaration in an action against the manager of a banking company, after alleging the nature of his duties as manager, stated that he did not nor would take due and proper care not to advance the money of the company to persons of doubtful, insufficient, or bad means or credit, or on doubtful, insufficient, or bad securities, or to discount bad or forged bills and notes ; and negligently and improperly advanced the money of the company to persons of doubtful, insufficient and bad means and credit, and on doubtful, insufficient and bad securities, and discounted and renewed bad and forged bills and notes, and wholly neglected to take due and proper care, or to use or employ proper skill and diligence in and about the management of the affairs of the bank, and the discharge of his duties of manager. Plea, that the deed of settlement of the company contained a clause, which provided that none of the directors, trustees or other officers should be answerable or accountable for the insufficiency or deficiency of any security or fund in or upon which the moneys of the company might be placed out or invested, or for any loss, damage or misfortune which might happen to the moneys, funds, effects or property of the company, unless the same should happen in consequence of the wilful neglect or default respectively of such director, trustee or other officer of the company ; that he was manager and an officer of the company within the meaning of the deed of settlement, and was employed as such upon the terms of the clause ; and that the breaches to which the plea was pleaded did not happen by reason or in consequence of his wilful neglect or default as manager :—Held, that the plea was a good answer as to so much of the breach to which it was pleaded. Ward v. Greenland, 19 C. B., N. S. 527.

When in an action by a banking company against their late manager and cashier to recover moneys belonging to the bank, alleged to have been improperly applied in discounting bills for his own advantage, for the benefit of parties and companies with whom he was connected, and in which he was interested, it appeared that such transactions were all in the ordinary course of the business of the bank ; that he had not exceeded the power and authority with which he was entrusted ; and that no case of bad faith could be proved against him :—Held, that no such action could be sustained. Bank of Upper Canada v. Bradshaw, 4 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 406 ; 1 L. R., P. C. 479.

—Liability of Banker for acts of.]—See preceding sub-heading.

—Authority of, to Prosecute on behalf of Bank.]—In an action for a malicious prosecution against an incorporated banking company the jury found that the same had been authorized on behalf of the bank by W., the acting manager, and were directed by the judge that it was to be inferred from W.'s position as manager that he had sufficient power under the circumstances for directing a prosecution. A rule nisi to enter a nonsuit or for new trial was discharged :—Held, on appeal, that, assuming the prosecution to have been authorized by W., the direction to the jury to the effect that it was to be inferred from W.'s position that he had authority to direct the prosecution was on the evidence incorrect. Bank of New South Wales v. Owenston,
U 2

4 App. Cas. 270; 48 L. J., P. C. 25; 40 L. T. 500—P. C.

The arrest, and still less the prosecution of offenders, is not within the ordinary routine of banking business, and therefore not within the ordinary scope of a bank manager's authority. Evidence accordingly is required to shew that such arrest or prosecution is within the scope of the duties and class of acts such manager is authorised to perform. That authority may be general, or it may be special and derived from the exigency of the particular occasion on which it is exercised. In the former case it is enough to shew commonly that the agent was acting in what he did on behalf of the principal; but in the latter case evidence must be given of a state of facts which shews that such exigency is present, or from which it might reasonably be supposed to be present. Rule made absolute for a new trial. Ib.

Cashiers.—A cashier has a general authority to part with his employer's money in payment of such cheques as he may think genuine. Reg. v. Prince, 11 Cox, C. C. 193; 1 L. R., C. C. 150; 38 L. J., M. C. 8; 19 L. T. 364; 17 W. R. 179.

Where, therefore, money has been obtained from a cashier at a bank on a forged cheque knowingly, it does not amount to larceny, but to obtaining the money by false pretences. Ib.

Clerks.—Any one employed in a bank under the principals to carry on the business of the bank, whether called secretary, manager, accountant, cashier, or by any other name, is a clerk, and if at the head of his department, is a chief clerk within 9 Geo. 4, c. 23, for verifying country bank issues of bills and notes. Reg. v. Greenland, 10 Cox, C. C. 377; 1 L. R., C. C. 65; 36 L. J., M. C. 37; 15 L. T. 589; 15 W. R. 460.

5. STAMP OFFICE RETURNS.

As Evidence—When admissible.—Under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 5, which requires that copies of the annual accounts of banking companies shall be verified by the oath of the public officer, taken before any justice of the peace, and in Schedule (A.) contains a form of such affidavit, ending, "Sworn before me, justice of the peace in and for the said county."—Held, that a return, which appeared on the face of it to be verified "before J. L." without adding that he was a justice of the peace, was receivable, it being shewn that J. L. was in fact a justice. Bosanquet v. Woodford, D. & M. 419; 5 Q. B. 310; 13 L. J., Q. B. 93; 8 Jur. 242.

The act requires that such return shall be delivered at the stamp office every year "between the 28th February and the 25th March."—Held, not necessary, in order to make the copy of such return admissible, that it should be shewn on the face of such copy or otherwise that the return had been delivered at the stamp-office within the specified time. Ib.

In a sci. fa. against proprietors, on a judgment against a public officer:—Held, the lists of the proprietors, filed at the stamp-office, but not within the time limited by the act, are not receivable in evidence, as against the plaintiff, to shew that at a given time the garnishees were not proprietors. Prescott v. Buffery, 1 C. B. 41.

On the trial of an indictment for forgery, with intent to defraud "H. D., public officer of a district bank," he was called, and stated himself to be so; and an examined copy of the return forwarded to the stamp-office, in which he was stated to be so, was put in. This copy had neither the affidavit at the close of the return, nor the signature, and the date was left blank, but it was not objected that the return did not relate to the period of the uttering:—Held, sufficient proof that H. D. was the public officer. Reg. v. Carter, 1 C. & K. 741; 1 Den. C. C. R. 65.

The certified copy of the return delivered to the commissioners of stamps is evidence of the fact therein stated; and it is unnecessary to prove that the affidavit on which it is founded was made by the public registered officer of the company. Steward v. Dunn, 12 M. & W. 655; 1 D. & L. 642; 13 L. J., Ex. 324; 8 Jur. 218.

A certified copy of such a return describing the affidavit as having been made by "W. D., one of the directors of the company," and whose name also appeared in the return as one of the directors and public officers of the company, is sufficient. Ib.

A return made in March, 1841, on the affidavit of W. D., the public registered officer of the company, is presumptive evidence that W. D. was public registered officer of the company in November, 1842. Ib.

In order to prove that a defendant was a shareholder in the company at the time of issuing a writ of scire facias, a return made to the stamp-office some months previously, having been shewn:—Held, that a similar return, at the corresponding period of the following year, but subsequent to the issuing of the writ, was receivable. Bosanquet v. Shortridge, 4 Ex. 698; 19 L. J., Ex. 221; 14 Jur. 71.

Not the only Evidence—as to Public Officer.]

—In an action by such officer on behalf of a banking company, the return to the stamp-office is not the only admissible evidence of his being one of the public officers, but it may be proved aliunde. Edwards v. Buchanan, 3 B. & Ad. 788; S. P., Reg. v. Brand, 8 C. & P. 143; Armitage v. Hamer, 3 B. & Ad. 793.

—As to Existence of Bank.—So the returns are not the only evidence to prove the existence of a banking company. Rez v. James, 7 C. & P. 553.

Delivery of Account not a condition precedent to suing.]

—To an action by a banking company, as indorsees of a note, against indorser, a plea was, that the company, between the 25th May and 25th July, 1847, did not deliver at the stamp-office an account or return pursuant to 7 Geo. 3, c. 67:—Held, that the plea was bad, as the delivery of the account to the stamp-office was not a condition precedent to the right of the company to recover on the note. Bonar v. Mitchell, 5 Ex. 415; 19 L. J., Ex. 302.

Liability of Shareholders.—A memorial of shareholders in a banking company, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, is not vitiated by not being strictly conformable to the act; and a person whose name appears on the last delivered memorial is liable as a shareholder, notwithstanding the memorial is headed as a return made in pursuance of 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, instead of 7 & 8 Vict.

c. 113, and is not made within the period of the year directed by sect. 16 of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, and verified on oath, instead of by declaration under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62. Dossett v. Harding, 1 C. B., N. S. 524; S. P., Powis v. Harding, 1 C. B., N. S. 533; 26 L. J., C. P. 107; 3 Jur. N. S. 139; Daniel v. Royal British Bank, 1 H. & N. 681; Henderson v. Same, 7 El. & Bl. 356; 1 H. & N. 685, n.; 26 L. J., Q. B. 112; 3 Jur., N. S. 111.

The fact of the name of a party appearing on the register of shareholders is prima facie evidence of his being a shareholder, although the register may be informal. Id.

A shareholder whose name is properly inserted in the last return or memorial, filed at the stamp-office, cannot get rid of his liability under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, s. 21, by a subsequent bona fide transfer of his shares. Id.

6. PUBLIC OFFICER.

Is proper Person to Sue for Bank.—The 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 9, which enacts that banking companies under that statute shall sue in the name of their public officers, is obligatory, not permissive. Chapman v. Milcain, 1 L. M. & P. 209; 5 Ex. 61; 19 L. J., Ex. 238; 14 Jur. 251.

The creditors of a company carrying on the business of bankers in England, for which a public officer resident in England has been appointed in the manner prescribed by the 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, must sue the company in the manner pointed out in the 9th section of it; it is not competent to waive that mode, and sue the individual members at common law. Steward v. Greaves, 2 D., N. S. 485; 10 M. & W. 711; 12 L. J., Ex. 109; 6 Jur. 1116.

When not stating that he sues as such.—A plaintiff sued as payee of a note payable on demand to "The Manager of the Provincial Bank of England," but did not sue as a public officer:—Held, that upon proof that he was in fact the manager, and that a demand had been duly made on behalf of the bank, he was entitled to recover; and that, in the absence of a plea that the bank was established under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and that the plaintiff was not the public officer, it was not necessary for the plaintiff to shew that he was, nor for the defendant to shew that he was not such public officer. Robertson v. Steward, 1 Scott. N. R. 419; 1 M. & G. 511.

A declaration commenced by stating, that "A., one of the public officers of certain persons united in co-partnership for the purpose of carrying on the trade or business of bankers in England, according to 7 Geo. 4, c. 46," and that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff, for work and labour of the co-partnership as bankers of and for the defendant, at his request:—Held, that it sufficiently appeared from the whole record, that the co-partnership was carrying on the business of bankers according to the act, so as to enable them to sue by their public officer. Davidson v. Bower, 5 Scott. N. R. 538; 2 D., N. S. 115; 4 M. & G. 626; 12 L. J., C. P. 110; 6 Jur. 538.

Continuation of Office.—A public officer of a banking company is presumed to continue so until the contrary is shewn. Steward v. Dunn, 12 M. & W. 655; 1 D. & L. 642; 13 L. J., Ex. 324; 8 Jur. 218.

Judgment Entered in Name of.—Where a warrant of attorney is given to three trustees of a bank to secure a debt due to the co-partnership, the judgment thereon is properly entered up in the name of the public officer for the time being. Bell v. Fisk, 12 C. B. 493.

Must Sue by Himself.—An action can only be brought in the name of one of the public officers; but where it was brought by two, the court allowed an amendment by striking out the name of one. Holmes v. Binney, 6 Scott, 346; 4 Bing., N. C. 454.

Change of Name of Bank.—In 1833, a bank was established by the name of the Mirfield and Huddersfield District Banking Company. In 1836, H. and C., bankers, relinquished their business in favour of, and took shares in, this company; and it was subsequently agreed that the title of the bank should thenceforth be the West Riding Union Banking Company; that the capital should be increased by the creation of new shares, and that additional directors should be appointed:—Held, that the public officer of the West Riding Union Banking Company might, notwithstanding the change of name, and the accession of new proprietors, maintain an action on a guarantee given to the Mirfield and Huddersfield District Banking Company, before their junction with H. and Co., for advances made by them. Wilson v. Craven, 8 M. & W. 584.

Removal of.—A deed constituting a banking company, contained a stipulation that if any person chosen to act as public officer should become bankrupt, he should be disqualified, and his office become vacant:—Held, that this must be construed to mean that his office was to be void at the election of the company; but if, after the bankruptcy, the company treated and held him out to the world as its public registered officer, it might sue and be sued in his name. Steward v. Dunn, 12 M. & W. 655.

An action commenced in the name of P., a public officer of a banking company, was stayed under a judge's order, with leave to him to sign judgment and issue execution if the sum claimed was not paid by a certain day. P., before that day, was removed, and W. substituted in his stead. On an affidavit of these facts, a motion was made for leave to enter a suggestion of the removal of P., and of the substitution of W., and to sign judgment, and issue execution. The court was of opinion that the proper course was to move for a rule nisi to enter a suggestion, with a nient dedire. Paterson v. Ironside, 14 Jur. 722, n.

A cognovit having been given in an action by a public officer, by which it was provided that, upon default in payment of a sum of money, the plaintiff should be at liberty to enter up judgment and issue execution:—Held, to be sufficient to authorize signing judgment in the name of another public officer upon a suggestion being entered of the removal of the original officer. Webb v. Taylor, 1 D. & L. 676; 13 L. J., Q. B. 24; 8 Jur. 39.

In an action by such public officer, judgment having been entered up and execution issued in his name after he had ceased to be public officer, the court permitted a suggestion of his removal and the name of another officer to be entered nunc pro tunc on the roll, and the judgment and ca. sa. to be amended by the insertion of his name without costs, though the defendant had been arrested, and had applied to set aside the proceedings for irregularity. Id.

Death of.]—T., who sued as a public officer, died, after issue joined. The nisi prius record was made up as though he were alive. The venire was awarded as between T. and the defendant. No entry was made on the plea roll of T.'s death, or of the appointment of B. as a new public officer; but a memorandum was afterwards entered upon the nisi prius record of these facts, but not by way of suggestion, nor followed by any confession by the defendant, or a nient dedire. The cause was entered for trial in the name of B., and was tried by the jury, returned to the venire between T. and the defendant. Notice was given to the defendant that such entry would be made, and the cause tried. The defendant appeared under protest, and the verdict was for B.:—Held, that the entry on the nisi prius record was irregular, and did not authorize the trial of the cause in the name of B. Barnevall v. Sutherland, 9 C. B. 380; 19 L. J., C. P. 298; 14 Jur. 720.

A public officer died after issuing a ca. sa., but before execution:—Held, that it was not necessary to bring a sci. fa., and that defendant was therefore not entitled to be discharged on the ground that the action had abated. Todd v. Wright, 16 L. J., Q. B. 311; 11 Jur. 471.

Action by—Claim.]—In an action by a public officer, it is sufficient to state in the declaration that he is the manager of a co-partnership established for the purpose of banking; and that he has been duly named and appointed as the nominal plaintiff on behalf of the co-partnership, without stating expressly that he has been named as manager, or that the co-partnership has been established under the act. Christie v. Peart, 7 M. & W. 491; 9 D. P. C. 201.

A declaration described a plaintiff as "one of the present public officers of persons united in co-partnership for the purpose of carrying on the trade and business of banking in England, according to the statute:—"Held, bad for not stating that the co-partnership was carrying on the trade and business of bankers, or had carried on such trade. Fletcher v. Crosbie, 9 M. & W. 252; 1 D., N. S. 149.

A declaration commenced by stating that M., the secretary for the time being of the company, complains of C. D., who has been summoned to answer the plaintiff, as such secretary, by virtue of a writ. The plaintiff having obtained a verdict, the defendant brought error, on the ground that it did not appear that he was secretary at the time the writ was issued:—Held, on motion to set aside the writ of error as frivolous, that it sufficiently appeared that the plaintiff was secretary at the commencement of the suit. McIntyre v. Miller, 2 D. & L. 708; 13 M. & W. 725; 14 L. J., Ex. 180; S. P., Esdaile v. Maclean, 15 M. & W. 277; 16 L. J., Ex. 71.

In an action in the name of a public officer, it is not necessary to allege in the declaration that the plaintiff is a member of the company, that he is resident in England, or that he has been duly registered; it is sufficient to describe him as one of the public officers of the company, duly appointed. Spiller v. Johnson, 6 M. & W. 570; 9 D. P. C. 368; 4 Jur. 367.

Two plaintiffs on the part of a banking company having sued as public officers, where, according to 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 1, the action should have been brought by one only, the court allowed them to set aside proceedings on payment of costs, even after issue delivered. Holmes v. Binney, 4 Bing., N. C. 454; 6 Scott, 346; 1 Arn. 203.

Defence.]—In an action by a public officer the court allowed a plea, denying that the co-partnership was, at the commencement of the action, carrying on the business of bankers, in addition to non assumpsit, and accord and satisfaction. Roe v. Fuller, 7 Ex. 220; 21 L. J., Ex. 104.

Action against—Claim.]—A declaration in scire facias that the plaintiff recovered against G., one of the public officers for the time being of certain persons united in co-partnership for the purpose of carrying on the business of bankers in England, of which co-partnership G. was a member, residing in England, and had been duly nominated, and before and at the commencement of the suit had been, and at the time of the judgment was, one of the public officers of the company, a certain debt and costs, whereof G., as such public officer, is convicted, as by inspecting the rolls appears:—Held, that the declaration was bad for omitting to state that the debt recovered against G. was due and owing from the company to the plaintiff. Ness v. Fenwick, 2 Ex. 598.

Defence.]—The court will not allow a defendant, sued as public officer, to traverse the allegation, that he was such officer at the commencement of the action, where the company are the real defendants, and there are pleas which go to the merits of the action. Needham v. Law, 11 M. & W. 400; 12 L. J., Ex. 316; 7 Jur. 404.

In an action against a banking co-partnership sued in the name of their officer, the court disallowed a plea of his bankruptcy, there being other pleas on the record, and the company undertaking not to sue out execution against him or his individual estate. Steward v. Dunn, 2 D., N. S. 742; 11 M. & W. 63; 12 L. J., Ex. 213; 7 Jur. 178.

Interrogating.]—In an action by a banking co-partnership, suing in the name of a public officer, interrogatories may be administered to him. McKewan v. Rolt, 4 H. & N. 738; 28 L. J., Ex. 380; 5 Jur., N. S. 714.

Judgments against.]—Where a plaintiff obtains judgment against a public officer, he may issue execution against him without suing out a scire facias. Harwood v. Law, 7 M. & W. 203; 8 D. P. C. 899; 4 Jur. 1137.

Judgment was obtained in a court of record at Dublin against an official manager of an Irish Banking Company for a large sum. The amount due was reduced by subsequent payments, in the name of the defendant. The plaintiff executed a warrant of attorney under 6 Geo. 4, c. 43, s. 12, to confess judgment for the sum remaining due; and judgment was signed in the Queen's Bench in this country. Subsequently, the plaintiff executed a fresh warrant, to confess judgment for the sum for which judgment had been signed in the Irish court, and judgment was signed accordingly. On this latter judgment a scire facias issued against a shareholder. On his motion to set it aside:—Held, that the provisions in 6 Geo. 4, c. 42, s. 12, for enforcing judgments against the public officers of banking companies in Ireland, were, by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 45, made applicable to judgments against official managers, and that the judgment on which the scire facias proceeded was regular. Walker v. Goodyere, 7 El. & Bl. 960; 3 Jur., N. S. 1078.

Attachment of Funds.]—A banking corporation in the city of London cannot be made garnishees in the customary process of foreign attachment, nor can a writ of fieri facias issue against their goods. London Joint Stock Bank v. London (Mayor, &c.), 1 C. P. D. 1; 45 L. J., C. P. 213; 33 L. T. 781.

Operation and Service of Notices.]—A notice left at a bank after business hours only operates as notice to the bank from the time when in the ordinary course of business it is opened and read. Calisher v. Forbes, 7 L. R., Ch. 109; 41 L. J., Ch. 56; 25 L. T. 772; 20 W. R. 853.

7. MEMBERS OF.

Who are—Transferees or Transferors.]—A deed of settlement of a banking company allowed shareholders to dispose of their shares upon obtaining the consent of the board of directors, which was to be testified by a certificate in writing, signed by three of the directors. During the time the company carried on business a managing director received applications for sales of shares, consented, and signed the certificate of consent, which was afterwards signed by two other directors, but was never signed by the three assembled as a board. S., a shareholder, had at various times, with such consents, sold his shares. The directors under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, made a return to that effect. The company failed, and the directors passed a resolution declaring that there had been no valid transfer of the shares of S.:—Held, that as between him and the company the consents given by the directors, although informal and irregular, were valid, and that they could not afterwards treat S. as a member of the company. Bargate v. Shortridge, 3 Eq. R. 605; 5 H. L. Cas. 297; 24 L. J., Ch. 457.

By the constitution of a banking company, any proprietor wishing to transfer his shares to any person, was to give seven days' notice of his intention to the court of directors, and was to comply with certain other forms; subject thereto, he could, with the consent of the court of directors, transfer his shares by deed, and thereupon become freed of responsibility to the company in respect of his shares. It became the custom at once to prepare the deed of transfer, and then, upon the consent of the court of directors, the transfer was completed:—Held, that the consent of the court was not thereby waived; and that in the absence of such consent, or of any act by the court recognizing the transferee, the transferor remained liable to the company. Walton, Ex parte, and Hue, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Ch. 545; 3 Jur., N. S. 853.

Under a supplemental charter, a banking company, being empowered to issue new shares, a fraudulent report of the company's affairs was made by the directors and adopted at a general meeting of the shareholders. In June, 1856, M., a customer of the bank, took twelve of these new shares, executed the deed, and received the share certificates. In the next return to the stamp-office his name was not inserted as a shareholder, and in the monthly balance-sheet the sum paid by him for the share was treated as a debt from the bank. In his pass-book he was credited with interest at four per cent. upon the sum he had paid on account of the shares. He also attended two meetings of shareholders. In September, 1856, the bank stopped payment, all the new shares not having been issued; and the affairs of the company were afterwards ordered to be wound up:—Held, that he was a contributory in respect of the twelve shares, and was not entitled to claim as a creditor in respect of the deposit paid for his shares. Royal British Bank, In re, Mixer, Ex parte, 4 De G. & J. 575; 28 L. J., Ch. 879.

—Husband and Wife.]—A wife dum sola became an original shareholder in a banking co-partnership established under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46; after her marriage, but without her husband's knowledge, she received dividends and paid calls in her maiden name, and in that name was returned to the stamp-office as a shareholder, but never executed any deed of settlement. The husband was aware that his wife was a shareholder, but never interfered in the matter, and when applied to for a call said he would have nothing to do with it. The deed of settlement provided that the husband of any female shareholder should not be a member in respect of such shares, but might either dispose of the shares so vested in him, or at his option become a member on complying with certain requisitions:—Held, that he was not a member of the company. Dodgson v. Bell, 5 Ex. 967; 1 L., M. & P. 812—Ex. Ch.

A woman, with the consent of her husband, purchased, with the proceeds of her separate estate, shares in a banking company, and was registered as owner. Her husband received some dividends and signed receipts as the agent of his wife; he also attended a meeting of the company, at which none but shareholders were entitled to be present. The deed of settlement provided, that the husband of any female shareholder should not be a member in respect of such shares, but should be at liberty to sell them, or at his option to become a member on complying with certain requisitions, as to giving notice of his desire to become a member, specifying the shares in respect of which he claimed to be a member, which the husband did not do:—Held, that he was not a member. Ness v. Angus, 3 Ex. 805; 6 D. & L. 645; 18 L. J., Ex. 470; 13 Jur. 874.

The 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, did not take away the liability of the husband of a female shareholder to be placed on the list of contributories in her right in respect of shares in a banking company belonging to her, but in respect of which he had done no act to make himself a member of the company. Northumberland and Durham District Banking Company, In re, Luard, Ex parte,

1 De G., F. & J. 533; 29 L. J., Ch. 269; 6 Jur., N. S. 381; 8 W. R. 297.

Mrs. L. was, before her marriage, registered owner of shares in a banking company. Upon her marriage a settlement was executed, by which the shares were assigned to trustees upon trust, excluding the husband, but the trustees did not accept the trust, and the shares continued registered in the lady's former name. It was not proved that the company had notice of the marriage or of the settlement. The company was afterwards registered under the Banking Companies Act of 1857, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 49, and wound up under the acts of 1856 and 1857:—Held, that the name of the husband in right of his wife must be placed on the list of contributories as well as that of the wife. Id.

— Personal Representatives.—A deed of settlement of a banking co-partnership provided that the executor of a deceased shareholder should not be a member of the company in respect of such shares, but should be at liberty to sell the shares, or at his option to become a member, on complying with certain provisions, and that if he did not elect to become a member he was not to be entitled to any dividend accruing due after the testator's death:—Held, that an executor who received a dividend which accrued due after the death of his testator, but had not complied with the provisions of the deed of settlement, was not a member. Ness v. Armstrong, 4 Ex. 21; 7 D. & L. 73; 18 L. J., Ex. 473; 13 Jur. 874.

A person in 1844 bought shares in a banking company constituted under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and had them transferred to him. The company afterwards registered under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 49, so as to come within the Winding-up Act of 1856. He was never entered on the list of shareholders under that act, but had received dividends, and after his death, his executors received dividends, and then sold the shares:—Held, that as he would have been a contributory under the old acts, so his executors were contributories. Northumberland and Durham District Banking Company, In re, Dixon, Ex parte, 1 Drew. & Sm. 225; 8 W. R. 623.

A shareholder bequeathed her residuary estate, which included her shares in a banking company, to B, and appointed B. sole executrix. B. proved the will, and in passing her residuary account at the stamp-office, she claimed the shares for her own benefit. For four years she received the dividends on the shares "as executrix of C.;" for the two following years she gave a receipt in her own name, without adding those words. Her name, at the end of the four years, was entered in the dividend register, but without her privacy. No alteration was made in the register. The deed of settlement required certain formalities to be complied with before a legatee or an executrix could become a proprietor in the company, which formalities were not complied with:—Held, that B. was liable as a contributory in her representative character only. Hertfordshire Banking Company, In re, Bulmer, Ex parte, 33 Beav. 435; 33 L. J., Ch. 609; 10 Jur., N. S. 462; 10 L. T. 151; 12 W. R. 564.

— Cestui que Trust or Trustee.—Shares in a bank were purchased by a solicitor in the names of his brother and his clerk, who held the shares as trustees for him, but there was no fraudulent object in thus concealing the name of the real purchaser. By the company's deed it was provided that no trust should be recognized, and no transfer of shares should be made without the consent of two directors. Upon the winding up of the company, the names of the two holders of the shares were only placed upon the list of contributories:—Held, that the beneficial owner was not liable to be placed upon the list. East of England Banking Company, In re, Bugg, Ex parte, 2 Drew. & Sm. 452; 35 L. J., Ch. 43; 11 Jur., N. S. 616; 12 L. T. 696; 13 W. R. 911.

— Under the Companies Act of 1862.—See COMPANY.

— Bankruptcy of.—A member of a banking company cannot be proceeded against in bankruptcy for a debt due from the company, no judgment for such debt having been recovered against the public officer, although the company may have ceased to carry on business, and an order have been obtained for winding it up, prior to such proceedings in bankruptcy. Darison v. Farmer, 6 Ex. 242; 20 L. J., Ex. 177.

• 8. ENFORCING JUDGMENTS AGAINST MEMBERS.

Since the Companies Act of 1862, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, the mode and practice of enforcing judgments obtained against the public officers of banking companies unable to meet their engagements are either obsolete or superseded by creditors or individual shareholders being enabled to take proceedings to wind up these companies, and thereby obtain a fair and equal arrangement and liquidation of their debts and liabilities. The following cases relate to the former practice, and are retained, as they may be useful.

By Scire Facias.—The 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 13, in enacting that execution upon any judgment obtained against any public officer for the time being of a banking company may be issued against any member or members for the time being of such corporation or co-partnership, meant an execution against the persons who, at the time of issuing the scire facias, were members of the banking company. Dodgson v. Scott, 2 Ex. 457; 6 D. & L. 27; 5 Rail. Cas. 654; 17 L. J., Ex. 321; 12 Jur. 521.

In issuing execution against the members of a banking company, upon a judgment against the public officer, the proper course was to proceed first against those who were members at the time the scire facias issued; then, in the event of an execution against them being unsuccessful, against those who were members at the time of the contract being entered into; then, in the like event, against those who were so at the time of the contract becoming executed; and lastly, against those who were at the time of the judgment being obtained. Id.

In order to obtain leave to issue a scire facias against members of the second or subsequent class, all that was necessary to be shewn on the face of the affidavit was a reasonable certainty that any further proceedings against the first or previous class of members would prove ineffectual. Id.

It was no cause to shew against a rule for leave to issue a scire facias against a member who was a member at the time of the contract entered into, on a judgment obtained against the public officer of the banking company, that the judgment was fraudulently confessed to the prejudice of the members. Ib.

Execution could not be had against persons who had become members after the contract was completed, but who had ceased to be so before judgment obtained. Ib.

Where a party had obtained judgment against a public officer of a banking co-partnership, the proper mode of proceeding to execution against members was by scire facias, and not by suggestion. Ransford v. Bosanquet, 2 Q. B. 972; 2 G. & D. 324; 12 L. J., Q. 489—Ex. Ch.

Where a creditor applied for leave to issue a scire facias against the members of the company at the time of the contract, he must have shewn that he made bona fide efforts to render effectual the execution required to be previously issued against the members for the time being. Bank of England v. Johnson, 3 Ex. 598; 6 D. & L. 458; 18 L. J., Ex. 238; S. P., Eardley v. Law, 4 P. & D. 379; 12 A. & E. 802.

— Against former Members.—Where execution issued against one or more members of a banking co-partnership, and no satisfaction had been obtained, and the court saw grounds for believing that a creditor had used due diligence to obtain satisfaction from the existing members of the company, it would allow a scire facias to issue against former members; and it was not necessary that execution should have first issued against all the existing members. Field v. McKenzie, 5 D. & L. 172; 4 C. B. 705; 16 L. J., C. P. 203; 11 Jur. 714.

To obtain a scire facias against former members, it was enough to show that execution after scire facias had been issued against several of the present partners, and nulla bona returned; that reasonable inquiry had been made as to the solvency of all, and that there was, on such inquiry, ground for believing that execution would not be effectual against any. On this last point a prima facie case was sufficient. Harvey v. Scott, 11 Q. B. 92; 17 L. J., Q. B. 9; 12 Jur. 12.

Pleas.—It was no plea to a declaration in scire facias against a member, on a judgment obtained against a public officer, that another writ of scire facias on the same judgment had been sued out against another member of the company. Nunn v. Lomer, 3 Ex. 471; 18 L. J., Ex. 247; 13 Jur. 236; S. P., Burmester v. Cropton, 6 D. & L. 430; 3 Ex. 397; 18 L. J., Ex. 142; 13 Jur. 237 n.; Esdaile v. Lund, 12 M. & W. 607; 2 D. & L. 565; 13 L. J., Ex. 117; 8 Jur. 109.

Under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, s. 13, by Execution.—A creditor of a banking company incorporated under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, could not maintain an action against a shareholder for his debt. His remedy was against the corporation, and execution in the mode prescribed by the statute. Fell v. Burchett, 7 El. & Bl. 537; 26 L. J., Q. B. 223; 3 Jur., N. S. 388.

A creditor who had ineffectually issued execution against the property of a banking company established under the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, on a judgment obtained against such company, and had complied with all the conditions imposed by that act, was entitled as of right to have execution granted him against a shareholder, and the court had no discretion in the matter. Morisse v. Royal British Bank, 1 C. B., N. S. 67; 26 L. J., C. P. 62; 3 Jur., N. S. 137.

A shareholder whose name was properly inserted in the last delivered memorial remained liable to execution, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, s. 13, although he had subsequently bona fide transferred his shares, and the transfer deed had been duly executed by the transferee, and registered. Fry v. Russell, 3 C. B., N. S. 665; 27 L. J., C. P. 153; 4 Jur. N. S. 193.

But if a shareholder died before a judgment was obtained against the company by a creditor, although his name appeared on the memorial of shareholders, which was the existing memorial under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, at the time of his death, his executors could not be proceeded against by the judgment creditor. Powis v. Butler, 27 L. J., C. P. 249; 4 Jur., N. S. 614; 4 C. B., N. S. 469—Ex. Ch.

A shareholder in a banking company, established under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, whose name appeared on the last delivered memorial, on application by a judgment creditor of the company for leave to issue execution against him, could not set up as an answer that he was induced to become a shareholder by the fraudulent misrepresentations of the directors as to the financial position of the company, and that he repudiated the shares as soon as he discovered the fraud. Powis v. Harding, 1 C. B., N. S. 533; 26 L. J., C. P. 107; 3 Jur., N. S. 139; S. P., Daniel v. Royal British Bank, 1 H. & N. 681; Henderson v. Same, 7 El. & Bl. 356; 1 H. & N. 685, n.; 26 L. J., Q. B. 112; 3 Jur., N. S. 111.

A plaintiff who had obtained judgment against a banking company, established under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, might proceed by scire facias on the judgment against the shareholders of the company, and was not limited to the remedy given by the 13th section. Cleeve or Cleeve v. Harwar, 1 H. & N. 873; 3 Jur., N. S. 190.

Notice of Proceeding.—A notice under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, s. 13, to a shareholder of an intention to apply to the court or a judge for leave to issue execution against him was not bad for being in the alternative. Powis v. Harding, 1 C. B., N. S. 524, 551; 26 L. J., C. P. 107; 3 Jur., N. S. 139.

A joint notice to two shareholders was good on a motion against one. Ib.

Personal service of a notice of motion to the person to be charged was not necessary. It was sufficient if the notice was left with a servant at his dwelling-house. Morisse v. Royal British Bank, 1 C. B., N. S. 67; 26 L. J., C. P. 62; 3 Jur., N. S. 137.

In a notice a party was described as "John Marshall." In the memorial filed he was described as "John S. Marshall." There was an affidavit of identity:—Held, that the notice was sufficient. Thomas v. Harding, 1 C. B., N. S. 555.

9. LIABILITY OF PROPERTY OF MEMBERS.

As regards real Estate.—The senior master of the Common Pleas having declined to register a memorandum to charge real estate (belonging to a past member of a banking company) against the public officer, of which a verdict had been obtained, pursuant to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 14, s. 19, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, s. 2, the court refused to compel him to receive the memorandum. Nees, Ex parte, 5 D. & L. 339; 5 C. B. 155; 17 L. J., C. P. 15.

Semble, that a plaintiff, in an action against a public officer of a banking company, cannot charge the lands of a shareholder, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, without leave of the court, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113, s. 13. Harris v. Royal British Bank, 2 H. & N. 535; 27 L. J., Ex. 1.

A creditor having obtained a judgment against an official manager of a banking company, registered the judgment against the real estate of a former shareholder in the company, without issuing a scire facias:—Held, that a court of equity ought to give relief against such registration, as being a cloud on the shareholder's title to his lands. Hone v. O'Flahertie, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 119, 497.

— Former Membership—Left the Bank for Three Years.—The remedies given by 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 13, are not cumulative, but substitutional for the prior liabilities of partners, and therefore proceedings cannot be had against a party three years after he has ceased to be a member. Barker v. Buttress, 7 Beav. 134; 13 L. J., Ch. 58; 8 Jur. 89.

The 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 13, limiting the liability of members to three years after ceasing to be members, has no effect in varying the liability to contribute between partners themselves. Gouthwaite, Ex parte, 3 Mac. & G. 187; 20 L. J., Ch. 188; 15 Jur. 137.

10. SHARES.

a. Generally.

Construction of Deed as to.—Construction of a deed of association of a banking company, composed of shareholders whose shares had been created at different times, and upon some of which the amount of the shares had, and upon others had not, been required to be paid up, as governing the rights of such several classes of shareholders, with reference to a provision enabling the directors to declare a dividend out of the profits, "and to apply such dividend either as a bonus to be added to the respective shares, or as interest or dividend upon shares, or upon the amount paid up in respect of such shares, or as part bonus and part interest or dividend, or otherwise as they may deem most expedient, and to divide such dividend or bonus into as many equal parts as there shall be shares then held in the capital of the company." Wilkinson v. Cummins, 11 Hare, 337.

Probate Stamp.—Shares in a banking company purchased by executors with the assets of their testator in the name of a party who was entitled to the dividends for life, are included in the probate stamp, and do not require to be covered by the stamp upon the letters of administration granted to the estate and effects of the party in whose name the purchase was made. Hennell v. Strong, 25 L. J., Ch. 407.

If the bankers refuse to transfer the shares after an affidavit made by an executor of the testator in conformity with 48 Geo. 3, c. 149, they do so at the peril of costs. Id.

Doctrine of Survivorship.—Where A. purchased shares in a bank, and had them transferred into the books of the bank in her own name and that of B., and then died, the rule adopted by the Bank of England as to stock held applicable, and B. was declared entitled to them by survivorship. Garrick v. Taylor, 30 L. J., Ch. 211; 9 Jur., N. S. 116; 3 L. T. 460; 9 W. R. 181. Affirmed on appeal, 31 L. J., Ch. 68; 10 W. R. 49—L. J.

Not within Mortmain Act.—Shares in a banking company, established under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and having an interest in freehold and other lands vested in the trustees of the bank, are not within the Mortmain Act, 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. Myers v. Perigal, 11 C. B. 90; 21 L. J., C. P. 217; 16 Jur. 1118.

Sale and Purchase of.—Shares were purchased in a banking company, the rules of which provided that no benefit of survivorship should take place between the shareholders. The purchaser caused the transfer of them to be made to herself and another person who lived with her and was called her niece, but was not related to her:—Held, first, that the rules did not exclude the benefit of survivorship at law between the two. Garrick v. Taylor, 4 De G., F. & J. 159.

Held, secondly, that having regard to all the circumstances of the case, there was no resulting trust for the purchaser, but that on her decease the co-transferee took the whole interest both at law and in equity. Id.

III. BANK NOTES AND BILLS.

Right to Issue on Death of Partner in Bank.]

—Under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 32, s. 13, the right of a country bank to issue notes belongs beneficially on the death of a partner to the surviving partners. Smith v. Everett; 27 Beav. 446; 29 L. J., Ch. 286.

Bank Post-bills.—Bank post-bills, issued by the Bank of England in London, are not made payable at the branch banks by 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 15. Willis v. Bank of England, 4 A. & E. 21; 5 N. & M. 478; 1 H. & W. 620.

They were considered by Pollock, C. B., Alderson, B., Platt, B., to be bills of exchange, and by Martin, B., to be promissory notes. Forbes v. Marshall, 11 Ex. 167; 24 L. J., Ex. 305.

Duty on.—The intention to impose a charge upon the subject must be shewn by clear and unambiguous language. Where by an act of the Cape Colony (No. 6, 1864), "for imposing a duty upon bank notes," which act was assumed to have been validly extended to the province of Griqualand West, it was provided that banks issuing within the colony notes of their own, purporting to be issued within the colony, and so (unless expressed to be payable elsewhere) to be payable by them within the colony, should make a return thereof with a view to the imposition of the duty chargeable by that act; it was held, that the appellant bank, which had a branch within the province, and there put in circulation notes issued by the bank in the colony payable in the colony, but did not issue any notes payable in the province, was not liable, according to the true construction of the act, to make any return to the respondent, the treasurer of the province, or to pay duty on the notes put into circulation by its branch. Oriental Bank Corporation v. Wright, 5 App. Cas. 842; 50 L. J., P. C. 1; 43 L. T. 177—P. C.

Although by s. 10 of the act, banks of issue, liable to make the return prescribed by the act, must include within such return such notes also as they have put into circulation, yet banks which, not issuing any notes purporting to be locally issued, and therefore not liable to make a return, put into circulation within the province their own notes, issued elsewhere, are not in respect thereof liable to the duty imposed by the act. Id.

Verification of Weekly Returns of Issues of Country Banks.]—An affidavit verifying the return of the issue by a banker of unstamped bills and notes under 9 Geo. 4, c. 23, may be sworn, either before a justice of the peace under s. 7, or before a commissioner to administer oaths in chancery under 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 52, the later enactment being cumulative only. Reg. v. Greenland, 10 Cox, C. C. 377; 2 L. R., C. C. 65; 36 L. J., M. C. 37; 15 L. T. 589; 15 W. R. 460.

The manager of a bank is a chief clerk within 9 Geo. 4, c. 24, s. 7, which requires such affidavit to be made by a cashier, accountant or chief clerk. Id.

Notes and Drafts carrying Interest.]—A banking company stopped payment, and was voluntarily wound up. The debts being paid in full:—Held, that interest at 5l. per cent. was payable on all promissory notes, drafts and other negotiable instruments current at the time of the stoppage, not from the time of the stoppage, but from the respective times of the claims in respect thereof being sent in to the liquidators; the stoppage of the bank not operating to dispense with the necessity of making a demand. East of England Banking Company, In re, Provincial Banking Corporation, Ex parte, 4 L. R., Ch. 14; 38 L. J. Ch. 121; 19 L. T. 299; 17 W. R. 18.

The stopping payment by a bank which issues notes payable on demand does not preclude the necessity of demanding payment in order that interest may be payable under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28. Herefordshire Banking Company, In re, 4 L. R., Eq. 250; 36 L. J., Ch. 806.

Material Alteration—Erasure of Number.]—In an action against the Bank of England for the non-payment of notes payable to bearer which had been regularly issued by the bank, it appeared that the notes had been bona fide purchased by the plaintiff for value, but that before the plaintiff took them the notes had been altered by erasing the numbers upon them, and substituting others, with the object of preventing the notes from being traced, as payment had been stopped and a notice issued specifying their numbers:—Held, that although the alteration did not vary the contract, it was material in the sense of altering the notes in an essential part, and that therefore the notes were vitiated, so that the plaintiff could not recover in his action on them against the bank. Suffell v. Bank of England, 9 Q. B. D. 555; 51 L. J., Q. B. 401;

47 L. T. 146; 30 W. R. 932; 46 J. P. 500—C. A. Reversing Coleridge, C. J.

Bona fide Holder of for Value.]—Bank notes cannot be followed by the legal owners into the hands of bona fide holders for a valuable consideration without notice. Lowndes v. Anderson, 13 East, 130; 1 Rose, 99.

For possession is prima facie evidence of property in negotiable instruments. King v. Nelson, 2 Camp. 5.

Therefore, in trover, for a bank note, it is not a prima facie case for the plaintiff to prove that the note belonged to him, and that the defendant afterwards converted it; and the defendant will not be called upon to shew his title to the note, without evidence from the other side that he got possession of it mala fide, or without consideration. Id.

One who takes a bank note or other negotiable security bona fide, that is, giving value for it, and having no notice at the time that the party from whom he takes it has no title, is entitled to recover upon it, even although he may at the time have had the means of knowledge of that fact, of which means he neglected to avail himself. Raphael v. Bank of England, 17 C. B. 161; 25 L. J., C. P. 33.

Of Stolen Note.]—A bank note, though stolen, becomes the property of him who gives valuable consideration for it, having no notice or knowledge of the robbery, and in the ordinary course of business, is always treated as cash. Miller v. Rice, 1 Burr. 452; 2 Ld. Ken. 189.

The holder of a bank note is prima facie entitled to prompt payment of it, and cannot be affected by the previous fraud of any former holder in obtaining it, unless evidence is given to bring it home to his privity. Solomons v. Bank of England, 13 East, 135, n.

A money-changer at Paris, twelve months after he had received notice of robbery of bank notes at Liverpool, took one of the stolen notes (for 500l.), at Paris, giving cash for it, less the current rate of exchange, from a stranger, whom he merely required to produce his passport and write his name on the back of the note:—Held, that the circumstance of his forgetting or omitting to look for the notice was no evidence of mala fides. Raphael v. Bank of England, 17 C. B. 161; 25 L. J., C. P. 33.

A Bank of England note, which had been feloniously stolen in England in February, 1826, was remitted in May, 1827, by a foreign merchant to his correspondent in this country, to whom he was indebted in a sum exceeding the amount of the note. The latter demanded payment: the bank refused to pay, on the ground that the note had been stolen. At the time when the correspondent was informed of this, he had not made the foreign merchant any advance on the credit of the note:—Held, first, that, in trover for the note, the correspondent must be considered the agent of the foreign merchant, and that he could therefore recover upon his title only; secondly, that, in such action, it having been proved that the note had been stolen, it was incumbent on the plaintiff to shew that the foreign merchant had given full value for it. De la Chaumette v. Bank of England, 9 B. & C. 208.

Bona fides—Question for Jury.]—A bank note for 1,000l., dated 12th October, 1820, was lost in London, in April, 1821, and in June, 1822, was presented for change to a money broker in Liverpool, by a person with whom the latter was well acquainted, but who was then in pecuniary difficulties, and he changed it by giving bills, which had some time to run, and cash, deducting a commission, without asking any questions how the holder became possessed of it:—Held, in an action of trover by the true owner against the money broker, that it was for the jury to say whether the defendant had received the note fairly and bona fide in the ordinary course of business, and had given full value for it; and the jury having found for the plaintiff, the court refused to disturb the verdict. Egan v. Threlfall, 5 D. & R. 326.

Stoppage by Bank, Effect of.]—A. paid a Bank of England note to B., who paid it to C., who presented it at the bank, where it was stopped on the ground that it had been fraudulently obtained from a fundholder:—Held, that although A. paid the amount of the note to C. in discharge of the debt due to him from B., A. could not maintain trover for the note against the Bank of England. Benjamin v. Bank of England, 3 Camp. 417.

Lost Note—Rights of Finder.]—In actions for money had and received, brought by the owners of lost bank notes, against those who may have got them into their hands without giving value, it is not absolutely necessary for the plaintiffs to give direct evidence of the loss; it is sufficient if such circumstances are shown as satisfy the jury of the fact of the loss. Holiday v. Sigil, 2 C. & P. 176.

A person entering a shop found on the floor a bundle of bank notes which had been accidentally dropped by a stranger. The person who lost them could not be found:—Held, that, as against every one but the true owner, the property in the notes belonged to the finder, and not to the owner of the shop, notwithstanding that the finder had immediately on picking up the bundle handed it over to the latter, with a view to its being restored to the true owner if he should return, and the owner of the shop had advertised the finding in the newspapers, the finder not having intended to waive his title, and having before he demanded the notes back, offered to repay the expense of the advertisements, and to indemnify the shopkeeper against any claim. Bridges v. Hawkenorth, 21 L. J., Q. B. 75; 15 Jur. 1079

Halves of Notes.]—The property in the halves of bank notes, sent in payment of a debt due to the receiver from a third person, with an intention on the part of both sender and receiver that the other halves are to follow, remains in the sender until he sends the second halves; the payment being until then inchoate and conditional. It is therefore open to the sender, at any time before sending the second halves, to disaffirm the transaction, and re-demand the first halves from the receiver, who is liable to an action for refusing to return them. Smith v. Mundy, 3 El. & El. 22; 29 L. J., Q. B. 172; 6 Jur., N. S. 977; 2 L. T. 373; 8 W. R. 561.

A bank is bound to pay on the production of the half of a bank note, either with or without an indemnity from the holder. Redmayne v. Burton, 2 L. T. 324.

Indemnity against Loss.]—A bank note is a negotiable instrument, and the bankers, upon an indemnity being given, will be restrained from setting up the loss as a defence to an action upon the note. M'Donnell v. Murray, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 495; 1 L. T. 498.

To an action against the Bank of England on a 10l. note, the bank pleaded that the note was lost. Upon the plaintiff giving an indemnity, the plea was set aside, and the bank thereupon paid the amount of the note into court. The parties being resident, and the cause of action arising, within the jurisdiction of the Sheriff's Court of London:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to costs. Noble v. Bank of England, 2 H. & C. 355; 33 L. J., Ex. 81; 9 Jur., N. S. 718; 8 L. T. 733; 11 W. R. 716.

Country Bank Notes.]—Where a servant received on behalf of his master, in payment of goods sold, country bank notes, at one o'clock on Friday afternoon, and paid them to his master after banking hours on Saturday evening, and between three and four in the afternoon of Saturday the bank stopped payment:—Held, that there were no laches in not presenting the notes before the bank stopped on the Saturday. James v. Houlditch, 8 D. & R. 40.

On Saturday evening, the 19th of January, the plaintiff gave change for a 5l. bank note of P. & Co.'s bank to the defendant, at his request; on Monday morning the banking-house of P. & Co. was opened for two hours and then closed, and the partners afterwards became bankrupts; no payment was made; and the jury gave an opinion that if the note had been presented it would not have been paid; the note was not, in fact, presented, but on Monday the plaintiff sent it to the defendant, and requested to have his money returned; the defendant at first promised to return it, but afterwards refused:—Held, that the obligation on the holder of a note in such a case is to give prompt notice to the person from whom he received it of the stoppage at the bank, and to tender the note back to him; and that the plaintiff had done all that he was bound to do, and was entitled to recover the amount as money had and received to his use, although there had been no presentment of the note. Turner v. Stones, 1 D. & L. 122; 12 L. J., Q. B. 303; 7 Jur. 745.

IV. CUSTOMERS' ACCOUNTS.

1. OF WHAT PERSONS.

Partners.]—There is no implication of law from the mere existence of a trade partnership that one partner has authority to bind the firm by opening a banking account on its behalf in his own name. Alliance Bank v. Kearsley, 6 L. R., C. P. 433; 40 L. J., C. P. 249; 24 L. T. 552; 19 W. R. 822.

Where accounts are kept at a bankers' by a firm, each partner having a right to draw cheques, and also by the individual partners of the firm, it is not the duty of the bankers to inquire into the propriety of any transfer of funds which may be made from and to the different accounts. Backhouse v. Charlton, 8 Ch. D. 444.

Upon the death of one partner in a firm having an account at a bankers', the surviving partner has a right to draw cheques upon the partnership account. Id.

Husband and Wife.—A wife being executrix of her father, paid money which she had received as such into a bank to an account in her own name as executrix. Her husband paid money of his own to this account, and the wife had drawn cheques upon the account for payment of debts due by the husband and for payment of household expenses. The husband died:—Held, that the wife was merely the agent of her husband, and that the money remaining in the bank belonged to his estate, and not to the wife's estate. Lloyd v. Pugh, 8 L. R., Ch. 88; 42 L. J., Ch. 282; 28 L. T. 250; 21 W. R. 346.

A wife having property settled to her separate use for life, with remainder as she should, notwithstanding coverture, by deed or will appoint, with remainder to her executors or administrators, opened two accounts with her bankers, a private and an administration account, and directed the bankers, by the joint letter of herself and her husband, to consider any overdraft on her private account secured by the administration account. The administration account was subject to the trusts of the settlement. At her death the private account was overdrawn:—Held, that she had contracted so as to bind her separate estate, and that the bankers had a lien on the administration account in respect of the overdrawn private account. London Chartered Bank of Australia v. Lempriere, 9 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 426; 4 L. R., P. C. 572; 42 L. J., P. C. 49; 29 L. T. 186; 21 W. R. 513.

A man had for a series of years lodged money in two several banks on deposit receipts, some of which were in his own name, and others in the joint names of himself and of his wife, and he frequently changed deposits already made in his own name into their joint names. There was some evidence of statements made by him to his wife, but resting on her testimony, that he had acted thus with the object of enabling the survivor to take the principal. At his death there were in the two banks four deposit receipts in their joint names and one in his own name alone:—Held, that the joint lodgments were advancements for the wife, who survived. Tulbot v. Cody, 10 Ir. R., Eq. 138.

Receipts in the joint names of husband and wife at law and in equity considered. Id.

A husband, who was in failing health, opened a new banking account in the joint names of himself and wife, authorizing the bank to cash cheques drawn by either of them, and telling the bank manager that the balance of the account would belong to the survivor of himself and his wife. Cheques were thenceforward drawn by the wife only, and were applied by her in payment of household and other expenses, the husband paying in sums of money from time to time to the credit of the account. At the time of his death there was a large sum standing to the credit of the account, which the wife claimed to be entitled to for her own use:—Held, that the evidence of circumstances was not sufficient to rebut the presumption of a resulting trust in favour of the testator. Marshall v. Crutwell, 20 L. R., Eq. 328; 44 L. J., Ch. 504.

Married Women.—In an action for breach of contract by a married woman against her bankers, the first count was for not presenting for payment a bill of exchange deposited with them for that purpose; the second count was for not giving her notice of the dishonour of a bill of exchange entrusted to them for collection, and the third count was for dishonouring a cheque drawn by her upon them, they having at the time funds to meet it. Plea, that the plaintiff was a married woman. Replication, that the causes of action arose exclusively from earnings, money, chattels and property within the meaning of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, 33 & 34 Vict. c. 93, and that the bankers knew when they accepted her banking account that she was a married woman carrying on her business separately from her husband:—Held, that the replication was good as shewing that she was seeking a remedy for the protection of her earnings and property within the meaning of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, s. 11. Summers v. City Bank, 9 L. R., C. P. 580; 43 L. J., C. P. 261; 31 L. T. 268.

A wife with a separate estate, over which she had power of disposition notwithstanding coverture, gave by will the whole of the funds constituting such separate estate upon trust for her nephews and nieces, and also bequeathed all funds purchased out of the savings of her separate estate upon the like trusts. She died, leaving a large balance on her current account at her bankers:—Held, that she had not purchased any funds out of the savings at her bankers, and that such savings were undisposed of, and passed to her husband as administrator. Askew v. Rooth, 17 L. R., Eq. 426; 43 L. J., Ch. 368; 30 L. T. 155; 22 W. R. 524. And see preceding cases.

Trustees.—When a trustee pays trust money into his banker's account, thereby mixing the money with his own, subsequent sums drawn out by him will be attributed to the earliest items on the credit side of his account for the time being, and the trust money will in this way, in its turn, be considered as drawn out, whether or not the result be that a balance remains of his own moneys. Brown v. Adams, 39 L. J., Ch. 67.

H. having a balance of 3,961l. 10s. 3d. at his bank, paid in 5,000l. trust money. Between the time of doing so and his death, he paid in various sums, together amounting to 12,533l. 11s. 6d., and in the same interval drew out 18,847l. 4s. 4d. No part of this sum was devoted to the purposes of the trust, and he was still liable for the 5,000l. at the date of his death:—Held, that the balance remaining at his bank formed part of his general estate, and could not be appropriated by the beneficial owner of the 5,000l. Id.

When a customer has opened with his bankers separate accounts specially headed with the names of the trusts to which the moneys paid into those accounts belong, the bankers are not at liberty, upon the bankruptcy of the customer, to apply those moneys in payment of the balance due to them upon the customer's overdrawn private account. Kington, Ex parte, Gross, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 632; 40 L. J., Bk. 91; 25 L. T. 250; 19 W. R. 910.

A county treasurer used to pay the county moneys into Bacons' Bank, but kept his private account at the National and Provincial Bank, and carried over the police rates to this account by cheques drawn on Bacons' Bank. In 1869, he opened a separate account with the National and Provincial Bank, headed "Police Account." Some of the items to his credit in this account could be traced as having come from county funds, but most of them could not. The cheques which he drew upon it were all headed "Police Account," and appeared to have been drawn only for county purposes. For the purposes of interest the National and Provincial Bank treated the accounts as one account, and the interest on the balance in his favour was carried to the credit of his private account. At the time when the police account was opened, the manager of the bank knew that he was county treasurer, and understood that he had been in the habit of paying county moneys into the bank. In April, 1870, he absconded, his private account being overdrawn, and the police account being in credit:—Held, that the bank was not entitled to set off the one account against the other, but that the county magistrates were entitled to recover the balance standing to his credit on the police account. Ib.

Executors and Administrators.]—An executrix kept an executorship account with a bank, and having a power, under the will, to mortgage the real estate in aid of the personality, she deposited with the bank the title deeds of part of the testator's real estate as security for the balance. The account was considerably overdrawn by the executrix, and the moneys to a great extent misapplied, but without the bank having notice of the misapplication. The security having proved insufficient to pay the balance, the bank applied to prove as creditors against the testator's estate for the difference:—Held, that they were not entitled to prove; for that a person cannot, by contract with an executor, acquire a right to prove as a creditor against the estate, though the executor has power to give him a lien on specific assets. Farhall v. Farhall, 7 L. R., Ch. 123; 41 L. J., Ch. 146; 25 L. T. 685; 20 W. R. 157.

The mere fact that an executor has opened an account with a banker as executor does not entitle the banker to rank as a creditor upon the testator's estate in respect of an overdrawn balance of the account. Ib.

A banking firm stopped payment in July, 1870, and was at once adjudged bankrupt. At the time of the stoppage, the defendant had an account with the bank, which he had overdrawn about 300*l.* At the end of 1869 a Mrs. A. died, appointing the defendant sole executor of her will, and leaving a balance of about 600*l.* in the hands of the bank. This balance was at once transferred by the bank from the account of Mrs. A. to his account, "as executor of the late Mrs. A." In the interval before the stoppage, he had drawn out about 200*l.* of this account, and paid in about 100*l.*, leaving a balance in his favour of about 500*l.* The executor was also sole residuary legatee by Mrs. A.'s will. There were several pecuniary legacies which he had paid at the date of the stoppage of the bank; but there was a sum of 800*l.* to be invested for the benefit of certain persons, and an annuity of 100*l.* charged on the real and personal estate; and at the date of the bankruptcy he had not specifically provided for these bequests; but there were in his hands, besides the balance in the bank, other personal assets of the testatrix; and after providing for these bequests there would have been a surplus of 1,900*l.* to which he was entitled as residuary legatee. The trustee of the bankrupt's estate having brought an action against him to recover the amount of his overdrawn account, he sought to set off the balance in his favour on the executorship account:—Held, that the transfer of the balance of the deceased's account to his account, as executor, was equivalent to drawing out the whole amount and paying the same amount into a fresh account, and created a personal debt for money lent between him and the bank; the effect of it being opened as an executorship account was to affect the bank with notice if there were any equities attaching to the fund; but that under the circumstances there were no such equities as to prevent his treating the balance as a fund to which he was beneficially as well as legally entitled; and that, consequently he was entitled to set it off against the claim of the trustee of the bankers. Bailey v. Finch, 7 L. R., Q. B. 34; 41 L. J., Q. B. 83; 25 L. T. 871; 20 W. R. 294.

An administrator who had deposited trust moneys in a private bank on a separate account current, using ordinary prudence, was held not to be liable for the loss of the moneys through the failure of the bank, although the moneys had been suffered to remain so deposited for three and a half years after the death of the intestate, and for nearly a year and a half after the administrator had carried into chambers, in the suit, his accounts shewing a large balance against himself. Marcon, In re, Finch v. Marcon, 40 L. J., Ch. 537.

A wife being executrix of her father, paid money which she had received as such into a bank to an account in her own name as executrix. Her husband paid money of his own to this account, and the wife had drawn cheques upon the account for payment of debts due by the husband and for payment of household expenses. The husband died:—Held, that the wife was merely the agent of her husband, and that the money remaining in the bank belonged to his estate, and not to the wife's estate. Lloyd v. Pugh, 8 L. R., Ch. 88; 42 L. J., Ch. 282; 28 L. T., 250; 21 W. R. 346.

Company—Cheques of Directors.]—Directors of a company are not to be held personally liable to find cash for cheques drawn by them as officers of their company upon the company's bank, and which the bank may choose to honour when the company has no funds at the bank. Beattie v. Ebury (Lord), 7 L. R., H. L. 102; 44 L. J., Ch. 20; 30 L. T. 581; 22 W. R. 897. Affirming 7 L. R., Ch. 777; 41 L. J., Ch. 804; 27 L. T. 398; 20 W. R. 994.

A letter written by such directors, at a time when the company has funds at the bank, requesting the bankers to honour cheques of the company drawn in a particular manner, is only an intimation not to treat cheques as cheques of the company, unless signed in that manner; it is not any representation either of any authority in the directors to overdraw the account or that there will be funds forthcoming to answer the cheques, and it does not imply any undertaking on the part of any director signing it that he will personally pay or be answerable for any cheques, though drawn in that particular manner, if they should not be paid by the company. Ib.

As neither the directors who signed such letter nor those who, by cheques drawn in conformity therewith, subsequently overdraw the account incur any personal liability, so neither do such directors as at subsequent meetings confirm the letter, or acquiesce in the cheques drawn in conformity with it. Id.

Bankers, to whom on such cheques large sums were owing by a railway company, having obtained a transfer to two of their number of preference shares, on which nothing had been paid, as a collateral security for the advances made by them:—Held, that as on the literal construction of the correspondence which resulted in the transfer there was nothing to show that the shares were to be fully or at all paid up, there was no misrepresentation or liability on the part of the directors to pay what was due upon the shares. But that under the circumstances the bankers were entitled to be relieved from liability in respect of such shares, and to have their names cancelled in the register of the shareholders of the company. Id.

Two of the directors of a company, by a letter to the company's bankers, notified that their manager had authority to draw cheques on account of the company. Such two directors did not form a majority of the directors of the company, as required by their act of incorporation, so as to bind the company. Although the company's account was at the time overdrawn, and that fact was known to the two directors, the bankers honoured the manager's cheques on the authority so given to them. In an action by the bank against the two directors for advances made on account of the company upon the faith of their letter:—Held, that there was an implied warranty on their part, and that they were personally liable to the bank to the extent of the sums overdrawn by the manager subsequently to the date of their letter. Cherry v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 3 L. R., P. C. C. 24; 6 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 235.

2. THE ACCOUNT GENERALLY.

Relation between Customer and Bank is that of Creditor and Debtor.—The ordinary relation between a banker and his customers is merely that of debtor and creditor, and not of trustee and cestui que trust. Agra and Masterman's Bank, In re, Waring, Ex parte, 36 L. J., Ch. 151.

Therefore, where a firm paid a cheque into a branch bank in India to their current account after the stoppage of the parent bank in England, but before the branch had notice of that stoppage, and afterwards, on the same day, the branch received notice of the stoppage of the bank in England, and stopped itself:—Held, that an application by the firm to be repaid the amount of the cheque in full must be refused; but this order was without prejudice to a renewal of the application, if the applicants should find that their cheque had not been cashed until after the branch had received notice of the stoppage of the bank in England. Id.

The relation between a banker and customer who pays money into the bank, is the ordinary relation of debtor and creditor, with a super-added obligation arising out of the custom of bankers to honour the customers' drafts; and that relation is not altered by an agreement by the banker to allow interest on the balances in the bank. Foley v. Hill, 2 H. L. Cas. 28.

Giving a bond by a customer and his surety to the bankers of the former to secure all sums advanced or to be advanced to the customer, will not preclude the bankers from suing the customer for a balance of his account as upon a debt by simple contract. Holmes v. Bell, 3 M & G. 213; 3 Scott, N. R. 479.

Guarantees, continuing.]—A father, being desirous of obtaining advances for his son from a bank, gave the son a promissory note for 2,000*l.*, and gave the bank an agreement under seal to this effect, that, in consideration of the bank discounting the note for his son, certain deeds and documents which the father had deposited with the bank should remain with the bank as security for the payment of all money due or to become due from the son to the bank on any account whatsoever, and that he would pay the bank upon demand all such money, and he thereby charged the property comprised in such documents with the repayment:—Held, that this agreement was not limited to the 2,000*l.*, but was a continuing guarantee for all money already due, or which should become due, from the son to the bank. Burgess v. Ere, 13 L. R., Eq. 450; 41 L. J., Ch. 515; 26 L. T. 540; 20 W. R. 311.

Certain of the directors of a company guaranteed personally to the company's bankers the drafts of the agent of the company to the extent of 1,000*l.*, and 1,000*l.* further, undertaking, to provide the bankers with funds to meet the acceptances before maturity. The company kept a current account with the bankers, and the drafts of its agent were from time to time honoured and debited to this current account. One of the guarantors died and his estate was under the administration of the court. The company's current account had been constantly overdrawn; at the date of the testator's death it was overdrawn to the amount of 1,605*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*; and the company was now in liquidation:—Held, that the guarantees given were a continuing security not satisfied by the earlier credits in the current account, and that, therefore, the bankers were entitled to prove against the testator's estate for the sum of 1,605*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*, and interest at four per cent. from the date of the testator's death. Booth, In re, Browning v. Baldwin, 40 L. T. 248; 27 W. R. 644.

Determinable by Death.]—F. gave a guarantee to secure his son's account current with a bank, the guarantee to continue until six months after notice "under my hand of my intention to discontinue the same." He died, appointing his son his executor, and the account was continued nearly three years after his death, when the son became insolvent. No notice was ever given by the father or his son to determine the guarantee; but the bank was aware shortly after his death that his personal estate was of trifling amount, and that his realty was given to persons other than the son. On the bank seeking to prove against the father's estate under the guarantee:—Held, by Lord Romilly, M. R., that the power to determine was personal to the guarantor, and could not be exercised by his executors, and therefore that the guarantee determined on his death. Harris v. Fawcett, 8 L. R., Ch. 866; 42 L. J., Ch. 502; 29 L. T. 84.

On appeal, this view was doubted by the lords justices, who held, however, that the bank, knowing it was the debtor's duty, as executor, to give notice of determination, could not rely on its not being given. Id.

Held, also, that the guarantee had been treated by the parties as determined, and that, on that ground also, it could not be relied on. Id.

A continuing guarantee, in the absence of express provision, is revoked as to subsequent advances by notice of the death of the guarantor. (Couthard v. Clementson, 5 Q. B. D. 42; 49 L. J., Q. B. 204; 41 L. T. 798; 28 W. R. 355.)

Credit Account.—The defendants, bankers in London, agreed with K. & Co., merchants in New York, to open a credit account in favour of K. & Co. upon the terms that the defendants would accept drafts upon themselves by K. & Co. to be drawn against shipping documents for shipments of cotton by K. & Co. to Liverpool, and also against simultaneous remittances of bills on houses of first-rate standing without any bills of lading attached. The defendants charged K. & Co. a commission on all transactions effected under this agreement. The credit was subsequently divided into two accounts, A. and B., account A. being for drafts against simultaneous remittances, and account B. for drafts against blank credits and shipping documents. After the separate accounts were opened K. & Co. drew drafts upon and made remittances to the defendants in respect of each account; and K. & Co. inclosed each remittance in a letter to the defendants, specifying, almost invariably, the account to which it was to be credited, and each draft was also notified by a letter specifying the account to which it was to be debited. The defendants, in reply to such letters, notified the remittances and drafts to have been credited or debited to the respective accounts as directed. On the 22nd September, 1874, K. & Co. forwarded to the defendants two bills on mercantile firms and advised two drafts by themselves at sixty days upon the defendants. By a letter, inclosing the bills and advising the drafts, K. & Co. directed the defendants to place the bills to K. & Co.'s credit, and the drafts to their debit, in account A. Before the defendants received the bills and letter K. & Co. stopped payment and were afterwards adjudicated bankrupts under the law of the United States, and their property vested in the plaintiffs, who were assignees in bankruptcy. At the time K. & Co. stopped payment a considerable balance was due to the defendants on account B. The defendants refused to accept K. & Co.'s two drafts on them of the 22nd of September, and having retained the two bills until they became due, received payment on them and refused to give up the acceptances to the plaintiffs or to pay over to them any part of the proceeds:—Held, that the defendants held the two bills upon the condition precedent that they would accept the plaintiffs' drafts upon themselves, and that, the condition having been broken, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the proceeds of the two bills which the defendants had wrongfully converted to their own use. Seligmann v. Huth, 37 L. T. 488—C. A.

Held, also, that the defendants were not entitled to any set-off or counter-claim against the plaintiffs in respect of the balance due to the defendants on account B. at the time of the bankruptcy. Id.

Banker improperly transferring "Estate Account" to "Private Account."—P., being receiver of the rents of the R. estate, had a private account with his bankers. He asked leave to overdraw that account, to which the bankers assented, and at the same time he promised to introduce the R. estate account to the bankers. He accordingly overdraw his private account, and opened a separate account, called the "R. Estate Account." Afterwards the bankers, by his direction, transferred the balance of the R. estate account to the private account, which was then overdrawn. P. became insolvent:—Held, that the bankers were liable to the owner of the R. estate for the balance. Bodenham v. Hoskins, 2 De G., M. & G. 903; 21 L. J., Ch. 864; 16 Jur. 721.

Accounts with Trustees.—When a trustee pays trust money into a bank to his credit to a simple account with himself, not distinguished in any other manner, the debt thus constituted from the bank to him is one which belongs as specifically to the trust as the money would have done had it specifically been placed by the trustee in a particular repository, and so remained; and the case would not be varied by the circumstance of the bank holding also for the trustee, or owing also to him money, in every sense his own. But cheques drawn by the trustee in a general manner upon the bank, would for every purpose be ascribed and affect the account in the mode explained and laid down in Clayton's case, 1 Mer. 572. Pennell v. Deffell, 4 De G., M. & G. 372; 23 L. J., Ch. 115; 18 Jur. 273.

When money has been paid into the ordinary banking account of a company, not being in any way ear-marked, the company will not on an allegation that the money is impressed with a trust, such allegation not being admitted by the company, be restrained, on motion, from dealing with the money. Bank of Turkey v. Ottoman Company, 14 L. T. 884; 14 W. R. 819.

A., the farming bailiff of D. (after his employment as such had ceased), received a cheque in payment for wheat belonging to D., which he had sold on his account while acting as bailiff, and paid it in to his own account with his bankers, who received the cash for it, and gave A. credit for the amount, but afterwards, under an indemnity from D., refused to honour his drafts:—Held, that even assuming that the cheque had been improperly obtained by A., still, as between him and his bankers, the amount was recoverable by A., as money received by them to his use, or money paid. Tassell v. Cooper, 9 C. B. 509.

Charge of Commission and Interest.—A banking account, which was largely overdrawn, was for the half-year ending June, 1867, charged with interest at 5l. per cent., and with a gross sum of 500l. for commission, in lieu of the charge of one-half per cent. previously made. The pass-book balanced on this footing was sent to the customer, and the charges were explained to his agent (the customer himself being in weak health, and unable to attend to business matters). The customer died in December, 1867, and did not raise any objection to these charges:—Held, that the charge of 500l. for commission had been acquiesced in, and was valid for the half-year ending June, 1867; but that acquiescence could not be inferred for subsequent half-years, there being nothing in the entry for the particular half-year that amounted to a contract to the same effect in futuro. Williamson v. Williamson, 7 L. R., Eq. 542; 20 L. T. 389; 17 W. R. 607.

Held, also, that the right of the bank to charge compound interest terminated with the death of the customer; and that from that period simple interest only at 5l. per cent. was chargeable on the account. Ib.

Compound Interest.]—Where an account between a banker and his customer is kept at compound interest, and the customer dies, the final balance at his death, in the absence of contract, carries no interest. It is the same where the balance is in the customer's favour, and the banker dies or ceases to carry on business, or becomes bankrupt. Crosskill v. Bower, 32 Beav. 86; 32 L. J., Ch. 540; 9 Jur., N. S. 267; 8 L. T. 135; 11 W. R. 411.

A bankers' account was kept at compound interest. In 1847, the customer gave the bankers a security for all moneys then due, or thereafter to become due, "with interest for the same after the rate of 5l. for every 100l. by the year." In 1855 the customer assigned all his estate to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, and his banking account ceased:—Held, that under this security the bankers were entitled to compound interest down to the date of the creditors' deed, but to simple interest only afterwards. Ib.

Three trustees, two of whom were bankers, were employed to carry on a business and to borrow money "from any bankers or other persons" for that purpose. The bankers made advances of money to the trustees at compound interest:—Held, that, having regard to their fiduciary character, they could make no profit, and were entitled to simple interest only on their advances. Ib.

A firm of two bankers was accustomed to keep the accounts, both of the customers and of the partners, at compound interest. One partner died:—Held, that, in the absence of any special agreement, it was not proper to continue the accounts as between the surviving partner and the estate of the deceased partner at compound interest. Bate v. Robins, 32 Beav. 73.

When the accounts between banker and customer have been carried on for a series of years on a particular principle, the court will assume there is an agreement to that effect; but acquiescence in it does not amount to a settlement of account. Mosse v. Salt, 32 Beav. 269; 32 L. J., Ch. 756.

When a mortgage is given by a customer to his banker for a fixed sum, and not for the running balance, the banker cannot include that sum in the banking account, and charge compound interest on it. Ib.

Bankers had a mortgage and a banking account with their customer:—Held, that in ascertaining the amount due between them, the accounts must, in the first instance, be taken separately and on different principles. Ib.

Overdrawn.]—Where a customer gets his bankers to discount bills at a time when his account is largely overdrawn, and the amount is simply carried to the credit of his account, the bankers are holders for value, though no money was actually paid. Carew, In re, 31 Beav. 39.

Where interest is payable on an overdrawn banking account at the time of the bankruptcy of the bankers, their assignees may recover interest accruing subsequently to the bankruptcy. Pott v. Bevan, 8 Scott, N. R. 319; 7 M. & G. 604; 1 C. & K. 335; 13 L. J., C. P. 187.

VOL. I.

— Account at Branch Bank.]—In the absence of any special agreement or arrangement, there is no obligation on a banking company to honour the cheque of a customer presented at one of its branches where he has a balance standing to his credit, when he has overdrawn his account at another branch to an amount greater than such balance, so that the company is in fact not indebted to him. Garnet or Garnett v. McKewan, 8 L. R. Ex. 10; 42 L. J., Ex. 1; 27 L. T. 560; 21 W. R. 57.

Therefore, where a customer having an account at the Leighton Buzzard branch of a bank, which shewed a balance to its credit exceeding 25l., drew cheques to that amount on that branch. At the same time he was indebted to the bank at their Stony Stratford branch in an amount which having regard to his whole account, reduced his assets in the bank's hands to a few shillings only. The bank, without any notice to him, transferred the Stony Stratford debt to the Leighton Buzzard branch, and refused to pay the cheques on presentment. There was no special contract between the parties that each account should be kept separate:—Held, that the bank was entitled at any time to combine the accounts, and to charge the Leighton Buzzard account with the Stony Stratford debt. Ib.

General Principles of Branch Bank.]—The position of branch banks is, that in principle and in fact they are agencies of one principal banking corporation or firm, notwithstanding that they may be regarded as distinct for special purposes, e. g., that of estimating the time at which notice of dishonour should be given; or of entitling a banker to refuse payment of a customer's cheque except at that branch where he keeps his account. Prince v. Oriental Bank Corporation, 3 App. Cas. 325; 47 L. J., P. C. 42; 38 L. T. 41; 26 W. R. 543.

The holder of a promissory note presented it at the head office of the bankers of the maker for payment. They sent it to their branch at the place where the note was payable, where the clerk cancelled the signature, wrote "Paid" on the note, and transmitted a draft in respect of it to the head office:—Held, that the head office and branch being one and the same bank, the act of the clerk did not operate to charge the bank with money had and received to the use of the holder. Ib.

Joint or Separate.]—Where money is paid into a bank on the joint account of persons not partners in trade, the bankers are not discharged by payment to one of those persons, without the authority of the other. Innes v. Stephenson, 1 M. & Rob. 145.

But where the relation of banker and customer does not exist between a debtor and two or more joint creditors, payment of the debt to one is a good payment to all. Husband v. Davis, 2 L. M. & P. 50; 10 C. B. 645; 20 L. J., C. P. 118.

The rule that when money is deposited with a banker by two or more persons, not partners, payment is insufficient unless made to all, arises out of the relation of banker and customer, and is part of the law merchant. Ib.

The fact of an account having been opened with a banker by one of two partners in his own name is not conclusive to shew that the account.

was opened on his own behalf; but it is competent for the banker to prove that he was acting as the agent of the partnership, and that the account was theirs. Cooke v. Seeley, 2 Ex. 746; 17 L. J., Ex. 286.

The mere circumstance, however, of the money deposited being partnership property is not sufficient for that purpose. Id.

Where a banking firm makes payments professedly on behalf of a customer (who has an account with the firm), but without his authority, and the sum so paid is entered to his debit in the books of the firm, and the firm afterwards admits new partners, the new firm is not liable to the customer for such payments unless there is an agreement between the two firms and the customer, that the new firm shall take upon themselves the actual liabilities of the old firm. Crawford v. Cocks or Cox, 6 Ex. 287; 20 L. J., Ex. 169.

Transfer of Accounts.]—The acting member of a firm has implied authority to assent to the transfer of their account from one banker to another, without the express assent of the others. Beal v. Caddick, 2 H. & N. 326; 26 L. J., Ex. 356.

Upon such a transfer, however, the actual amount due is alone transferred, and the banker to whom the amount is transferred has no other rights than the party from whom it is transferred. Id.

In an action by the banker against the partner, whose express assent to the transfer was not obtained, to recover the alleged balance of the account transferred, the question would be what was the real and true balance of account as between the original parties, debtor and creditor; and the partner sued is entitled to raise any question as to the amount due from the firm which he might have raised in an action at the suit of the original creditor. Id.

But where the balance due from the firm at the time of their transfer of their account has been overstoppped by subsequent payments to their credit, as to which there has been nothing to take the case out of the ordinary principle of appropriation of payments to the earlier items, the cause of action is not the balance of account existing at the time of transfer (which has thus been extinguished), but the balance subsequently become due. Id.

A. signed a note jointly and severally with B., the elder, as security for his account with his bankers. They were aware that B., the elder, a maltster, paid in to his account sums received by him from his son, who was in business as a miller, and paid his son such sums as he required; but the cheques were drawn and the accounts kept in the name of the father, and it did not appear that he and his son were partners. Afterwards, a balance being due from the father, he, in the son's presence, agreed with the bankers that in future the cheques should be drawn and the accounts kept in the name of B. & Son, and this was done, but nothing was said to the son as to the transfer to the new account of the old balance due to the bankers from B., the elder, and no balance was struck on their books; it was simply carried on to the new account, with the account of the credit on the other side, and the pass book was unaltered. Afterwards a larger amount than the amount of the old balance was paid in generally to the new account, but B. & Son failed, there being then a balance against them exceeding the amount of the note. In an action against the sureties, the judge having left it to the jury whether the arrangement really was made as appeared in the books, and they having found for the bankers, the court refused to set aside the verdict as against the weight of evidence, that the old account was transferred to the father and son; so that A. was not discharged. Allaway v. Harris, 29 L. J., Ex. 214.

Right of Set-off.]—If a customer borrows money from his bankers, and gives a bond to secure its repayment, and the balance upon the general banking account is afterwards in favour of the customer, a right to set off such balance against the amount due on the bond exists both at law and in equity. Cavendish v. Geaves, 24 Beav. 168; 27 L. J., Ch. 314; 3 Jur., N. S. 1086.

But if the firm is altered, and the bond is assigned by the obligees to the new firm, with notice of the assignment to the obligor, and the balance upon the general banking account is afterwards in favour of the customer, no right of set-off exists at law; but in equity the customer is entitled to set off the balance due on the banking account against the amount due on the bond. Id.

So, if the bond is assigned to a stranger, without notice to the obligor, the same right of set-off exists, and the assignee takes the assignment, subject to all the equities which affected the assignors. Id.

The defendants, being indebted for money advanced to them on their banking account by their bankers, who subsequently became bankrupts, received from their customers, on the day on which the bank stopped payment and the day following, but without notice of an act of bankruptcy, and before any docket had been struck, certain £l. notes of the bank payable to bearer, on demand, in part payment of antecedent debts, on the condition that they were to debit themselves with so much only as they should receive from the assignees for such notes. They also received, during the same period, other £l. notes of the bank, for which they were to pay so much only as they should receive from the assignees for such notes. An action having been brought by the assignees of the bankrupts against the defendants for money lent by the bankrupts before their bankruptcy:—Held, that the defendants had a beneficial interest in the first-mentioned class of notes, and were, therefore, entitled to set them off; but that they were not entitled to set off the last-mentioned class, as they held them merely as trustees for others. Forster v. Wilson, 12 M. & W. 191; 13 L. J., Ex. 209.

A corporation (which besides its municipal character, filled those of managers of public baths and warehouses, and of a local board of health) kept three separate accounts at its bankers, viz., "The Corporation Account," "The Baths and Washhouses Revenue Account," and "The Local Board of Health Account." Upon the first account the corporation was indebted to the bank, and upon the others the bank was indebted to the corporation in an equal amount. In an action by the banker to recover the balance due to him on account No. 1:—Held, that the corporation was entitled to set off the debts due to it on the other two accounts, Padder v. Preston (Mayor, &c.), 12 C. B., N. S. 535; 31 L. J., C. P. 291; 9 Jur., N. S. 496; 10 W. R. 773.

Appropriation of Money by Bank.—C. draws a cheque on his bankers, payable to A. and B., assignees of D., or bearer, and writes the name of their bankers across it. B., who has another private account with the bankers, pays the cheque in to that account:—Held, that the bankers are justified in applying it to that account; the drawer's writing the names of the bankers of the payees of the cheque across it not being, according to the custom of trade, information to the bankers that the money is that of the payees. Stewart v. Lee, M. & M. 158.

To an action on a joint and several note of the defendant and S., payable to the plaintiff at six months after date, the defendant pleaded payment, and by way of equitable defence, that he made the note at the request and as surety for S., to secure a debt due from S. to the plaintiff (a banking company), and without value; that the plaintiff took the note from the defendant as surety only; that the plaintiff, without the knowledge or consent of the defendant, for a good and valuable consideration, gave S. time for payment of the note, and forebore to enforce payment: and that the plaintiff could, and might, and ought to have obtained payment from S., had he required it, and had not given him time for the payment:—Held, that proof that the plaintiff had funds to the credit of the principal debtor shortly after the bill became due, and had abstained from applying those funds in discharge of the note, which remained unpaid, did not sustain either the plea of payment or the equitable defence. Strong v. Foster, 17 C. B. 201; 25 L. J., C. P. 106.

But where money was paid into a banking-house for the purpose of taking up a particular bill, which was then lying there for payment; and the bankers' clerk said at the time that he could not give up the bill till he had seen his master:—Held, that it was money had and received to the use of the owner and holder of the bill, and could not be applied by the bankers to the general account of the acceptor who had paid in the money. De Bernales v. Fuller, 14 East, 590, n.; 2 Camp. 426.

Two several banking firms, carrying on business in the same country town, were in the habit of exchanging notes and securities with each other, and settling their balance by a prescribed mode. One of the firms became bankrupt, and, at the time of the act of bankruptcy, each firm had in its possession notes and securities of the other to nearly the same amount. The provisional assignee of the bankrupt firm being apprised of this fact, presented and obtained payment of the notes of the solvent firm, partly at their bank, and partly from their agents in London, who did not know the situation of the parties:—Held, that the solvent firm might recover the amount of the notes, in an action for money had and received, against such assignee. Edmeads v. Newman, 2 D. & R. 568; 1 B. & C. 418. See 7 D. & R. 523.

— Transferring from Account of one Customer to that of another—Equal to Payment.—The plaintiff and defendant each kept an account with a banker at M. In October the plaintiff desired the defendant to pay into his account a sum due to him for rent. The defendant wrote to the plaintiff, stating that he had caused the amount to be transferred to his account, and the plaintiff sent him a receipt by return of post; the sum, however, was not actually transferred until the 8th of December. On the 9th, notice of the transfer was sent to the plaintiff by post, which did not reach him till the 11th. On the 10th the banker stopped payment:—Held, that the transfer was equivalent to payment. Eyles v. Ellis, 12 Moore, 306; 4 Bing. 112.

— Against amount of Bill discounted by Bank.—Where bankers had discounted a bill for one of their customers, and on the morning of the day on which it became due wrote it off in his account, having no notice that he was then dead:—Held, that they might reimburse themselves out of funds belonging to him in their hands. Rogerson v. Ladbroke, 1 Bing. 93; 7 Moore, 412.

A. & B. severally kept cash at the same banking-house. On the 13th of November, A. paid in a draft for 250*l.* drawn by B. in favour of the former, upon the bankers, to whom the latter was considerably indebted. The draft was received by the bankers' clerk without anything being said respecting it, or any entry made of it in their books. In the course of the same day, the bankers discounted bills for B. to the amount of 1,600*l.*, the produce of which they expressly appropriated to the charges of the day, consisting of bills accepted by him for 1,342*l.*; two drafts for 50*l.* each, given to other persons; and the draft for 250*l.* in favour of A., which was presented before the latter drafts. The bills and the two 50*l.* drafts were paid by the bankers on the same day, leaving a balance only of 137*l.* in their hands. On the morning of the 14th they wrote a letter to A., stating that they had not carried the draft for 250*l.* to his credit, but that they would "retain it by them in the hope of its being provided for;" and they promised B. that they would pay it when they had funds. On that day the bankers discounted other bills for B. to the amount of 699*l.*, the produce of which they specifically appropriated to claims upon him, amounting to 599*l.*; after which an unappropriated balance of 98*l.* remained in the bankers' hands:—Held, that they were liable to A. for the whole amount of the 250*l.* draft, though they had not at any moment an unappropriated sum in their hands sufficient to cover the draft. Kilsby v. Williams, 1 D. & R. 476; 5 B. & A. 815.

Payment of Cancelled Cheque—Reasonable Ground for Suspicion—Liability of Bank.—If bankers pay a cancelled cheque drawn by a customer, under circumstances which ought to have excited their suspicion, and induced them to make inquiries before payment, they cannot take credit for the amount. Scholey v. Ramsbottom, 2 Camp. 485.

Duty and Obligation in paying Acceptances under Instructions of Customers.—A merchant instructed his banker to accept the drafts of a third person, on being handed a clean bill of lading of a cargo consigned to the latter; a bill of lading, professing to answer the description in the instructions, was handed by such third person to the banker, who accepted his drafts, and, it turning out that the bill of lading was forged, paid the amount of the acceptances:—Held, that the banker was not bound to see that the bill of lading was genuine, but only that it was regular on the face of it. Ulster Bank v. Synnott, 5 Ir. R., Eq. 595.

The indorsement of the bill of lading purported to be signed by an agent of the shippers:—Held, that the banker was not responsible for the authority of the agent to sign for his principals. Ib.

There are in mercantile transactions two forms of indorsement by an agent; one, simply "p.," "pro," "for," which expresses an authority generally; the other, "per pro," or "p.p.," which expresses an authority created by procuration or power of attorney: the bill of lading was indorsed by the agent in the first of the above forms:—Held, that this did not make the indorsement so irregular on the face of it as to render the banker liable for neglect of duty. Ib.

A merchant, being indebted to his banker, deposited with him certificates of railway debenture stock, accompanied by a letter stating that they were so deposited "against acceptances made" on his account:—Held, that the expression "acceptances made" might mean either "acceptances which have been heretofore made," or "acceptances which shall have been made during the continuance of the security;" and that being, therefore, ambiguous, parol evidence was admissible to aid the construction as to whether it was intended to cover future as well as past acceptances. Ib.

Disclosing State of Customer's Account.]—In an action by a customer against his banker for disclosing the state of the customer's account without justifiable cause, the question was left to the jury whether under the circumstances it was reasonable and proper to make such disclosure:—Held, that assuming the existence of a legal duty on a banker not to disclose his customer's account, except upon a reasonable and a proper occasion, the question whether the disclosure was made on such an occasion was rightly left to the jury. Hardy v. Veasey, 3 L. R., Ex. 107; 37 L. J., C. P. 76; 17 L. T. 607.

Bankers having disclosed the state of a customer's account to another of their customers, one of his creditors:—Held, that it was for the jury whether there was a duty not to make such a disclosure, although there was no evidence of it beyond the existence of the relation of banker and customer. Foster v. Bank of London, 3 F. & F. 214.

Under Companies Acts.]—A banker with whom a contributory has formerly kept an account may be summoned under the Companies Act, 1862, s. 115, and compelled to produce his books relating to the contributory's account, and to give all information in his power touching his affairs. Contract Corporation, In re, Forbes's case, 41 L. J., Ch. 467; 26 L. T. 680; 20 W. R. 585; S. C., nom. Druitt's case, 14 L. R., Eq. 6.

Following Trust Money.]—If money held by a person in a fiduciary character, though not as trustee, has been paid by him to his account at his bankers, the person for whom he held the money can follow it, and has a charge on the balance in the bankers' hands. Dale & Co., Ex parte (11 Ch. D. 772), dissented from. Hallett's Estate, In re, Knatchbull v. Hallett, 13 Ch. D. 696; 49 L. J., Ch. 415; 42 L. T. 421; W. R. 732—C. A. Reversing 41 L. T. 186.

Choses in Action.]—On discounting bills of a firm of merchants drawn on their consignees, the bankers gave (according to the usual custom) marginal notes to represent the balance of the price of the bills which was retained by them till the bills were paid, and which was to be then paid over, subject to any claim by the bankers. These notes were deposited by the merchants as security, and were so held when the merchants went into liquidation, the bills of exchange not having then been paid:—Held, that the notes did not represent "debts" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 15, subs. 5, but that they were excepted from the operation of the clauses as choses in action. Kempe, Ex parte, Fastnedge, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 383; 43 L. J., Bk. 50; 30 L. T. 109; 22 W. R. 462.

Deposit Note—Not a Security for Money.]—A banker's deposit note is not a security for money so as to pass under a bequest in a will "of all bonds, promissory notes, and other securities for money." Hopkins v. Abbott, 19 L. R., Eq. 222; 44 L. J., Ch. 316; 31 L. T. 820; 23 W. R. 227.

Acceptance of New Firm.]—A firm of bankers was in the habit of receiving money on deposit, paying interest thereon, and giving deposit notes. Whenever a change was made, either by additional payments or by drawings out, in the amount of the deposit, the old deposit note was given up, and a new one given for the new balance. In 1872 two new partners were taken into the firm. One of the original partners died in the same year, the other original partner died in 1874. The business was carried on by the new partners alone until 1875, when the bank stopped payment. The firm continued to receive money on deposit, giving notes as before, such notes bearing the same signature as those issued by the original partnership. The new firm also paid, or credited, interest to the depositors until the bank failed. After the failure the depositors carried in proofs against the estates of the bankrupt partners, and then sought to prove for the balance against the estates of an original partner:—Held, that the depositors had, by their acts, accepted the liability of the new partners in lieu of that of the old partners, and that the latter were consequently released. Billborough v. Holmes, 5 Ch. D. 255; 46 L. J., Ch. 446; 35 L. T. 75; 25 W. R. 297.

Negotiability of.]—M., shortly before his death, indorsed a bank deposit receipt, and delivered it to S., stating that it was for his (M.'s) niece H. S. indorsed the document, and, after M.'s death, presented it to the bank, who transferred the amount to S. without having had notice of M.'s death; in an action by the administratrix of M. against the bank:—Held, first that the deposit receipt was not a negotiable instrument passing by indorsement. Moore v. Ulster Banking Company, 11 Ir. R., O. L. 512.

Held, secondly, that there was no equitable assignment of it. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that if the transaction constituted S. an agent of M., his authority was revoked by M.'s death. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the transaction did not amount to a donatio mortis causa. Ib.

Pass-Books.]—A change of the title of the firm in a banker's pass-book, and entries therein to the credit of a new firm, of the interest of securities given by the customers to the original firm, is notice of the assignment to the new firm of the securities given by the customer to the old firm. Cavendish v. Geaves, 24 Beav. 163; 26 L. J., Ch. 314; 3 Jur., N. S. 1086.

Entries in a pass-book are only prima facie evidence against a banker. Commercial Bank of Scotland v. Rhind, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 643.

Where an entry is alleged to have been made by mistake in the wrong place in a customer's pass-book, by the banker's clerk, but by the customer denied to be any mistake, the question is for the jury upon the evidence. Snead v. Williams, 9 L. T. 115.

Operation of the Statute of Limitations.]—C., being about to open an account with a banking company, gave them a promissory note, dated the 4th of December, 1855, whereby he and S., the defendant, jointly and severally promised to pay to the company, on demand, 200*l*. At the same time they signed and delivered to the company a memorandum, stating that the note was given as a collateral security for the banking account intended to be kept by C., and that the company should be at liberty at any time thereafter to recover from them, or each of them, up to the full amount thereof, every sum which C. should at any time thereafter become indebted or liable to the company, for any moneys paid, lent, or advanced by them to or for him; and in case of the company suing on the note, its production should be conclusive evidence of the amount claimed by them from C. being due and owing by him. The banking account was accordingly opened with C., and on the 31st of December, 1855, he was indebted to the company in 173*l*. No demand of payment was made, or balance struck until the 30th of June, 1858, when the sum of 194*l*. was due from C. to the company. A balance was afterwards struck every half year, the company from time to time making advances, and C. paying money into the bank with which his account was credited. The sums so credited exceeded the amount of the note. The account continued until February, 1861, when it was closed with a balance due to the company of 175*l*. In March, 1862, the company brought an action against the defendant on the note:—Held, that the cause of action was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Hartland v. Jukes, 1 H. & C. 667; 9 Jur., N. S. 180; 7 L. T. 7902; 11 W. R. 519.

If money deposited with a banker by his customer remains in the banker's hands for six years, without any payment by him of the principal or allowance of interest, the statute of limitations is a bar to its recovery. Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321; 16 L. J., Ex. 210; 11 Jur. 289.

Retaining Balance to meet Discounted Bills.]—Bankers having in their hands a balance standing to the credit of a customer, refused to honour his cheques, and claimed a right to retain the balance in their hands to cover a possible liability from the customer in respect of running bills which they had discounted for him. The customer brought an action against the bankers for the balance of his account in their hands and to obtain damages for breach of contract, by reason of such refusal. After the commencement of the action, one of the bills was dishonoured, and the acceptors of others stopped payment. The court, on the eve of trial, granted an injunction to restrain the customer from proceeding with the action. Agra and Masterman's Bank v. Hoffman, 34 L. J., Ch. 285; 11 Jur., N. S. 335; 11 L. T. 701; 13 W. R. 226.

3. APPROPRIATION OF PAYMENTS.

Ordinary.]—In an ordinary banking account the first item of the debit side is discharged by the first item of the credit side. Henniker v. Wigg, D. & M. 160; 4 Q. B. 792.

But where the plaintiffs were bankers, and one of the defendants, upon opening an account with them, had borrowed of them 1,000*l*., for which he, with the other defendants, became bound to the plaintiffs, with a condition for repayment with interest by a certain day, and continued afterwards to pay in and draw out money upon the usual footing of a banker's account, and the first sum entered to his debit on the account was partly made up of the 1,000*l*., to secure which the bond had been given:—Held, that the bond was not satisfied by sums subsequently paid in exceeding in amount the 1,000*l*., it not being the intention of the parties that the first item of the debit side should be reduced by the first item of the credit side, but that the bond should stand to secure the plaintiffs against such advances as they should from time to time make to the defendant. Id.

An account was continued in the ordinary form of banking accounts, charging the customer with the whole debt, from time to time, in the half-yearly balances; but the parties were ignorant of the fact that the legal rule of appropriation would carry subsequent payments to the discharge of the earlier guaranteed debt. At a later period, one of the executors, also a partner in the bank, wrote a letter to the customer, amounting to a representation that the payments into his account were appropriated to the latter (unsecured) items of debt:—Held, that the ignorance of the parties did not prevent the operation of the rule in Clayton's case (1 Mer. 585). Merriman v. Ward, 1 Johns. & H. 371.

Held also, that an appropriation of past payments could not be made by an executor, so as to revive a lapsed liability of his estate, and that the letter had no retrospective operation. Id.

Held also, that the subsequent payments by the creditor, made on the faith of the representations in the letter, must be appropriated to the later items of debt. Id.

A payment by a customer can be appropriated by the bank to a debt due to the banker and his former partner, instead of to a debt due to the banker alone. Snead v. Williams, 9 L. T., 115.

Money Paid into Bank to meet Bills of Exchange.]—A merchant in England proposed that his consignees, merchants in Sydney, should make advances against bills to be drawn by him for the amount of goods shipped to their care, and that the proceeds of the sales above the advances should be placed in liquidation of an old claim which they had against him. This was assented to, and by letter they stated that "they should retire the acceptances to bills from the proceeds of the sales." Afterwards the consignees, being in want of money, directed that a firm of bankers

(in whose partnership they had a common partner) should receive, in satisfaction of advances made by them to the consignees, the proceeds of the sales of the goods so sent to the consignees by the merchant. The consignees became bankrupts:—Held, that the bankers had, by the action of the common partner, notice of the arrangement as to the proceeds of the sales of the goods consigned and that remittances in the hands of the bankers were to be appropriated first to the payment of the merchant's acceptances, and subject thereto to the discharge of the old claim of the consignees. Steele v. Stuart, 14 L. T., 620.

A, having accepted a bill of exchange paid money into his bank upon the express understanding that it was to be applied in taking up the bill at maturity. He suddenly died before the bill fell due, and the bank retained the money in satisfaction of moneys owing to them upon his general account. The bill was returned dishonoured to the drawers, who thereupon sued the bank in equity for the amount:—Held that there was no privity to sustain the suit. Hill v. Royds, 8 L. R., Eq. 290; 38 L. J., Ch. 538; 20 L. T., 842.

The assignees of a bankrupt brought an action against a bank to recover a sum belonging to the bankrupt, and alleged to have been in the hands of the bank at the date of adjudication of bankruptcy. The sum, in pursuance of an agreement between the bank and the bankrupt previously to adjudication, had been carried by the bank to a special account, as security against bills, not yet at maturity, drawn by the bankrupt and discounted by the bank:—Held, that the action failed, since by the contract the sum claimed formed no part of the bankrupt's estate, but was rightly in the hands of the bank at the time of the action. Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China v. Evans, 21 L. T., 407—P. C.

Customers of country bankers paid into the bankers a sum of money in bank notes and also some bills of exchange to be remitted to London in order to meet certain acceptances. The bankers sent to their London agents the bills and some bank notes, with a letter directing them to pay a certain sum of money, also giving them notice of the acceptances as payable at their bank, and giving directions as to other business. The country bankers stopped payment, owing a large balance to the London bankers:—Held, that as between the country customers and the London bankers there was no appropriation of the bills and notes to meet the acceptances, and that the London bankers could retain the bill and notes without meeting the acceptances. Johnson v. Roberts, 10 L. R., Ch. 505; 44 L. J., Ch. 678; 33 L. T., 138; 23 W. R. 763 (affirming 44 L. J., Ch. 465; 32 L. T. 446).

M. paid a certain sum into a country bankers' with written directions to apply it to meet a bill of exchange payable the next day at the country bankers' London agents. The country bankers stopped payment the next day without having advised their London agents of the payment of the sum, and the bill on being presented was dishonoured:—Held, that the country bankers having made no specific appropriation of the sum, A. was only entitled to prove as a general creditor. Barned's Banking Company, In re, Massey, Ex parte, 39 L. J., Ch. 635; 22 L. T. 853; 18 W. R. 818.

Where an acceptor of a bill of exchange paid money to his bankers (at whose correspondents' house it was payable), for the purpose of taking it and other bills up, and they promised him to apply it to such purposes, and entered the particular bill to their credit in their books, but it did not appear that they had advised their correspondents to pay it:—Held, that the drawer, the holder of the bill, could not sue the bankers for the amount of the bill, there being no privity to sustain the action. Moore v. Bushell, 27 L. J., Ex. 8.

A party, before his bankruptcy, paid into the hands of a banking company money, to be applied in discharge of three bills of exchange; but being indebted to the company to a larger amount, they, instead of performing their contract, put the money to his account. One of the bills was consequently dishonoured, and the other two remained in the hands of the holders until the bankruptcy:—Held, that the assignees were entitled to recover the full amount of the money paid into the hands of the company; as the true measure of damages was the amount which the bankrupt himself might have recovered if he had not become bankrupt, and not the ultimate loss to the bankrupt's estate according to the proofs upon it. Hill v. Smith, 12 M. & W. 618; 13 L. J., Ex. 243; 8 Jur. 179.

Trustee paying in Trust Money to Private Account.—If a person who holds money as a trustee or in a fiduciary character pays it to his account at his bankers, and mixes it with his own money, and afterwards draws out sums by cheques in the ordinary manner:—Held, by the Court of Appeal (dissentiente Thesiger, L. J.), that the rule in Clayton's case (1 Mer. 572), attributing the first drawings out to the first payments in, does not apply; and that the drawer must be taken to have drawn out his own money in preference to the trust money. Pennell v. Deffell (4 D., M. & G. 372) on this point not followed. Hallett's Estate, In re, Knatchbull v. Hallett, 13 Ch. D., 696; 49 L. J., Ch. 415; 42 L. T. 421; 28 W. R. 732—C. A. Reversing 41 L. T. 186.

As between Cestuis que Trustent.—Held, by Fry, J., that as between two cestuis que trustent whose money the trustee has paid into his own account at his bankers, the rule in Clayton's case applies, so that the first sum paid in will be held to have been first drawn out. Id.

Custom of Bill Brokers re-discounting Bills with their Bankers.—It being proved to be the common and almost invariable practice of bill brokers in the city of London, not to indorse each bill of exchange which they have discounted for a customer when they re-discount it with their bankers, but to give to the bankers a general guarantee for all bills which they re-discount with them:—Held, that when an accommodation bill is drawn and accepted for the purpose of raising money for the drawer and the acceptor, the drawer in discounting the bill with bill brokers in the city of London has an implied authority from the acceptor to deal with them in the ordinary course of their business, and, consequently, that the bill brokers have an implied authority from the acceptor to make themselves liable on the bill under their guarantee to their bankers, and are, in the event of the bankruptcy of the acceptor, entitled to prove against his estate for what they have paid to the bankers in respect of the bill under their guarantee. Bishop, Ex parte, Fox, In re, 15 Ch. D. 400; 50 L. J., Ch. 18; 43 L. T. 165; 29 W. R. 144—C. A.

Solicitor paying Client's money into Private Account.—A solicitor being entrusted with 5,000*l.* belonging to his client, for the purpose of investing it on mortgage, paid it to his general account at his bankers, and never applied it to the purpose intended. Before his death, which happened about eighteen months afterwards, the solicitor drew out various sums exceeding the 5,000*l.*, together with the balance previously standing to his credit, and also paid in considerable sums, so that the balance at the time of his death standing to his credit was 2,700*l.* The client filed a bill against his administrator claiming the balance at the bankers as trust money, and moved for an injunction to restrain the administrator and the bankers from dealing with the fund:—Held, that the sums drawn out by the solicitor must be appropriated to the sums paid to his credit in the order in which they had been paid in, and the injunction was refused. Brown v. Adams, 4 L. R., Ch. 764; 21 L. T., 71; 17 W. R. 999.

In other Cases.—Certain of the directors of a company guaranteed personally to the company's bankers the drafts of the agent of the company to the extent of 1,000*l.*, and 1,000*l.* further, undertaking to provide the bankers with funds to meet the acceptances before maturity. The company kept a current account with the bankers, and the drafts of its agent were from time to time honoured and debited to this current account. One of the guarantors died and his estate was under the administration of the court. The company's current account had been constantly overdrawn; at the date of the testator's death it was overdrawn to the amount of 1,605*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*; and the company was now in liquidation:—Held, that the guarantees given were a continuing security not satisfied by the earlier credits in the current account, and that, therefore, the bankers were entitled to prove against the testator's estate for the sum of 1,605*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* and interest at four per cent. from the date of the testator's death. Booth, In re, Browning v. Baldwin, [40 L. T. 248; 27 W. R. 644.

A customer borrowed from his bankers 2,000*l.*, which was placed to the credit of his current account, and to secure the debt gave them ten promissory notes payable at intervals of a week, a surety undertaking that in the event of the notes not being paid to secure the amount due. On the first five due dates, the sums represented by the first five notes respectively were debited by the bankers to the customer in the current account; and on each of the first two due dates enough cash was paid in to the account in the course of the day to liquidate the amount of the note. On the remaining three days the balance throughout the day was against the customer. The amounts of the last five notes were not entered by the bankers in the account at all. The payments in to the credit of C. to his current account and to another special account after the last note became due, were sufficient to cover all debits up to and including the last note; but the accounts were during all this time overdrawn:—Held, that the bankers were bound to apply all moneys paid in first to the notes secured by the surety which had fallen due; and that the debt was, moreover, discharged, on the principle of Clayton's case (1 Mer. 605). Kinnaird v. Webster, 10 Ch. D. 139; 48 L. J., Ch. 348; 39 L. T. 494; 27 W. R. 212.

A customer paid in a sum of money to a country banker, with instructions to remit 500*l.*, part of the sum, to a London banker to meet acceptances of the customer. The banker on the same day sent several bills to a bill-broker, directing him to remit the proceeds to the London banker, and directed the London banker to meet the acceptances. Next day the country banker stopped payment:—Held, that the 500*l.* was appropriated, and that the customer was entitled to recover it back in full. Farley v. Turner, 26 L. J., Ch. 710; 3 Jur., N. S. 532.

4. ADVANCES.

On Security of Consignments—Duty of Bank as to honouring Cheques of Borrower.—Where bankers have taken up bills for a customer on the security of the produce of consignments, and by a course of dealing with him have permitted him to draw on his account current, without reference to the advances on the consignments, they cannot, by charging that account with the advances, in the absence of express notice, treat it as overdrawn, and dishonour his cheques, before the consignments are realized. Cumming v. Shand, 5 H. & N. 95; 29 L. J., Ex. 129; 1 L. T., 300; 8 W. R. 182.

By Agent of Bank—Knowledge of Agent that Money would be Misapplied.—Where a local agent of a banking company in that character advances money of the company by way of loan, and the borrower, to the agent's knowledge, is obtaining the money for the sole purpose of misapplying it, the company acquires no better title than the agent would have had, had the case been his own, or than the borrower. Collinson v. Lister, 7 De G., Mac. & G. 634.

On Railway Stock—Constructive Notice as to Ownership.—Bankers advanced to customers 300*l.* to redeem some railway stock which had been transferred to another firm as a security for that sum. The stock was thereupon transferred in blank to the bankers. Subsequently, the customers, in a letter to the bankers, stated that they had been requested by their principal to extend the term of the loan on the stock. The stock actually belonged to a third party, A:—Held, that, after the receipt of this letter, the bankers had constructive notice of A.'s right to the stock, and that no subsequent advances made by the bankers to the customers could affect the stock. Locke v. Prescott, 32 Beav. 261.

Bank Paying Proceeds of Note Given by Minor to his Creditor.—When a bank, with knowledge of the relative position of the parties, places the proceeds of a promissory note, which has been made in their favour by A. (a person just come of age), unreservedly in the power of B. (a person who stands in loco parentis to A.), knowing at the time that B. claims to be a creditor of A. to a large amount for necessities supplied, and B. afterwards misappropriates the money, the bank will be restrained from suing on the note. Dettmar v. Metropolitan and Provincial Bank, 1 H. & M. 641; 10 L. T. 63.

To Promoters of Railway Bill.]—A bank agreed to advance to the promoters of a railway bill the sum required by the standing orders, on the undertaking that unless the money was repaid before the third reading in the House of Lords, the bill should not be proceeded with. The money was not repaid before the third reading, but the bank agreed that the bill should be read a third time on the undertaking that a bond should be executed in pursuance of a clause in the act, and that the directors should concur in all acts necessary to obtain a return of the deposit. The directors having refused to join in such an application, and a bill having been filed in equity in consequence by the bank:—Held, that such a bill was sustainable. Scott v. Oakeley, 33 Beav. 501; 33 L. J., Ch. 612; 10 Jur., N. S. 648; 10 L. T. 801; 12 W. R. 897.

Agreement by Customer to give Security—Consideration—Forbearance of Bank.]—Where a customer being called on by his bankers to give security for money due from him on a loan account, agreed by letter to give security, and a bill which had been filed in equity to enforce such agreement, was demurred to, on the ground that the agreement was without consideration:—Held, that the forbearance of the bankers to enforce payment of the existing debt, in consequence of the agreement, was a sufficient consideration to support it, and the demurrer was overruled. Alliance Bank v. Broom, 2 Drew. & Sm. 289; 34 L. J., Ch. 256; 10 Jur., N. S. 1121.

To Agent Pledging Bill of Lading—Mala Fides—Rights of Principal.]—A banian or an agent in India was entrusted by his principals with a bill of lading for a particular purpose, and he pledged the same mala fide, without the consent of his principals, to a native banker, for advances made to himself:—Held, that in order to invalidate a pledge so made, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, s. 3, it is necessary that the court or jury should find that the lender had notice of the agent's mala fides, or want of authority to pledge the goods. Gobind Chunder Sein v. Ryan, 15 Moore, P. C. C. 230.

To establish such notice, it is sufficient to shew that the circumstances attending the transaction were such as that a reasonable man of business, applying his understanding to them, would certainly know that the agent had not authority to make the pledge, even if the agent was not also acting mala fide towards his principals. Id.

Discounting Bills given by Partner in the Name of Firm, for Partner's own Purposes—Notice to Bank.]—A partner has, generally, full authority to deal with the partnership property for partnership purposes, and if the business is such as ordinarily requires bills of exchange, he can, unless restrained by agreement, draw, indorse and accept bills in his own name for partnership purposes. But if a person dealing with the individual partner has reason to think that what is done in the partnership name is done for private purposes, he is put upon inquiry to ascertain the extent of the partner's authority; otherwise he must depend on the right of the partner, or rely on circumstances sufficient to repel the presumption of fraud. Darlington

Joint Stock District Banking Company, Ex parte, Riches, In re, 34 L. J., Bk. 10; 11 Jur., N. S. 122; 11 L. T. 651; 13 W. R. 353.

So where a partner drew bills in the name of a partnership firm, and obtained acceptances to them from various persons by fraudulent misrepresentation of what it was that was being signed, and then indorsed the bills, so accepted, with the name of the firm, and again indorsed them over to himself:—Held, that the partner's private bankers, who had discounted the bills, having full notice that their customer was using partnership property for his private purposes, and seeing that all the signatures, except the acceptances, were in his handwriting, were guilty of gross negligence, and could not be allowed to prove in bankruptcy for the loss they had sustained on the fraudulent acceptances against the estate of the surviving partners. Id.

To Executor privately out of Executorialship Account.]—A. being indebted at his death to a bank for a sum, as a security for which he had deposited with them the title deeds of an estate, by his will empowered his executors to charge his real estates in aid of his personal estate. His widow and sole executrix was allowed by the bank to draw upon "A's Executorialship Account," and had deposited the title deeds of part of A's real estate as a security for the increased amount due to the bank and future advances. The moneys were drawn out from time to time in small sums, and applied by the widow for her own personal expenses, and in carrying on A's farm, as well as in payment of his debts:—Held, that, in the absence of any notice to the bank that the widow was committing a breach of trust in applying the money for her own purposes, they were entitled to prove as creditors for the amount of their advances on the executorialship account secured by the deposit of title deeds made by A's widow. Farhall v. Farhall, 7 L. R., Eq. 286; 38 L. J., Ch. 281.

To an Executor for Executorial Purposes—Separate Account of Executor.]—One of two executors, who was himself a residuary legatee, entered an account with a banker in his own name for executorial purposes, and the banker with notice of the dispositions under the will, made advances to the executor for payments connected with the executorialship, and securities were deposited for repayment of the advances. The co-executor assented to the first advance, but upon a second advance being made to the acting executor upon other securities, he withdrew his assent, and objected to the banker being repaid out of the trust property, on the ground that the money had been placed to the separate account of the acting executor. The advances were duly applied to the purposes of the administration. Upon an action being brought by the banker for a lien upon the second securities for repayment of his advances:—Held, that the banker was justified in advancing money to the acting executor for executorial purposes, and that the assent of the co-executor in the first instance was a further justification for placing confidence in the acting executor and in making further advances to him. The repayment was therefore decreed with mortgagee's costs. Child v. Thorley, 16 Ch. D. 151; 29 W. R. 417.

5. IN RESPECT OF BILLS PAYABLE AT BANKERS.

Generally.—If in the ordinary course of business a banker pays, on behalf of a depositor in his bank, the amount of a bill accepted by such depositor payable at the bank, the banker has consented to treat the acceptance as tantamount to an order on him to pay the bill according to the tenor of the acceptance; i. e. if the acceptance is in blank, according to the tenor of the bill; or if the acceptance is special, then to the person duly authorized to claim payment of the amount; and if, in either case, the banker fails to obey exactly the order which he has accepted, he cannot charge his customer with a payment made for him without his authority. Roberts v. Tucker, 16 Q. B. 560; 20 L. J., Q. B. 270; 15 Jur. 987—Ex. Ch.
